PRESS RELEASES CHILD'S STORY OF NORTH CAROLINA

Volume by Greensboro Librarian Answers Youngsters' Questions About State.

The University press has recently released Discovering North Carolina by Nellie M.
Rowe, librarian of the Greensboro public library. The volume, written for children, relates interesting facts concerning the state. Many questions frequently asked by children are answered in the work.

The story is of a trip over North Carolina, including visits to many manufacturing plants.
Statistics used in the book are the latest and most reliable. A short history of each prominent historical point visited is told in simple style.

Miss Rowe has included a list of the important cities of North Carolina and their leading industries, and a summary of the accomplishments of important people of the state.

This is the second book issued by the press within a period of a week. The release of White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands, by George Pullen Jackson, was announced a few days ago.

Council Convenes Tonight

Huge Crowd Present At Sophomore Smoker

According to reports, a record crowd was in attendance at the sophomore smoker conducted Tuesday night in Swain hall, with J. J. Binder, president of the class, presiding; and with Professor W. A. Olsen of the English department as guest speaker.

Refreshments were served and entertainment was provided by Jack Wardlaw's orchestra.
Professor Olsen gave a short satirical talk on literature.

Following the smoker, the sophomores were the guests of
E. Carrington Smith at the Carolina theatre for a mid-night

BOOK EXCHANGE RELEASES BOOK BY SAM SELDEN

Manual Written in Attempt to Fill Need for Practical Manual of Acting.

A new textbook on acting, A Syllabus of Dramatic Practice, by Samuel Selden, associate and technical director of the Playmakers, has been released by the Book Exchange. It is an attempt to supply the need which Selden has long felt for a short, comprehensive, analytical and thoroughly practical manual of dramatic practice, with emphasis laid on training.

The work has not yet appeared in book form, but the author hopes, at some future date, to expand and publish it.

Selden, with D. H. Sellman, is the author of Stage Scenery and Lighting, a book which received almost unanimous critical applause.

Little Material on Acting
Unlike the other fine arts, acting is a subject on which there is not a great deal of material.
The actual instruction in such books as do exist is scattered through a number of different parts of the works. Concerning these books, Selden states:
"While they present excellent general discussions on certain phases of technique, none of them, in my estimation, properly integrates its material or offers sufficiently convenient 'handles' for lifting out into practice the helpful suggestions buried in its pages."

Basing his observations on his own experience as an actor on the professional stage, when he kept notebooks on the subject, and on his observations during

Campus Readers Enjoy Bid Fest At Auction Of Books

Mayne Albright Struts as Auctioneer and Yells for Bids on Books
From Bull's Head Rental Library at Triennial
Auction in Y. M. C. A. Lobby.

Campus readers enjoyed a field day yesterday in the lobby of the "Y." Soft drinks in hand, they waved bottles in the air and yelled or murmured bids at Mayne Albright who was pacing up and down on the desk in his best Atlantic City manner.
Mayne yelled too.

The event was the triennial auction of books from the circulating library of the Bull's Head. Summer's Night, Summer's Night, what am I bid for a Summer's Night? A quarter?" demanded the former president of the student body. The crowd roared.

Sales Chatter
One of the best sales talks was on Norman Thomas' America's Way Out. "Fine book," said Mayne, "excellent book. What am I bid?"

Somewhat muffled by a peanut butter cracker in the process of mastication, a whisper of "twenty-five cents" came from the general confusion and racket.

"Twenty-five cents is the bid.
Twenty-five cents is the bid.
Who'll make it thirty? Do I hear a bid?" Mayne stopped short. "Look here, Norman Thomas is coming here to lecture in a few weeks. He'd feel bad about this. Get the book and read up on him. What am I bid? What do I hear? Atta-boy! Thirty cents. Thirty cents is the bid. Who'll say thirty-five?" And so far into the

ANNUAL PICTURE WILL BE TAKEN

Yackety-Yack Staff Will Gather at 2:30 in Front of Graham
Memorial for Picture.

Group pictures for the Yack-ety Yack staff will be taken this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the porch of Graham Memorial.
The following members of the editorial staff are asked to be present at that time: Billy Anderson, Billy Binder, Branch
Craig, Newton Debardeleben,
Fred Eagles, Sam Elmore, Tom Fawcett, Sandy McLeod, Russell Mickle, Armistead Maupin, Henry DeVane, Jimmy Sprunt, and Francis Worth.

Immediately following this first picture, the following members of the business staff of the publication will have a group picture taken: Fred Bahnson, John Entwistle, Julian Myer, Parks Austin, Leonard Eisenberg, Henry Haywood, Dick Harriss, I. H. Jacobson, L. E.
Brooks, J. C. Grier, Frank Renshaw, Louis Barnes, and Hal Walton.

This system is a departure from the practice of the annuals in the past, but it is thought that the new plan will permit all men working on the publication to have their work rewarded with a picture in the Yackety Yack.

Zimmerman and Taylor Speak

Delta Sigma Pi, international commerce fraternity, heard Dr.
E. W. Zimmerman, professor of economics, at an informal smokremedies. Dr. M. D. Taylor, also of the commerce school, gave a short talk following that of Dr.

Zimmerman's.

Playmakers Plan For Another Tour

The second tour of this year and the thirtieth tour since their establishment is being planned for the Carolina Playmakers, to be made March 22-27 through western North Carolina. The same plays will be presented as during the last tour: Davy Crockett, Four on a Heath, and Stumbling in Dreams.

The tentative itinerary for the tour includes Elon College, Clinton, Wilson, Campbell College, and Ellerbe. Campbell College, at Buies Creek, is the alma mater of Paul Green.

The casts of characters of the three plays will remain the same as on the first tour of the year.

Societies Vote Against Staffs' Choosing Heads

By a close vote, the combined membership of the Di Senate and Phi Assembly in a joint session Tuesday night gave the Buccaneer proposal its first defeat by voting down a motion that the power of electing the publication editors be placed in the hands of the members of the various staffs. The resolution had been passed by the Phi last week.

Discussion on the motion continued for two hours with a large number of speakers presented each side of the question. Bill Eddleman, president pro-tem, presided over the meeting in the absence of William McKee, winter quarter president.

Business of the Di prior to the joint discussion included committee reports and minor details. The actual vote on the publication motion was 19 to 12.

STUDENT LEADERS VOTE TO REQUIRE STAFF SELECTION

Committee Believes That Compulsory Staff Nominations Will Virtually Elect Nominees.

At the annual activities committee meeting Tuesday night, the proposal to place power of electing publications editors entirely in the hands of staff members was defeated by a 16 to 9 vote, and in its place the group unanimously favored the plan of the student council's requiring each staff to select its choice for editor just prior to campus elections.

In discussing these questions, the group members expressed the sentiment that although staff selection should not be considered final, nevertheless, a great deal of weight should be placed in the staff's action.
By making it compulsory that each staff select its candidate yearly, the group seemed to think that sufficient credit would thereby be given the staff members' selection so that, in effect, the staff nomination would actually be election.

Pass Resolution

The wording of the resolution was: Be it resolved that the Student Activities Committee request the Student Council to call each year upon the editorial boards of each publication to nominate in duly constituted meetings a candidate for its editorship, such meeting to take place immediately prior to campus nominations.

Honor System Plan Defeated

Another proposal discussed at the meeting was the student council's plan presented last quarter whereby special com-

FORUM SPEAKERS TO DISCUSS FARM PROBLEM TONIGHT

Dr. Clarence Poe and Dr. Gordon
Ward Will Lecture on Fifth Open Forum Series.

Dr. Clarence Poe, noted Raleigh publisher and Dr. Gordon Ward, associate professor of economics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute appear here tonight on the fifth discussion of the Open Forum series in Gerrard hall. The question for discussion tonight has stirred nationwide interest during the past few months—Men and Land—and is expected to draw a large crowd of students, townspeople and faculty members interested in the views of these two men.

Poe is editor and publisher of the Progressive Farmer, an agricultural journal of 850,000 combined circulation in the southern states alone.

Ward Favors Coops

Ward, an advocate of co-operative farming, is expected to bring an interesting message on his observations of this type of farming now in force in some sections of the country. He has spent the past ten years travelling through the western and middle-western states accumulating research data.

Next Thursday's program will feature Miss Winifred Chappell and Mrs. W. T. Bost speaking on "Breaking the Breadlines."
As is customary, tonight's lecture is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock.

A Victory for The Publications

Despite the fact that members of the activities committee voted Tuesday night by a bare seven-vote margin to defeat the proposal to place power of electing editors entirely in the hands of staff members, nevertheless, the assembled group expressed unquestionably the opinion that some method is needed whereby proper recognition be given the staff's ability to select the most qualified candidate. The committee thought that compulsory nomination of the staff would be a step in bringing about this recognition.

This expression of the group is identically in accord with the principle which the four publication staffs had in mind when they voted to make staff selection final. The only difference in the action of the two groups is with regard to the extent to which this ability of the staff should be carried.

The staff members, being more qualified to select their head, thought that their choice should be final. Whereas, the activities committee, admitting the staff's ability to make the most accurate selection, thought that the question of democratic principle should likewise be brought into account. As a consequence a compromise, in effect, was reached. By making the staff nomination compulsory, the committee hoped that sufficient weight would be given the staff selection so that the ultimate result in the popular vote would be the election of the staff's candidate. Although not stated in so many words, this sentiment seemed to predominate the discussions at the meeting.

The decision of the committee is in one sense a victory for both groups. The importance of the staff's ability to select the qualified man has been sufficiently emphasized. In turn the fact has been brought out that for the matter of democratic principle, if none other, the students have a right to express their opinion.

By emphasizing the importance which should be placed in the decision of the staff members with regard to their candidate for the editorship, the campaign the publications have been waging has achieved its goal. If the students will but bear this importance in mind in the coming spring elections, there is little doubt that only the most qualified men will be elected to the editorial posts.

R.I.P.—Dr. Muzzey's "Immortals"

Professor of American History David S. Muzzey of Columbia listened obligingly to the entreaties of a newspaper reporter for a good story, sat down in his easy chair, and completed a list of forty-nine American "immortals"—in twenty minutes. But after repenting of the fit of good nature, Dr. Muzzey awoke to face the cold reality of a world of publicity which has driven him to decline to discuss the list. He now hopes "the whole thing will be forgotten,"—the moral of which seems to be that professors of American history should look before they list.

However, Dr. Muzzey's immortals should be a gentle hint to posterity as to whom to carve a niche for in the hall of fame. Heading the list is Woodrow Wilson—which is not so bad—and giving him a close race is the wide opened faced senator from Idaho, William E. Borah. But farther on down the list is a tax on the memory; for instance, Dr. Irving Langmuir, Tasker H. Bliss, A. A. Michaelson, etc., to future generations.

Nevertheless, Dr. Muzzey's sin is not one of omission; he is most to be commended for his disregard of some of the present-day figures in the public eye. Andrew Volstead is not among the illustrious because, as Dr. Muzzey declared, the dry laws "may be forgotten fifty years from now." Howard Scott he consigns to the oblivion of being unmentioned because "the theories of technocracy will be forgotten before prohibition." And Herbert Hoover made the honor roll not on his presidential record, but on his services as war-time food administrator. The only names conspicuously lacking were those of Abou-ben-Adhem and Al Capone.

For his obligingness to the press in furnishing them with fodder for publicity, we nominate Dr. David S. Muzzey as the fiftieth of his forty-nine "immortals."—A.T.D.

The Dear, Dead

Days Beyond Recall

Those of the older generation who remember the days when college was college and look back at them with longing, shaking their heads over the cold, almost intellectual atmosphere which pervades the campus today, must have had the dark pall of despair greatly lightened at the joyful hilarity which shrouded the Carolina theatre Tuesday night when the sophomores entertained the junior and senior classes at a free show. Under the deadening influence of an ultra-cultural movement instigated by the faculty and certain groups of students who take a diabolical delight in removing the fun out of life, the collegiate spirit of the good old days of yore is fast in danger of dying out.

Such a situation is deplorable. The aim of all mankind is to obtain some measure of happiness in this vale of tears, and who is happier than the Purple Cow standing in a field "looking eastward to a tree"? Intellectualism and seriousnessness are to true happiness as Flit to a fly. Modern collegiate youth has put up a valiant fight against such narrow-minded educators, but, alas, the odds have often been too great.

At such a time as this the liberalism of the sophomore class brings glimmerings of salvation. The University has not this year seen a truer or more sincere exhibition by the exponents of liberalism. Not only was their gaiety approaching boisterousness, a fact which the seriousness adherent might have been able to smile away, but even a few of the most ardent enthusiasts, standing firmly by their convictions, succeeded in bursting out a few glass panes and otherwise adequately expressing their feelings.

Such liberalism cannot pass unheralded by the true believers. Perhaps we shall again call forth the philippic pen of David Clark against us, yet to us shall remain our convictions and we may more justly hail Carolina as the seat of liberalism in the south.—V.C.R.

The Descent of Old MittelEuropa

A casual glance at a map of Europe will reveal to the spectator the striking contrast between pre- and post-War Austria. Instead of a large, strong, populous nation, with seaports and a thriving economic life we see now a small, weak, pinched-in state,—no seacoast, no great economic or political power in comparison with its former rivals; Austria is indeed but a half-paralyzed remnant of the once dominant nation of Mittel-Europa.

The picture presented is certainly one to evoke both pity and sympathy, but considered coldly and analytically it is replete with interest to the student because of the social and economic dynamics represented therein. On the one hand—Fascism, on the other—Socialism; here—economic self-sufficiency the ideal, there—international cooperation the goal. Then there is the paradoxical situation of an industrial country controlled by the party of the farmers. In its essentials Austria appears to be undergoing a radical change. What form this change will take is beyond the realms of speculation.

The economic crisis existing in Austria amply illustrates the weak position of a country which specializes in the production of luxury goods whenever industrial and financial stress occurs. The situation has long been one of much concern to the government, and has resulted in many economic measures of a radical nature. One of these has been the foreign exchange restriction, which has been in operation for well over a year. This measure prohibits any individual or company save the Austrian National Bank from buying or selling foreign exchange. The result of this statute has been to rather effectively limit the harmful flood of imports which had contributed to the industrial stagnation.

The problem most pressing in the minds of European diplomats concerned is the possibility of a Danubian Confederation. The previous attempts by Austria to become more closely bound to Germany meeting a sharp rebuff from the World Court, it was thought—especially by France—that Austria would welcome the formation of a union of small mid-European states which would include herself. Such has not been

Out of the vast mountain of mail that falls on this desk week in and week out, we find only one letter with a glimmer of life. Apparently people are pretty much at the end of the rope. No more do those bright post cards from third cousins on a Florida holiday clutter the mail box. Even Mr. William Randolph Hearst's company has crossed us off the mailing list and we no longer get pretty folders showing a typical American family enjoying the seven per cent dividend return on a share of Hearst newspaper stock. No more chain letters, either. But the National College Press association still has a hold on things. They send the editor a letter on the coming New Orleans convention: "... Mr. LeBreton promises a brilliant line-up of speakers for the dinners ... the kind of talkers who keep you so interested the demi-tasse gets cold ... Senator Huey P. Long will not filibuster ... How shall we get to New Orleans? ... if you have ten dollars, by hitch-hiking down the Jefferson Highway, the Magnolia Highway, or the Old Spanish Trail ..."

Revolt

To match the growing prominence of the Socialist club and the once popular Communist club, it has been suggested that we organize a Capitalist club on the University campus. Capitalists without money, of course. We'd have a golden banner emblazoned with likeness of Kreuger and Insull. All you'd need for membership is a bad check and two shares of Kreuger-Toll. Life and Letters

Hill-billy

When so-called friends deplore my taste in music I sometimes recall those words of the Cheerful Cherub: "When pompous people squelch me with their regal attributes it cheers me to imagine how they'd look in bathing suits." Which is a bit inelegant, perhaps, but suitable none the less. They profess disbelief that anyone who likes The Forsythe Saga enough to read and re-read it many times could really be so moved by the sad-like tunes of the hill-billies as to shed actual tears over the fate of fair mountain maidens caught in the fell clutch of circumstance.

Mountain blood ... Ah, yes, the novelists have written all about that. Here's the outline of a novel:

Setting: Mountains. Deep, deep in a lonely mountain valley where the violets bloom and fade and the fairest flower of them all is a mountain maiden, untutored and unlearned.

Characters: Mountaineers, particularly the blessed damsel, fair of face, bare of feet, and rosy of cheek, as pure as the rising sun.

Oldsters who say "thar" and "whar" and, of course, "Howdy, stranger."

Pappy, father to the fair damsel.

A furriner.

Time: All in the merry month of May when the green buds they were swelling.

Plot: Fair damsel, experiencing for the first time true love, gets herself done wrong by the furriner who came a-courtin'. Pappy inquires laconically why she like others is not gay. He then grabs his trusty Winchester down from above the door of the crude log cabin and goes a-gunnin'. He gets his man and there's a shotgun-splicin'. After the news is hollered from mountain top to mountain top the natives they come from the east and they come from the west to dance in honor of the bride and sing ballads of less fortunate fair ladies whose fathers weren't so handy with a gun and who consequently pined away and died of love and were buried in graves both deep and narrow. Life goes on in them thar hills.

Yes, indeed, willows wept for the mountain dwellers long before collegiates despairingly sighed, "Willow weep for me."

The hill-billy employs an even better figure of speech—he weeps like a willow and moans like a dove. Could anything be more touching? Ballads were the only form of expression available to illiterates, chained for generations to infertile soil, and they sang of life. They simply made up stories about things that happened.

Glancing through a weekly paper, published in this state, I chanced to see the following headlines:

DIRTY DISHES
DEAL DEATH, WIFE WANTED,
and THIRD BISCUIT CAUSES FATALITY.
What an opportunity for a composer of ballads. If I'd never been to school I might get out the old banjo and extemporize:

Come all ye fair and tender ladies
Take warning from this time now and on,
If you would have a loving husband
Feed him biscuits somewhat lighter than a stone.

some years of teaching dramatics, Selden's discussion of the most important principles of technique is entirely original. Original also is the entire mass of introductory matter, in which there is included a discussion of stage psychology and the other arts in connection with the stage.

A most convenient method of using the book has been provided by outlining, with main headings, sub-headings, and sub-sub-headings, in an effort to make the inter-relationships of points as clear as possible. It is quite easy to pick up the book and read it at any point without confusion. It is as specific as possible, but it has been one of Selden's aims that it not seem dogmatic.

The work is divided into five chapters: the art of acting; communication and response; training for expressiveness—the body, (a chapter which is also entirely the author's own contribution to literature on the subject, and in which nothing has been borrowed from other standard works on the subject); training for expressiveness—the voice, and playing the part—characterization.

mittees would be selected in each class room in order to handle violations of the honor system in that class. After viewing the matter from all sides, the committee unanimously defeated the idea.

Aside from the discussion of these two proposals, the program was taken up with a report by Professor Robert H. Sherrill on the audit board, and one by William Medford on the recently formed Inter-Dormitory Council. Frank Rogers, president of the freshman class, gave his impression as a first year man of the honor system.

Rogers Gives Impression

The class of 1936 president brought out the point that if the upperclassmen would look upon and speak of the honor system with more respect and confidence, the incoming freshmen would much more readily accept the plan as sound. As it is now, Rogers stated, the freshmen get an idea that the system is not working at merely listening to the sophomores, juniors, and seniors condemn it.

President Haywood Weeks presided at the meeting, which lasted from 7:00 until 11:30 o'clock.

YEARLING BOXERS IN BAD SHAPE TO MEET OAK RIDGE

Tar Babies Will Fight Cadets Saturday Without Brown, Kanner, and Henson.

For the first time this season, the varsity and freshman boxing teams will part company on Saturday night. While the varsity is peddling leather in the north, the yearlings will be doing a little business of their own at Oak Ridge.

The Tar Babies, when things looked very dark right after the return from the holidays, came through with one of the most successful seasons in years. Until a few days ago it appeared that, with their hardest fights behind them, they would breeze through to an undefeated year; but hard luck once more came to dog the footsteps of Coach Allen.

Murray Kanner, giant heavyweight and a brilliant prospect, is lost to the frosh pug team. He has won all his fights by wide margins, was never once in trouble in any of them, and the chances of his going through without a defeat were practically certain. His loss is a blow and just whom Coach Allen will use in his vacated spot is not known.

Equally as severe a blow came with the loss of Baxter Brown who was declared ineligible early in the week. He likewise was unbeaten and was a bright prospect. Brown is a smart ringman and has a stiff punch.

Finally, Henson, the light-heavy who was defeated in his last start, suffered an eye injury and will not be able to work Saturday night. Bill Owllick, who held down the cruiser-weight post against V. M. I. and did a fairly nice job of it, will probably get the call.

Saturday night's meet with Virginia proved that the frosh team has what it takes. Virginia came here rated as having the best frosh team in the south and Coach Allen's maulers spanked them 5-3. Had it not been for the bad breaks of this week, it was almost a certainty that the Tar Babies would have taken their next two meets comfortably, for the hardest part of the schedule is behind them.

VIRGINIA DOWNED BY BULLDOGS IN FOOTBALL GAME

Georgia Team Scores 24 to 13 Win in Carolina Winter Football Practice Contest.

The Georgia division of Carolina's winter football squad downed the Virginia division 24 to 13 yesterday afternoon in a fast contest featured by several long runs. McDonald of Georgia, got loose on two gallops for markers, while Jackson and Shaffer made long runs for Virginia markers. The losers led eight to four in first downs.

Georgia counted three times before Virginia was able to push across a marker, and led 12 to 0 at the half. The winners counted soon after the game began on a drive featured by Jones. Georgia counted again in the second quarter on a recovered punt.

Both teams counted in the third quarter. After a few exchange of punts, Jones took one on Virginia's forty-five yard marker and brought it back to the twenty-three yard line, from here McDonald took the ball straight through the line, and open field for the score. Jackson counted first for Virginia on one of the prettiest runs of

TAR HEEL PINMEN BEAT GREENSBORO

Sensenbach Leads Locals With 486 Set in Match Replete With High Scores.

Carolina's recently formed bowling team showed their ability Tuesday by winning a 2119-1910 match over a Greensboro bowling team on the Graham Memorial alleys. It was the first match rolled here.

The Tar Heels revenged the loss to the same team in Greensboro last week. Charles Sensenbach, of Carolina, took off honors for the biggest total of the night, rolling a total of 486, and also had the best total for a single game with 210. Bob Atwood, also of Carolina was not far behind with a total of 460, while Thomas led the Greensboro bowlers and was third high scorer with 420.

Glover Injured

Cliff Glover, varsity bantamweight, on the eve of departure for the Penn State meet, received his crowning blow of hard luck. Late yesterday afternoon in training, Glover, sparring without a head-guard, butted against Pete Ivey's head and opened a deep gash over his eye. Three stitches were necessary to close the wound and Glover will be lost to the team Saturday night. Ivey will step into his shoes for the meet, and he is ready to go.

HEEL WRESTLERS INVADE DUKE FOR CONTEST TONIGHT

Nineteen Freshman and Varsity Grapplers Make Trip to Durham Tonight.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestlers will invade the Duke Blue Devils' wrestling camp tonight in a double-header meet which will be run off in the Duke gymnasium.

Neither of the two teams have had an impressive season but the added friendly rivalry between the two schools should make the meets close and interesting. The Duke grapplers have a strong club built around a trio of veterans, Orniske, Apple and Keifer. Orniske, who leads the Duke varsity mat men is considered one of the most brilliant vision throughout the south.

Coach Quinlan was not willing to commit himself on the outcome of the meet, but gave out as his statement: "I am through with predicting the results of the meets. You know every time I thought we would do well, we looked bad and good when the dope looked tough for us. So I'm just going to leave up to the boys to do it up right tonight."

Quinlan was still uncertain concerning the names of several men who will start in the bouts tonight, but he is taking nine-

Carolina's Tar Baby cage team was defeated Tuesday by Wake Forest's freshman quint 27 to 26. The game was a tight and hard fought battle throughout and was not decided until the last minute of play. Captain George Hatcher broke a deadlock with a foul shot.

The Baby Deacons had things their way in the first half, leading 16 to 9 when the teams changed goals. Carolina came back fast in the second half and took an 18 to 17 lead with only eight minutes to play. The rest of the way things were about even with the Tar Babies holding a 26 to 24 margin with less than two minutes to play. ILLUSION:

On top of a table are seen the head and body of a woman from the waist up. She winks. She smiles. She talks. She answers your questions and even smokes a cigarette!

EXPLANATION:

It is all done with mirrors. The lower half of the woman is concealed by mirrors set in a V, which reflect the drapery on both sides of the stage, giving the illusion that nothing is beneath the table. The rear legs of the table are not visible. What is seen is a reflection of the front legs.

CAMELS

It's FUN TO BE FOOLED ...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

Let's look at cigarettes.

There's a current illusion that by HEAT TREATMENT inferior, raw tobaccos can be made to equal choice tobaccos in mildness and flavor.

THE EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use the heat-treating process.

Inferior, low-cost tobaccos naturally require a more intense treatment than the choice, ripe tobaccos used in making Camels.

But neither the heat treatment nor any other treatment can take the place of good tobacco and perfect blending. Nature is the only real magician. Choice tobacco is the only way to get real mildness and flavor.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is the secret of Camels' cool, rich flavor...their delicate "bouquet" and aroma...their non-irritating mildness...the satisfaction you get.

It's the tobacco that counts. All the natural goodness of Camel's tobacco is kept fresh for you by the air-tight welded Humidor Pack. Don't remove it. Its moisture-proof cellophane also protects your Camels from dust and germs.

EVERETTE TAKES SECOND PLACE IN SCORING CONTEST

Kappa Alpha Player Scores Eighteen Points to Take Place Of Alexander in Race.

Scoring eighteen points in an intramural basketball game yesterday, Everette, Kappa Alpha, ran his year's total to ninety to take away second position in the race for season's high score from Alexander, who trailed Cecil Longest, Theta Kappa Nu, leader in scoring for the year.

Longest scored eleven to retain his position at the top with a total of ninety-seven. Alexander also got eleven to make his total for the season eighty-five.

Alexander led his team to a nip-and-tuck 28-27 win over Sigma Nu. The losers were headed by Eskridge, who accounted for ten points.

Everett got his points as Kappa Alpha handed Beta Theta Pi its second successive defeat. The final score was 46-32. The winners held a 24-14 lead at the half, but the second period spurt of the Betas almost overcame K.A.'s lead. Barnett and Anderson scored twelve and eighteen points respectively for the losing team.

Longest starred in Theta Kappa Nu's 26-18 win over Delta Psi. Berry, his teammate, got six to follow. Blount topped Delta Psi with eight points, followed by Hammer and Dillard with four apiece.

Sim Eiland led Aycock to a 37-12 victory over Carr in the dormitory league. The lanky center scored twenty-one of his team's points, while Tucker rang up seven more. Andrews was best for Carr with five points.

S. A. E. won from Theta Chi and A. T. O. from Delta Tau Delta by forfeit.

CANTOR FANS AT STATE WIN GRAT FOR MATINEE

Students in Professor C. S. Grove's class of chemistry at State College can thank the popularity of Eddie Cantor for a "grat" from laboratory exercises Tuesday afternoon. When one of Professor Grove's students promised to take him to see the famous comedian in return for an excuse from the class, the professor surprised the chemistry department by accepting. Grove attended Cantor's matinee performance as a guest of the students.

Of course another laboratory yesterday took the place of the one cut Tuesday.

Wild Cruise On Liner Is Theme Of Picture

"Luxury Liner," film which relates the drama in the lives of the passengers aboard a magnificent ocean liner during the six days of its voyage from Europe to America, is featuring today at the Carolina theatre.

George Brent, Zita Johann, Vivienne Osborne, Alice White, Verree Teasdale, C. Aubrey Smith and Frank Morgan head the "passenger list" in the film. Brent is cast as a physician who secures himself the position of ship's doctor for the voyage so that he may attempt to affect a reconciliation with his wife, Miss Osborne, who has eloped aboard it with another man. Miss Johann plays the role of a nurse, his assistant, whose kindness helps him forget own troubles when he is called, time after time to administer to ailing patients.

Fifteen in Infirmary

Those confined to the infirmary yesterday were: Jack Carpenter, Phillip Sasser, Percy Brown, Jr., William Johnston, R. V. Frazier, Irving Kasen, E. G. Marshall, B. R. Martinson, Anne Utley, D. A. Green, Jr., Edith Wladkowski, James H. Williams, Jesse Miller, D. J. Lanier, and R. L. Gavin.

TEN TEAMS WILL MEET IN INDOOR GAMES IN MARCH

Every Conference Member Will Send Team Here for Annual Track Meet March 4.

Coach R. A. Fetzner, chairman of the committee on arrangements, stated yesterday that every one of the ten institutions in the Southern Conference had indicated that they would send teams to the indoor track championship meet here March 4.

Thirteen conference teams participated in the brilliant and spectacular indoor games of 1932, but that was when the conference numbered twenty-three institutions. In Coach Bob's estimation ten out of ten is a much better showing than thirteen out of twenty-three. Fetzner believes that this year's meet will afford the same large and fast competition despite the split in the conference.

Extensive preparations are already under way for the big meet, which will embrace conference, non-conference, and freshman and scholastic divisions, and even at this early time the list of probable entries gives promise of clashes of head-liners and of brilliant duels in several events.

First in interest perhaps will be the meeting of Johnny Brownlee of Duke and Eli Finkelstein of Washington and Lee in the 70-yard low hurdles. The General star literally burned up the boards in the Tin Can when he set the record at 8 seconds flat in the 1931 meet. Finkelstein's time tied the world record.

Brownlee lowered the outdoor conference record for the 220-yard low hurdles to 24 seconds that same year, and last year he tied Finkelstein's indoor record. The two aces did not clash last year, however, for Finkelstein was out with injuries. They are probably two of the three most outstanding hurdlers in the country this year.

Spanish Film Billed For Carolina Sunday

La Cancion Del Dia, a Spanish production, is billed for Sunday night at the Carolina theatre. It is the second in the series of talking pictures sponsored by the departments of Romance and Germanic languages this quarter.

Written by Munoz Seca, well known Spanish dramatist, La Cancion Del Dia was one of the most successful stage plays produced in Madrid. The first presentation taking place at a Madrid theatre bore the author's name, La Seca. The production was filmed in Barcelona, directed and performed by Spaniards.

The authors, Seca and Guerrero, who wrote the musical score, are the Kaufman and Berlin of Spain. Seca whose first position was professor of Greek at a private academy won his first success with his production of El Contrabando. His best efforts have been in the field of sophisticated musical comedies. Compositions of Guerrero have become tremendously popular in Spain.

the day from his own forty, sixty yards through the entire Georgia team to the zero line. The only extra point of the afternoon came here on a pass Burnett to Shaffer.

McDonald tallied the last Georgia marker on a seventy-yard gallop. The lanky Tar Heel went through a hole in the right side of the line, cut to the left, side-stepped the Virginia safety man and dashed the rest of the way with three men at his heels. The last Virginia score also came on a beautiful run. Shaffer took a fifteen-yard pass from Burnett, on his own forty and, after side-stepping two would be tacklers, out ran the rest of the Georgia team for the touchdown.

In the winners' line Bryan, Shipman, and Yoder played the outstanding games, while the all-around work of Jones and the running of McDonald featured the offense. Gardner and O'Kelly starred in the Virginia line while the punting of Burnett and the running of Jackson and Shaffer were the highlights of the backfield.

Outstanding Etchings Displayed At Library

A group of fifty etchings, loaned to the University library, are now on exhibit in the lobby of the building. They will be on display for the next two weeks in several displays.

The etchings are copies of the works of the ten outstanding artists of the year 1932, selected by the American Federation of Arts. This organization, which has its headquarters in Washington, was established for the cultivation of arts. Grotesque Italian characters, fishing scenes, architectural views, and sea coast scenes are the general types of pictures on exhibition.

Morning Devotionals

Voluntary devotional services will be conducted by Ike Minor in Memorial hall this morning at 10:30 o'clock. A short scripture passage will be read, followed by a prayer. Walter Patterson, University organist, will open the brief program with a meditative selection on the organ and will conclude the devotional with another.

MARINE BAND TO PLAY STRINGFIELD WORK OVER RADIO

Composer's "Mountain Suite" Will Be Presented Over NBC Hookup This Morning.

The United States Marine band, conducted by Captain Taylor Branson, will play Cripple Creek from Lamar Stringfield's Southern Mountain suite this morning over an NBC hook-up in a program from Washington, D. C., the program lasting from 11:30 to 12:30 o'clock.

Although this composition has been featured on numerous occasions on radio programs in its orchestral arrangement, this is the first radio performance of the band version. The Marine band, considered the best of this type of musical organization in the country, has featured the work on several of its concert programs.

Suite Won Pulitzer Prize

The entire Stringfield suite of mountain folk tune settings was completed in its orchestral score in 1928, in which year it was chosen by the Pulitzer prize judges as the outstanding musical composition submitted to them. First performances of the individual movements of the suite were given in New York, Baltimore, and Asheville. The first and fourth movements, Mountain Creek and Cripple Creek, have been published and are consistent favorites on present day orchestra programs. Among the organizations which are featuring the work this season are George Barrere's Little symphony, Quinte Maganini and the New York Sinfonietta, and the Marine band and its supplementary orchestra ensemble.

The Southern Mountain suite has been heard on several campus concerts by the Carolina Salon ensemble and the Faculty chamber orchestra. The fourth movement, Cripple Creek, will be presented by the North Carolina little symphony on its program in Southern Pines this month.

Dey Will Speak in Norfolk

Dr. William Morton Dey, head of the department of Romance languages, left yesterday for Norfolk, Virginia, where he will lecture before the Irene Leach Memorial Foundation, which is a part of the Norfolk Society of Arts. For several years Dr. Dey has been invited by the society to speak on some phase of French literature in a special period. This year, Dr. Dey has chosen to talk on "The Poetic Movements in French Literature Since 1850."

The concert is under the auspices of the University Glee club and the local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha, music fraternity. The concert is being given in the interest of the student loan fund.

This glee club offered a recital last night in Washington to climax a successful northern tour. NO ACTION TAKEN IN SECURING NEW UNIVERSITY SONG

Movement to Secure Supplementary Anthem Was Begun Last Fall by Order of Grail.

No definite results have been achieved in the movement inaugurated last October to secure a new song for the University, though Professor Harold S. Dyer of the music department and a committee appointed last fall by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, are still working on the project, it was revealed yesterday.

The group has had several songs under consideration but has found none of those submitted acceptable.

Song Under Consideration

At one time the committee decided to accept The Tar Heel Battle Song, submitted by Thornton W. Allen of New York City, subject to a slight revision. The revised version, however, did not prove acceptable and the committee has considered other songs submitted.

The project to obtain a new and distinctive song for the University was launched by the Order of the Grail during the latter part of October. The object of the organization in voting to finance the project was to obtain a new song to supplement Hark the Sound, particularly for use during athletic contests.

Should the committee receive a song considered acceptable, it would take immediate action leading up to purchase.

JOHNSON CONCLUDES SERIES IN JOURNAL

L. R. Johnson, principal of High Point high school, concludes his series of articles on relationships between teacher and principal in the February issue of the High School Journal.

To further a better esprit de corps in faculties, Johnson has advocated co-operation between principal and teacher before the opening of school each year, growth through student activities and selected reading membership of teachers in local and national organizations, conferences of faculty members with principals, faculty meetings, and specific class room supervision.

His suggestions for improving relationships have arisen from his own experiences, professional experience.

He has been director of the Training School for Public Service in New York and director of the Municipal Research in Tokio. He is author, with J. H. OLSEN ANNOUNCES DEBATE TRY-OUTS

Try-outs of the debate squad for the radio contest with the University of Virginia over station WRVA in Richmond, February 7, will be conducted tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial. W. A. Olsen, faculty adviser of the debate council, announced yesterday that the trials would take place tomorrow instead of Monday, to allow more time for preparation of speeches. Monday was the originally scheduled date for the try-outs.

The question to be debated is, Resolved: That the safety-responsibility plan as revised by the American Automobile Association should be adopted in this country. The Carolina team will uphold the negative.

The H. W. Wilson Co., New York publishers, will make cinematic reports of the radio debate for use in their annual collection of speeches. Speeches will be five minutes long, and rebuttals will last for three. Professor Olsen requests that debaters in tomorrow's tryouts have the first four minutes of their speeches written on small cards from which the speeches will be read. The customary use of paper sheets will not be in order due to the noise over the radio crated by their handling.

Dormitory Stores Realize Small Net Profits During Fall Quarter

Earnings Drop From $2,160 Per Quarter in 1930 to $1,736 for Last Quarter; Store in Manly Shows Greatest Profit With Operators Averaging $35 Apiece Per Month.

The past fall quarter took a heavy toll on the net profit receipts of the twelve dormitory stores operated by the University. During the two and a half years of their existence, the establishments have witnessed a decrease in profits from $2160 per quarter in 1930 to $1736 earned last quarter. These figures are made available by P. L. Burch, of the University buildings department. It has been estimated that the profits of the last quarter were the smallest realized since the founding of the dormitory stores.

The above total profit assigns to each of the twenty-four men who run the stores an average of $72 per quarter, $24 per month, or, figuring that the stores are open six hours per day, approximately thirteen cents per hour. In 1930 the average amount earned for the quarter was $90 per man. Of course profits are actually distributed on the basis of the business done in each individual store.

Manly Store Leads

While two years ago the Old East store headed the list with a profit of $42.50 per month for each man, this past quarter shows that the store in Manly has consistently garnered a greater profit than any of the other stores. However, the Manly operators averaged only $35 apiece per month. The store in Carr dormitory, which two years ago made $45 per month for the lowest profit on the campus, still has the smallest returns of all the service rooms.

According to Burch, the receipts for the first weeks of the current quarter show the same results as those for last quarter. Generally the profits during the winter and spring periods are markedly less than those earned during the fall quarter.

Cause of Decline

Many reasons have been advanced for this falling off during the last two quarters of the school year. An important factor is the removal of many freshmen who live in dormitories in the fall to fraternity houses at the beginning of the new year. Among dormitory store-keepers, freshmen have a reputation for liberal spending, usually purchasing considerably more than upperclassmen. The wholesale exodus from dormitory to fraternity houses and rooms in town is usually accompanied by a sharp drop in sales.

This, together with the generally accepted fact there is decidedly less money spent by the student body as a whole in the winter and spring quarters, indicates a rather unfavorable outlook for the prosperity of the stores for the remainder of the school year.

A survey of the sales reveals that chocolate milk is the fastest-selling item, with soft drinks, "dopes" in particular, a close second. Cigarettes are sold on the average of a carton and a half a day. Stationery has been labeled by many as the hardest item to dispose of.

VARIED COURSES OFFERED BY ART STUDENTS' GUILD

Group Was Organized as Possible
Beginning for School of Fine Arts in University.

Classes of the Art Students' Guild, established as the possible beginning of an art school in the University, and conducted four times a week by James A. MacLean, are now offering several courses in painting and drawing to students interested in this work.

The courses available to students are: portrait, still life, and landscape painting, drawing and painting from models, and work in the mediums of pen and water color. Since students are taught individually instead of as a class, those who are interested in the work may enter the courses at any time and may advance according to their ability.

Not a great deal of talent or training is required for students to join the guild, MacLean says. The courses are open to any students who are interested in the work. Those interested may visit the classes at 2:00-4:00 o'clock and 7:30-9:00 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday, where paintings by guild members and MacLean are on display.

Exhibits of the work done in the guild and of paintings from other schools are being planned.

DR. ODUM MAKING LECTURE TOUR OF SOUTHERN STATES

Addresses University Alumni in Atlanta and Speaks Before Meeting at Emory University.

Dr. Howard W. Odum, Kenan professor of sociology and director of the Institute for Research in Social Science, is engaged this week in a tour of lectures throughout the south.

After addressing University alumni in Atlanta Tuesday night, he appeared before the joint meeting of the Emory University citizenship institute and the Georgia Press Institute. His topic for the night was "New Frontiers of Leadership in Public Affairs."

Other North Carolinians who spoke at the meeting were former Governor Gardner and Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration here.

Following the address at Emory, Dr. Odum will journey to Louisiana State University, where he will deliver the initial series of lectures for the lecture foundation recently established at that university in honor of Judge Edward Douglas White of Louisiana, chief justice of the United States Supreme Court.

The lecture foundation invites each year a distinguished scholar to deliver a series of lectures dealing with the problems of citizenship and government.

PROFESSOR WILL READ 'CALVACADE'

W. R. Taylor, Head of Dramatic Department at Woman's College, Will Read Play Here.

Calvacade, Noel Coward's panoramic play of English history, will be read Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre by Professor W. R. Taylor, head of the department of dramatics at the Woman's College in Greensboro.

The play deals with the Marryot family of London and the story begins at the time of the Boer war. Robert Marryot forsakes his family for the war in Africa, but eventually returns home safely. After the elapse of several years, when Marryot has been knighted and his son married, they are called to fight for England in the World War. Sir Robert escapes injury, but his son is killed. The recurring theme of the play is the heroic suffering of a mother for her husband and son at war.

The production of the play at Drury Lane theatre in London was well received. An American film production of the play has been called by critics "the finest photoplay yet made in the English language."

UNIVERSITY WILL GIVE TUBERCULAR TESTS NEXT FALL

Examinations Will Be Given Students to Detect Any Possible Traces of Disease.

University students will undergo a thorough examination for signs of tuberculosis in any form next fall, according to plans advanced by University medical authorities, it was learned yesterday.

The first part of the test consists of the injection of a tuberculin serum in the arms of the person. If the person has ever contracted any form of the disease, this test will give evidence of its existence within forty-eight hours. Students showing signs of either present or previous infection will then be subjected to an exhaustive examination, including an X-ray test of possible infected areas by a Durham clinic.

Service to Protect Students

Should any student be found with an active case of tuberculosis, recommendations will then be given him in regard to the proper treatment. This free service will be conducted at the University in order to safeguard the student body as well as to help those who may have contracted the disease.

Medical students and faculty were given the first part of the test Wednesday morning. The results will be checked today and those who react will undergo the X-ray examination. All who show any signs of the disease will be given the thorough physical examination and advice as to the proper precautions to take.

COUNT SFORZA TO DELIVER ADDRESS BEFORE STUDENTS

Famous Italian Diplomat Will Address Assembly Monday in Relations Club Program.

Count Carlo Sforza, distinguished diplomat and former minister of foreign affairs for Italy, will address a general convocation of the University in Memorial hall, Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The address, which is presented under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the International Relations Club, will be on "Democracy vs. Autocracy."

The entire student body is invited to attend Count Sforza's lecture and freshmen and sophomores will be required to be present. The program will last for approximately an hour, the 11:00 o'clock classes not meeting until 11:23.

Outstanding Statesman

Count Sforza is one of the most outstanding statesmen of the day. His intimate connection with world war diplomacy and his personal recollections of the outstanding leaders of the war and post-war periods make him well-fitted to deliver the many addresses required of him as visiting Carnegie Professor of International Relations at Duke University. He is at present engaged in lecturing and leading discussions at that university on various international problems.

Count Sforza has served in several different embassies for Italy, including those at Paris, (Continued on page two)

Lifting Another School Burden

The proposal of Representative Julius Martin, Buncombe, to the house education committee that the state lift the uncomfortable burden of high-priced text books from the school children of North Carolina as a forward step in progressive education. Modeling his plan after that employed by the province of Ontario, the Buncombe county (solon) suggests that the state print its own secondary school text books with a revenue obtained from advertising. It is also suggested that the state interest a large firm such as the Reynolds Tobacco company in subsidizing the project, placing their advertisements at advantageous points through the texts.

This plan, emanating from Canada's central province, has been in force in that section of the Dominion for several decades. All advertising matter is handled by one concern, Eton's Ltd., one of the largest and finest department stores in the United Kingdom. Texts are produced at an average cost of twelve cents. School children may purchase the year's supply in many cases for less than one dollar. Eton's advertising, skillfully handled to appeal to both child and parent, is distributed with reserve and psychological discretion. And the result is reciprocal. Eton's has long enjoyed the respect and admiration of a large portion of the buying public.

Our Legislature might well proceed with such a step, though it might take into account the ill effects of undesirable advertising. The plan might best be fostered through the aid of city merchant associations, who would designate desirable and dependable advertisers. Needless illustrations and fancy covers would be discarded and the surplus filled with appealing and stimulating advertising.

The lower house has named a subcommittee of three to work with the subcommittee from the committee on reorganization, which has the bills relating to text book changes. Perhaps the present spirit of progress in education will father the new project and lift another incidental burden from the shoulders of the tax ridden populace.

Local Humor on The Straight and Narrow

The Buccaneer has announced a Vanity Fair issue for March. Recalling the success of the Time issue published two years ago, the campus should look forward to the March edition as a promise of better things in collegiate humor. Editor Mason and his colleagues recognize the validity of recent criticism of the Buccaneer. They are making a sincere effort to improve the tone of their magazine.

The stock situations used in college humor magazines are well-known: a boy, a girl, and a dark corner; a boy, a bottle, and a lamp post. Besides being vulgar, more often than not, these situations are, worst of all, trite, ordinary, and bawdy, rather than humorous. They are unworthy subjects for intelligent comedy.

There has been and always will be a place for humor in every age and in every place. Every serious circumstance has its comic aspect. It is a worthwhile occupation to point out and elaborate upon this comic aspect: the foibles and absurdities of mankind, arising out of natural lesque are recognized literary forms in which these situations may be treated.

No particular importance can be attached to the fact that the Buccaneer will issue a Vanity Fair number. But as an indication of a commendable trend towards a new and better type of humor, for college magazines, it is important. Parodies of such magazines as Vanity Fair, Time and The New Yorker afford a convenient vehicle for pointing out in a polite manner the natural humor in campus characters and situations. The Buccaneer is on the right track. Let it stay on the straight and narrow.—E.C.D.

Toward Sisterhood

The basketball game between the Chi Omegas and the Pi Phis last Monday night is seen as an excellent starting point for women's intramural athletics.

It has long been a problem on this campus to get better organization and cooperation among the women students. Scattered over Chapel Hill as they are there is little chance of ever getting them together—of ever giving them a chance to know one another.

Intramural games would afford a common bond of interest. The interest shown in the Pi Phi-Chi Omega game by the campus at large is evidence that games between the different groups would be well received.

Teams formed from the two sororities, the freshman class, Spencer hall, and those girls living out in town could be used as a nucleus. Other teams could be added to these five, and an intensive intramural program could be worked out—in other sports as well as in basketball.

The cooperation of the co-eds is necessary for the success of this venture, not to be a difficult task. Since this year has marked the beginning of organized women's athletics, it might also initiate intramural sports.

Whether we shall continue with the start we have made, or whether we shall ignore it, rests with the co-eds. The advantages are an increased interest in athletics, an opportunity for those who wish to participate in athletics to do so, and a closer bond of contact between the women.—M.F.P.

The Piper Must Be Satisfied

The current depression has brought many disastrous consequences, many catastrophes from which it will take the country and the world more than a half a century to recover. Yet even in so dark a cloud there hovers near the rim faint inkling of a silver cloud. The depression has disillusioned America; and economists tell us that had it not been for our illusions in 1925, 1933 would not have found us in such a predicament. Disillusionment, it seems, is necessary to progress, for only in that way do we wipe away the haze and see matters as they really are.

The American people are just beginning, among their other disillusionments, to realize the extent of the corruption and undermining of public figures. The enormous number of bank failures and the startling revelations of the swindlings of some of the officials which have been exposed during the past year and a half over the entire country have opened the eyes of the general public.

Among the most startling instances is included that of Samuel Insull, now residing comfortably and contentedly in Greece. But a case more closely home is that of Colonel Luke Lea and his son who swindled an Asheville bank out of $1,300,000. There is little doubt as to their guilt, for not only has it been proved in open court but the Leas have admitted taking the money. They were tried and convicted at Asheville in 1931, the Colonel sentenced to ten years and the son from two to six years. Yet by some manner which to the uninitiated has remained a mystery, they have so far managed to escape the tenacles of the law. For a year and a half, by every legality possible, they have staved off the reckoning of justice.

Now the crisis is approaching. If the Leas are permitted to escape punishment for what they have done, such a condition will constitute an indictment against the American courts of law. Legal conditions and judiciary discrimination have been muchly condemned during the past half decade, and the Leas, if allowed to wiggle out of paying the piper, will leave an even deeper blot.—V.C.R.

Professor W. R. Slaughter, publications adviser of the Northwestern University, has banned the word "beer" from all student publications. His reason for doing this was the fear that to see the word "beer" in print would be an evil temptation for students. "Beer" has nothing to do with students, no matter what is done about it in Washington," he stated.

A report based on a questionnaire on what every girl should know before entering college presented to the Syracuse University co-eds showed that she should know the arts of dancing,

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

In the midst of the brilliant explanations of the proposed plan of electing editors in which the writers take occasion to make known that anyone opposing them has no sense, I feel at a loss. According to one we have to elect the president of the Ivory soap company. Obviously, the comparison is foolish; but even if it weren't, soap has the advantage of being able to clean. Another says we shouldn't have any voice in our paper's control because we have no right in the selection of Time's editor! Wonder if he knows that we buy Time voluntarily and that a fee is collected for the publications at the business office regardless of our wishes?

In an argument no less remarkable for its length than for its pithiness one back-slapping proponent of the scheme said that the national government is not run by the president whom the people elect but by technicians whom the president appoints. He was drawing an analogy. Following his thought, what is wrong with the popular selection of our editors who similarly appoint men who run the papers?

There is somewhat the same kind of an argument going on in the state legislature at the present time. Some who would "economize" are proposing to abolish the corporation commission and let the governor appoint a utilities commissioner in its stead. The principal objection raised to the proposal is that it would take away a right from the people to choose their government officials, that it would put too much power in the hands of the governor, or shorten the ballot. The same thing is true of our situation. We want to approximate a democratic system, not give over wholly and unreservedly to a bureaucracy.

The supporters of the plan declare it is not a political move. If it is not, there is no hurry to decide the question, to leap thoughtlessly, so to speak. In view of that, I submit with all respect to the campus "plum givers" that a sensible and economical time to settle the matter is election time in the spring. Print the proposal on the ballot along with the candidates names. More students will vote in the general elections than on a special issue and thus the question will be more fairly judged.

In conclusion, I don't sign my opinions as a "consistent democrat," as "another student," nor by any other pseudonym, but as C. K. Carmichael.

"Booing"

At the Duke boxing matches two weeks ago, the audience displayed most unsportsmanlike conduct in booing the decisions of the judges and referees when against Virginia, at the same time forgetting that we, the University of Virginia, were hosts and as such were obligated to conduct ourselves in a gentlemanly and sportsmanlike manner. The same sort of thing has happened at several basketball games.

Such actions should be completely taboo. Nothing could be more contrary to Virginia sportsmanship and tradition. Of course we cannot refrain outsiders from making demonstrations as they please, but in a crowd composed largely of students, such practices would be few and far-between if the student body refrained from them.

We must remember that the officials are selected by our own athletic department, and, if their decisions are unjustified it is up to the athletic department to handle the matter. We, the students, should not attempt to ridicule the officials by booing, and, by so doing, only make ourselves ridiculous.—Virginia College Topics.

According to observations that were made by Professor H. W. Mikesell, head of the psychology department at the University of Wichita, girls with personality, rather than brains, are most likely to succeed.

"Psychology has determined by actual experiment that success depends eighty-five per cent upon personality and only fifteen per cent on brains," he said.

He criticized the tendency of colleges to "place high emphasis upon intelligence and little stress upon personality."

Carolina Wrestlers Take Close Victories Over Duke

Varsity Crushes Duke Devils by 20-8 and Tar Babies Win From Blue Imps, 21-9.

HUSSEY DEFEATS ORNISCO

Hiller Wins in Extra Period Bout; Captain Idol Gets Fifth Fall of Season.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestlers both counted wins over the Duke grapplers last night before a crowd of 750 rabid fans in the Blue Devils' gymnasium. The varsity turned back the Duke aggregation 20-8 while the Tar Babies trounced the Imps 21-9. This was the first athletic win that Carolina has counted over Duke during the current season 1932-33, having lost to the Methodists in football, cross country and basketball.

The feature of the varsity matches was Thad Hussey's win over Captain Vincent Ornisko, brilliant 115-pounder. Ornisko had been beaten only once in thirty-two starts prior to the placing that Hussey gave the Duke grappling leader. Hussey won by a time advantage of 4:25 minutes.

Morton Hiller fought a great match in beating Reed, Duke 145-pounder. The match went into an extra period with Carolina finally winning a time decision of 2:38 minutes.

TAR BABIES WILL PLAY DARLINGTON SCHOOL TONIGHT

Georgia Prep Basketball Team And Freshman Squad Have Good Records This Year.

After nearly two weeks' absence from play at the University, Carolina's freshman basketball team will see action tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. The Tar Babies will be opposed by Darlington prep school of Georgia.

Carolina's frosh team has made an excellent record among prep schools, having wins over Oak Ridge and Mt. Pleasant in North Carolina and A.M.A. and Woodberry Forest in Virginia. The Tar Babies have only met defeat at the hands of the first year teams of Wake Forest and State, while they have victories over the freshman teams of Wake Forest and the University of Virginia.

Darlington has also made a fine record so far this year, having beaten several teams in the south and lost a hard fight, 21 to 19 battle to the Georgia Tech freshman cage team.

Although they have not been able to meet practice as regular as before, the football-basketball players are still on the team and will play tonight. Coach Dameron will start the same team he has in most of the games so far this season. Moore and Nelson, forwards; Rankin, center; and McCachren and Glasgow, guards are the probable line-up.

Tilley and McKeithen, forwards; Willis, center; and Bob Guarino, guard are other men who have been showing up well and will likely see much action tonight. Coach Dameron will rest his first string as much as possible so that they will be in good shape to meet the Duke Blue Imps tomorrow night. Last night the freshmen took only a short workout in their last practice.

CAGERS FIGHT TO GAIN STRIDE FOR GAME WITH DUKE

Contest With State and Davidson Will Fill Out Season for White Phantoms.

Fully aware that the state title hangs in the balance, the North Carolina basketball squad has settled down to hard work for the contest with Duke University on the Tin Can floor tomorrow night.

Coach Shepard gave his regulars a rest Wednesday afternoon and concentrated on his reserves. This seems to indicate that Shepard is not entirely satisfied with his first crew and that the reserves may play an important role in tomorrow's game. Yesterday the regulars returned after their brief lay-off and engaged in a two-hour work-out.

Although the Tar Heels broke even in their tour through Virginia and Maryland, they were unmistakably in the throes of a slump, which was evidenced in the Maryland, Navy, and V. M. I. contests. Whether the return to the home floor will terminate the slump remains to be seen tomorrow night.

Large Crowd Expected

The game in the Duke gym last week plus the traditional rivalry of the two squads indicate, that despite the lapse in form following the Blue Devil setto, there will be a capacity crowd to witness the game.

After the game with Duke, only two more games remain on the Tar Heel card before the conference tournament in Raleigh.

BOXERS ENTRAIN FOR PENN MEET TOMORROW NIGHT

Nine Members of Varsity Squad Make Trip; Ivey Will Replace Glover as Bantamweight.

Nine varsity boxers, Coach Crayton Rowe, and manager Ed Kerr left yesterday evening at 6:15 o'clock for State College, Pa., where the team engages Penn State in their annual meet tomorrow.

Pete Ivey, Marty Levinson, Norm Quarles, Furches Raymer, Nat Lumpkin, Sam Giddins, Peyton Brown, Tom Parsons, Platt Landis are the boys who are making the trip, and, with the exception of the lightweight class, which is uncertain, the team will fight in that order.

Glover Out

Due to the eleventh hour gash received by Cliff Glover, Pete Ivey will handle the bantamweight guns. Late yesterday afternoon, Ivey was but a fraction over the 118-pound limit and he will have little difficulty making it by ring time.

Another big shift was made in the line-up due to the loss of Frank McIntosh, 155-pounder, who, like Glover, has a nasty cut over his eye. Sam Giddins, regular middleweight, will drop to the 155-pound class and Peyton Brown, light-heavy, will fight in the middleweight booth. Tom Parsons will hold down Brown's light-heavyweight position.

The indecision of Coach Rowe about the lightweight entry was

Unbeaten High Teams Play For Cage Titles

Charlotte and Salisbury, undefeated leaders of the western state class "A" basketball conference, will play at Salisbury tonight. Charlotte, last year's state champion, has won four straight games, and Salisbury has captured all five of its contests.

In the eastern division, Durham high school, runner-up for the state title last year, meets Rocky Mount in Durham tonight. Durham is the eastern leader with four wins and no defeats, while the Rocky Mount quint has lost in each of its three starts.

In another class "A" game tonight, High Point will play at Greensboro. High Point and Greensboro are not in the running for the western crown.

caused by a slight injury to Norm Quarles. Furches Raymer, regular lightweight of last year, will get the call should Coach Rowe deem it wise not to fight Quarles.

The change in line-up may prove effective against the Pennsylvanians or any other team. Brown is a natural middleweight and he should find himself in fighting boys of his own weight and not having to spot his opponent lots of poundage. Giddins with little effort can make 155 pounds and he may prove even more effective in this weight than he has in his own middleweight division. Parsons is a natural light-heavy, although he could make 168 pounds in a pinch.

BEST HOUSE WINS FAST GAME FROM OLD WEST, 43-22

Best House brought its intramural basketball season to a close yesterday with a fast, well-played 42-32 triumph over Old West. The winners were gaining their eighth successive victory of the season, while Old West, which also wound up its schedule with this game, was dropping its seventh setback in eight starts.

In the first period Old West got off to a flying start which sent it into the lead. Going into the second quarter Best House staged a rally and took a 22-16 lead at the halfway mark. The end of the third quarter saw Best House ahead, 32-26, and in the final period the winners increased their margin to ten points at the final whistle.

Herman Snyder sank eight baskets for sixteen points to lead the victors on the offensive, while Parker and Whisnet got ten each. For Old West, Crouch scored twelve points and Bost ten.

Chi Psi Wins

Baukney and Lawrence scored sixteen and twelve points respectively as Chi Psi rang up its seventh win in a row yesterday at the expense of Pi Kappa Alpha, 40-13. Wilday, with eleven points, was another big factor in Chi Psi's win, while Woer-

Chesterfields are Milder

WHEN you ask a Chesterfield smoker why that's his brand—he generally comes right out flat-footed and says... "It's because They're Milder!"

So we're going to keep on doing everything we know how to keep them that way.

That's why we look for and buy the mildest and ripest tobaccos we can get. That's why we age them in our warehouses till they're mellow and sweet.

We believe that even the shredding of the tobacco... and the quality of the paper it's rolled in, have a lot to do with the even-drawing, mild smoke that people enjoy in Chesterfields.

You can bank on this... every method known to science is used to make Chesterfield a milder, better-tasting cigarette that satisfies.

GERMAN CLUB TO OPEN DANCE SET THIS AFTERNOON

Emerson Gill's Orchestra, of Cleveland, Ohio, will furnish Music for Mid-Winters.

Starting at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Bynum gymnasium, the German club will sponsor the first of the mid-winter set of dances for which Emerson Gill and his orchestra of Cleveland has been engaged to provide the music. Other dances included in the elaborate plans of the set will be the junior German scheduled for 9:30 o'clock tonight and lasting until 1:00 o'clock. Tomorrow's activities comprise three dances, a morning dance from 11:30 until 1:30 o'clock, a tea dance from 4:30 until 6:30 o'clock, and finally, the mid-winter German from 9:30 o'clock until midnight.

Emerson Gill to Play

Emerson Gill's orchestra was one of the pioneer orchestras to experiment with remote control broadcasting; that is, playing at a location at a distance from the broadcasting station. Since its organization the orchestra has had many engagements and has played at the Bamboo Gardens, in Cleveland, Pavilion Royal at Valley Stream, Long Island, at the famous steel pier at Atlantic City, the DeWitt Cafe in Syracuse, the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal, Norumbega Park, Boston, and the Hotel Hollendon at Cleveland.

Scouts Celebrate Anniversary Week

The Chapel Hill troop of Boy Scouts began their annual celebration of anniversary week last night with a father and son banquet at the Methodist church. Dr. Harold D. Meyer of the sociology department was the principle speaker.

The first day of the anniversary week is devoted to relations in the home, the second, to the scout in school, the third, to the scout in his troop, the fourth, to the scout as a citizen, and the fifth, to the scout and his church.

The scout court of honor will take place in Graham Memorial tonight. Dr. W. E. Caldwell of the University history department will preside.

OHIO FENCERS USE LIP ROUGE TO TIP EPEES

Ohio State University offers today's ho! hum!

L. W. St. John, director of athletics at the Columbus institution, was checking over the month's statements in his office, when a morbid hush of terror overcame him. Snapping out of it, he suddenly jumped up and dashed frantically around his office.

"Why don't we get he-men athletes here instead of a bunch of sissies?" he shouted. Finally checked in his ravings, St. John angrily pointed at an item on the ledger entitled "Lip Rouge." The fencing coach, standing nearby, explained hastily that the cosmetics were used to tip the epees of his swordsmen in order to register touches on the white uniforms of the contestants.

NORTH CAROLINA IS UNLUCKY FOR VIRGINIA'S QUINTS

Cavaliers' Four Conference Basketball Teams Have Lost Thirteen Games to N. C. Cagers.

Here's another angle to the unlucky thirteen superstition which in the past has proved too much of a real jinx in athletics. The gist to this yarn hangs to the tale that all four of Virginia's Southern conference basketball teams have been licked a total of thirteen times by their neighboring colleges in North Carolina.

North Carolina's White Phantoms climaxed the bad luck for the Old Dominion's college quints when they beat Washington and Lee's Generals Tuesday, 34-23. The Carolinians' invasion of Virginia being terminated, the Old North State was assured of a perfect record against all the Virginia teams played.

N. C. State's Wolfpack counted two wins over V. P. I. and one each over Washington and Lee, V. M. I. and Virginia. Duke's Blue Devils trimmed V. P. I. twice while beating Washington and Lee and V. M. I. once. Carolina's cagers ended up their northern trip with unimpressive wins over a scrappy V. M. I. quint and a triumph over the Washington and Lee Generals. Carolina had previously broke into the win column by licking V. M. I. and V. P. I. in the Tar Heel's Tin Can.

JORDAN AND BAXTER STAR IN SHOW TODAY

Miriam Jordan and Warner Baxter are featured in "Dangerously Yours," the Fox film showing at the Carolina theatre today. Herbert Mundin has a supporting role in the picture. Miss Jordan plays the part of a detective, who "gets her men."

The picture is taken from the story by Paul Hervey Fox and was directed by Frank Tuttle.

Pharmacists to Dance

Students of the Pharmacy Association have decided to give a dance which will come sometime during the spring quarter. The date of the affair is still pending. A committee has been appointed to supervise the issuance of bids. Members of this group are C. S. Curry, W. G. Dudley, W. H. Hansen, and R. S. Bunn.

FIRST NEW FORDS TO BE DISPLAYED HERE TOMORROW

New Low Priced Cars Will Be Exhibited by Strowd Motor Company for Students Here.

The first of the new Ford V-8 112-inch wheelbase motor cars will be displayed in Chapel Hill tomorrow by the Strowd Motor Company. The showrooms will open at 8:00 o'clock.

The new V-8 is the largest and most powerful Ford ever built. The latest creations of the automotive industry are embodied, including the modern-type sloping radiator grill, skirted fenders, stream-line headlamps and hood, slanting windshield, and curved rear quarters. It is powered with a seventy-five horsepower eight-cylinder engine that will provide a sustained speed of eighty miles per hour.

The new all-steel bodies are wider, almost a foot longer, and roomier. The improved engine is fitted with all-aluminum cylinder heads and is mounted on rubber. Hydraulic shock absorbers and internal expanding mechanical four-wheel brakes are other outstanding features.

Co-eds Rise To Arms For Phone In Spencer

A feeling that their popularity has been slighted caused fourth-floor residents of Spencer hall to rise to arms recently.

It seems that no telephone has been located on the fourth floor of the woman's building. "Awfully inconvenient," the young ladies and their friends complained. Claiming that they have been unable to get third-floor residents to relay their calls properly from the nearest telephone, this week the fourth-floor co-eds circulated a petition for a phone.

No reports could be obtained on the results of the request yesterday, but it is understood that a number of young men on the campus are working up favor for the petition.

eigh, February 24, and both are with state opponents—Davidson at Chapel Hill and State at Raleigh. If Carolina can win tomorrow's game, there is an excellent chance that the Tar Heels will come through in the following contests and finish in at least a tie with Duke, who has yet to play State.

Greensboro Educator Will Speak To Club

Guy B. Phillips, superintendent of Greensboro city schools, will address the North Carolina club Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. The club meets in the library room of the department of rural economics.

"The public school situation in North Carolina" will be the subject of Phillips' address. He will discuss cuts in educational appropriations and the trend towards the eight-months school system. Phillips is director of public relations for the North Carolina Educational Association.

Tin Can Tales

fied with the decision he got against Quarles the other night. From what some of the Cavaliers said after the fight and the condolences they were offering Bobby, there was no doubt in their minds as to which man deserved the decision.

It is true that they were all stunned and surprised at Goldy's loss. Three members of the Virginia squad told Erwin Walker Saturday afternoon that the Quarles-Goldstein bout would be another case of a local idol falling. They told of a fight Goldy had with a local pride in Charlottesville recently. The crowd yelled at each of the three blows the town boy landed in the course of the fight and then booed lustily when Goldy got the decision. These men thought that "our man Quarles" would fall, that his feet were made of clay. If there is anything made of clay about that guy it's his fists and then it is that stuff they make bricks from. We might add that the referee scored that fight as follows: First round, Quarles 5, Goldstein 3; second round, Quarles 5, Goldy 5; third round, Quarles 5, Goldy 4. Five indicates the winner of the round and then the "ref" marks off accordingly against the loser.

What ho! The White Phantoms are back in town and all ten of them are looking great. They said that Coach Bo is a great believer in plenty of sleep and all they did was eat poached eggs and rest. Against Maryland and V. M. I. they might as well have been on a cot, 'cause they certainly played like they were in a dream. On the trip Captain Hines and Weathers were both off at forward and Brandt seemed to have lost all his pep at center. Coach Shepard feels that the team played good ball against Navy and fair against Washington and Lee, but he deprecates their exhibitions against Maryland and V. M. I. His greatest concern is what makes the White Phantoms so slow in starting, only in the Washington and Lee game did they jump off to a good lead. We all have our bad days and let's hope that the Tar Heels will be right in the Tin Can tomorrow night and give the Blue Devils a sound lacing to even matters up.

ner and Spiers got six each for the losers.

T. E. P. kept pace with Chi Psi in the race for fraternity loop honors, downing Kappa Sigma, 27-18, in a rough and hard-fought contest. T. E. P. led at half time by only 10-8, and at the three-quarter whistle was still leading by the narrow margin of two points, 14-12. In the last period, however, Jacobs went wild, ringing up several baskets, while his teammates also began to click. Jacobs had six points for the game, while Lesson, also of T. E. P., accounted for nine. Eagles' seven was the best Kappa Sigma total, while White added six more.

Swain Hall got its sixth win in six attempts, downing Everett, 39-18. Puckett scored thirteen points to lead the victors while Eddinger and Waldrop chipped in seven each. Robbins got ten of the losing team's total.

Grimes Wins

Goldberg scored ten points as Grimes nosed out Mitchell House, 25-23. Ross, of the losers, was high scorer for the game, getting fourteen points.

Lewis crushed the Independents, 42-26, as the latter team wound up its season with a record of two wins and six losses. Willis, with ten points, and Pelfer and Young, with eight each, excelled for Lewis, while Salt got sixteen points for the Independents.

DR. CHAPPELL TO BE NEXT SPEAKER ON FORUM SERIES

Mrs. Bost, Who Was to Appear On Program With Miss Chappell, Unable to Be Here.

"Breaking the Breadlines," a vital phase of our present social difficulties, will receive an interpretation by Miss Winifred Chappell, secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Service, appearing here on the sixth Open Forum discussion program Thursday night.

Dr. Chappell has been present as an investigator in many of the most important industrial struggles in the United States during the past decade. Prior to 1922, she was an instructor of social science at the Chicago Training School for Missions. Later, she was chairman of the labor committee of the Woman Church Federation of Chicago.

Competent Authoress

Dr. Chappell has written for many church and law publications, contributing a chapter to a book for church youth, Social Adventure, and editing An American Pilgrimage, excerpts of letters written by Grace Scribner.

She is a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the American Civil Liberties Union and the League for Industrial Democracy.

Mrs. W. T. Bost, distinguished Raleigh social worker, was scheduled to appear on the platform with Dr. Chappell at the same time, but has informed the committee that she will be unable to speak at this time. Mrs. Bost will speak on a program later this season.

WORKS OF NOTED ARTISTS PLACED ON DISPLAY HERE

Copies of Fifty Prints, Etchings, And Drypoints on Exhibition In Lobby of Library.

A group of fifty prints, etchings and drypoints selected by Erwin O. Christensen, director of the department of educational work, is now on display in the lobby of the library. The exhibition was assembled by the American Federation of Arts, a national organization for the cultivation of the arts, with headquarters in Washington.

The prints are copies of the works of Gifford Beal, Frank W. Benson, Samuel Chamberlain, John Costigan, Sears Gallagher, Arthur W. Hall, Arthur Heintzelman, Martin Lewis, John Sloan, and Charles Woodbury. These men are considered to be ten of the outstanding artists of the year 1932.

Expensive Works

Benson's group of five sketches, "Cloudy Dawn," "Old Tom," "Geese Drifting Down," "Woodcock," and "Pair of Pintails," is valued at $565. Benson's "Old Tom" and Heintzelman's "Mendiant Italian" are the highest priced etchings in the display. These two sell for $165 each. "Old Tom" is a portrayal of a type, in which various textures have been effectively rendered by the artist through his mastery of loosely handled line and stipple. Rembrandt is the source of inspiration for "Mendiant Italian."

Clarence Shore Dies In Raleigh Hospital

Dr. Clarence A. Shore, graduate of the University and former instructor in biology here, died yesterday at Rex hospital, Raleigh, following a brief illness from an intestinal disease. Dr. Shore was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Xi, and Nu Sigma Nu societies.

Since leaving Chapel Hill Dr. Shore acquired a national reputation as an authority on hydrophobia. His work at the state laboratory of hygiene in Raleigh resulted in a great improvement of that institution. Dr. Shore was president of the Tri-State Medical association.

Varied Construction Materials Utilized In Buildings On Campus

Survey of Structural Qualities of Edifices on Campus Conducted By Dr. William F. Prouty Show Markedly Different Types During Four Different Periods.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the result of a survey of the structural qualities of edifices on the campus conducted by Dr. William F. Prouty, of the geology department.)

By W. F. Prouty

The materials of construction found in the various University buildings on the campus at Chapel Hill are of especial interest to the architect, the economic geologist, the construction engineer, and of general interest to many laymen.

From the earliest construction on the campus in the Old East building in 1793, to the present, there have been used materials of markedly different types for the four different building periods.

Such differences are to be expected with construction periods far separated in time and under different managements. The architectural differences are perhaps more at variance than the materials of construction.

Throughout its history the University has never been extravagant in the materials used in its buildings. In the early days of poor transportation the materials close at hand were utilized almost exclusively, and during the later periods a large portion of the building materials has also been of relatively local character. In all periods, but especially in more recent years, a small amount of ornamental stone has been used. Thus, there is here on the campus a fairly good "museum" of building and other ornamental stones.

Campus Osculation Experts Give Opinions On Question Of Kissing

"Kiss - verb - transitive — to touch or press with the lips, as a mark of greeting, farewell, forgiveness, etc."

It was the "etc." in Mr. Webster's otherwise uninspired definition that gave rise to a recent inquiry into what has long been one of the most comprehensive courses on the campus Osculation 1-2-3.

Twelve Interviewed

The twelve students who made the dean's list in this major course displayed virtually as much oscillation on the subject in question as osculation on the subjects in arms. In fact, these authorities could not have differed more widely if they had been discussing the embattled cosmic ray.

Quizzed on the why and when of kissing, some colored abashedly, twisted their thumbs, and pretended total ignorance. Only discreet circumvention elicited the desired replies. Others showed themselves only too eager to impart their expert information. The composite viewpoint is scrambled but interesting as a study in controversy over a most engaging problem in social science.

In general, the male students showed a greater lack of discrimination and selectivity than those of the opposite sex. Admitting the numerical impetus to this attitude, the view of a local Dempsey disciple appears typical.

Fainting slightly at first, he connected squarely when he said,

The group of buildings constructed in the pre-Civil War period are much alike in both architecture and materials of construction. These buildings include: Old East, Person, South, Gerrard, Old West, Smith, New East, New West. Most of these buildings have a foundation and trim of rich brown Triassic sandstone which came from the University quarry located about two miles from the University and near the Raleigh road. The red brick used in the buildings was made from clay pits on the University lands or close by areas. One of the clay pits and brick yards, according to Professor Collier Cobb and Professor McCorkle, was near the present Chemistry building. Rumor has it that some of the brick used in the construction of these earlier buildings, especially Old East and South buildings, came from England, but there seem to be no facts to support this rumor.

Although the Triassic Red Sandstone is relatively friable and easily worked, it has, where properly laid, withstood almost perfectly the weathering of the 139-year period since the construction of Old East building. However, where used in steps and floors, as in the entrance to the Smith building (Playmakers Theatre) is badly worn, because its loose grain texture does not readily resist abrasion. In the remodeling of these older buildings all the materials in the foundations and the outer stones.

"Kissing no longer means anything to me, except as a first step in necking. I consider that a girl I've just met ordinarily expects to be kissed anyway. I don't think you have to know a girl for any certain length of time before trying to kiss her. Rather than lose respect for a girl who kisses, I think one that doesn't is a wash-out."

Opposing this frankness is the statement of a figure high in journalistic circles. It required an entire week-end for him to admit, "In general, no, in particular, yes."

Politician Fails to Straddle!

Considerably more romantic and self-revealing is a senior member of the ace political organization on the campus. He burst forth, "Although I'm in love, I don't consider it being untrue to kiss other girls as long as I don't give the impression that it means anything to me. I don't think it is necessary to know them any particular length of time." This, it has been understood, is the fruit of certain marriage course given in the spring.

Come Up Next Year

"I think there are three stages in kissing: a prep-school age when you kiss a girl at every opportunity just for the experience, an undergraduate stage when you are more particular, and (in case you live through that) the stage at which only one girl interests you," declared a second year medical student

FAMOUS ETCHER TO GIVE LECTURE HERE NEXT WEEK

John Taylor Arms to Present Demonstrated Talk in Hill Auditorium Tuesday.

John Taylor Arms, recognized as one of the outstanding masters of the art of etching, will give a demonstrated lecture on "The Making of an Etching" Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Hill music auditorium.

Arms attended Princeton for two years and was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1911. He received his master's degree in 1912. He practiced architecture for five years in New York and, during this period, he started etching. After serving in the Navy in the World War, he gave much time and thought to furthering the best interests of graphic art in Europe and America. His etchings are strictly architectural in theme, being mainly of the cathedrals which he has journeyed far and often to draw.

Arms has organized exchange exhibitions with the governments of England, France, and Italy and, because of his long experience in work of this kind, he was chosen to select the artists to be represented in the portfolio of the Bicentennial Pageant of George Washington, which has recently been published in co-operation with the George Washington Bicentennial commission. This portfolio, of which Arms was the art editor, contains twenty etchings representing twenty scenes from the life of Washington. These etchings are made by the foremost etchers of America.

Arms' own works are represented in seventeen permanent collections including those of the United States National Museum, Musee de Rouen in France, British Museum in London, Art Gallery of Toronto, and the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris. Aside from being a member of thirty-two art societies, Arms is president of the Society of American Etchers.

Eighteen persons were under the University physician's care in the infirmiry yesterday. They were: Eleanor Lockart, John Innes, G. W. McLean, E. G. Marshall, B. R. Martinson, Anne Utley, Edith Wladkowski, James H. Williams, D. J. Lanier, Woodrow Wooten, W. H. Monty, E. D. Dillard, L. L. Harrison, N. B. Pecker, L. M. Cromartie, Branch Craig, Jr., N. C. SPEAKERS STATE CONDITIONS TODAY WARRANT CHANGE

Poe and Ward Emphasize Necessity of Breaking Precedents To Relieve Stress.

"Present conditions in America justify the breaking of all precedents," Dr. Clarence Poe, president and editor of the Progressive Farmer, asserted here Thursday night in the fifth of a series of open forum lectures.

"The right way to break precedents is by establishing an honest, sound, and stable currency, just alike to creditors and debtors," he said.

On the same program with Dr. Poe, Dr. Gordon Ward of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute emphasized the same necessity. Dr. Ward asserted the importance of social organization as the medium, while Dr. Poe advocated a stabilized currency.

Agriculture Hit Hardest

All businesses, Dr. Poe pointed out, have suffered from the present disastrous situation, "but agriculture more than any other industry, because the price of farm products has dropped out of proportion to all other commodities. Farm products which in 1928 would buy only ninety per cent as much goods as in pre-war days, dropped to a ratio of eighty per cent in 1930, to sixty-three in 1931, and fifty-six in September, 1932. In that month the farmer received fifty-nine per cent of pre-war prices for his products and paid 106 per cent of pre-war prices for what he bought."

The farmers of America, continued Dr. Poe, are asking for a money system stabilized on

PROBE THREATENS UNIVERSITY FREE TUITION STUDENTS

Joint Committee of State Legislature Investigates Number Receiving Free Tuition.

The joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly appointed a subcommittee Thursday afternoon to ascertain the reasons for all students in state institutions not paying tuition. The action came after it was shown to the committee that 890 students at the University here and seventy-five per cent of those at N. C. C. W. do not pay tuition fees.

A suggested plan by the committee members effecting one hundred dollar tuition charge for those students not paying the fees at present would bring an approximate additional income of $100,000 yearly to the state. Under the present law, students proposing to be teachers or ministers, children of ministers, and students with physical defects are exempt from paying tuition. No information regarding the proposal to investigate the admission plan could be obtained from University officials yesterday.

The Farm Problem Brought Home to the Student

"What significance has the modern agricultural problem to the University undergraduate?" is a question some of the audience at Thursday night's Open Forum Discussion program might have asked on perceiving the large number of students present to hear two addresses on "Men and Land." For a large portion of the assemblage was composed of students, all of them apparently interested in seeing the way to some solution to the farm problem. Dr. Clarence Poe and Dr. Gordon Ward, both of them eminent authorities in the agricultural field, brought light on the struggles of our six million farmers to produce and sell—at the same time maintaining a decent living.

In a state university, the farm problem strikes home to almost every student. Since nearly two-thirds of the University student body claims residence in North Carolina, an agrarian state, it is apparent that the farm problem is one of paramount importance. Happily, the Tar Heel farmer is some better off than his Northern brother.

In many middlewestern states riots in farm sections are common occurrences, an unprecedented state of affairs. A two-story farm house together with barn and livestock sold recently for $1.18 in Pennsylvania. An Iowa farmer sold his cattle on foreclosure for ten cents a head. An entire farm in Illinois went down to the hammer at forty-five dollars. As one of the speakers pointed out, we may soon face some of these conditions.

The livelihood of our populace rests in the ability of the farmer to produce sufficiently to feed the urban population and at the same time earn an income enabling him to spend part of his earnings on factory produce. When the dollar, varying from sixty-four cents fifteen years ago to $1.64 today, remains on an unsound basis, the farmer is at loss to pay debts and purchase sufficient material to raise the needed crops.

With the calibre of our present Congressional material much in doubt, it is evident that the farm problem will not be solved to the satisfaction of all for some time. One of the speakers pointed out that a recurrence of the present state of affairs is inevitable under the present system in 1940. By that time some of those who crowded Gerrard hall Thursday night may face the same problem at the polls and in the legislative halls of the state and nation. By that time we may be sufficiently educated.—D.C.S.

The Supreme Court Interprets Our Legal Enigma

In a very recent decision the Supreme Court of North Carolina has declared unconstitutional the state's four-year-old law for the sterilization of individuals unfit to bring children into the world. This decision is based upon the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution which forbids a state to deprive any one of life, liberty, or happiness without due process of law. It is impertinent to question the wisdom of this august body but it does appear that the court has given this clause a rather wide interpretation to render null and void a valuable and far-sighted law.

Liberty is a word that all but defies definition. Where liberty leaves off and license commences is a matter for speculation only, but liberty in the general interpretation of our legal institutions is the right to act in any manner or do anything providing that the rights of others or the welfare of the community are not thereby endangered.

The sterilization law was intended to prevent manifestly unfit individuals from bearing children to perpetuate their undesirable characteristics. It was a law that marked this state as progressive and a leader in sociological advance. It was a law that jeopardized the life or happiness of none, and which before being carried into effect demanded the approval of qualified experts. North Carolinians of intelligence were proud of this law which through a legal technicality has been stricken from laws of the state.

If it is the just right of diseased or mentally feeble persons to bring into the world others like themselves, then the court is correct. If liberty means the privilege of foisting upon our people lunatics, hopeless invalids, and dangerous criminals then the decision is sound. If it is the right of these unfortunates to carry on their afflicted lineage forever, a source of misery and suffering to themselves and burden and menace to the community, then there are many who will take issue with this conception of liberty and declare that it has passed from its bounds and has become a dangerous license.

There is no law of God or man intended to produce crime, poverty, disease or suffering, nor to interfere with its eradication when such is feasible. The man who operates an automobile recklessly upon our highways is promptly restrained and punished, but the individual who seeks to bring into our midst dangerous or burdensome offsprings is not restrained nor punished, but by decree of our courts is now to be protected.

In its zealous championing of the rights of the individual the Supreme Court has taken a step which will direct itself against the best interests of the state. It is a misfortune that North Carolina has been checked on the path of progress and it is to be earnestly and fervently hoped that our highest tribunal will if possible reverse this decision before the precedent becomes too strong and stands forever between us and a healthier, safer, and happier people.—J.F.A.

The outcome of the Buccaneer's much-discussed proposal regarding the election of publication heads by the staffs seems to have resulted in a victory neither for its opponents nor for its protagonists. For last Tuesday night the activities committee in a free-for-all meeting defeated the motion by a sixteen to nine vote and in its stead favored the plan of the student council's requiring each staff to select its choice for editor just prior to campus elections. This solution of the problem was doubtless arrived at in order to place more emphasis on the importance of the particular publication's choice for editor, and while the arrangement is by no means final, the activities committee seemed to think that the staff nomination alone would be considered by our student body to be actual election.

However, in spite of this concession, the battle over which is to elect editors—the student body or the publication staffs—remains essentially a compromise. The proposed plan of the student council makes no drastic adjustment of the problem, nor does it mark any noticeable departure from the usual method of electing these officers. The publication staffs in recent years made it evident as to who of their members was most eligible for the positions of editor. The force of competition drove some able staff-members before the campus eye. And the student body voted on its choice. That the student council places within the hands of the staffs the right to nominate candidates prior to elections is little more than a confirmation of the situation that has been the rule on this campus in past years.

So, now that the tumult and the shouting has died and the captains and the kings had their say, the recent solution to the problems almost puts us back where we started. The compromise may be a good thing in that it has sounded campus opinion on a matter which has plenty of argument on both sides. And the student body, if it evinces this same alertness on campus issues, need have no fear that the editors of its publications will be mal-chosen.—A.T.D.

Something new again! We see that Butler University will offer a course in the Art of Staying Married. The irony of it is that the instructor has been married twice. He certainly ought to be marriage-wise, even though he doesn't know how to stay married himself. It's another case of graduating from the school of hard knocks—and flying cups and saucers.—Carnegie Tartar.

At the University of California, students who have a grade of "A" on a course at the end of the first four weeks do not have to continue the course and get a five dollar refund on their tuition.

Our Times

Election

A fellow by the name of Roosevelt was elected the other day in Washington. He is, we understand, a fifth cousin to the Roosevelt who kept us out of war sometime ago. The same day six firemen were killed and a number injured in a mid-western fire. A sailor named Blotz fell overboard in a small storm off the Grand Banks.

Lady Known As Lulu

This unpretentious department woke up one morning this week to see in the column that someone named Lulu had written a letter to us asking some questions about things hereabouts. And just when we thought it had all blown over, a mysterious person called us on the phone and requested that we use the following:

"Dear Mr. Shoemaker:

"We would like you to answer the following questions along with those of Lulu . . . did the same girl 'who was scared by being called up at a fraternity house' have a good time with a certain fellow from the University during the past Christmas vacation . . . which of the Playmakers would, in her own words 'like to be bronzed' . . . who swore that he would stay away from the Playmakers after the tour and then showed that he couldn't take it . . . what politicians have actively been organizing a bigger and better party to oppose the All-Campus party . . . what co-ed has 'never been afraid of anything' . . . and what fellow thinks he can cure her of this . . . who continually loses her keys to the co-ed shack . . . we wonder who paid for the meals that one 'Red' eats with the tall boy in the swellest restaurant in town . . . who is Lulu . . . yours . . . 105 Combination . . ."

Frankly, yes and no.

Poesy

During a lull in Thursday's Open Forum discussion we found ourselves jotting idly on a notecard, the resulting bit indicating what's preying on our mind:

The speakers of the League for Industrial democracy
Engineers, college presidents—all may run down Technocracy,
And rave instead about Power, Labor, and Lines for Bread
And other doctrines somewhat pink or slightly red—
But we maintain
(Don't think us vain)
That a Technocrat
Knows where he's at.

Varied Construction Materials Utilized In Campus Buildings

walls have been preserved, although the tinted cement wash placed on some of them has largely concealed the identity of the original brick and stone.

From 1857 to 1898 only one building was constructed this being old Memorial hall, built in 1883, eight years after the re-opening of the University following the Civil War depression. The old Memorial hall reflected the character of the times both in its mixed architecture and strangely combined building materials. The classic Greek and Italian had passed and the well blended brick and stone gave place to strange combinations of brick, cement and wood. The age of architectural unrestraint had begun.

The third period of University construction from 1898 to 1913 witnessed the construction of thirteen buildings. Most of these are built of buff pressed brick, and under this head are Alumni, Carr, Bynum Gymnasium, Pharmacy (old Chemistry), old Library, Infirmary, Davie, Caldwell, Battle-Vance-Pettigrew, Peabody, and Swain. Two buildings of this period were more cheaply built—the Y. M. C. A. building of stucco and concrete, and the Mary Ann Smith of red brick, concrete and terracotta. Most of the buff pressed brick buildings were trimmed with one of three materials: concrete, terracotta, or limestone. The later ones of this period were trimmed with limestone and the early one, except Alumni, with terracotta. During this period granite was used in steps and some foundations.

Alumni Building Individual

The Alumni building is different in most respects from other buildings in this group. It is architecturally more ornate and mixed in type. It is the only building using a considerable amount of granite. The buff sandstone window seats and columns are much like the Brier Hill stone from Ohio. This sandstone, according to Dr. Collier Cobb, came from the Triassic beds near Sanford. The columns in this building were hand turned and are quite irregular in shape, the sections not matching where joined.

During the fourth building period from 1918 to 1928, the University constructed sixteen buildings and made over a number of the older ones. With the exception of the first one in this group, Phillips Hall, built of tapestry brick with limestone trim, and the New Library, built largely of Indiana limestone, the exteriors of the buildings are largely alike in materials of construction, common light red brick and Indiana limestone trim, with use of Mt. Airy granite for steps, Avonia, Va., slate for the roof, with reinforced concrete beams, pillars, underfloors and bearing parts. Spencer Hall differs somewhat from the rest in its trim of Vermont marble.

In the more recently constructed buildings there is a considerable amount of ornamental stone of various types to be seen. Buff Indiana limestone is the light colored stone used with light red brick in the majority of the newer buildings. The Library is largely made of this limestone and the columns of Graham Memorial, South, and the new Memorial Hall are fine exhibits of this type of stone. A harder gray Indiana limestone is used in the floor of the portico of Graham Memorial. The famous cream colored Caen stone of France is used in part of the wall space in the entrance hall of Graham Memorial. Travertine from Italy is used in stairs and stair banisters in the new Library building. The Kesota dolomitic marble floors the stacks in the Library.

A number of marbles are represented in the building. The Tennessee marble is used in many floors as in the entrance hallway of Graham and New Memorial. The Carrara marble and the statuary Vermont marble are largely used in the memorial tablets and corner stones, and small amounts of Georgia and Alabama marbles are used as vainscoating in a number of the more recently constructed buildings. Some foreign marble is seen here and there as the Botticino Italian in a tablet in the lobby of Graham Memorial, the deep red Levanto marble in tablet of the Bell Tower, and the Belgian Black in the base of columns in the reading room of the new Library.

the basis of the average purchasing power of a dollar in the years of 1920-30 when most of America's staggering burden of public and private debt was created. "Give us that," he argued, "and America will work out its own salvation."

The details, he maintained, may be left to experts: whether stabilization should be effected through adjusting the gold in the dollar to the commodity index, by arbitrarily reducing the gold content of the dollar, by greater use of silver, by Federal Reserve operations, or some other method. But chaos will exist until stabilization allows "debts to be paid off in dollars of the same value that the debtors received."

Dr. Ward in his address said in part:

"The first step in a program for immediate relief is to save those farmers threatened with the loss of their farms. They should be granted a moratorium until prices rise to a point where they can pay."

Another step would be "the restoration of income to the millions of unemployed" through the development of numerous "publicly and cooperatively owned and operated hydro-electric power systems and transmission lines, through gigantic housing projects, and other construction projects."

"The only way out," he concluded, "that I can see is through the development of a planned national and world economy operated on a co-operative non-profit basis. This will mean socialization of natural resources and many basic industries. But I believe that conduct of as much of our business activities as possible by producers and consumers co-operative associations is preferable to universal socialism."

Reverend Tamblyn Is Visiting Kansas Congregational Church

Reverend Ronald Tamblyn, who has been the pastor of the Presbyterian church here in Chapel Hill for the past several months, has gone to Lawrence, Kansas, to preach for the next two Sundays in the Plymouth Congregational church. He is being considered for a call there.

Reverend J. N. Thomas of Rapidan, Virginia, will officiate at the Presbyterian services here tomorrow morning, and the pulpit will be occupied Sunday, February 19, by Reverend Thomas F. Barr of Nashville, Tennessee.

"Bruin" Reveals Famous Men Played Chorus Girl Roles

Many of America's famous men once capered as chorus girls or played comic opera roles, according to the California Daily Bruin. Records show that the undergraduate actors in Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Club theatricals, dating back to 1884, included the late Bishop Phillips Brooks, '55; Thomas W. Lamont, '92; Oliver Wendell Holmes, '61; Richard Washburn Child, '03; former Gov. William Tudor Gardner, '14, of Maine; and Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, '08, of Massachusetts.

Ward Addresses Assembly

Dr. Gordon H. Ward of Virginia Polytechnic Institute was speaker for the freshman and sophomore assembly period yesterday. Ward, who is associate professor of economics at V. P. Heels Out For Revenge Over Duke Five Tonight Leadership in Conference and State Races at Stake in Contest in Tin Can at 8:00.

FROSH TEAMS WILL PLAY

Game Between Blue Imps and Tar Babies to Act as Curtain-Raiser for Varsity Game.

The Carolina basketball squad has been working its hardest of the season this week and is expecting to be at its peak for the all-important return game with Duke here tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

A Carolina-Duke freshman game starting at 7:15 will precede the varsity contest.

Big Crowd Expected

Extra bleachers are being put in readiness, and there should be plenty of seats for all comers, early and late. The biggest crowd of the season is expected.

This should mean that a royal thriller is in store for the great crowd that is expected. Duke is undefeated in the Big Five, while Carolina's one loss was at Duke, 36-32.

Conference Lead at Stake

Moreover, the conference lead will hinge in the balance. Both teams are otherwise undefeated in the conference except single losses at Maryland, and both teams hold victories over two teams, V. M. I. and Washington and Lee, which beat Maryland away from home.

With so much at stake, these old rivals are due to be primed

FROSH RINGSTERS LEAVE TODAY TO MEET OAK RIDGE

Tar Babies Will Be Forced to Forfeit Heavyweight Bout Due to Loss of Kanner.

Ten freshman boxers will set out for Oak Ridge this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock where they will meet the preppers in a dual meet tonight.

With a glorious record so far this season, the chances for the team continuing its undefeated string tonight is uncertain. With the same team that took Virginia over the hurdles last week, the Tar Babies would have been a hundred to one shot to come through for Virginia was reputed to be the best frosh outfit in the south, but with several untried boys working and with one bout already lost to Oak Ridge by forfeit, Coach Allen's maulers have the odds against them.

Murry Kanner, lost to the team, leaves a vacancy in the heavyweight class which no one has as yet applied for, leaving Coach Allen nothing else to do but forfeit that bout.

Dean, who got a little experience in the intramurals, will work for the first time tonight. He fights as a welterweight and as he is big and rangy, he may develop into a good fighter. Horner, another newcomer, will get his chance tonight in the 155 pound division.

Eutler, flash little bantamweight who stole the show last Saturday in the frosh meet, will go in his usual capacity. He is undefeated this year and is one of the best prospects on the team.

Frucht or Edwards will see action in the featherweight class, while Glenn, Flaherty, or Genrette, another new boy with promise, will go along as lightweight, Coach Allen being uncertain as to which of the three he will use.

Ellisberg, undefeated middleweight, and Owick, who fought once and lost a four round decision, complete the line-up.

Tar Heel Star

Stuart Aitken, smart Tar Heel, who is expected to figure greatly when Carolina and Duke meet in the Tin Can tonight. In the first game between the two teams this season, Aitken scored seven points and led the Heels on the floor.

FRESHMAN CAGE TEAM WINS OVER DARLINGTON PREP

Tar Babies Set to Play Blue Imps in Tin Can Tonight At 7:15 O'clock.

Carolina's freshman cagers continued their unbeaten record over prep school teams by downing Darlington 41 to 26 in a fast but loosely played tilt last night. Darlington had a fast passing team but could not make their shots count. The Tar Babies also missed frequent throws at the basket. Carolina's yearlings jumped into a six point lead before Darlington was able to count. The prep school then took the upper hand and got a 10 to 9 lead before the Tar Babies could steady their defense. From here on the freshmen were never in danger, and led by the shooting of Moore, they ran up at 21 to 12 lead before the opening half was over.

With Rankin leading the way, the Tar Babies continued building up a big lead, holding a margin of 36 to 16 after the teams had been in action only six minutes of the second half. Coach Dameron then sent in his second team which finished the game. Darlington clearly outplayed the second team but not enough to overtake the wide margin.

Jim McCachren, newly elected captain of the Tar Babies, led the play of the winners. Captain McCachren played a beautiful defensive game and also added much to the offense. Potts, forward, and R. Hackett, guard were the stars for the visitors, both playing steady floor games throughout. Moore, freshman forward, led the scoring with

CAMPBELL'S 'BLUEBIRD' MAY RACE TOMORROW

Sir Malcolm Campbell and his fourteen-cylinder "Bluebird" may roar down Daytona Beach tomorrow in an attempt to better the Englishman's own world speed record.

The speed ace is waiting only for the beach to be whipped into suitable shape for high speed racing. "It's much better than at any time since my arrival," said the British daredevil Thursday. "While it's impossible to say when everything will be ready because of the contrary weather, it seems that the beach should be in shape by Sunday or Monday at the latest."

PHI DELTA THETA SMOTHERS ZETA BETA TAU, 74-6

Ruffin, Old East, Betas, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Chi Are Other Winners.

Phi Delta Theta crushed Zeta Beta Tau, 74-6, yesterday in the intramural race, with all five men on the winning team scoring twelve or more points. Moffitt had nineteen, Tucker sixteen, Mosier fifteen, and Hershey and Parker twelve each. Brown and Shell scored all the points for Zeta Beta Tau.

Ruffin Wins

Ruffin, campus champion last year, disposed of Mangum as a pennant contender, handing the hitherto undefeated five a 26-22 setback in an overtime game.

The eventual winners got off to a good start, taking a lead of 6-4 in the first period, but Mangum staged a comeback to hold a 16-6 advantage at the half-time whistle. This lead dwindled in the second half, but with three minutes to go Ruffin was still trailing.

Sigma Nu downed Kappa Alpha, 34-22, with Joe Griffith scoring thirteen points for the winners. Bost added ten to this score, while Skinner's thirteen stood out for Kappa Alpha. Ed Everett's bid for scoring honors was halted temporarily as he scored only two points.

Old East, conquerors of Ruffin earlier in the season, kept up its high-powered scoring, crushing Manly, 53-11. Fox and Hinson got nineteen and twelve points respectively to add to their high totals for the season to date. Wright's six points were the best single contribution to the Manly total.

Betas Down Phi Gams

Holding their opponents scoreless throughout the first three quarters, the Betas smothered Phi Gamma Delta, 36-3. Billy Tenille shone for the winners, amassing fourteen points, while Trainer and Dunn got ten and six respectively. Henry Anderson's fine defensive work was instrumental in holding the Phi Gams to three lone points, scored by Hoggard late in the final period.

Sigma Chi outscored Sigma Phi Sigma, 16-11, in a dull contest. Phelps and Brayhill for the winners and Froneberger for the losers all scored six points.

MAT WIN FAILS TO IMPRESS QUINLAN

The varsity wrestlers broke into the win column for the first time this year when they decisively downed Duke's grapplers 20-8, but Coach Quinlan, Tar Heels' mat coach, was not impressed with five time decisions and only one fall.

"The varsity mat men were up against tough enough competition, but they certainly looked better against V. M. I. and Washington and Lee than in their bouts last night," Quinlan said in a statement yesterday afternoon.

Carolina's varsity and freshmen mat candidates will be given a short termination of training until Monday when they will resume practice, priming themselves for the Davidson meet, February 25.

DEACONS LOSE CAGE TILT TO WASHINGTON

George Washington University cagers stopped Wake Forest Thursday in Washington to the tune of a 38-28 tally.

The Deacs pulled quite a surprise by holding the capital city lads to a 14-all deadlock at the half, but the North Carolina boys couldn't stand up against the Colonials when they cracked down in the second period.

DEPENDABLE DUKE GUARD

Herb Thompson, Blue Devil guard, will probably be in Coach Eddie Cameron's starting line-up tonight. Both the Big Five and Southern Conference leads will be at stake when the opening whistle blows at 8:30 o'clock.

WEATHER FORCES RUNNERS INDOORS

Tin Can Work-outs Will Probably Continue Due to Nearness of Conference Meet.

Inclement weather forced Carolina's track team to seek refuge indoors yesterday afternoon. This might be termed as a gesture on the part of Providence in that the Tar Heels must start priming themselves in earnest for the conference indoor track meet which is little less than a month off.

Coach Dale Ranson supervised the work-outs in the Tin Can yesterday. Some of the hurdling candidates were out for work and drills were held on the wrestling mat. Hawthorne, Abernethy, and Glenn looked best among those clearing the single hurdle used in the short workout.

Ranson announced that the entire track squad will have an indoor drill Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Tin Can, and if the snow and sleet continue the Tar Heels will hold all their weekend drills indoor.

Virginia a Threat

One of the main reasons that the Tar Heel track men are plunging into their work at present may be due to the fine form Virginia showed in trouncing Washington and Lee 63-23 to 26-13 in a dual meet held at Charlottesville. Coaches Fetzner and Ranson are anxious that their charges should look good in the conference meet and are therefore beginning work.

In the Virginia-Washington and Lee meet, one of the most

LOYOLA COACH ELECTED TO SUCCEED AL STAGG

Clark D. Shaughnessy's appointment as successor to Amos Alonzo Stagg as gridiron coach at Chicago University has been officially approved by the board of trustees at the Windy City institution.

Shaughnessy, who gained a reputation at Loyola, New Orleans, as a "one-man coaching staff," was chosen by Thomas Nelson Metcalfe, new Maroon director of athletics.

The new coach is the second ever had by the University of Chicago. Stagg had served ever since the inception of athletics there forty-one years ago. Now that the latter has passed President Robert Maynard Hutchins' age limit of seventy, the old maestro has taken the advice of Horace Greeley and gone out west into the football country.

FOOTBALL STARS WILL SCRIMMAGE

"Georgia Tech" and "Vanderbilt" Will Clash in Practice Game This Afternoon.

Carolina's other pair of winter practice grid teams, "Georgia Tech" and "Vanderbilt" will swing into action with a game in Kenan stadium this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. "Georgia" trounced "Virginia" 24-13 in the first of the series of bi-weekly round-robin games Wednesday.

"Tech" Is Veteran Team

Of the teams to clash Saturday, "Georgia Tech" has veterans all along the line and in the backfield. "Georgia Tech" looks like the team Coach Chuck Collins hopes will come through for Carolina next fall.

Julian Frankel and Leo Manley man the flanks. Jim Tatum and Bill Collins are at the tackles, George Barclay and Edwin Kahn at the guards, and Gordon McIver at center. In the backfield there will be an all-star quartet of Pepper Martin, quarterback; Johnny Phipps and Kay Thompson, halfbacks, and Bill Croom, fullback. Every man is a letterman except Manley and Martin. Martin played frequently last fall, and Manley has showed much promise in practice.

"Vandy" Line-up

The "Vanderbilt" line-up will be Bill Moore and Bus Arthur, ends; Tom Evins and Sam Hobbard, tackles; Stevens and Emmett Joyce, guards; Murray Kanner, center; Charlie Woolen, quarterback; Red Phelps and Johnny Daniel, halfbacks; and Herman Snyder, fullback.

This line is an all-freshman affair except for Stevens, who

TERRORS WIN THIRD IN BIG FIVE RATING

North Carolina State College Red Terrors took third place in Big Five cage rankings Thursday night when they bowled over Davidson, 39-16, at Davidson.

Leroy Jay, forward, and George Beageen, center, were the big guns in State's win. Beageen piled up eleven points. Jay scored nine. Dickerson topped the 'Cats with seven tallies.

Previously State had lost contests to Carolina and Duke, but now they have attained a percentage of .250 for one win in a quartet of games. State is good for third place in the Big Five.

TAR HEELS WILL BOX PENN STATE MITTMEN TONIGHT

Strength of Both Teams Uncertain and Outcome of Meet Difficult to Predict.

In the first meet away from home in a month, the Carolina varsity boxers will engage Penn State tonight at State College, Pa. The team arrived yesterday and will weigh-in this afternoon.

As both teams' strength is uncertain, the outcome of the meet would be difficult to predict. State has lost several of last year's letter men through graduation and its line-up tonight will present many new faces. Carolina's line-up will have most of the boys who faced Virginia starting, but they have been shifted around in the heavier divisions and the result of the shift, whether favorable or otherwise, will not be known until the fighters answer the gong.

Giddins and Brown Swap

Sam Giddins, Peyton Brown, and Tom Parsons all figure in the change. Giddins, regular middleweight, will be fighting for the first time as a 155 pounder, while Brown will have Giddins' old post instead of his usual lightweight spot. Parsons, who has seen action once this year, will be the 175 pounder.

In another change, Pete Ivey will work for the first time this year, stepping into Cliff Glover's place as bantamweight. Ivey is a fairly good bantam and is in

ALBRIGHT PLANS FOR INTRAMURAL INDOOR CONTEST

Director of Graham Memorial Announces Tournaments in Bowling, Ping-Pong, Pool.

Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial, announced yesterday that the long promised bowling, ping-pong, and pool tournaments for the winter quarter will start in a few days. The indoor games will be part of the intramural program.

In the bowling tournament, each dormitory and fraternity may enter a three man team. Each team will bowl at a scheduled time in a qualifying round. Teams qualifying will be bracketed and seeded, and then the elimination rounds will begin. The winner of the fraternity tournament will meet the dormitory champion for the campus title.

The bowling alleys will be reserved from 2:00 until 5:00 o'clock every week day and games will be scheduled between these hours. No cost will be involved in entering of players in the tournament. Teams should apply for entrance to Mayne Albright at Graham Memorial before 6:00 o'clock Tuesday, February 14, and no teams will be registered after that time.

Generous allotment of points in intramural standing will be allowed organizations entering teams in the competition. Each team participating will receive twenty-five points. The winner of each bracket of the tourney will receive forty points, the other finalist thirty points, the eliminated semi-finalist twenty points, and the eliminated quarter-finalist ten points. In the fraternity league the teams eliminated in the preliminaries will receive five points. In the Grail scoring toward the individual cup, the men on each team will be given five points for winning or one point for losing.

The ping-pong tournament will be run at the same time and

Beale May Play

Coach Bo. Shepard is still non-committal as to whether he will shift Carolina's offense or whether he will use Earle Beale in place of George Brandt at center. Beale is a better jumper and looked fully as good as the rest of his mates in Tuesday night's victory over Washington, and Lee. Coach Shepard knows he must have the best man available if he hopes to check Duke's J. Thompson.

It appears certain, however, that the rest of the Carolina line-up will be intact, with Captain Wilmer Hines and Vergil Weathers, the Tar Heels' crack all-southern forwards, seeking to out-step Weaver and H. Thompson, Duke's star guards, and with Dave McCachren and Stuart Aitken, Carolina's flashy defensive stars, striving to check Horne, Hayes and the rest of Duke's fine forwards.

Teams Split Last Year

Carolina and Duke split their brace of games last year, each team winning the contest on its home floor, and the Tar Heels hope to turn the same trick this year.

They will have to do this to cut Duke out of the Big Five crown, for the Tar Heels are the only team with a chance to tie or head the flying Blue Devils. In the Big Five, Duke has won six and lost none and still has to play Carolina and State. Carolina has won four and lost one and still must face Duke, Davidson, and State again.

A Duke victory tonight would clinch the crown, but if Carolina wins, the two teams will likely tie for the title, although the fast State team might easily knock over either team and so give the title to the other.

outstanding upsets in track occurred when Captain Finklestein, of the Generals, was beaten by Everett in the low hurdles. Finklestein and Brownlee are considered two of the finest hurdlers in Dixie and the W. & L. captain's showing in the lows does not look very impressive.

Campus Osculation Experts Give Opinions

glancing up from a mess of microphones.

Pulleze, Professor!

The University instructor came to bat with this sage comment on the local product, "I believe in kissing girls you especially like. But of course you are expected to kiss co-eds!"

Finally, from the highest-paid funny man on the campus, a truly unsung and unappreciated Eddie Cantor, came this clipped confession, "I am nineteen and innocent."

First Night or Never

When he had matured a few days and was able to think more soberly on the problem, he augmented the above statement by confessing, "I usually try to kiss a girl on my first date and I don't lose any respect for her either way. I think a lot depends on the surroundings."

The investigator discovered it impossible to omit the feminine angle of the subject, for, after all, an equal number of co-eds scored A's on that good old course Osculation 1-2-3.

Curious Co-ed

The male ego will wince considerably under this pronouncement from a popular non-sorority inmate of Mrs. Lee's establishment. "The first time I kiss a boy, it is almost always from a sense of curiosity to find out how well I like him. The misunderstanding comes when I decide he's not so attractive!"

This representative of the conquering female basketballers just doesn't care one way or the other. She yawned, "I don't think kisses mean anything anymore, and I don't care whether I kiss a boy or not. I always say 'No,' at first because I don't want to seem easy."

How About a Kiss, Honey?

Contrastingly naive is the viewpoint of a freshman lass who expressed verdant idealism by saying, "There are several kinds of kisses, friendly and that for the one and only. If a boy tries to kiss me on my first date it sets me against him immediately."

It remained for a graduate student to rise to the defense of the previously maligned Carolina manhood. Knowing her way around socially, she is in a position to comment, "Unless there is some real feeling attached, I think there is little point in kissing. I may say that to me, coming from a school farther south, Carolina boys seem unusually conservative. I may also add that it has not been an unpleasant surprise to find it so."

Why Does He Kiss You?

Impulsive and slightly blasé is the attitude of one of Mrs. Jones' charges. As to her sister Hellene, cited above, kissing means nothing particular to her. As she puts it, "Sometimes I kiss a boy because I like him and sometimes just on the spur of the moment."

How Many, Please?

The final say on the subject is from a stray Greek, who has never had any difficulty at the dating business. Declaring a desire for simplicity of method and result, she observed, "I think kissing is O. K., but necking disgusting. I don't object to kissing a few boys, but I don't believe in kissing too many at the same time. There is too much danger of getting a reputation for being easy."

VAN HECKE ADDRESSES AMENDMENTS COMMITTEE

Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the University law school spoke before the joint constitutional amendments committee of the General Assembly last night. He explained in detail the recommendations of the state constitutional commission.

BOTANIST SEEKS CARIBBEAN PINES ON FLORIDA VISIT

Dr. W. C. Coker Returns From Visit To Palm Beach With Collection of Shrubs.

Dr. W. C. Coker, head of the botany department, has returned from a visit to Palm Beach, Florida, where he collected a number of trees and shrubs of that region. Coker particularly sought Caribbean pine trees which were collected in order to study the question of whether or not there are more than one variety of the species.

Dr. Coker also visited the United States department of Agriculture at Coconut Grove, where plants of foreign countries are imported and tested. The botanist reported that tree cottons, which are cotton plants that grow into small trees, are growing wild near Palm Beach.

Miami and Palm Beach are both having poor seasons, although dog and horse racing has attracted a number of sports followers this year, Coker stated.

will last for two weeks. Only one table in the game room will be used. An entrance fee of ten cents will be charged every person entering the tournament. Each organization on the campus may enter three men, but there will be no team matches. All play will be individual, and the organization whose entrants garner the most points will win the competition.

Intramural points will be awarded in the following manner: each man will get one point for entering his first match; the winner of a match shall receive two points; the winners of semi-final and final matches will receive three points. Semi-final and final rounds will be decided by three out of five sets, while other matches will be decided by two out of three sets.

Winner Plays Ping-Pong

In addition to intramural points, the individual winner of the tournament may play ping-pong free of charge for the rest of the quarter, and the runner-up may play free of charge one week after the tournament closes. All entries must be made before 6:00 o'clock Tuesday, February 14.

Individual elimination rather than team play will be the order of the day in the pool tournament. All entries will be drawn and paired indiscriminately. An entrance fee of twenty cents will cover all games played and use of the tables during the tournament. Each game will consist of fifty points of straight pool. The entry list will close at the same date as the pool and ping-pong tourney lists.

STEVE DOUGLAS SPEAKS AT RUFFIN DORM SMOKER

At the Ruffin dormitory smoker Wednesday night in Graham Memorial, talks were made by Steve Douglas, Ray Weathers, Jacob A. Snyder, and W. C. Medford.

Steve Douglas spoke on the system of inspecting dormitory rooms, and a talk on inter-dormitory athletics was given by Ray Weathers, intramural athletic manager.

W. C. Medford, president of the Inter-dormitory council, also spoke requesting more orderly conduct in dormitories.

Dr. E. W. Knight Speaks

Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the education department spoke last night to the students of the Flora MacDonald College at Red Springs. Dr. Knight's topic was "Iraq."

BULLETIN CARRIES SOCIOLOGY WORK BY DR. H. W. ODUM

President Hoover's Committee on Social Research Uses Article by University Professor.

Dr. Howard W. Odum of the department of sociology and director of the Institute for Research in Social Science, has been honored by the publication of his chapter on "Public Welfare Activities" in the report of the President's Research Committee in Social Science, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Odum discusses how public welfare in the United States has expanded from "an incidental, haphazard, irregular activity to a regular, full-fledged standard function of government." He points out that forty-three states and most of our cities have set up central public welfare departments.

Public welfare, as defined by Dr. Odum, is the social work part of government, or the social work financed by federal, state, county, or city governments and controlled and directed by them.

fine condition; but in stepping into the injured Glover's shoes he has a large pair of brogans to fill, as Cliff, although he has won only one fight this year, has been looking great lately.

Coach Rowe, up until the time the team left, was uncertain as to whether or not he would use Norm Quarles. The Tar Heel Express held forth a badly swollen hand as the result of a training bout, and Furches Raymer, regular of last year, may fight the lightweight bout if Quarles' hand is not properly healed by fight-time.

Penn Won Last Year

Penn State, where spectators attend box-fights in tuxedos, came to Chapel Hill last year and responded to their hosts' hospitality by beating up the Tar Heels in most ungentelemanly fashion, 5-2. Marty Levinson won by a knockout and Peyton Brown came through with a three-round decision for Carolina's only wins of the night. Cliff Glover, not conceding a chance against Dave Stoops, eastern intercollegiate champion, eased out in the first round and hung Stoops all over the floor, only to have the Pennsylvanian come up and win in the third after one of the most hectic embroglios ever witnessed in the Tin Can.

Stoops is gone this year, but McAndrews, lightweight star who nosed out Raymer in their affair, will be seen again. He is reported to have moved up a weight since last winter and he may work against Nat Lumpkin in the welterweight fight tonight.

Freshmen to Play Blue Imps

Tonight at 7:15 o'clock the freshmen will play their fourth Big Five contest of the year. The Tar Babies have one win in three starts and will be opposed by the Duke yearlings who have three wins in four starts. Nelson and Moore, forwards; Rankin, center; and McCachren and Glasgow, guards, are the likely starting lineup for Carolina.

Graves Campaigns For Return Of First Plane

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, published in this week's issue a letter written by the Wilmington chamber of commerce to Lindsey Warren, North Carolina Congressman, suggesting steps to have the original Wright airplane returned to this country from England. Graves is continuing his campaign against the Smithsonian Institute for the museum's failure to give recognition to the Wright brothers for invention of the first successful flying machine.

The Wilmington letter requests that Warren attempt to place the valuable aviation relic in the memorial at Kitty Hawk, on condition that the removal of the plane is suitable to Orville Wright.

DEAN JACKSON PLAYS HOOVER IN LEADERSHIP TALK

Head of Department of Public Administration Addressed Georgia Press Institute Thursday.

Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration addressed a joint meeting of the Georgia Press Institute and the Emory Institute of Citizenship at Emory University Thursday on "The Technique of Leadership." He chose as a major consideration the contrast between the leadership tactics of President-elect Roosevelt and President Hoover. Superior leadership was characterized as "something Roosevelt has and Hoover wants."

"The public has suffered much," he stated, "at the hands of leaders who relied upon party advantage, self-interest, or prejudice rather than a statesmanlike grasp of the issue in question."

Jackson concluded that Roosevelt's method of consulting the ablest men in the country on governmental affairs would probably result in the best functioning of the government in the nation's history.

UNEMPLOYMENT RESEARCH AIDED BY M. R. TRABUE

University Professor on Leave Assists in Jobless Relief Undertaken in Minnesota.

Dr. M. R. Trabue, professor of education at the University who is now on leave of absence, recently finished an important work in assisting at the University of Minnesota in a project to help the unemployed of that state to increase their job-getting values. The plan, which sought not only to find jobs for the unemployed but to help them find their talents in the professions, was highly successful.

Dr. Trabue described the plan at a meeting of the Association for Personality Training in New York Thursday night, and advocated a country-wide adoption. The plan comprises discovery and elimination of unemployment in a community and reorganization of the public agencies for assisting the unemployed to find work. The newly-formed Employment Stabilization Research Institute of the Minnesota University directed.

The backfield also has plenty of power and versatility and a good balance. Woollen is an experienced field general and Daniel is another veteran and a flashy runner. Phelps and Snyder were two of the best of the freshman backs last year. Phelps was also the yearlings' most accomplished passer.

'Columbia Spectator' Leads Field Of Dailies In Tar Heel's Survey

Wisconsin Daily Cardinal Second and Cornell Daily Sun Third in Paper's Ranking.

SEVEN POINTS CONSIDERED

Make-up, Style, Features, Editorials, News, Sports, and Columns Used in Rating.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second annual survey of the country's leading college dailies, conducted every winter quarter by the chairman of the editorial board. This function is performed solely by THE DAILY TAR HEEL for the college press of the United States and Canada.)

By Don Shoemaker

In surveying the work of the college press during the last year, it is apparent that the current depression has exercised little effect on the tone and quality of collegiate journalism. To balance budgets several of the larger dailies have been forced to print their papers in tabloid style, with a concurrent saving in newsprint and mechanical expenses. Several have reduced their publication to five days a week; others have recently acquired the daily status and still others have been relegated to the weekly or semi-weekly field.

An exhaustive survey conducted since early December of 1932 of the best dailies indicates that the college press has weathered the storm in an admirable manner. Many are supported almost solely by student subscription, but those who must realize financial support from advertising alone have managed to maintain a standard far above that of the professional daily.

In selecting those dailies to be ranked as the nation's best (Continued on last page)

TAYLOR TO READ "CAVALCADE" AT THEATRE TONIGHT

Noel Coward's Brilliant Success Will Start Sunday Night Readings For This Quarter.

Cavalcade, Noel Coward's brilliantly successful play, will be read by Professor W. R. Taylor tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre. Professor Taylor is head of the department of dramatics at the Woman's College, in Greensboro.

Dealing in particular with struggles of the Marryot family of London, Cavalcade also presents a general survey of the story of England from 1889 to the present day as seen through the sensitive eyes of a mother. Writing Cavalcade in the tender and emotional vein in which he did, Coward has departed from the smart and whimsical manner which has characterized his previous works. This production achieved outstanding success as a stage play and a movement is on foot in England to have Coward knighted for writing it. Fox has recently made the play into a movie and it is now running at the Gayety theatre, New York.

The reading resumes the regular monthly presentations of the Playmakers, no program being held last month due to the observance of the Shaw-Henderson festival in the theatre.

Groves To Address Philadelphia Parents

Professor Ernest R. Groves of the sociology department will speak in Philadelphia February 13 on "Courtship and Marriage." This is the second address of a series of eight which was organized by the Parents Council of Philadelphia. Professor Groves has recently been informed of his election as a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

EMERY WILL CONDUCT FORUM ON PHILOSOPHY

Due to the absence of Reverend Ronald Tambllyn, the open forum discussion that is conducted every Sunday night at the Presbyterian church will be led by Professor S. A. Emery of the philosophy department. His topic for discussion will be "Philosophy Looks at Religion."

Dr. Charles A. Beard Will Deliver Lectures on February 21, 22, and 23.

The dates for the annual Weil Lectures, to be delivered this year by Dr. Charles A. Beard, distinguished American historian and economist, have been announced as February 21, 22 and 23. The lectures, the general subject of which is "What Is National Interest," will be given in Gerrard hall at 8:00 o'clock on these evenings.

The central purpose of the speeches this year is to give a clear conception of what really is national interest which must be maintained by independent nations while participating in international cooperative movements.

Topics

The particular subject of each of the three lectures will be as follows: February 21, The Factors Conception of National Interest; February 22, The Development of the Conception—Land and Sea; February 23, Toward a Re-Definition of National Interest.

Dr. Beard is a former professor of political science at Columbia University and the author of many historical works. He was educated at De Pauw, Oxford, Cornell and Columbia Universities, and has been actively engaged in the fields of social science and education. His published works include The Rise of American Civilization, Modern European History, Readings in Modern European History, with W. C. Bagley, The History of the American People, and numerous other works.

The Weil lectures were established by the Weil family of Goldsboro in 1914 for the purpose of stimulating interest in the problems of American citizenship.

Magazine Antedates Every Other Publication Here By Many Years

University Literary Organ Existed Nearly Half Century Before Daily Tar Heel; Has Undergone Many Transformations in Eighty-Eight Years of Its Life.

Older by almost half a century than the TAR HEEL, the Carolina Magazine represents the most extensive reflection of student opinion available. For many years after its founding at the mid-way mark of the last century it was the only publication of any importance on the campus. In those times as in more recent days the Magazine served as a criterion of the literary thought of its contemporaries. The efforts, aspirations, and ideals of the creative writing and thinking groups of the University for almost a hundred years are preserved in the issue of the oldest college literary publication in the country.

A mighty transformation has taken place in the content of the Magazine between 1845 and 1933. The period which saw one war wrack the country and another strain its resources to the utmost is well reflected in the numbers of the Magazine. Though yellowed and having the appearance of mighty documents of state the Magazine bears mute testimony to the fact that topics of current interest and the pursuit of the Muse's favor

COUNT SFORZA TO LECTURE HERE AT ASSEMBLY PERIOD

Eleven O'clock Classes Will Be postponed Half an Hour for Diplomat's Speech.

A general convocation of the University will hear an address by Count Carlo Sforza, noted Italian diplomat, in Memorial hall tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. "Democracy vs. Autocracy" will be the topic of the speech which is presented under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the International Relations club.

The program will last approximately an hour, the 11:00 o'clock classes being postponed until 11:23 o'clock. Freshmen and sophomores will be required to attend and the entire student body is invited.

Outstanding Statesman

Count Sforza is one of the most outstanding statesmen of Italy and formerly was minister of foreign affairs. He is at present spending the month at Duke University as visiting Carnegie professor and is engaged in lecturing there in a series dealing with the World War, Europe after the war, men and parties of present European policies, and dictatorships.

After having served in different embassies, including Paris, London, and Constantinople, Count Sforza became Italian minister to China from 1911 to 1915, being at the time the youngest minister in the Italian service. Recalled to Europe at the entrance of Italy in the World War, he was appointed minister to Serbia.

He entered the Italian senate in 1919 and soon became secretary of state for foreign affairs. He is still a senator. During his direction of Italian diplomacy he took part in most of the post-Versailles meetings, including the Spa conference and the London and Paris conferences.

HARBISON WILL AID WORK

Friend of Ashe Probably More Familiar With Collection and Labels Than Anyone Else.

By R. W. Madry

Through the generosity of George Watts Hill, of Durham, class of 1922, the University of North Carolina has just come into possession of the well known W. W. Ashe Herbarium, a collection of more than 20,000 dried plants which will be classified, mounted, and put on display.

The acquisition of this collection gives the University the largest Herbarium in the south.

It means also that botanists and foresters from all over the world will come to Chapel Hill to make a study of plants of southern states. The Ashe Herbarium contains many types and will be immensely valuable scientifically.

Has Rich Fungi Collection

The University botany department was already rich in type collections of fungi, the collections ranging from 15,000 to 20,000, and the Ashe collection will make the department as rich in types of trees and shrubs as it has been in fungi collections.

Announcement of the gift was made yesterday by President Frank P. Graham of the University and Dr. W. C. Coker, head of the department of botany and director of the University Arboretum. Dr. Coker

A New Deal

For Transportation

Justice is blind and Cupid sorrows.

Such is the sad state of affairs in Chapel Hill when the Carolina Coach company changes its schedule (for the sake of economy) to 6:00 and 8:00 o'clock for Durham-bound busses and 11:15 for Chapel Hill-bound busses.

Whether this is a plot to inconvenience campus swains or whether the bus company has arranged its schedule to accommodate its hungry drivers around supper time, remains a dark secret—so dark, in fact, that dozens of would-be wooers bound for the women's campus at Duke University have sought to gain an explanation of this uncomfortable schedule.

Now it's most inconvenient to miss supper and dash to catch a 6:00 o'clock bus for Durham, for when one arrives at the tobacco city, it's too early to get your date and too late for a warm supper. And then if you get the 8:00 o'clock bus, you arrive in time for a late date. Nobody likes late dates.

And on the way back, the last bus leaves at 11:15. This is an early hour to dash from a warm fireside to the wind-swept bus station.

We appeal to the Carolina Coach company's sense of justice, and respectfully ask the traffic manager, "Weren't you young once?"—D.C.S.

Roosevelt's Specialists

For Hoover's Commissions

It is always rather interesting to speculate on the changes which may possibly accrue from a change of administration. Especially is this the case when a change of party administration is about to take place.

Prior to the election of Herbert Hoover it had been the custom among presidents of the United States to rely on their own intelligence and training to solve almost every conceivable problem placed before them. Practically all of our nineteenth-century presidents were ranked individualists; they permitted little interference with their sacred prerogative of managing the presidency and consequently made momentous decisions any way they saw fit. However as this business of being the chief executive of the new world power became increasingly complicated a change took place. More attention and concern was manifested by the President in response to the opinions of other authorities on the various phases of national policy.

With the election of Mr. Hoover this fact became so patently noticeable that much derision was heaped upon the Executive's head for employing a commission form of government. Such derision was both unseemly and undeserved. Mr. Hoover, being an engineer at heart and insisting upon having his facts first, hit upon the scientific but politically naive expediency of appointing various investigation commissions. The results have not been altogether satisfactory, as might have been expected, but at least some extremely valuable research has been done, and much future legislative and judicial action will undoubtedly embody these bits of information and employ them as new avenues of approach to the American scene.

With the installation of Mr. Roosevelt it seems that a somewhat different procedure is to be followed. The President-elect has gathered about his person a small group of experts, the combined intelligence and knowledge of which would probably rival any superman yet imagined. Mr. Roosevelt, realizing in no small measure the slow and often futile "commission" form of advice, has turned to this little body of specialists who have positive ideas of an easily expressible character. Action is what is necessary at this time as in few other periods of our history and the incoming President knows it. The complex duties of the Presidency demand more than one brain to comprehend them. In this respect, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt's policy seems to be a step in the right direction.—V.J.L.

CANDIDE AT THE UNIVERSITY

From a small town in eastern North Carolina a youth of honest judgment and simple mind came to Chapel Hill to receive an education. He had one friend in the new community in which he found himself, a graduate student named Pangloss, a native of his home town.

After Candide had been pushed through the Tin Can registration and rubbed salve on his bruises, he paid his friend a visit.

"I want you to tell me all about Chapel Hill and the University," he told Pangloss.

"Well, as you have probably heard," said his friend, "this institution is noted for its liberalism and culture. All liberty which should be allowed a man is given to the students here."

Candide, being a simple youth, was impressed by his friend's words.

"Does liberalism make the people here unhappy?" he asked.

"Certainly not. Why do you ask?"

"Errr—Well, nothing except that I noticed the ladies and gentlemen in South building always wear a stern and unhappy look. When I politely asked a man there some questions, he answered in a tone that some might think was rude."

Pangloss laughed. "I can see that you haven't been around very much. Don't you know that the people in business offices of all colleges are always cross? Strict, heartless people are especially chosen for these jobs so that students cannot wring their hearts into postponing their debts."

"Couldn't they be a bit more polite?" asked Candide timidly. "Couldn't they smile at one?"

"No!" answered Pangloss emphatically. "For, if they did, students might not think that they were performing their tasks efficiently. Cheerfulness has no place in an efficient organization."

"I can see that I have lots to learn," admitted Candide. "But tell me this: why is it that the University is going to make me send all my clothes to its laundry? That doesn't sound like freedom to me."

"From the point of liberalism, this is the best of all possible universities," said Pangloss. "You must remember that. The University laundry has more freedom than that of any other college. The University is so liberal that it lets it force students to send their clothes to it!—But, fie on you! You shouldn't stand on principle so. The extra charges on your washing surely won't amount to more than two or three dollars. This is a small charge compared to your liberty—and where else can you find such liberalism as we have here?"

"I really don't know." Candide was properly humble. "I'm sorry I mentioned it." He regarded the toe of his shoe.

"What are you thinking of?" asked his friend.

"Well—I hate to mention it," said Candide. "But I was thinking that the other Sunday morning I couldn't buy a Coca-Cola at Sutton's because it was during church hours. I wondered if that was liberalism."

"I believe you are deliberately trying to find fault," remarked Pangloss crossly. "—And if you are, I must leave you."

He stood up. "All these things you've mentioned are trivial things, little restrictions that you should overlook. If you ever have anything of real importance to ask me, I'll be glad to listen, but you mustn't take up my time with trifles."

Candide also arose. "I'm sorry," he said. "—But, being a student, these 'trifles' are the only things about the University liberalism that concern me. I only wish that you'd point out to me the things that make this a more liberal institution than any other for the students."

Pangloss reflected a moment, and then his face became red. "Don't be foolish!" he snorted. "Why, there must be lots of things that make this the most liberal of all possible universities. It wouldn't have the reputation it does if it weren't."

THOSE NEW BOOKS

DINNER AT EIGHT by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman. (Doubleday-Doran). $2.00.

This ingenious bit of dramatic construction is hailed as the play of the year. It opened October 22 at the Music Box Theatre, but has only recently appeared in book form. If one is prepared to bring a fair amount of foot-lighted imagination to the reading of this play, it will come alive from the printed page.

The successive handling of many scenes broadly suggests the technique of Grand Hotel. The relationship of the entire cast one to another, is maintained by the coming event of a small but fashionable dinner party. Other, more personal relationships are discovered. These are the breeding places of tragedy. Before the rise of the curtain the characters have been assigned various unescapable situations, which are brought out and intensified by the use of the successive scenes. At the last, instead of resolving themselves into the conventional theatric denouement, these tragedies are held temporarily "in solution" until after the fall of the final curtain.

However one has the feeling that for a long time the ending of this piece bothered the authors. It still bothers the reader, and we have been told by people who saw the play, that it bothered the audience as well. The force of impending doom 'neath idle chatter, even with the help of dinner music played with climatic volume, is not enough for the ending of a play. One must be given the sensation of finality to bring perfection to a curtain's close.

Because one can not see how the authors, selecting the problem which they did, could have done otherwise we are willing to forgive the lack of dramatic "punch" at the end. It is an interesting problem and one, well worth presenting. The interplay of banality and irony make the turning of each page more than worth the trouble. The collaboration is an understanding combination of broad satiric strokes and delicate, individual characterizations welded together with sympathetic discrimination.

Other books added to the rental library of the Bull's Head during the week include The Night of the Gods and The Night of the Juggers, both by Thorpe Smith. They are very gay, very amusing and good for a bright moment no matter what your condition. For your library, Lippi

Once upon a time, we are told, there lived a kindly rabbit in a comfortable hole. Upon the plaintive entreaties of a fox suffering from the cold, this Samaritan bunny permitted the outsider to stick his nose into the burrow for warmth; later he permitted the head, and then the shoulders to enter. The result, of course, was that the poor bunny was taken for a ride through the fox's intestinal tract.

There is a striking analogy between this fable and the greedy encroachments sought by the heads of the campus publications upon the powers given to them by the student body. Despite an editorial in Thursday's TAR HEEL claiming satisfaction with the decree of the Student Activities Committee that the staff should recommend its choice for editor but should not have the final power of appointment, there is ample justification of the fable.

A New Deal

For Transportation

Justice is blind and Cupid sorrows.

Such is the sad state of affairs in Chapel Hill when the Carolina Coach company changes its schedule (for the sake of economy) to 6:00 and 8:00 o'clock for Durham-bound busses and 11:15 for Chapel Hill-bound busses.

Whether this is a plot to inconvenience campus swains or whether the bus company has arranged its schedule to accommodate its hungry drivers around supper time, remains a dark secret—so dark, in fact, that dozens of would-be wooers bound for the women's campus at Duke University have sought to gain an explanation of this uncomfortable schedule.

Now, it's most inconvenient to miss supper and dash to catch a 6:00 o'clock bus for Durham, for when one arrives at the tobacco city, it's too early to get your date and too late for a warm supper. And then if you get the 8:00 o'clock bus, you arrive in time for a late date. Nobody likes late dates.

And on the way back, the last bus leaves at 11:15. This is an early hour to dash from a warm fireside to the wind-swept bus station.

We appeal to the Carolina Coach company's sense of justice, and respectfully ask the traffic manager, "Weren't you young once?"—D.C.S.

Roosevelt's Specialists For Hoover's Commissions

It is always rather interesting to speculate on the changes which may possibly accrue from a change of administration. Especially is this the case when a change of party administration is about to take place.

Prior to the election of Herbert Hoover it had been the custom among presidents of the United States to rely on their own intelligence and training to solve almost every conceivable problem placed before them. Practically all of our nineteenth-century presidents were ranked individualists; they permitted little interference with their sacred prerogative of managing the presidency and consequently made momentous decisions any way they saw fit. However as this business of being the chief executive of the new world power became increasingly complicated a change took place. More attention and concern was manifested by the President in response to the opinions of other authorities on the various phases of national policy.

With the election of Mr. Hoover this fact became so patently noticeable that much derision was heaped upon the Executive's head for employing a commission form of government. Such derision was both unseemly and undeserved. Mr. Hoover, being an engineer at heart and insisting upon having his facts first, hit upon the scientific but politically naive expediency of appointing various investigation commissions. The results have not been altogether satisfactory, as might have been expected, but at least some extremely valuable research has been done, and much future legislative and judicial action will undoubtedly embody these bits of information and employ them as new avenues of approach to the American scene.

With the installation of Mr. Roosevelt it seems that a somewhat different procedure is to be followed. The President-elect has gathered about his person a small group of experts, the combined intelligence and knowledge of which would probably rival any superman yet imagined. Mr. Roosevelt, realizing in no small measure the slow and often futile "commission" form of advice, has turned to this little body of specialists who have positive ideas of an easily expressible character. Action is what is necessary at this time as in few other periods of our history and the incoming President knows it. The complex duties of the Presidency demand more than one brain to comprehend them. In this respect, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt's policy seems to be a step in the right direction.—V.J.L.

Former President and Chief Justice William H. Taft initiated the lectures and set an unusually high standard. The last series was given in 1931 by Professor Harold J. SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Once upon a time, we are told, there lived a kindly rabbit in a comfortable hole. Upon the plaintive entreaties of a fox suffering from the cold, this Samaritan bunny permitted the outsider to stick his nose into the borough for warmth; later he permitted the head, and then the shoulders to enter. The result, of course, was that the poor bunny was taken for a ride through the fox's intestinal tract.

There is a striking analogy between this fable and the greedy encroachments sought by the heads of the campus publications upon the powers given to them by the student body. Despite an editorial in Thursday's TAR HEEL claiming satisfaction with the decree of the Student Activities Committee that the staff should recommend its choice for editor but should not have the final power of appointment, there is ample justification of the suspicion that the TAR HEEL under its present leadership will be content with nothing short of this final appointive right.

The demand that publication staffs be permitted to choose their own editors is unjustified both in theory and in practice. The TAR HEEL stands in the position of an agency of the student body. It is not a private enterprise engaged in for profit. Each student upon entering the University is compelled to subsidize every major campus publication. That a subsidizer be deprived of all connection with the paper is illogical and historically unprecedented. Thus the TAR HEEL or any other campus publication has no right to demand the right to choose its own editor.

But of course the student body has the right to give this power. Such a course, though, would be unwise. In such a situation the opportunity for a political hierarchy to spring up would be at its maximum. A group of thirty would be much easier to control than the entire student body, especially when the editor in power would have the tyrannical authority to expel "undesirables" from the staff.

As does any other system, a campus-wide election of editors has its flaws; it does not always guarantee that the best man will win. However, there is very little chance of an incapable man obtaining the position. It is better politics to put up no candidate at all than a weak candidate. And when the best man loses, it is due to a mistake of the students at large. But when, as often will be the case, the best man loses under the hierarchical system, it is due to the willful fraud of the few in power.

Since at law an inadvertent harm is more inexcusable than an intentional evil, it is entirely consistent with established principles of justice that the present system of campus-wide elections be maintained.—L.W.S.

Duke Beats Carolina 31-24 To Annex Big Five Crown

Score Tied With Only Seven Minutes to Go, But Blue Devils Put on Speed.

WEATHERS PLAYS WELL
Flashy Forward Nets Seven Points Leading Carolina in Scoring and Floor Play.

Duke University's fast flying basketball team captured its fourth consecutive Big Five title last night with a thrilling 31-24 victory over the Tar Heels on the Tin Can floor before a crowd of about 4,500 persons.

Last night's contest was a replica of the game played two weeks ago on the Duke floor. The Devils jumped away to a fast lead, which was cut down by half time, crept away to another lead, and were tied with seven minutes to go. But the White Phantoms were unable to match Duke's last minute scoring flurry and the Tar Heels suffered the first defeat of the current campaign on the local floor.

Duke Undefeated In State

Duke, in winning last night's game, maintained an unbeaten record in Big Five circles with seven victories. Only State remains on the Devils' schedule, and that contest will be waged Tuesday night in Durham. Carolina, with State and Davidson yet to be played, has won four Big Five games while losing two to Duke, thus giving Coach Cameron's squad undisputed possession of the crown.

Jimmy Thompson didn't keep the Duke fans waiting long before he successfully made a free throw after the game had progressed about thirty seconds. Weaver then sank a crisp before Aitken was able to dent Tar Heels' net on a free throw, and McCachren followed this up with a beautiful court-length dribble to even the count at three all. This started the victors off on an eight-point spree with Thompson, Horne, Weaver, and Horne sinking baskets in rapid order. However rallies by Hines, Aitken, and Brandt brought the score up to 13-10 at half time.

Hectic Second Half

The second half saw both teams see-sawing with Duke, however, maintaining its three point margin until seven minutes remained, when the score was deadlocked at 22-22, mainly by virtue of Virgil Weathers' spectacular play. After two minutes of futile charges, Weaver successfully converted the fourth personal foul on McCachren to give Duke a lead from which they were never headed. Here the Tar Heels got their second tough break when George Brandt was removed from the game on personals. This seemed to take the heart out of Carolina and the Blue Devils ran rough shod over the seemingly bewildered Phantoms to bring the score up to 31-24 as the game ended.

Fight Returns

The Carolina boxers suffered their first defeat of the season at the hands of Penn State's hard hitting aggregation to the tune of 5 1/2 to 2 1/2. Raymer and Landis were the Carolina winners, and Giddins got a draw. No knock-outs were registered, marking the first time Landis has been carried more than one round in his last four fights. Captain lost his first bout of the season to Penn State's aggressive featherweight, Napoleon. Quarles didn't fight, Coach Rowe considering it unwise to put him in with his bad fist.

Plays Heads-up

Virgil Weathers was the outstanding Carolina player in last night's fracas with Duke. He led the team in scoring with seven points, and his all-round floor play was excellent. He should be one of Carolina's best bets for an all-southern post this year.

CAROLINA BOXERS WILL MEET DUKE SQUAD SATURDAY

White Phantoms Will Engage Davidson Here Thursday in Week's Only Court Game.

Carolina's sports card for this week is varied and well balanced as an athletic menu. Thursday night Davidson's varsity and freshman basketball teams will invade Chapel Hill. Saturday night Carolina's pugs will meet Duke in their classic battle royal. The varsity wrestling team will be idle during the week, but the freshmen will close their season against the Oak Ridge Cadets, here Saturday afternoon.

Heading the card will be the boxing meet with the Duke Blue Devils. Saturday night in the Duke gymnasium. Much interest is centering around the fights. Saturday. Carolina and Duke have both been tied by the State pugs, but Carolina's glove swingers gained a tie from the Virginia boxers, Southern Conference defending title holders, while the Duke aggregation lost to the Cavaliers 5-3. The classic meet with Duke and in the lair of the Devils will even the odds and betting will be even before the fights.

Lloyd Leads Blue Devils

Leading the Duke ringsters, bid for victory will be Fred Lloyd, last year's conference bantam title holder and 125-pounder this year, and Leroy Sides, finalist in the conference lightweights.

Of course, the Tar Heels will have their already famous trio of fighters, Captain Marty Levinson, Norment Quarles, and Platt Landis. The match between Levinson and Lloyd should headline the meet while Duke fans will be treated to the wares of Quarles who handed Goldstein, national intercollegiate champ, a trouncing in the Virginia meet. Landis must uphold his splendid record of winning all his southern fights by knocking out his man in the first round.

The basketball game Thursday night should be the proper priming and competition for the game with State in Raleigh Monday, February 20. Davidson's Wildcats have not had such an impressive season this year and should afford the Tar Heels little competition in either the freshman or varsity games.

The cult of nudism now has millions of enthusiastic followers—if you count the mosquitoes.—Waterbury American.

TAR BABIES DOWN BLUE IMPS, 43-39

Connie Mack, Jr., Paces Duke Quint; McCachren, Moore Star for Carolina.

The Tar Babies added Duke to its list of Big Five victims last night in the Tin Can with a stirring 43-39 victory. The game preceded the Carolina-Duke varsity encounter.

With the exception of the first few minutes of the game, when the score was see-sawing back and forth, the Tar Babies jumped into the lead and were never headed. Several times stirring rallies, led by Connie Mack, Jr., kept the Imps quite in the running.

Captain Jim McCachren, guard, and Bill Moore, forward, were the stars for the Tar Babies, although the whole team deserved commendation. Connie Mack, Jr., lead his mates in scoring and general floor play.

Mid-way in the last quarter, the Imps bid fair to overcome the piled up lead of the Tar Babies, but could only creep to within three points of the leaders.

'Techmen' Down 'Commodores' In Muddy Struggle

Intercepted Pass in Last Few Minutes Ties Score, But Collins Calls It Back.

Two stout teams defied cold, mud and all the elements yesterday so that Carolina's winter grid show might go on for the handful of spectators present.

Losses, punts, fumbles, over and over, break on break, but both lines were unyielding, and the mud was an ally in smothering every attempted offensive. Only one first down, and Childers, speedy sophomore prospect, got that with a pretty 27-yard slice off tackle. One break was cashed in on, and that in the first quarter. Gardner blocked Woollen's punt, Frankel recovered on the one-yard line, and Phipps drove it over tackle, missing the placekick.

So it was that a veteran "Georgia Tech" team beat a tough outfit of "Vanderbilt" youngsters 6-0 in a defensive classic that resulted from the second game in Carolina's winter-practice round-robin schedule yesterday.

In the closing minutes Referee-Coach Collins gave the "Georgia Tech" quarterback a hot tip on a sure-fire pass. The ball was too slippery to pitch, and thing went awry. "Commodore" Phelps intercepted, sprinting thirty yards to tie the score. But Coach Collins said, "No, the play was my mistake," and called it back.

Track Team To Begin Indoor Work Monday

The Tar Heel track candidates will take their work-outs in the Tin Can Monday afternoon. Carolina's coaches are anxious for their proteges to get in their first indoor training this week.

Candidates are urged to report promptly for their work-outs in two periods either from 2:30-3:30 or from 5:30-6:15. This is quite essential in that the track work-outs must not conflict with those of the basketball team nor take the courts used by the intramural teams.

Three soviet leaders who surreptitiously helped some Ukraine farmers make a bit of profit on their wheat crop are to be shot for treason. Over in this much better governed country none of the members of our farm board will ever get shot for that.—Maccon Telegraph.

DR. RAY SERMON GIVES OUT PLANS FOR COURT MEET

Only Eight Teams Will Participate in Southern Conference Cage Tourney at Raleigh.

Dr. Ray R. Sermon, basketball coach at N. C. State and chairman of the Southern Conference committee on basketball, recently announced definite plans concerning the coming tournament which is scheduled to be run off in Raleigh over the interim February 24-27.

Dr. Sermon announced last Friday that the schedule of play calls for a pair of double headers on the opening day. Two games will be run off that afternoon, games beginning at 3:00 o'clock. The doubleheader that night will start at 8:00 o'clock.

Eight Entrants Only

The field of entrants is limited to eight cage teams, selected from the ten schools in the conference, selection being based on their past records. V. P. I. and Clemson seem to be the logical clubs not to get invitations to the tourney. V. P. I. had some hard luck at the beginning of the season, having four of their five senior veterans barred from play due to scholastic difficulties. Clemson's Tigers had not provided any real trouble for any of their opponents, their best efforts being a suppressed meow.

Semi-Finals February 25

The couple of semi-final games will be played Saturday night. The final round will be run off Monday, February 27. As per announcement the tournament is carded for the new War Memorial Auditorium.

Officials for the tourney games will come one each from the Carolinas, Virginia, and Maryland. Although none of the officials have been appointed, some of the most prominently mentioned men are: Knight, Gardner, and Hackney, for the Carolinas, and Carrington, Potter, and Rutherfordton, for Virginia and Maryland.

CAPTAIN PERCY IDOL PUT the screws on Boepple against Duke the other night. It is reported that Percy played "ride-a-cock horse to Banbury Cross" on Boepple's back with the latter's esophagus as the fulcrum. Percy has won five straight falls this year and has fought men in either the light-heavy or unlimited class. He is the class of the south in this wrestling game and there is no getting around that fact. Little Thad Hussey came back Thursday night and gave Captain Ornsko his second loss in his last thirty-three tussles. Thad has been out of shape all season due to a series of bad boils on his arms. He was right Thursday night against Duke, and what could have been better? Coach Quinzie has had tough luck all season but it remained for his men to break the Duke jinx and score Carolina's first win over the Blue Devils this year. Hats off to Quinzie, I hope you have started something.

IT SIMMS TO ME THAT STUART Chandler has gotten by with a lot of stuff up here this year. He has made all the trips two teams have made and is planning to do a little migrating this spring with Old Man River Ransom and the boys. Stuart just got back from this northern trip with the Phantoms. Stud Henry was around the other night and he spoke of Chandler's play on the trip. "He looked great out there," said Stud. "He's gotten so now he just Simmers all the time on that court. He has sure got his eye on that basket."

Entry List Close Tuesday

All persons desiring to enter the intramural indoor contests in bowling, pool, and ping-pong must apply to Mayne Albright in Graham Memorial before 6:00 o'clock, Tuesday, February 14.

MANGUM FALLS FROM POSITION AMONG LEADERS

Three Teams Remain Undefeated in Each Section of Intramural Basketball League.

Only one previously undefeated team dropped from the select group of leaders during last week's five days of intramural basketball competition. Mangum was the team to lose its unbeaten classification, and Ruffin was the team which turned the trick, 26-22, after an overtime period.

In the dormitory league, three teams were left with unblemished records. Best House wound up its schedule early last week, having come through all eight of its contests without a defeat. Old East had a field day with Manly, winning its game to the tune of 53-11 for the victors' seventh win in as many starts. Swain Hall made Everett its sixth victim to complete the trio of leaders.

Chi Psi, T. E. P., and S. A. E. all scored wins last week to keep their fraternity league slates clean. Chi Psi downed Pi Kappa Alpha, T. E. P. beat Zeta Beta Tau, and Kappa Sigma, while S. A. E. received a forfeit from Theta Chi.

Individual Scoring Tie

The race for individual scoring honors in the two leagues became much closer last week with Longest, of Theta Kappa Nu, and Fox, of Old East, getting twenty points each during the week to remain deadlocked at 106 points. Fox, however, has one more game, while Longest's team has finished its schedule. Alexander, Deke star, brought his total to 101 as a result of last week's games, and with one game to go is within striking distance of the leadership. Other leaders were Henson, Old East, and Everette, Kappa Alpha, with ninety-two each and one game left for each.

PRISON MOVIE TO PLAY AT CAROLINA THEATRE MONDAY

Kate Smith's First Picture, "Hello Everybody," Will Be Shown Thursday.

"Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing," First National picture with Bette Davis cast in the feminine lead opposite Spencer Tracy, opens the week's bill at the Carolina Monday. A strong supporting cast of players includes Arthur Byron, Lyle Talbot, Grant Mitchell, Warren Hymer, Louis Calhern and Sheila Terry. Michael Curtiz directed the picture.

"Child of Manhattan," screen version of the stage success of the same name by Preston Sturges, stars Nancy Carroll, Tuesday. John Boles, who came to prominence in musical productions like "Rio Rita," and "Desert Song," plays opposite her. The story concerns a dance hall hostess who finds herself ensconced in a palatial pent-house and very much in love.

Tala Birell and Melvyn Douglas have the leading roles in "Nagana," Wednesday.

Kate Smith, radio star, makes her film debut in "Hello Everybody!," showing Thursday. The story was written especially for her by Fannie Hurst. Four songs, written for her, are included in the picture.

An all star cast of five players, and an array of 1000 extras form the background for the First National picture, "Employees' Entrance," Friday. Warren William, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "The Match King," "The Dark Horse," "Three on a Match" and "The Mouthpiece" heads the list of stars, including Loretta Young, Alice White, Wallace Ford, and Allen Jenkins.

Lee Tracy and Gloria Stuart have leading roles in "Private Jones," Saturday.

lated one condition. "No prizes will be awarded unless the work is deemed sufficiently meritorious."

No Sex Stories
The results obtained from this unique method of advertising were various. Accustomed as the present is to sex stories, the absence of this type seems remarkable. Not that the mauve decade was not bothered by the sex problem, but it does not seem to have influenced the literature of that time. The lack of what is known as sophistication is also remarkable in the past material. There was no stark groping after what the present knows as realism. The poetry showed that there were even then misunderstood souls who oftentimes scaled the heights of Parnassus, but there was no desire for self-immolation because an unheeding world did not seek to better itself.

The Magazine was at times published by the Di and Phi societies alone, and sometimes in conjunction with the University. One of the covers that was effected showed two maidens holding what appears to be corn and standing beside a horn of plenty, while the inscription above read, "May 20th, 1775," the date of the Mecklenburg constitution. At another time this cover was replaced by the University seal and the motto of the Magazine, Esse Quam Videri. Again, a Greek temple on the cover of some issues told the student body that within they might read tragedy, comedy, history, poetry.

G. W. Hill Donates Ashe Herbarium To Botany Department

conducted the negotiations that brought the collection to the University. He was a close friend of Ashe and it was partly because of this friendship that Mrs. Ashe was anxious for the University to have the collection. Many other institutions had made bids for it.

This is the second gift that Hill has made to the University botany department. Several years ago he gave the department a valuable greenhouse. He and other members of his family have for years been generous in their benefactions to the University.

Hill's contribution makes it possible to secure the assistance of an expert and the materials to properly mount the plants, also to build suitable cases in which to store the collection. The University has been fortunate in securing to assist in this work the services of T. G. Harbison of Highlands, N. C., who was for year a collector for the Biltmore Herbarium, for more than a quarter of a century a collector for Sargent of Harvard University and the Arnold Arboretum at Harvard.

Through nearly a life time Harbison was a friend of Ashe, and is possibly more familiar than any one else with Ashe's own signs and symbols with which he labeled his collections while in the field and for many of which he never had time to complete the labels. Before his death Ashe had requested that Harbison be asked to advise Mrs. Ashe as to the disposition of the herbarium, indicating at the time that he would like to have it go to the University of North Carolina.

Mrs. Ashe Gives Pamphlets

The University also announced today the gift from Mrs. W. W. Ashe of a large number of Mr. Ashe's reprints of pamphlets of botanical and forestry interest and of a number of copies of botanical and forestry journals and books. Among these are: two numbers of Sargent's Trees and Shrubs; eight volumes of Garden and Forest, edited by Sargent; Dudley's Cayuga Flora; Gattinger's Medicinal Plants of Tennessee and his Flora of Nashville; also many numbers of scientific journals such as the Botanical Gazette, some bound, some unbound.

It seems eminently fitting that this valuable collection of plants should come to the University. William Willard Ashe, who died last March, a son of Captain Samuel Ashe of Raleigh, was graduated from the University in 1891. In college he specialized in botany and geology, and after graduation entered the service of the state as an assistant in charge of timber investigations in the North Carolina Geological Survey. The following year he received the master of science degree from Cornell University, and returned to the forestry work he had begun in North Carolina. He became the first forester employed by North Carolina and served in this capacity for eighteen years. For twenty-three years he was in the United States Forest Service.

Throughout his life he maintained a keen interest in systematic botany, and the forty-one years in forestry work gave him opportunity to gain a first-hand knowledge of the plants, especially of the woody plants, in the southeastern states. He was a keen observer and recognized and described many new species.

He published 510 new botanical names (including species, varieties or forms), including 177 in the Hawthorne, 60 in the

So valuable was his work that many botanists have in his honor named plants after him. In this group Sudworth named for him a Chinquapin (Castanea ashei) and a Hickory (Hicoria ashei); Beadle, a Hawthorn (Crataegus ashei); Buchholz, a Juniper (Juniperus ashei); Weatherby, a Magnolia (Magnolia ashei); Pearson, a grass (Panicum ashei); Harbison, a Huckleberry (Polycodium ashei); and Small, a Sumach (Schmalzia ashei).

Mrs. Ashe is credited with 179 scientific publications, about half of them on strictly forestry subjects and about one-third of them in systematic botany.

Throughout his life Mr. Ashe, as a side line, continued to make collections.

Nothing of the Sort in North Carolina

If a front page "scoop" article in yesterday's Greensboro Daily News is true, University authorities denying it, applications are now about to be made to allow Negroes admission into the University Law School. Cases of this sort have arisen before in two other states, and on both occasions the Supreme Court ruled that the state should pay the colored applicants' tuition at a law school in some other state. In the event the matter is pushed in North Carolina, such will possibly be the ultimate solution.

Although no information is available to verify it, a rumor has it that this movement is being pushed by forces outside the state. Previously has this same question been brought up with the motivating force coming from without the state's borders. It is quite likely that this present disturbance is nothing more than a propaganda campaign of some group advocating race equality, rather than any sincere action on the part of any truly North Carolina Negro faction. There is little question but what the majority of even the best class of the colored race in the state is not in sympathy with the idea, or would even be willing to back it in a fight.

If the movement does actually exist, as the Daily News reports, it will possibly die out as quickly as it arose. In any case it will certainly not result in Negroes being allowed admission to the Law School at Chapel Hill.

Vivat Rex

If ever a chief magistrate of these United States needed to be invested with plenary powers for setting up new, tearing down old, and reconstructing and reorganizing in general all governmental machinery, the time is now and the man upon whom these broad powers should devolve, Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Not so much because he has demonstrated his ability to deal successfully with the issues which confront the nation, but because the present machinery has proved far too clumsy and too unwieldy to meet the needs that press down so sorely. Congress, though doubtless being composed of some of the most brilliant and able men in the country, is too much interested in politics to concentrate en masse upon the needs of the nation. There are too many conflicting opinions to be contended with, too many petty jealousies between different factions and sections, for concerted action.

With a small body of experts to advise him, the new president can accomplish more at one stroke of the pen than the entire congress assembled in a whole term. This is no time for squabbling, no time for playing politics; action is needed and needed badly.

In spite of the heroic campaign carried on by the newspapers to preserve the morale of the people, it is apparent to the masses that no upturn in the business world is in sight. Reassurance and promises are of little avail to the farmer when his property is sold from his grasp for a pittance, when he sees his fellows in the industrial field hungry, while products rot by the wholesale in his barns and granaries, while he, himself, suffers from the lack of the finished goods which they produce. The investor who finds his hard earned stocks and bonds only

I. O. U's can not be easily convinced that old man business is fast regaining his former healthy state, nor that any Fraudian treatments will bring him around again.

If the crisis produces the man to remedy it, Mr. Roosevelt, you have the good wishes of the American people.—W.A.S.

The University Looks Toward a School of Art

It looks as though the University is going to have a school of art after all. It may not compare with the School of Fine Arts that President Chase established at Illinois when he was there, but it is undoubtedly a good beginning.

The idea was formed when McLean, a well-known artist from Raleigh, made a talk in the Playmakers theatre. It was arranged that McLean should meet the students of the University who were interested in forming an art school. Sixteen students presented themselves at the meeting. Hours for classes were arranged, and at present the usage of pencil, water-color, and charcoal is being studied.

But art interest should not end at classes. The are student and other students of the University should combine to form an art club. Nothing is more influential than association with people who are interested in the same line. Several years ago, an art club was established on the Hill. Art exhibits were conducted, and student interest ran high. Last year, the sole remaining member graduated, leaving as reminded of the days of the art club, the two masks in the Green Room of the Playmakers theatre. This last member, Edward Gibson, expressed his regrets at the lack of interest that the students showed in the way of art. He hoped that some day the students would show enough interest to found another club.

A couple of years ago, when the artist Steene was in Chapel Hill, Robert Mason attempted to start art classes. The artist was willing, but the student body showed no desire to take lessons.

This year, the Playmakers brought McLean. It is to be hoped that his classes are a success. If they are, a Fine Arts School will probably be established in the University. That is why an art club should be established. It would keep up the student interest until the time is ripe for the opening of the school. There are many students here who have long been wishing for this club but have never gathered enough nerve to found one themselves. This is the outlet which students have been awaiting. This can be the rebuilding of the cultural interest which students showed in this school not so long ago.—H.C.P.

Buchmanism

There has arisen a religious movement in the last twenty years which is gaining converts rapidly in every continent and now has a strong hold in the United States and Europe. This movement is known as the Oxford Group or First Century Christian Fellowship or more commonly, Buchmanism.

Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, former Y. M. C. A. secretary at Pennsylvania State College and originator of this cult, has won his converts, who are said to number hundreds of thousands, by personal magnetism.

The most outstanding feature of this movement is the holding of "house parties" which in reality might be called conventions. The most famous house party was held at Briarcliffe Manor, New York, last year. Many noted men and women attended from all parts of the world. Among them were Carol Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture under President Wilson, Count John Benedict of Holland, Colonel and Mrs. H. D. Belgrave of London.

The program of these house parties includes the morning silent prayer or communication with God for instructions for the day and afternoon sessions for the hearing of short talks by experts, clergymen and laymen who are familiar with the movement. In the evening there is a fireside discussion with public confession of sins by the members. Because these confessions tended to emphasize sex experiences, gambling and drinking, Buchmanism became rather sensational and was laughed at as a meeting where each person tried to outdo the others in confessing his sins.

Dr. Buchman seeks his converts from the higher classes—in Europe he has won over many of the nobility including Queen Marie of Rumania, and in the United States he works with socially, politically, and financially prominent men and women in the east. He also has gone to many eastern college campuses where he has created quite a furore among students.

The nation-wide criticism to Buchmanism is that it pictures God as a solicitous Grandfather who sends down hourly directions to his favorites and there is too much emphasis on confession to human hearers.—Daily Kansan.

'Ware the Greeks

It was, they tell us, an unusually hot session of the South Carolina House of Representatives, but one old gent over in a corner had dozed off, oblivious of the fate of a mighty commonwealth. As he dozed, a bill came forward to abolish fraternities on the University of South Carolina campus. Orations pro and con on the Greek letter question stirred the chamber.

The old man awoke to hear something about "Greeks," rubbed his eyes, and lumbered to his feet. "Mister Speaker," he shouted, "I'll be switched if my son stays at a doggone school full of wops."

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

In the past few days, this department has learned that right here in the University exists a situation calculated to bring tears to the eyes of a wooden Indian. In fact, this deplorable state of affairs is so cruel and inhuman that even a columnist shudders to think of it. Were the same thing to be found in any state penitentiary in the land, the humane societies would rear upon their collective hind legs and howl the government out of existence. Slavery, beside it, is a condition approaching Nirvana.

In certain class rooms in this great University where, formerly, a gentleman could spend four or more years in enjoyable leisure and comfort, students are now being compelled to sit for 53 minutes a day on hard wooden stools, like they sat upon at home when they went into the dining room. Stools, mind you. Not chairs or benches or pews, but round, uncomfortable stools without backs.

Here, these noble young martyrs, sit in worse agony than any galley slave ever was forced to endure. Lower and lower they slump—down, down, down. When the gong rings for dismissal, they lose valuable seconds getting their twisted bodies straightened out—seconds that might be gainfully spent in loitering gracefully about the campus walks, practicing a new cigarette flick.

It is said that the cracking and snapping of joints may be heard clear across the halls when these classes rise to leave. No one could hear this and remain unmoved.

The department of the University mainly responsible for this modern form of torture is noted for its efficiency, kindness and humanity. How little the world knows of the oppression, the suffering, the maiming of tender little bodies and all that goes on behind lecture hall and laboratory doors.

Is it not enough that our classrooms have no coat hangers, no upholstery, no foot-rests, no spittoons, and no tuning out systems for dry lectures, without the added misery of hard stools that have no backs? Alack-a-day, and woe is me. Was it for this that we left our fathers' farms? Is there no justice, no mercy, no pity in this cruel world? Lend me your shoulder, friend, while I weep quietly for a spell.

Our parents did not send us to school to be tormented and tortured and have our poor spines curved into half moons. Not for this was the old log cabin mortgaged. Think how dear, wrinkled old mothers would go down to their graves in grief and sorrow, if they knew. Trustees, dear trustees, save our boys and girls.

In these times of depression and budget-slashing, perhaps it is too much to ask that chairs might be substituted for the stools, but the least that can be done is to move them out into the arboretum so that students in the class rooms referred to above might sit on the floor and lean back against the walls.

are precedents which make these applicants believe that they really have a case at law," the report continued.

The suit will be brought by the "aggressive wing" of Negro citizens in the state who "have talked this procedure over with some of the best lawyers in the United States," according to the Daily News.

"Another group... does not favor the university plan," making a "fine distinction between the separate school systems of the races and the racial segregations at the higher institutions of learning... but they do not think the state law denies the University law courses to the Negro."

The Negroes do not believe they will win the University case "at the doors of the law school," nor do they "expect to make good on the mandamus," according to the account.

The same thing was tried by Negroes of Missouri and Delaware. They did not gain admittance to these institutions, but they won a law suit which required these states to supply tuition for Negroes in other institutions. "This," declared the story, "is exactly what these postulants hope to make of the present case."

Other prominent Negroes do not want admission to white schools, "but Negro schools adequately equipped and maintained."

Appeal to the state "to enact the spirit of the constitution which gives the Negro equal accommodations in the enjoyment of institutions which he cannot share with the white man" is favored by "milder Negro leadership," but "... unless the two Negro lawyers who have the case now, decide to follow their elders... there should be some sort of legal procedure within a few days."

Coach Shepard Shifts Squad In Effort To Revive Punch

Aitken, Chandler, Glace, Henry, And Brandt Work in New Phantom Combination.

NEW TEAM LOOKS GOOD

Runs Wild Against Scrub Opposition in Workout Yesterday; McCachren Is Injured.

Determined to revive the high scoring punch the Phantoms displayed earlier in the season, Coach Bo Shepard shifted his squad around yesterday and struck a combination which ran wild against the scrubs by a score of 33-1.

This new machine had Aitken and Chandler at forward, Glace, center, with Stud Henry and Brandt at guard. Vergil Weathers was used at one of the guards on this team for a part of the workout. This red club ran wild against various scrub combinations and showed the scoring punch that the varsity five had in early games but which has been sadly lacking in the last six games.

Coach Shepard made no indication that this new team was permanent, he is set on finding a team that will get off to a fast start and then play steady ball. He had such a club before the first Duke battle but since then, through five straight tilts, it has only jumped to an early advantage in one, that against Washington and Lee.

McCachren Out With Injury
Dave McCachren injured his thumb in the Duke fracas and was not used at all in the session yesterday. If this new Phantom five remains intact through this week, the possibilities are that McCachren will be seen at guard with Brandt, with Henry being held in reserve.

Captain Hines scored the only point for the green team in the fast scrimmage yesterday and that was on a foul Glace committed late in the workout. Stuart Chandler looked especially good at forward.

TRACK MENTORS INITIATE FORMAL INDOOR PRACTICE

Freshman and Varsity Squads Start Work Tonight for Indoor Meet.

Coaches Fetzner and Ranson, Carolina track mentors, will formally open their indoor track work-outs for tonight, priming their charges for the coming Southern Conference meet which is scheduled for March 4, here. The Tar Heels' coaches are requesting that all men out for either varsity or freshman track report for their work-outs tonight at 9:00 o'clock in the Tin Can.

From now the combined track clubs will take their daily work-outs on the "boards" in the Tin Can. With the culmination of basketball season within the next few weeks, the teams will have the big tin gymnasium all to themselves and will be able to use the regular track.

Already Coach Bob Fetzner is parading his starting blocks out for the indoor sprint candidates. The corners for the distances will soon be put in position. The jumping pit is open now and all men who are aspiring for positions on the track team are asked to report for the early drills. The hurdlers have been taking daily work-outs on the wrestling mat with a single hurdle. Several promising men have come out and have bolstered the already strong number of hurdlers in the Tar Heel camp.

VICTORY PLACES DEVILS IN LEAD FOR BIG CROWN

With State Race Clinched Duke Is Favorite With Gamecocks For Conference Title.

With their second win over the White Phantoms the Duke Blue Devils clinched their fourth straight Big Five title and established themselves as leading contenders, along with South Carolina, for the Southern Conference flag.

The Gamecocks have met only two conference foes, Clemson and N. C. State, while the Blue Devils have been beaten by Maryland only, in eight conference tilts. The conference tourney at Raleigh is set for the last of this month and the winner of the Duke-South Carolina game Saturday in Columbia will be seeded number one.

Gamecocks Feature Texas Stars

This South Carolina club features four members of the Athens, Texas, high school team which won the national high school championship in 1929 and 1930. There four men are Dana Henderson, center, Bennie Tompkins and John Rowland, guards, and Freddie Tompkins, forward. Henderson featured the Gamecocks' 45-25 victory over N. C. State.

SPORTS ENTRIES MUST BE FILED BEFORE TONIGHT

Indoor Carnival Registration in Game Room to End at 6:00 O'clock.

All students interested in enrolling in the indoor sports carnival to be conducted in the game room of Graham Memorial are asked to sign at the desk in the game room before 6:00 o'clock tonight.

Mayne Albright, manager of the Union, is in charge of the carnival and expects a large number of entrants. He announced yesterday that no charge would be made either for entrance in the competition or for playing. Bowling, ping-pong and pool tournaments will be run off with intramural points being given the winners of the bowling tourney.

The winners of the dormitory league will play the winners of the fraternity race for the campus title. Twenty-five points will be given each team entering three men. Points for the individual intramural cup for scoring will also be awarded. Team winners will receive points according to a system worked out by Herman Schnell of the intramural department.

Individual play will rule the pool and ping-pong competition

WRESTLERS RESUME REGULAR WORK-OUTS

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestlers resumed their regular work-outs yesterday afternoon after having put aside their mat togs since the Duke meet, Thursday night.

The freshmen will receive special attention this week since they will meet the Oak Ridge Cadets here, Saturday, and then next Thursday, February 23, they are carded tentatively to meet the Davidson freshmen.

The varsity will not have a meet this week, but should have some hard work since Coach Quinlan was not satisfied with their showing against Duke, Thursday night.

SOUTHEASTERN LOOP OUTPLAYS SOUTHERN

In the fourteen games played between Southern and Southeastern conference foes, the southeastern team has come off the floor victor nine times. South Carolina is the leading Conference team in inter-conference competition. The Gamecocks have won from Sewanee, Tennessee, and Kentucky. The South Carolinians dropped a close game to Vanderbilt, however, and lost their first game with Kentucky after two extra periods.

though organizations can enter three men in the ping-pong tourney.

BOXERS BEATEN FOR FIRST TIME DURING SEASON

Oak Ridge Cadets Conquer Freshman Mittmen by Close 5-3 Count.

A powerful Penn State boxing team opened its season Saturday night at State College, Pa., and handed the Carolina boxers their first defeat of the season before a huge crowd. The score was 5 1/2-2 1/2 and the Staters had anything but an easy time, every fight going the limit to a very close decision.

The eastern intercollegiate rules do not provide for an extra round when the decision is a draw at the end of the three regulation rounds, so when the fighters are declared even by the referee after the third, the point is split, each team getting half. Sam Giddins as a 155-pounder figured in the only draw of the meet and it was in his fight that the score ended in the fraction. Many present thought that Sam had a shade, but the referee saw nothing better than a dead heat so it ended that way.

THE HUMAN CRICKET

BEATS OLYMPIC RECORD!

ILLUSION:

Josie, the lovely trapeze artist, stands upon a small platform. At the will of the magician she leaps twenty feet into the air to reach her trapeze. She uses no ropes, no ladder! A phenomenal leap for a woman... or a man!

EXPLANATION:

Josie didn't jump... she was sprung! The twenty-foot leap is not dependent on Josie's ability, but on a powerful spring mechanism hidden beneath the stage which propels the artist upward through the air. The force is so violent that the lady wears a light steel jacket which protects her from injury as she starts her astonishing leap.

It's FUN TO BE FOOLED ...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

Magic has its place...but not in cigarette advertising.

Consider the illusion that there is a mysterious way to give cigarettes a superior "flavor."

EXPLANATION: Cigarette flavor can be controlled by adding artificial flavorings. By blending. And by the quality of tobaccos used.

Cheap, raw tobaccos can be "built up" or "fortified" by the lavish use of artificial flavorings.

Such magic, however, seldom holds the audience. Your taste finally tells you the truth.

The cigarette flavor that never stales, never varies, never loses its fresh appeal, comes from mild, ripe, fragrant, more expensive tobaccos...blended to bring out the full, round flavor of each type of leaf. It's the quality of the tobacco that counts!

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Because Camel actually pays millions more every year for choice tobaccos, you find in Camels an appealing mildness, a better flavor.

And Camels taste cooler because the welded Humidor Pack of three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane keeps them fresh.

a monarchial dictatorship, which was strong physically and weak morally, just as present dictatorships are. When the war was over the government and country collapsed, and now the people are under the rule of Hitler. As for Hitler, Count Sforza told the audience that a mixture of "Big Bill" Thompson, ex-mayor of Chicago, and some Ku Klux Klanmen would produce a Hitler.

His hatred of dictatorships was shown by the Count when he declared that countries which permit themselves to be subjected to a dictatorship deserve the lowering of national character that is brought on by that form of government.

The Fascist idea, according to the Count, is turning toward a rebirth of the Roman Empire, which is a foolish and impossible ideal. In conclusion the Count stated the reason for the support of dictatorships by so many writers. He said that democracy seemed so perfect to everyone that when a small part of it failed, they attacked the whole system instead of merely the party which showed the weakness.

SIX HIGH SCHOOLS TO PARTICIPATE IN ANNUAL TOURNEY

Wilson High to Defend Boxing Crown; Durham, High, 1932, Wrestling Champion, Not Entered.

Six high schools have entered the third annual state interscholastic boxing and wrestling tournaments, which will take place in the Tin Can Thursday and Friday. Coach P. H. Quinlan will supervise the weighing-in of candidates Thursday afternoon.

Wilson high school, boxing champion last year, will participate in the tournament this year, but Durham, 1932 wrestling title-holder, has not as yet entered to defend its crown.

Sponsored by University
The sports affair is conducted by the University through the extension division and under the supervision of E. R. Rankin, chairman of the high school athletic association committee. Coach Quinlan will be in charge of the contests.

The Wilson mitt outfit boasts five undefeated ringsters to defend the laurels, including Andrews, last year's 115-pound champion. Goldsboro also boasts a strong team, with Langston, 155-pounder, and Evans, 145-pounder, both unbeaten in competition this year. Rocky Mount, Charlotte, and Raleigh are other strong boxing aggregations that have entered.

Wrestling Favorites

In the wrestling tournament, Barium Springs undefeated, has the best record. It has already beaten Durham, the 1932 victors, twice in pre-tournament matches, and overwhelmed Leaksville. Wilson has also entered these events.

The boxing and wrestling matches will proceed simultaneously throughout the preliminaries and finals. The final matches will take place in the Tin Can at 8:00 o'clock, Friday night.

BOXERS BEATEN FOR FIRST TIME DURING SEASON

fans who had Marty doped to go undefeated this season. His opponent boxed in superb fashion much after the fashion of Bobby Goldstein and he was piling up points before Levinson realized just what he was up against. The Tar Heel came back strong and made the fight very close in the latter half; but Napoleon had it sewed up and Marty could not overcome his early lead, though a he came within a hair's breadth of stopping his tiring foe in the third.

Platt Landis, who has not been forced beyond the first round since the opening meet of the season against V. P. I., showed that he could still travel the distance and win handily. Although his knockout string was broken, Landis never looked better, boxing his rugged adversary and handling him nicely throughout. He is still the best bet to take conference honors.

Fighting in his natural division as a lightweight, Furches Raymer subbed for Quarles and turned in Carolina's other victory of the night in beautiful fashion. Raymer looked smooth in his second start this year and he won in clear-cut fashion from a rugged Stater who went out to get the Tar Heel from the opening bell.

In the welterweight bout, Nat Lumpkin made a strong comeback and nearly took the decision from Johnny McAndrews, Penn star. It was close all the way and, at times, Nat appeared to have it won, but McAndrews came strong to take one of the closest verdicts of the meet.

Ivey Proves Himself

Pete Ivey, filling in for Cliff Glover, injured bantam, did a top-notch job of it and gave Miller of State all he could handle for the full time. Pete is to be complimented for making the fight so close, for Miller is one of the toughest bantams in college boxing in the north.

Swinging leather as a middleweight for the first time this year, Peyton Brown engaged in a furious argument with Slusser of State and dropped the verdict after three fast rounds. Although Peyton copped their last year's affair, Slusser has improved tremendously and has developed a terrific sock in either hand, particularly in his right.

Nabel of State did not have much to spare over Tom Parsons, light-heavy, at the end of their encounter. Parsons nearly stole the show by putting up a whale of a scrap against the Pennsylvanian and coming down the stretch to make a strong finish.

With four regulars missing from the line-up the Tar Babies also fell for the first time of the season, losing to Oak Ridge 5-3. Edwards, Jeanette, and Ellisberg conquered for the freshmen, while their mates Eutsler, Flaherty, Owlick, and Hornaday dropped decisions. Carolina forfeited in the unlimited division.

TSK! TSK! Isn't it too bad! Bill Boner thinks a blizzard is something you find inside a fowl!

Why doesn't somebody give him a good pipe and some tobacco? For a pipe helps a man to think straight. Of course, it's got to be the right tobacco. But any college man can guide him in that. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Which is only natural—for in all tobacco-dom there's no blend like the mixture of fine old burleys found in Edgeworth. In that difference there's a new smoking satisfaction, a new comfort, for the man who likes to think and dream with a pipe between his teeth.

Maryland turned in two more victories last week over Virginia and Washington and Lee, two teams which had previously beaten the Old Liners. Vincent, Maryland center, opened up against the Generals and scored twenty-six points, the high water mark in individual scoring a game this year.

Maryland, with a record of six wins and three losses, leads in team scoring with 320 points, followed by Duke with 283, and Carolina and State with 277 each. The V. P. I. Gobblers have been scored on most frequently, 358 tallies being marked against them.

CONFERENCE FOR LIBRARY STUDIES WILL MEET HERE

American and Southeastern Library Groups to Sponsor Meeting Next Spring.

A southern library conference will meet here, April 7-8, under the auspices of the American and Southeastern Library associations. This conference will consider primarily the status of libraries, books, and reading in the south.

The consideration of the status of southern libraries will center around the statement that the library in the south is conspicuously undeveloped and at the same time is increasingly necessary for a complete educational program.

Related Agencies

The meetings are planned to bear upon the solution of this problem the experience and leadership in the related fields of endeavor in the south by bringing together southern leaders from the fields of religion, culture, education, and social welfare.

The conference will consider the relationship of these agencies in a well-rounded community program. The library will be considered in its relation to the other agencies of the community and its governmental and economic aspects, with a view to showing how it supplements the activities of other agencies, and suggesting the means by which its present facilities may be extended.

In addition to librarians and educators, other citizens interested in the cultural development of the south will be invited; the meetings will also be open to the public.

NEGRO CHORAL TO PRESENT SECOND CONCERT FRIDAY

Glee Club of Lincoln University Will Offer Musical Program
In Memorial Hall.

The men's glee club of Lincoln University will appear again in Memorial hall Friday night, February 17, at 8:30 o'clock. This second concert has been arranged since poor weather conditions allowed only a small attendance at the appearance of the chorus here last Friday.

The Lincoln University club is recognized as one of the outstanding Negro choral organizations in the country. The glee club has recently returned from a tour of the New England states where it received favorable comment both from its audiences and from the press. The club will go farther south after concluding a series of concert engagements in the state.

There will be no admission charge for Friday evening's concert but a collection will be taken to defray the expenses of the group. The program will differ from the one presented here last week.

these books at the meetings this afternoon.

The editorial board will convene at 2:30 o'clock. City editors and desk men will meet at 3:00 o'clock, and reporters will

PHILLIPS SPEAKS ON EDUCATIONAL COSTS IN STATE

School Superintendent Plays
Fallacious Thinking at North Carolina Club Meeting.

There is at present a great deal of fallacious thinking about the cost of North Carolina's schools, due largely to the fact that many people of the state have not become fully acquainted with the true picture of education, Guy B. Phillips, superintendent of the Greensboro city schools, stated Monday in an address to the North Carolina club.

"The school people have nothing to lose and everything to gain by having all the facts presented, for experience has shown time and again that those who know the true facts about the schools are those most anxious to help them get a square deal," Phillips asserted.

Pointing out a disposition on the part of some people to hold the schools responsible for present troubles, Phillips cited figures from the report of the State Tax Commission. The speaker showed that during 1930-31 educational expenditures were reduced 19.8 per cent, while reductions for other items were as follows: highway expenditures
6.1 per cent, state expenditures for purposes other than education and highways 10.2 per cent, municipal expenditures for purposes other than schools 4 per cent. County expenditures for purposes other than schools and roads registered an increase of 4 per cent. Phillips stated that it was conservatively estimated that teachers in North Carolina are now due more than a million dollars in salaries dating back as far as four years.

Phillips outlined a program designed to re-establish state schools. He believes that support for public education must be placed on a broader base, since the burden of taxation is being centered in too small a point; that knowledge of the purpose of education must become more common; that the principle of a minimum state support, with provision for local supplement, must be adhered to; and that the administrative units of public education must yield to the demands of efficiency.

Co-ed Tea Today

Lore Royal and Emma Ray will be the hostesses at the regular weekly tea at Spencer hall this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. Faculty members and students are invited.

Freshmen Opposed To Gym Work Because 'It's Too Much Trouble'

Consensus of Opinions of Twenty First-Year Men Is That Required Physical Training Is Beneficial and Is Not Merely "Departmental Devilment" Contrived by Faculty.

So loud and so protracted have been freshman complaints to required gym work that it has long been the popular belief that the first year men regard it as one of the necessary evils accompanying a college education.
However, when the freshmen themselves were questioned seriously on the subject, the consensus of opinion indicated that rather than as some departmental devilment they looked on physical training as a definite service and aid to them. In a group of twenty freshmen, chosen at random, the majority view was distinctly for a continuance of the system.

All of the first year men favored compulsory attendance, for they stated that if gym were not required they would certainly not seek exercise voluntarily.
Most of them agreed that the gym routine, taken at frequent intervals, was not only beneficial, but necessary to insure physical well-being. The few who were opposed to required work offered as their reason, the conventional, "It's too much trouble."

Inconvenient Hours

Apparently it is not gym itself which causes dissatisfaction among the freshmen but the hours at which the instruction is given. It was claimed that the classes at 4:15 and 4:40 o'clock break into the very center of the afternoon, disrupting any business that might be important. The three classes that are given at 5:15 o'clock, it was said, come too close to the dinner hour. A few of these men stated that the chapel period, from 10:30 to 11:00 o'clock, would be a far more convenient time to take physical training.

The gymnasium department stated that the main object of the course in physical education is "to attain the development of the physical attributes of every individual to the fullest extent."
The exercises are planned scientifically and are not meant to cause a man any physical fatigue. Every voluntary muscle of the body is brought into play in the exercises here. Dr. R. B.
Lawson, the physical director at the University, declared, "Gym work develops coordinated movements of many muscles, and this coordination is necessary for anyone. The classes are planned to come at such a time that they will act upon the various glandular secretions of the body which act as an aid to digestion."

Check-ups Made

From time to time check-ups are made. Those men who have not cut for a period of six weeks are given a thorough re-examination. In most cases, it has been found that the physical condition of these men has improved.
This fact is evidenced by greater chest expansion and larger muscular development. It is on these surveys that the department bases its statements that the work is beneficial.

Co-eds Break Down Old Theories As To Why They Enter University

Opinions Revealed in Investigation Show That Factors Ranging From Educational Advantages to Social Appeal Influence
Girls Who Come to School to Carolina.

The common belief that co-eds come to Carolina to "defy the male desire for a womanless University has been blasted. Nor do they come primarily to sit on front rows and wheedle high grades from professors or to make life uncomfortable for the men. That is assuming, of course, that the inhabitants of the "Shack" spoke with refreshing candor in this investigation.
A survey of the opinions volunteered reveals that the girls' choice is shaped by factors ranging from the University's educational advantages to its appeal from the social point of view.

Among North Carolina girls
the liberality of the University as opposed to the stifling restrictions of girls' schools appeared to be the chief motivating force in their coming to Chapel Hill.
It was noticeable that this idea was stressed particularly by the transfers from Saint Mary's School. It is obvious that an institution which permits considerable personal freedom as to dating and other feminine interests will be more popular than those with iron-bound regulations.

Prefer University to Duke

Several co-eds who are native
North Carolinians but who attended out-of-state schools for their first two years declared they came back to meet the people of their own state. All those in this category considered North Carolina girls' schools inferior to those from which they came. It was also their view that the University took precedence over Duke by virtue of its tradition and its relative inexpensiveness.

The reasons advanced by students from out of the state were of a more serious nature than those of the North Carolina girls. Many of them mentioned the national reputation of the University as an important factor in their selection. Those from large cities agreed that they were anxious to find a school with the same scholastic rating of northern universities combined with the advantages of a small town. In many cases, the wide fame of the Playmakers attracted co-eds with dramatic aspirations.

Attracted by Social Life

However, one "non-native" voiced an opinion inconsistent with the otherwise sober vein of her sisters. This representative of the middle west admitted that she had heard a great deal about the novel social hierarchy that the Carolina co-ed enjoyed.
It had also come to her ears that the girls here offered less corruption than those in the schools familiar to her. Her mind was immediately made up. This was the ideal place to get her chance in life!

Practically all who were interviewed appeared extremely jealous of the appellation "Carolina co-ed." The fact that the

LIBRARY RECEIVES LOAN OF JACKSON RELIC COLLECTION

Granddaughter of Confederate
General Lends University Valuable Collection.

The University library has just received a loan from Mrs.
E. R. Preston, Charlotte, of a collection of material relating to General Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson. Announcement of the loan was made yesterday by Acting Librarian R. B. Downs. Mrs.
Preston is a grand daughter of the famous confederate general.

The collection, according to library officials, is one of the most important yet received for the southern collection, which the University library has been building for the past several years under the direction of Dr.
J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton. The new material is said to be of inestimable value.

The loan came to the library through the efforts of Mrs. Lyman A. Cotten, who is working with the Friends of the Library, an organization formed last year to promote the interests of the library here.

Historical Sources

Included in the Jackson collection are numerous letters both to and from Jackson relating to the Civil war. These letters constitute valuable primary historical sources.

Other objects add great interest to the collection. There are sixteen written articles, which include several photographs, of General Jackson, an autograph album with many famous names inscribed, eighty-eight photostatic copies of military papers, personal military articles, a poem by Jackson, and several newspapers published during the Civil war.

MURCHISON URGES READJUSTMENT OF ECONOMIC ORDER

Economics Professor Suggests Liberal Foreign Policy in Greensboro Address.

An upward re-adjustment of our economic machine as a means of recovery from the present depression was urged by Dr. C. T. Murchison, professor of applied economics in the University school of commerce, in an address to the Greensboro Real Estate Board at Greensboro Monday. Continued "downward re-adjustment" tends toward "maladjustment," he declared.

Murchison suggested as an important remedial measure a liberal foreign policy that will tend to stimulate foreign buying of American products.

Through the development of machinery, he explained, Americans have increased the commodities for which a market must be sought and at the same time curtail the purchasing power. By forcing the commodity prices upward by inflation obtained by deliberate overdraft through the federal reserve banks, Murchison believes this condition can be almost wholly remedied. As another essential part of his recovery plan, Murchison advocated "reduction in working hours." Such a reduction of wages, and other manifestations of downward adjustment.

Our Place In the Sun

If the detached and wholly impersonal views of a hundred of the country's foremost citizens, statesmen, educators, and industrialists are any criterion, the University is the possessor of an unique position neither equalled nor rivalled by any other state university in America. A recent series of letters from prominent men protesting the proposed vital slashing of the University's budget appear in the current issue of the Alumni Review, the exceedingly spirited and finely-written organ of the Alumni Association.

Some of these may be quoted. Walter Lippman, author and editor: "The University is one of the important centers of American intellectual life, and would be not merely a loss to North Carolina but to the whole nation if its work were seriously interrupted."

Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin: "It will be a national calamity if ways are not found to preserve the distinguished quality of the University of North Carolina."

Owen D. Young, statesman and patriot: "... The friends of education everywhere will especially hope that no tragedy may come to the University of North Carolina."

A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University: "The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is known all over the country for the good work that it has been doing. ... That state and country will be much poorer if Chapel Hill suffers a severe reverse."

James R. Angell, president of Yale University: "The University of North Carolina has won for itself an enviable position as one of the truly great universities of the United States. ..."

Newton D. Baker, statesman: "Education everywhere is likely to suffer in this depression, but apart from the mere bread and butter necessities of the hungry, there is no higher challenge to patriotism of the South than to continue to sustain its educational institutions, and this is peculiarly true in North Carolina where the University has obtained such eminence and where any backward step taken in a difficult year may do damage which a generation cannot repair."

David Lawrence, editor and political writer: "I have always regarded the University of North Carolina as in the forefront of American universities and one whose record has been identified with the remarkable progress of the state itself. ..."

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University: "Throughout the country we look upon the University of North Carolina as one of the leading institutions of its kind and as a center of genuine scholarly influence and inspiration, which gives North Carolina an enviable reputation from Atlantic to Pacific."

It is thus apparent that the people of North Carolina hold in the balance an institution that should prize as pre-eminent among its galaxy of priceless possessions. In a section where provincialism is supposed to be the predominating spirit, a state university has risen to such a position where it is regarded as indispensable to our social structure. North Carolina might well regard the opinion of these few we have quoted as well as the hundreds not included here before sapping the life blood from an institution regarded as a leader among state universities and a motivating factor of peerless worth in the educational system of America.—D.O.S.

Crumbling Era

Entering a room in which some people were sleeping a Forsyth County negro stole a pair of shoes. Burglary being a capital offense he was sentenced to die. In Brooklyn Mary Bronsky, seventeen, gave birth to a baby in a wind-swept doorway. Fleeing from the curious crowd she was found semi-conscious in an empty attic. Inquiring for an acquaintance, a Communist, at the Memphis police station Henry Fuller of Chapel Hill was confined in a filthy cell with inedible food for two days until a friend secured his release. Three years ago leaders of the Grand Army of the Republic a half a century after Appomattox pronounced the U. D. C. the country's worst enemy, stating "there are still those who believe the Stars and Bars stood for something noble." President Frothingham of the Woman's Patriotic Corporation requested American consuls to prevent the entrance of Albert Einstein into this country as he is a dangerous radical. At Lwow, Poland, Commercial Academy Jewish students including girls forced to run a double gauntlet of students armed with clubs crept away bruised and bloody.

The United States refuses to recognize, Liberia, founded as a nation for freed negroes, until she eradicates the slavery that flourishes there. For stealing and selling gooseberry jam from the government four Russians were sentenced to death and promptly shot. Last year in Florida a convict was placed in a narrow box with a chain around his neck until he slowly strangled to death. In New York a two hundred pound minion of law and order placed a foot on the belly and one on the throat of a prostrate suspect and rocked back and forth until a broken larynx mercifully ended the agony. Several months ago the infant son of Charles Lindbergh was taken from his agonized parents who recovered his rotting bones after months of cruel suspense and crushed hopes.

Several representatives of white civilization took it upon themselves to execute Hawaiian justice, received for the brutal murder of a defenseless native a sentence of one hour in a luxurious hall. After an investigation revealing the stinking putrescence which surrounded his activities, Mayor James J. Walker was allowed to resign to pursue his libertine license unhampered by the duties of his office. Seven ignorant negro boys in Alabama after a pretense of a trial were sentenced to die for alleged rape on two white girls who disguised as men were stealing rides on freight trains.

With ten million dead hardly turned to dust, the nations, refusing to disarm, spar for strategic advantages—talking and thinking war. Millions freeze and starve while angry and rebellious farmers burn cotton and wheat. Revolution, graft, and decay is everywhere. Hate, malice, avarice, fear and death all as rampant and as universal now as in the dawn of man's history. Skyscrapers, aeroplanes, radios, science, morality, religion, culture, vain words, a thin veneer cloaking an animal as cruel, as rapacious, and as ruthless as the sabre-tooth tiger and the prowling panther.—J.F.A.

The Paradox of

The Social System

The boy who wants to be a fireman or street car motorman may, in the future, have to be content with the fulfillment of his childish ambitions. Employment in highly skilled professions has, for the present, practically reached the saturation point. The number of college graduates in the ranks of soda jerkers and filling station employees is rapidly increasing. Perpetual students are fast becoming fixtures in the American college scene.

The vocational guidance has become a science of many complications. Young men cannot, as readily as they once did, enter the higher professions by the thousands with assurance of a respectable living wage. Our American situation is a paradox: skilled workmen are required but skilled workmen cannot get jobs. College students must specialize but, after graduation, they are unable to find jobs in the fields in which they have specialized.

There are two courses, one of which educationalists and vocationalists must pursue in solving this problem. The first would be to make college entrance requirements so strict that none but the most apt students would be allowed to enter college. That is a frequent proposal from our intellectual aristocrats. However, it is not in accord with our democratic principles of educational opportunities. According to the American system, every child who wants an education must be given the opportunity to get it.

Still, when everybody is given an education, it is impossible to give everybody the job to which he has been educated. On the other hand, both laissez-faire and socialist concepts of society require that he who eats must work. It is evident, then that education and vocationalism must, according to democratic principles, work out a program that will conciliate these controversial tendencies. We cannot continue to overcrowd our professional fields, nor can we afford to refuse education to the masses.

In line with present trends, the next age will be one of vocational feudalism and recreational freedom. Everybody will be given the opportunity of a liberal education to enhance the enjoyment of his increasingly numerous leisure hours, promised us by the machine age. But only those who have shown unusual aptitude will be allowed to enter the skilled professions. Liberal arts graduates will be running machines. Their education will not be used to run the machines, for that knowledge can be acquired in a few days; it will be employed in profitable and plentiful leisure.—E.C.D.

Co-eds Break Down Theories As To Why They Enter Carolina

students at the Woman's College in Greensboro are now known by the same cognomen induced in the local girls a blend of amusement and resentment. Their attitude would indicate, that in spite of sharing the name, the Greensboro girls have no portion of the advantages.

Traditional Reasons

Family custom was offered by a number of the girls as instrumental in determining their selection of the University. Several had brothers who were influential in making their decision, while one admitted that since she had no brother, her father had shown his loyalty to his alma mater by sending her as his representative.

Graduate co-eds come here for distinctly different reasons than those of the undergraduates. Inability to secure positions at present has caused many to return to the academic life. Others wanted to do work in a specialized field which could not be obtained elsewhere. Some came simply because they liked to go to school and wished to prolong their educations as much as possible.

Debaters Rehearse For Virginia Meet

At the regular meeting of the debate group, Monday evening, the University team consisting of J. M. Bailey and John Wilkinson rehearsed their speeches for the radio debate to take place over WRVA Friday night at 10:30 o'clock in Richmond. Everett M. Jess and Bill Eddleman furnished the opposition, upholding the affirmative of the question stated, "That the safety-responsibility plan as revised by the American Automobile Association should be adopted in the United States."

This plan provides for universal drivers' licenses and has as a fundamental object the elimination of the reckless driver from the road. A further provision makes it necessary that the driver upon having a wreck shall, before being permitted to drive again, furnish proof of his financial responsibility for any future accidents in which he may be involved and satisfy the court judgment rendered against him.

SEVERAL ALUMNI OF PLAYMAKERS WIN RECOGNITION

Carolina Actors Formerly With Play Group Have Won Important Theatrical Positions.

Several Carolina alumni who were former members of the Playmakers are now winning recognition as actors and playwrights or as heads of dramatic departments in high schools and colleges, according to an article in the current Alumni Review.

Alvin Kerr, '28, whose comedy Sad Words to Gay Music will be the next Playmaker production, is a playwright, actor, and stage manager in New York.

Joe Fox, '31, is in Hollywood playing small parts in movies and radio plays and Howard Bailey, '30, star actor and business manager of the Playmakers, is with the Shakespearean Repertory company in New York. P. L. Elmore, '25, is dramatic director in New York.

Former Playmakers who are in charge of high school dramatics in North Carolina include William D. Perry, '29, in Winston-Salem; Helen Dortch, '29, in Southern Pines; and John Parker, '30, in High Point.

Paul Green's Second Picture To Appear

Paul Green, University professor of philosophy, playwright, and Pulitzer prize winner, has written for theatre-goers a second production, State Fair, showing Monday at the Carolina theatre. Green's first success was Cabin in the Cotton, which was produced last year, and pronounced a great hit throughout the country.

Will Rogers, featured player in Monday's film, worked in the production of State Fair, with an all-star cast, which includes Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory.

Wearing tights and spangles, Miss Eilers performs some spectacular aerial feats in her role. She has a terrific affair with Foster in the production which also presents Miss Gaynor and Ayres as a romantic team.

More than 100 circus and carnival specialists were employed during the filming of midway scenes of the film.

Decorating Contract Awarded Yesterday

The contract for decorating the Tin Can for the annual junior-senior dances May 13-14 has been awarded to Hamilton Hobgood and Bill Teachey, it was announced yesterday by Bill McKee, chairman of the joint committee from the two classes.

Friendship Council Hears H. D. Meyer

Professor H. D. Meyer of the sociology department addressed the freshman friendship council Monday night in preparation for the open forum to be conducted by Professor Howard W. Odum in Gerrard hall. Dr. Meyer's address dealt with certain social problems brought to light by the President's committee on social trends, of which Dr. Odum was associate director. The open forum Monday will be on the modern trends as revealed by the national group.

The sophomore Y. M. C. A. cabinet discussed several topics among which was a lengthy discussion on the question of new law study in the University. Further plans for the deputation trip tomorrow to Dunn high school were made, including arrangements for a basketball game between the Dunn high school quintet and a team selected from the cabinet.

A discussion on "Philosophy of Life" was conducted in the junior-senior cabinet.

Numerous Visitors Will Hear Kreisler

According to a statement issued by the music department of the University many visitors from throughout the state are expected to attend the recital by Fritz Kreisler. The famous violinist will play here February 27.

Dr. Wade R. Brown, head of music at the Women's College in Greensboro, has announced that a bus from the Greensboro branch will bring a group to the concert and similar delegations are expected from St. Mary's and Meredith in Raleigh. A large number of tickets have been sold to students at the Raleigh branch of the University and at Duke University. It is expected that all tickets for the concert will be sold a week before the date if requests for them continue to be made at the present rate.

Cage Coach Continues Search For Scoring Punch By Further Shifts

Weather's Plays at Guard in Battle Royal Between Teams in Afternoon's Practice.

NO CHANGES ARE DEFINITE

Shepard Looks for New Scoring Combination as Game With Davidson Approaches.

Coach Shepard continued to shift his squad in yesterday's work-out in an effort to recover the lost scoring punch of the Tar Heel five. For about twenty minutes yesterday he treated a handful of spectators to a real battle royal. Vergil Weathers was a guard on one club and Captain Hines played opposite him as a forward.

When scrimmage was up, both had one field goal and Weathers had rung up one of two foul shots. Another interesting individual battle was put on by Glace and Beale at center.

This last scrimmage ended a sort of round robin tournament. The team of Chandler and Aitken, forwards, Glace, center, with Brandt and Weathers at guard opened against a scrub five and won 14-7. This new combination showed the speed of Monday's work-out but missed numerous crisp shots. McCachren played one of the guards part of the time.

Coach Shepard then ran a team of Hines and Long, forwards, Beale, center, and Henry and Zaiser guards against another scrub team. The scrubs came through in this tussle and won 12-6.

Then came the big battle. Captain Hines' team lined up against Weathers' and the going was fast and furious for about twenty minutes. The green team with Aitken, Chandler, Glace, Weathers, and McCachren looked tired but the play was fast and Captain Hines' club finished in front 17-7.

After the work-out Shepard announced that no changes were definite and intimated that the regular starting combination would be used tomorrow night against Davidson in the final home engagement. There is a strong possibility however that the new machine may open. In that event, Glace will be at center, Aitken and Chandler at forward, with Weathers and McCachren at guard.

HIGH SCHOOL MAT MEN LOOK GOOD WITH WRESTLERS

Durham Team Makes Good Showing in Work-out Prior to Tournament Tomorrow.

Carolina's combined varsity and freshman wrestling teams worked out yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can with Coach Uzzel's Durham high school grapplers. The Durham mentor wanted to give his charges some work prior to their entering the high school wrestling tournament which starts tomorrow afternoon.

Uzzel's charges looked better than could be expected against some of the freshmen and some of the Tar Heels' varsity men had all they could do to cope with the fast Bull City mat aces.

The freshmen are scheduled to wrestle the Oak Ridge cadets Saturday afternoon and then they must meet the Davidson Wildkittens preceding the varsity meet, Thursday afternoon, February 23. The freshmen did not start their season off fast but in their last couple of meets they have looked very promising.

May Play At Guard Against Davidson

Vergil Weathers, all-southern forward last year who has been shifted to guard for the last two days by Coach Bo Shepard. Weathers is a good defensive player as well as being a deadly shot. There is a possibility that he will play at guard with Dave McCachren tomorrow against Davidson, Aitken being shifted to his forward berth.

MOST SOUTHERN COACHES PLEASED WITH NEW RULES

Collins Thinks New Out-of-Bounds Rule for Football Will Add to Offense.

Southern coaches differ in opinions of the new football rules passed recently by a conference of football coaches of America. Although only two new rules were adopted, these have excited much comment among gridiron mentors. Opinions of southern coaches regarding the out-of-bounds rule and the clipping rule are generally favorable, however.

Coach Collins thinks that the new out-of-bounds rule will add much to the offense and that the new definition of clipping, along with the lesser penalty, makes the clipping rule automatically enforceable. Collins seems pleased that no drastic changes have been made.

Wallace Wade of Duke offered the opinion that the rule would remove the vital problem of keeping away from the sidelines and thus would simplify the brain duties of the quarterback.

WESTERN COURT PLAY HEADED BY SALISBURY HIGH

Rowan County Team and Charlotte Undeclared; Durham High Takes Eastern Title.

Salisbury's fast basketball quintet continued to dominate the play in the western state class "A" conference last week as a result of two victories, one over High Point and the other over Winston-Salem. The Rowan county team has a season's record of six wins and no losses.

Charlotte, last year's state champion, is also undefeated but trails by one in games won. The Queen City five beat Winston-Salem in its only game last week.

In the eastern section, Durham has clinched the pennant. The Bull City boys boast a record of five victories and no defeats. Raleigh, in second place, has won two and dropped one.

Schedules for the week include games in the western group for every team except Gastonia and a lone battle in the east between Wilmington and Raleigh. Charlotte has a chance to overtake Salisbury by beating both Greensboro and Winston-Salem. The Salisbury outfit meets High Point.

Gastonia in the west and Rocky Mount in the east have both been unable to chalk up a win this year.

RUMOR OF SHIFT FOR DUKE MEET SPIKED BY ROWE

Boxing Coach States That Levinson and Quarles Will Fight in Regular Weights.

The rumor that Marty Levinson will drop down to 118 pounds and Norm Quarles to, 128 for either the Duke meet or the tournament was spiked yesterday by the fighters themselves and by Coach Rowe.

As Levinson is a natural featherweight, making the bantam limit of 118 pounds would be too much weight to take off and would weaken the Tar Heel captain considerably. Saturday night he will face Fred Lloyd of Duke as a 125-pounder in their much discussed bout, and the affair promises to rival the popularity of the recent Quarles-Goldstein fray.

Quarles could make the featherweight limit comfortably as he is barely over the weight now but despite the fact that he spots his lightweight opponents several pounds in each fight, he is right at home with the 135-pounders. Quarles is figured to plough through the conference tourney in that weight to another fight with Goldstein and possibly the championship.

Former Shift May Be Used

The shift in the higher weights may hold good for the Duke fights and possibly the tournament, a lot depending on the cut eye of Frank McIntosh. Against Penn State last Saturday night, Sam Giddins fought 155-pounds, Peyton Brown 165, and Tom Parsons 175. McIntosh may get back and necessitate another shift in the line-up. In the usual fashion of Coach Rowe, the line-up will be uncertain until the boys weigh the afternoon of the meet and possibly until the team is on the bench just before the fights.

Another uncertainty is the bantamweight position ordinarily held down by Cliff Glover. Ivey, who filled in for Cliff because of the cut over the latter's eye, fought in the weight against the Pennsylvanians last week. Glover's cut was a deep one, requiring three stitches to close it. It is possible that Glover may not see action until the tournament. Should he be unable to work against Duke, Ivey, who did a nice job against Penn, will face the Blue Devil bantam.

All the boxers turned out yesterday afternoon and put in stiff workouts. Everyone is in good condition for the Duke meet which will be the last of the season. The team is determined to end 1933 with a victory. Several vicious training bouts marked the afternoon's work and several of the members of the squad who have fought in dual meets looked surprisingly good.

Rowe wrestling and boxing coaches, respectively, of the University will be in charge of all contests.

SWAIN HALL GETS FIRST DEFEAT IN INTRAMURAL LOOP

Grimes, Zeta Psi, and Lambda Chi Alpha Win in Intramural Tilts Yesterday.

Another contender dropped from the thinning ranks of undefeated intramural basketball quintets yesterday as Swain Hall, after compiling a winning streak of six-game proportions, was upset by Grimes, 22-19.

Play in the first half of the game was slow, with Swain Hall holding the scanty lead of 11-10 at the whistle for the intermission. Grimes took a brace in the latter part of the game, however, and outscored the Swain Hall five, 12-8, in the last half. Watson was the leading factor in the victors' attack, accounting for eight points, while Onsach added seven to this total. Kennedy, Waldrop, and Edginger scored four points each for the vanquished outfit.

Zeta Psi Wins Close Tilt

Pi Kappa Alpha outdid itself to hold the powerful Zeta Psi five to a 34-31 decision as both teams brought their seasons to a close, the winners having seven wins in eight starts, and the losers three in eight. Pig Barber, of the winners, was the outstanding man on the floor, sinking twelve field baskets for twenty-four points. Clarke, Zeta Psi center, got eight. For the Pika team Spiers and Bullock got twelve and ten points respectively.

Lambda Chi Alpha handed Phi Delta Chi a 31-19 defeat in the only other game which was actually contested yesterday.

Pi Kappa Phi defeated Delta Tau Delta and Sigma Chi downed Theta Chi on forfeits.

FAMOUS SINGER WILL APPEAR AT RALEIGH TONIGHT

Lawrence Tibbett, Operatic and Concert Baritone, to Sing in New Auditorium.

Lawrence Tibbett, American operatic and concert baritone, will appear tonight at the Memorial auditorium in Raleigh at 8:30 o'clock.

Tibbett is one of the only opera stars who has risen to a high position in musical circles through his own efforts and without European training. He was born in California, where he first appeared on the stage with a Shakespearean troupe.

Studied in New York

He began study in New York to be a professional singer and five years later was offered a contract with the Metropolitan Opera company. Since then he has appeared in talking pictures, concert and radio in addition to his operatic roles. His most recent triumph on the stage was in the title role of Louis Gruenberg's Emperor Jones, the opera version of Eugene O'Neill's play of the same name.

One of Tibbett's early concert appearances was made in 1928 in Newark, New Jersey, at the Newark festival of music. On this occasion the Newark Philharmonic symphony orchestra accompanied Tibbett and was conducted by Lamar Stringfield, local flutist-composer.

FRESHMAN COACH NEEDS SIX FOOT FROSH FOR JUMP

Ranson Threatens to Advertise in Papers for Tall Yearling High Jumper.

Another big problem is looming before the Carolina track coaching staff. Coaches Fetzer and Ranson are now looking for a promising freshman high jumper who must stand in his stockings over six feet.

The varsity and freshman track squads worked out last night in the Tin Can. This was the first of a series of indoor workouts which are carded for the Carolina teams in order to prime the men for the coming Southern conference indoor games, March 4.

Here is a partial list of the events that the Tar Baby tracksters will enter: 60-yard run; 70-yard high hurdles; 3/4-mile run; mile relay; and the high jump. The high jump is the big problem confronting the Tar Heels' track mentors. They need a six-foot yearling high jumper. Dale Ranson stated that he is so anxious to get his man that he is tempted to do like Wisconsin's basketball coach—advertise in the school paper for his material. The only thing that hinders him, he says, is his financial status.

NEW VERSION OF KERR PLAY TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Playmakers to Stage "Sad Words to Gay Music," Comedy Written by Former Student Here.

Sad Words to Gay Music, a comedy by Alvin Kerr, will be produced for the first time in the new version for Broadway production by the Carolina Playmakers.

The comedy was presented in the original version last July in summer theatres throughout New York state, with Patricia Barclay of Broadway fame playing Sheila Patterson and Walter Kingsford, who has appeared in London and on Broadway, as Bart Beresford. The play was rewritten pending production in New York. At present Kerr is writing the music for a song in the production, "Downtrodden, Doleful Me."

Before his graduation from Carolina in 1928, Kerr was the author and director of the Playmaker satire, The Queen Has Her Face Lifted, and also wrote musical comedies for Wigwag and Masque.

While winning recognition as a playwright, Kerr is acting and doing work in stage management on Broadway.

STETSON D GIVES TO STUDENT FUND

Chapel Hill Branch Donates Five Per Cent of Total Sales to Emergency Loan Fund.

A check amounting to $40.00 was received recently by the University as the second donation to the University loan fund by Stetson "D" Tailors, Inc., of Baltimore. The first check sent by Maurice Robinson, president of the firm, was for $125.28 and was received January 25.

The additions to the fund came as a result of an announcement in the DAILY TAR HEEL that was brought to Robinson's attention by L. V. Huggins, graduate of the class of 1925, who has returned here as district manager of the Stetson "D" stores in North Carolina and Virginia. The announcement stated that the University short-term loan fund was exhausted and interested Robinson to the extent that he authorized Huggins to give five per cent of all sales of the Chapel Hill branch from January 16. The first check followed a sale by the local store that determined the relatively large amount of that donation.

The funds received are handled by the regular loan fund committee composed of President Frank P. Graham, R. B. House, F. F. Bradshaw, C. T. Woollen, and Harry F. Comer, and are put into immediate use.

FINAL ENTRANCE DATE EXTENDED

Albright Changes Date for Final Registration in Indoor Sports Carnival

The time limit for registration in the indoor sports carnival to be conducted in the game room of Graham Memorial has been extended to 6:00 o'clock Thursday night, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mayne Albright, manager of the union building. The extension of time was granted to allow several organizations more time to enter the competition.

The carnival will include tournaments in ping-pong, bowling and pool, with intramural points being given the winner of the bowling tourney. A number of entrants from campus organizations have been recorded and keen competition between them and the dormitories is expected. No charge is being made for either entrance in the meet or for playing.

Winners of the dormitory contests will compete with the winners in the fraternity group for the campus title. Any team entering as many as three men will receive twenty-five points. Individual play will take place in the pool and ping-pong competition, with points toward the individual intramural cup which is awarded the highest scorer in all intramural contests.

son 2; second round, Napoleon 3, Levinson 2; third round, Levinson 3, Napoleon 2. This gave the bout to the Penn State boxer with a margin of one point. It was a close fight, and Napoleon won on his speed.

Platt Landis won his fifth straight fight Saturday against a man who outweighed him by about thirty pounds. Popeye had to go more than one round for the first time in his last three bouts and he had to win on boxing and not fighting. Platt said he clipped his man with two terrific blows in the first round which didn't even phase him so he decided he'd better try to box and keep from falling himself. He said that guy could certainly take'em. Sam Giddins and Tom Parsons both looked good and the majority of the Carolina squad felt that Sam deserved a win and Parsons a draw at least. This is not printed in the form of a protest but merely to point out that the fights were not one-sided. The Tar Heels made a good enough showing to be extended an invitation to the National Intercollegiate boxing tournament in March.

Dennis Fox is leading the way in the individual high scoring race among intramural basketballers. Fox plays with Old East and his club has finished its season undefeated. He has averaged seventeen points a game of the Old East team as a unit for the season while the average has been a little over fifty-seven a game in eight starts. Three teams are still unbeaten in both loops, Old East, Best House, and Swain Hall in the dormitory league and Chi Psi, T. E. P. and S. A. E. in the fraternity loop. S. A. E. meets Chi Psi this afternoon in the headliner and T. E. P. may be stopped by Kappa Alpha which would settle the fraternity question. Ed Everette, K. A. star, was running well for individual scoring honors of the fraternity league until his last game last week. Ed had a little trouble finding the right basket that day; he said he was shooting at three or four. There ought to be some good basketball on the mural card today; come down and see what Herman Schnell has arranged. The whole thing was in the bag.

KENTUCKY BEATS CRIMSON TO TAKE SOUTHEAST LEAD

Wildcats Rule as Heavy Favorites to Win Tourney at Atlanta After Victory Over Tide.

Kentucky's Wildcats ran their string of victories to seven as they turned back Alabama's Crimson Tide 35-31 in Birmingham Monday night. This win gives the mountaineers the undisputed claim to the throne of the southeastern conference basketball throne.

Alabama shot its bolt in its "big push." The Crimson would have tied the Wildcats for the top of the conference court standings if they had triumphed. The rangy and equally rugged Kentucky Colonels proved their superiority over the Alabama boys before a partisan crowd of Alabama supporters and appear to have the inside track as a heavy favorite in the Atlanta tourney.

Kentucky recently licked the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets 45-22, but the game had more thrills than the uneven score indicates. The Kentucky quint played on even terms with the Engineers more than half of the first period and part of the second quarter, but Forest Sale, all-southern center last year, led the way to a brilliant attack which blasted aside the conference hopes of the Atlanta team.

Alabama had a hard night last Saturday and this could be attributed as one of the causes for its recent downfall. In their big week-end contest the Crimson found the Mississippi State College game hard sledding and trailed all the way until the waning minutes of play when Alabama put on a sensational rally to cop the game, 38-36.

He listed two other effects. The new rules make possession of the ball more valuable and strengthen the defense. The out-of-bounds rule improves punting and virtually eliminates the danger of slicing kicks outside with no gain.

Reduce Injury

Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt, president of the national football association, says the main duty of the sideline rule was to reduce hazards of injury. The new rule will reduce lots of tackling out of bounds.

Clipper Smith of State didn't think the old clipping penalty of twenty-five yards was enforced as it should have been and that the new penalty of fifteen will be better. Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech hopes the new sideline penalty will bring more strategy and thrills. Alexander says a quarterback would be able to run back into the end zones without danger of being caught close to the sidelines. The rule will speed up the game since the useless sideline buck is out.

Biff Jones of Louisiana, on the other hand, isn't so sure the sideline rule will help the game any. He fears it lowers the value of both strategy and kicking ability.

Comprehensive Exams

Senior comprehensives will be given Saturday morning at 9:00 o'clock in rooms assigned by respective departmental heads. Comprehensive examinations are in order once every quarter and must be passed by seniors before graduation.

Commerce Freshmen

Dean D. D. Carroll of the school of commerce will meet with the commerce freshmen this morning at assembly period in room 113 Bingham hall.

ARTIST LECTURES ON ETCHING AND ENGRAVING HERE

John Taylor Arms Completes Engraving Process to Illustrate Talk Tuesday.

John Taylor Arms, prominent American etcher, presented a comprehensive lecture Tuesday night in Hill Music auditorium on "The Making of an Etching." The program was brought here by Mrs. Katherine Pendleton Arrington of Warrenton.

Arms, who is the president of the Society of American Etchers, formed the complete process of making an etching. He drew his work on a copper plate and printed the piece for his audience. Arms was forced to work hurriedly in order to complete his work, since the ordinary time employed in etching-making by great artists is often several weeks. His finished product, however, was a beautiful creation of three hours' work and was enthusiastically applauded at the conclusion of the program.

The noted etcher was able to give a brief description of the different kinds of engraving during a slight intermission in the process. He explained the various differences between regular linear etchings, dry points, mezzotints, and aquatints, and displayed examples of each type of art.

Dr. J. P. Harland of the archaeology department introduced the lecturer.

Last year the conference took place at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida. Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida, and Virginia are states in the third district.

DI APPROVES LOW RENT TO ASSIST SELF-HELP

A bill stipulating that Graham dormitory should be rented to self-help students at reduced rates until such a time when the University shall need it for tenants paying the regular rates was overwhelmingly passed by the Dialectic Senate Tuesday night.

Three amendments to the constitution proposed at a previous meeting were not voted on because of absence of the proposer. Action on the pending bills will be taken next week.

CHIH MENG WILL LEAD DISCUSSIONS HERE NEXT WEEK

Prominent Chinese Will Offer
Series of Lectures on Sino-Japanese Problems.

Dr. Chih Meng, associate director of the China Institute in America, who will conduct a series of lectures and forum discussions on Sino-Japanese problems at the University beginning February 21, is recognized as one of the leading present-day authorities on Chinese problems.

Dr. Meng is being brought to the University by the local Y. M. C. A. through the China Institute, the purpose of which is to promote educational and cultural relations between China and the United States.

The Meng family came originally from Shantung, the birthplace of Meng-Tze (Mencius), 372-289 B.C., the foremost of China's political philosophers. Dr. Meng's grandfather and father were government officials, and their positions took them to Manchuria, where he lived for a number of years.

Visited Student Centers

When the Nationalist party unified the country in 1927, Meng travelled extensively in China, visiting the different student centers and making first-hand study of the social conditions. In 1928 he was invited by the student federations of Europe to visit the different student centers and lecture on the conditions in China and the aspirations of the Nationalist movement.

Meng is author of the book China Speaks on the Conflict Between China and Japan, which was published by the MacMillan company in April 1932. Meng has lectured extensively in this country, recent lectures having been given at the Institute of Politics, Williamstown, Massachusetts, and at meetings of the Foreign Policy Association.

Dr. Chase Has Had Wide Experience As President Of Three Universities

Former Head of University Knows Private New England School, Small Specialized Institution, Southern, Mid-Western,
And Now Metropolitan University.

In his twenty busy years of largely of native North Carolinians, a group whose problems and concepts were in the main shaped by the dominant industry of the state, agriculture. In 1930 he accepted the offer of the president of the University of Illinois. At this school he experienced another change in educational atmosphere. Ninety per cent of the Illinois students were from urban homes, and forty per cent were from outside the state. Dr. Chase has stated that he considered the school equipped with conditions most favorable to the development of the American state university.

Dr. Chase may be said to have been associated in his career with virtually all the varied extant types of higher educational organizations. Obtaining his A.B. degree at Dartmouth, he was there acquainted with the personality of an aristocratic private New England school. Clark University, where he secured his doctorate, has long been an example of the small institution which thrives on specialization.

Southern Tradition Here

While in Chapel Hill, as professor and president, Dr. Chase encountered the southern educational tradition, vastly different in method and approach from the systems to which he had been previously exposed. During his term of chief executive, the student body was comprised

MISS CHAPPELL WILL LEAD OPEN FORUM TONIGHT

Well-Known Student of Industrial Struggles to Speak on
"Breaking Breadlines."

Dr. Winifred L. Chappell, secretary of the Methodist federation for social service, who has been an investigator of many of the most important industrial struggles in the United States, will speak here tonight on the sixth Open Forum discussion. Her topic is "Breaking the Breadlines." Miss Chappell has become well known as co-editor with Professor Harry F. Ward of the Social Service Bulletin.

Prior to 1922, Miss Chappell was an instructor of social science at the Chicago Training School for Missions. In this work she made a close study of the effect of industrial conditions upon the social, moral, and religious life of the skilled and unskilled workers of Chicago. For some time she was chairman of the Labor Committee of the Woman Church Federation of Chicago. In 1926 she made a study of the historical strike of the Passaic textile workers for the Christian Century. Later she made a detailed study of the New York garment industry for the World Tomorrow.

Long Experience as Speaker

Miss Chappell has had a long and varied experience on the speaking platform and with forum groups. She has written for many church and lay publications, contributed a chapter to a book for church youth, Social Adventure, and edited An American Pilgrimage, excerpts of letters written by Grace Scribner.

Miss Chappell's participation in the lecture series here will bring to the discussion the informed attitude of an alert, sympathetic woman who has seen much of the injustice of irregular American industry and has devoted her life to the fight for justice in the economic field, as well as the political field.

Dr. Stanbury Will Preach Here Sunday

Dr. W. A. Stanbury, pastor of the Duke Memorial Methodist church in Durham and former pastor of the Methodist church in Chapel Hill, will preach in Chapel Hill Sunday morning.

Dr. Stanbury teaches a course on "Worship" in the Duke School of Religion, has been one of the leading ministers in the North Carolina conference of the Methodist church, and is president of the board of Christian education in the North Carolina conference and therefore has a particular interest in the work of the church among the students at Chapel Hill.

PRESIDENT-ELECT ESCAPES FIRE OF WOULD-BE KILLER

Four Members of Roosevelt's Party at City Reception in Miami Wounded.

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt was fired at five times shortly after 10:30 o'clock last night by a political fanatic while speaking at a city reception for him in Bay Front Park in Miami, Florida. None of the shots wounded him, but Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, in Roosevelt's car, was reported to be seriously injured by the shots which took effect in his back.

The president-elect was perfectly composed after the firing, waving his hand at the crowd of twenty-five thousand who had gathered for the city's welcome for him.

Others Injured

Mrs. Cermak, William Sinit of the state department, and Mayor R. B. Gautier of Miami were also injured by the shots.

This is said to be the first attempt on the life of a president-elect in the history of the nation.

The would-be assassin was arrested immediately after the shooting and is now held in the Dade county jail.

With the report of the shooting came the announcement that Roosevelt's northern trip has been indefinitely postponed.

ORGANISTS WILL MEET AT RESORT FOR CONVENTION

Nelson O. Kennedy, University Musician and Dean of Organ Guild, Will Attend.

The North Carolina chapter of the American Guild of organists will meet in Pinehurst Saturday afternoon, February 25, in the first mid-winter convention of the organization.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, University instructor in music and dean of the North Carolina guild, will attend as representative from this section.

The meet has been arranged by Frederick S. Smith, sub-dean of the guild, in an attempt to establish a precedent of two meetings each year.

The guild convened in Chapel Hill last spring and will meet here again in March. In connection with this year's meet the group will sponsor a contest for student organists of the state.

An organ recital, arranged in connection with the Pinehurst meet, will be presented by Professor Leslie P. Spelman, director of music at Meredith College. Dr. H. Augustine Smith of Boston University will address the convention.

The purpose of the mid-winter convention is to emphasize social activities in the association of American organists. Delegates are expected from all over the state.

Buccaneer Staff to Meet

The business staff of the Carolina Buccaneer will convene this evening at 7:00 o'clock in the offices of the publication.

Members of the business and editorial staffs of the Buccaneer who have not paid banquet fees are expected to do so at once.

Wiping the Slate Clean

Of Political Feelings

In the hope that a change can be effected next year, if not this, in the method of electing student editors here, the DAILY TAR HEEL is continuing the campaign to place power of election in the hands of staff members rather than the student body. Although members of the Student Activities Committee voted against making this change this year, the majority of those opposing the plan expressed themselves as being heartily in favor of beginning it in 1934.

The matter of making this change has been discussed pro and con for the last month or more. In the majority of cases, though, the discussions have been tempered with a fear that the move is being sponsored purely for political reasons. With the change not going into effect until next year, this political fear will be entirely removed. Likewise, all chances of political inclinations entering into the student vote will be avoided by waiting until after the spring elections to hold the campus poll on this proposal. In this way the student body will be given an opportunity to view the question on its own merits, and not as it might have possible connection with any campus political machine.

A professor once made the statement that if this student body was given sufficient time to consider a question, the students would inevitably make the correct choice. Believing, therefore, that the student body will see the fundamental principle involved in this proposed change to be entirely for the interest of the publications, and in turn the student body, the DAILY TAR HEEL is advocating this delay in the campus vote, as well as the delay in establishing of the plan.

More False Economy

Among the current efforts of various governmental forces to shatter the nearly depleted existence of the University is an inquiry into the alleged large number of scholarships and free tuition allotments. Though the investigation is purported to be nothing more than an inquiry it is evident that some effort will be made to prohibit free tuition allowances in one form or another to the 850 students now enjoying this privilege.

With few exceptions the present scholarship system is utilized solely to keep those students in the University who have suffered financial reverses, or whose personal fortunes are not sufficient to permit a university education. In all cases the student must maintain a satisfactorily high academic average to permit his holding a scholarship from one quarter to another.

Scholarships here are no more plentiful than at other state institutions. One division of the Greater University obtains matriculation fees from only twenty-five per cent of the student body. Other institutions have a similarly low percentage of paying students. Many of the latter are undergraduates from other states. Out-of-state fees here have been raised twenty-five dollars within the past year.

The scholarship and free tuition system is not tinged with any vestige of academic charity. Possessors of scholarships contribute much to the scholastic average. They earn free tuition at no small amount of exertion. Any curtailment in the number of scholarships or effort to remove this essential service to state education would be false economy.—D.C.S.

Far Into The Night

The first time I saw the Doctor he was busily engaged in chasing his brown Fedora down East Franklin street. Being in a favored, I soon had retrieved the obstinate head-piece and turned to present it to the owner. The owner happened to be a short, stocky, grey-haired gentleman with pince nez at a rakish angle over his nose. He puffed up and took the hat with a few mumbled thanks . . . but I heard him e'er he had gone many steps: "Hats! Debasers of man's dignity! Offspring of Hades!" and then he did an extraordinary thing. He turned, came back, and suddenly said: "Young man, do you ever wear a hat?"

"I can't remember the last time I wore one," I replied.

"Hey? Excellent! You must come to see me sometime." With that he fumbled in his vest pocket and withdrew a wrinkled card.

"The name is Van Duser," he said, as if fearful of the card's legibility. "I live just over there—" and pointed dangerously near my eye, "in that white house."

I gave him my name and we shook hands rather stiffly. I thanked him for his proffered hospitality and we parted, each with the air of having important things to do.

Two nights later we were seated in his library, conversing like old friends. He was doing most of the talking.

"... but the south is slow to realize the present incongruity of the 'States' Rights' doctrine," he was saying. "But the collectivistic trend in all phases of modern life is overwhelmingly strong."

I agreed.

"Furthermore," he continued, "such consolidation of activities can be effected in no small measure right here in North Carolina. Take the counties for example: one hundred counties! When twenty would be the greatest plenty! But no, the little parasitic county politician has to have his cut of the tax-payers' money—so nothing is done."

The Doctor puffed on his stump of a cigarette vigorously, emitting clouds of smoke, and then snapped it into the fire-place with a snort.

"Now take—" he continued, and then threw one leg over the arm of his chair and pointed a stubby fore-finger at me, "now take this talk of doing away with the Med. school. Instead of looking toward a day of socialized medicine, a day of intensive training for definite positions in a planned society, a day of usefulness and not selfishness, they talk of abolishing the fountain-head of the state's medical services. Reminds me of a brain-teaser I heard once. If you had . . ."

And so far into the night, the Doctor talking while I listened.—V.J.L.

Since the days of Main Street and Babbitt, American and European highbrows have scoffed at our blue sky laws and Boston censorship, have gushed over the freedom of European customs and manners. But the Comstock itch has at last gotten under the skins of European authorities.

In Brussels a propriety crusade has been undertaken by plain clothes men. Their chief scene of operations is in the Antwerp movies. Prowling about in rubber soled shoes, they unexpectedly turn flashlights on unsuspecting couples. The result of such activity has been the arrest of a boy eighteen years old and a girl of fifteen, caught kissing in a cinema. They were both sentenced to a month's imprisonment and a fine of ten dollars. The judge declared the two equally guilty.

Even the gay capital of Hungary has felt the scourge of the moralists. Some of the students suggested that the classical figures from Greek and Roman mythology be brought up to date in modern bathing suits.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

Here and the Hereafter

In a pre-convalescent mood somewhat comparable to Mood Indigo in these parts where flu is as prevalent as Orange county corn and death seems preferable to life and suffering (199,999 sheep had already followed the leader through the mental maze), I deemed it time to shuffle off this mortal coil.

Now, as every good cosmographer knows, before the fall of the angels there was Heaven and Chaos, which was sufficient unto the day. But after Beelzebub led the embattled seraphim to war, dreadful dead, Hell was created in the lower regions of Chaos. And that was well for angels, though fallen, still had need of a dwelling-place. Then the World came into being and was suspended by a golden chain from the floor of Heaven and beneath it was Chaos and beneath Chaos was Hell.

All unmindful of Man's first disobedience, and the fruit of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste brought death into the world, I set out, a Pilgrim with lofty ambitions and undaunted courage, bound for the Promised Land.

Little did I realize that I should carry with me as a letter of introduction my reputation. Of course I had always smiled behind my mask when accused on the Earth of being a bum typist, a mere nobody, and only a woman; but I had always thought that I couldn't be altogether bad since young children and dogs seem naturally to like me. So with a high heart and a giddy head I set off in the direction of the primum mobile.

I was a stranger in a strange land. There was no one to show me the way. These were not my people. These were not dwellers in mountain heights where Freedom unfurled her banners to the air. These were Low Country dwellers. They understood not my language and cast slanting glances at my clothes. These people occupied themselves during all their waking hours with a past-time unknown in the Hill Country. With pieces of colored chalk they marked on blackboards set up all about the countryside as signboards decorate the landscape in my native land. Curious was I to know what could arouse in these people so much zeal, what could instill into their hearts so much ardor, how they could find the energy required to work so steadily at their arduous labors. Through an interpreter I learned that the task in which they were so busily engaged was drawing lines of demarcation between Right and Wrong.

Leaving them to settle the affairs of the world, I continued on my weary way. My strength was fast waning and my eyes were growing dim. The shades of night were falling fast when in the umbrageous distance I beheld the bulk of a massive gate. Thankfully I crept up and tapped discreetly on the Pearly Gate and made ready to bow low before Saint Peter. The gate was suddenly opened by two twin shadowy figures, unrecognizable at first; but as the image grew clearer I realized that they were Sin and Death. Slowly the truth dawned upon me. I, having had my fate decided for me by the Low Country dwellers, had asked admittance at Hell-gate and my request had been granted, for there before me stretched the Frozen Continent inside which circled the River Lethe (sweet forgetfulness). Beyond its dark and sluggish waters stretched the Parched Desert. In the center was a burning, steaming Lake of Fire which fed the rivers Phlegethen, Archeron, Cocytus, and Styx. There's no reopening a slammed door. Let Pandemonium reign!

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

In Defense of The Supreme Court

In the Saturday issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL appeared an editorial criticizing the recent decisions of the North Carolina Supreme Court which declared unconstitutional the state's four-year-old law for the sterilization of individuals unfit to bring children into the world. It is regrettable that the author of that editorial did not see fit to utilize reliable sources of information before entering upon a subject with which he is obviously unfamiliar, for his entire argument is founded on a gross misconception of the court's holding. He says in part: "If it is the just right of diseased or mentally feeble persons to bring into the world others like themselves, then the court is correct . . . If

Wooden soldiers in the war against decay

To conquer the forces of decay which attack telephone poles, scientists of Bell Telephone Laboratories carry on a relentless campaign.

They study many kinds of wood, test many preservatives. They isolate wood destroying fungi and insects—study them in the laboratory—search for a practical means of combating their attack. They have set out armies of stub poles in Mississippi, Colorado and New Jersey where altitude, climate and soil vary widely. At regular intervals they inspect these poles to learn which woods and preservatives are best.

Davidson Game Tonight Will End White Phantom's Home Campaign

Fans Anxious to See Promised Combinations of Coach Bo Shepard in Action.

CONTEST SHOULD BE EASY
Davidson Beaten in Early Season Game and Has Won No Big Five Encounters.

Interest in the Carolina-Davidson game tonight centers around the new combinations Coach "Bo" Shepard is scheduled to use in his Phantom lineup. The double-header with Davidson begins at 7:15 o'clock tonight with the Tar Baby-Wild Kitten tussle.

Coach Shepard has been busy this week trying to uncover the lost scoring punch and has been employing many new combinations in his search. He announced yesterday that the regular line-up would start, but indications are that he may change his mind between now and game time.

New Combination Used

Yesterday the coach used numerous forward and guard pairs and practiced work under the basket. He had Hines and Weathers, the old pair together for awhile, then Aitken and Chandler took their places at forward. Brandt and McCachren worked at guard, then Brandt and Weathers, and finally McCachren and Weathers held down the defense posts. Glace and Beale alternated at center.

The game tonight with Davidson closes the Phantom's home season and should see them end their year with a fast victory. Davidson was beaten earlier in the season 56-18 by Carolina and since then the Wildcats have failed to win a Big Five encounter.

Davidson's starting line-up will probably show Harris and Lafferty, forwards; Holland, center; with Peabody and Dickerson, at guards.

The line-up Coach Shepard intended starting when interviewed last night was the regular starting machine of Captain Hines and Weathers, forwards; Brandt, center; and McCachren and Aitken, guards.

TOURNAMENT GETS UNDER WAY HERE THIS AFTERNOON

High School Boxers and Wrestlers to Begin Interscholastic Contests at 3:00 O'clock.

The third annual state interscholastic boxing and wrestling tournaments will get under way this afternoon in the Tin Can. The first-round matches in both tournaments will begin at 3:00 o'clock and the meets will be run off simultaneously through the afternoon.

Wilson high school will defend its state boxing title won here last year and Durham will endeavor to retain state wrestling laurels. Finals in both meets will take place tomorrow night in the Tin Can at 8:00 o'clock.

Champions Entered

A record field of ten schools have sent teams to participate in the championship tournaments. Several of last year's individual champions and a host of undefeated fighters are included on the sports roster. John Andrews, Wilson bantamweight, and Charles Staton, Rocky Mount lightweight, are two boxers who are out to repeat in their quest for state honors. New Athletic Building for High Point College Will Be Dedicated This Evening.

Coach C. C. "Chuck" Collins will be the principal speaker tonight at the formal opening of the new athletic gymnasium at High Point College. Numerous dignitaries of the Methodist Protestant church will take part in the exercises.

The erection of this gymnasium was made possible by the state board of federal relief, and the labor used was provided largely as a relief project. Mrs. W. T. Bost will be present as a representative of the state federal relief board.

The athletic feature of the dedication will be a basketball game between the High Point Purple Panthers and the Guilford College Quakers.

FOUR CONFERENCE CHAMPIONS WILL BOX AT VIRGINIA

Individual Champions in 1932 Meet to Compete Next Week in Annual Tournament.

University, Va., Feb. 16.—Four of the men who won individual Southern Conference boxing championships in the 1932 tournament will be competing in the seventh annual tourney at the University of Virginia next Friday and Saturday. But only one will be defending his ring title.

Captain Bobby Goldstein of Virginia, twice featherweight champion, Captain Freddy Lloyd of Duke, bantamweight champion, and Captain Charlie Garner of North Carolina State, welterweight champion, have all moved up into heavier classes this season.

Lewis Reiss, Virginia football captain, who earned the lightweight crown last March, is the only one of the quartette who is to battle in defense of his title.

In the 1932 tournament five of the seven individual titles went to men who represented schools that still retain their membership in the Southern Conference. The fifth man, J. U. Watts of South Carolina, entered professional ranks in order to get money to complete his university education. Watts won lightweight honors.

Champions Have Fallen

Three of these four individual titleholders have already met defeat in dual meets this season. Goldstein was outpointed by Norment Quarles of North Carolina, Garner lost a

INJURY MAY KEEP GIDDINS OUT WHEN TEAM MEETS DUKE

Dislocated Shoulder Resulting From Fall May Necessitate Change in Boxing Line-up.

Possibility that Sam Giddins, flashy 155-pound boxer, would not face Duke Saturday night loomed yesterday, when he suffered a dislocated shoulder while sparring with Frank McIntosh.

Sam shot a left jab, missed, and went to the floor. When he returned to his feet, by-standers noticed that his left shoulder was dislocated. Trainer Chuck Quinlan was called to administer first aid treatment.

An x-ray was to have been taken last night to determine the extent of the injury. Giddins said just before going to the infirmary, that he did not think the injury was serious and that he hoped to fight Saturday.

ENTRY LISTS FOR SPORT TOURNEYS CLOSES TONIGHT

Bowling, Pool, and Ping-Pong Players Urged to Register Before 6:00 O'clock.

The dead-line for teams to be entered in the bowling, ping-pong, and pool tournaments has been set for 6:00 o'clock this evening, according to Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial. The tournaments will constitute a part of the intramural program. Teams should apply to Albright for entrance by the dead-line today, and no teams may enter after that time.

The bowling alleys will be reserved from 2:00 until 5:00 o'clock every week day and games will be scheduled between these hours. No cost is involved by players entering the tournament. Points for intramural standing will be allowed organizations entering teams in the bowling tournament. Each team participating receives twenty-five points. The winner of each bracket of the tournament will receive forty points; the other finalist, thirty points; the eliminated semi-finalist, twenty points; and the eliminated quarter finalist, ten points. In the fraternity league, the teams eliminated in the preliminaries receive five points. In the Grail scoring toward the individual cup, the men on the winning team will receive five points; and the men on the losing team, one point.

Pool Tournament

Individual elimination rather than team play will be featured in the pool tournament. All entries will be drawn and paired indiscriminately. An entrance fee of twenty cents will cover all games played and the use of the tables during the tournament. Each game is to consist of fifty points of straight pool.

The ping-pong tournament will be conducted at the same time as the bowling tournament and will last for two weeks. Only one table in the game room will be used. Each organization on the campus may enter three men, but there will be no team matches. All play will be individual, and the organization whose entrants get the most points will win the competition. An entrance fee of ten cents will be charged every person entering the tournament.

Ping-Pong Scoring

In the intramural scoring, each man will receive one point for entering his first match; the winner of a match to get two points; and the winners of semi-final and final shall receive three points. Semi-final and final matches will be decided by three out of five sets, while other matches will be decided by two out of three sets.

In addition to intramural points, the individual winner of the ping-pong tournament will have free use of the ping-pong tables for the rest of the quarter, and the runner-up may play free of charge for one week after the tournament closes.

Baseball Batteries Called

Coach Bunn Hearn announced yesterday that he would hold the first baseball workout this afternoon in the Tin Can at 3:00 o'clock. This first call is being issued to varsity and freshman pitchers and catchers only. Coach Hearn stated that the battery practices would be held early every day in order to prevent any conflict with later work-outs.

TAR BABIES MEET KITTENS TONIGHT

Freshman Game at 7:15 O'clock In Tin Can Will Precede Varsity Encounter.

Carolina's Tar Baby basketball team is all set to meet Davidson's yearling team tonight in the Tin Can. The contest, which is a preliminary to the varsity game, is scheduled for 7:15 o'clock.

This contest will be the Tar Babies' fifth Big Five encounter of the year, and the team has a record of two wins and two defeats. The Carolina freshmen still have a chance to end the season in a tie for first place in the Big Five freshman race if they complete their schedule without another loss. The Blue Imps finished the year with four wins out of six and if the Tar Babies beat both Davidson and State in their remaining games they will have the same record.

Davidson Weak This Year

Davidson's first year team hasn't won a contest among Big Five teams this year and will be out to take the freshmen. The Tar Babies showed their worth last Saturday night when they downed the Duke yearlings in a contest which proved to be even more thrilling than the varsity game.

Coach Dameron will probably start the same five that played the whole game against the Blue Imps. Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson, both sharpshooters, will start at the two forwards; Rankin will hold down center; and Captain Jim McCachren and Ray Glasgow will be at the two guards. Strowd Tilley, forward; Bob Guarino, guard; and Willis, center are other yearlings most likely to see action during the contest.

'VIRGINIA' LOSES TO 'VANDERBILT'

Green Wave Scores Two Touchdowns on Muddy Field in Third Intra-Squad Tilt.

Vanderbilt's green wave division of the Carolina football squad counted twice in the second quarter to down the Virginia Orange team 12 to 0 on a mud-soaked field yesterday afternoon. The winners held the upper hand throughout the wet battle, scoring five first downs to the losers' two.

Except for Woollen and Daniel, quarterback and halfback respectively, the Vandy team was made up entirely of freshmen or varsity reserves, who saw little action last year. The youngsters showed that some of them at least would be in the varsity line-up next fall.

"Vandy" Backfield Clicks

The whole backfield combination of Woollen, quarter; Phelps and Daniel, half; and Snyder, full, worked well together. Woollen got off some nice punts and made several long returns of Virginia punts. Phelps and Daniel both hit tackle with gain after gain, Daniel getting loose for forty-five yards on one play. Snyder played a great defensive game until he wrenched his shoulder in the third period. The freshman fullback also netted much yardage on his spectacular head-on drives, and marked up three first downs.

Woollen counted the first touchdown on a neat ten-yard run after taking a twelve-yard pass from Snyder. Phelps indirectly was responsible for the score when he intercepted Virginia's pass on the forty-yard line and ran it back to Virginia's thirty-two. After a successful pass, Snyder made a first down and put the ball in scoring position on a five-yard slash over tackle.

Second Score

The second and last marker came a few minutes later. The Orange took the ball on their own thirty and were forced to kick, Woollen bringing the ball to mid-field. Here Daniel slipped through tackle and dashed forty-five yards to the five-yard line.

S. A. E. AND T. E. P. END SEASON WITH EIGHT WINS EACH

Chi Psi's Suffer Defeat Leaving Two Teams Tied; Will Play Monday for Title.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon defeated Chi Psi, 28-17, yesterday to gain a right to play for the fraternity league championship in the annual intramural cage competition. Tau Epsilon Phi completed its schedule undefeated as a result of yesterday's victory over Kappa Alpha, 24-22, and will meet S. A. E. Monday in the play-off. Chi Psi had also been tied with these two for the leadership, but its defeat left S. A. E. and T. E. P. the only undefeated quintets in the loop with a majority of the teams having wound up their seasons.

The brilliant play of McDonauld, S. A. E. forward who got ten points, was largely responsible for Chi Psi's defeat. Nutt Parsley and Dave Morgan were others on the victorious five who played well, getting five points each. For Chi Psi Bob Atwood and Vinnie Baukney stood out with seven markers each. Phil Lawrence, Chi Psi sharpshooter, went scoreless.

In the first half scoring was even with the quarter ending at 5-5 and the half at 10-10. S. A. E. had run up an 18-13 advantage by the end of the third quarter, however, and was never again in danger although play was fast and furious throughout the last period.

T. E. P. Victorious

Skinner scored fourteen points for Kappa Alpha as his team scared the undefeated T. E. P. team. The Teps finally won, 24-22, and entered the play-off.

ILLUSION: Some member of the audience is politely requested to sit down on a chair. The magician tells him that his coat seems to be bunched up in the back, and offers to correct it. Whereupon he pulls out a big coil of rope.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED . . . IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW!

Let's look at the cigarette advertising trick called "Heat Treatment."

EXPLANATION: All cigarette tobaccos are treated with heat. But it is not from "heat treatment" that a cigarette gets flavor and mildness.

Mildness, flavor, throat-ease—all come from the use of costly, ripe tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Camels have given more people more pleasure than any other cigarette. Smoke Camels, and enjoy the fine delicate flavor of costlier tobaccos.

GEOLOGIST WILL TEACH COURSES ON YEAR'S TOUR

Faculty Member Will Be in Charge of Courses Offered by University Department.

On the third annual tour of the western America to be conducted by the Southern Tours, Inc., June 17-August 7, a member of the faculty of the geology department of the University will accompany the tour as instructor of two courses, introduction to geology and physical geology. College credit, or eight semester hours certification credit to be applied toward renewing or raising teachers' certificates in North Carolina may be secured upon the completion of these courses, conducted under the direction of the University extension division.

The personnel of the touring party will be composed of groups of teachers, college students, and other adult travelers assembled chiefly from North Carolina and the southeastern states. The number will be limited to fifty. The party will assemble the first night at Maiden. The distance to be traveled each day will average about 200 miles.

Some of the most scenic sections in America will be visited, including the Carlsbad caverns; the following national parks: Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Yellowstone, and Hot Springs, Arkansas; Lake Tahoe, the Petrified Forest, and the Painted Desert. Among the important cities where stops will be made are: Nashville, Memphis, Los Angeles, El Paso, Oakland, Reno, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Chicago, Indianapolis, and Knoxville.

N.C. and Duke University on that rain-flooded field several years ago. We remember describing it as an "naval engagement" in the sport pages of this journal and waxing verbose in our allusions to "Branch dove off left tackle and came to the surface swimming a powerful crawl stroke to the forty," etc.

But last Saturday's battle nor the Duke-Carolina water-grid-polo match of yester year were a drop in the bucket to a game we once covered in 1929 for a local daily. It was one of those biff and bang professional games, where the center runs down the field smoking a fat cigar on the kickoff, and the quarterback bolsters his courage with a shot of drinkin' likker at half time. The game was played on an erstwhile baseball diamond, the outfield bordering on a canal. One sideline ran within a few scant yards of the canal bank.

It was getting dark, and the home team was a point or two behind. The quarterback coughed forth his signals, calling for a sweeping end run. He whirled the ball to a colleague who dashed wildly for the sideline bordering the canal bank.

The opposing end charged in fast and dove for the frantic runner. His hands grasped thin air, for the runner had leaped into the canal and was swimming rapidly toward the goal, pushing the pigskin on the surface before him. Without ado the defensive team leaped in the water; after them came the offense. The players, if we remember correctly, were soon joined by the more avidly partisan of the spectators.

It took the local fire department all night to fish the players out of the water.

So what is a little rain, rain, rain.

Speaking Campus Mind

it is the right of these unfortunates to carry on their afflicted lineage forever... then there are those who will take issue with this conception of liberty and declare that it has passed from its bounds and has become a dangerous license."

Herein lies the fallacy of such an argument: the Supreme Court, contrary to the assumption on which the editorial apparently was based, did not hold that it was unconstitutional for the Legislature to enact a law providing for the salpingectomy and vasectomy of the individuals at which the former law was aimed. The court did not go to the absurd extreme of declaring that these undesirables could not be deprived of their liberty. Indeed, all legislation in some way deprives persons of their life, liberty, or property. The court did hold, however, that these individuals could not be deprived of their liberty except by due process of law. As construed by the United States Supreme Court, whose construction as to the "due process clause" in the federal constitution is binding upon all state courts, due process of law insures that the citizen shall have at least a notice and an opportunity to be heard before he will be deprived of his life, liberty, or property. The North Carolina sterilization law did not provide for this notice and opportunity to be heard. Due process of law was consequently lacking. The rule is founded on fairness and justice. Without an opportunity to be heard, the law endangers the liberty of individuals to whom the law does not, and was not intended to apply.

It will perhaps be a source of some satisfaction to the author of the editorial to know that our legislature can easily eradicate the defect which compelled our court to declare the law invalid, and re-enact a most valuable and progressive measure. Not only has the sterilization law been upheld in other states, but it has received the approval of the United States Supreme Court. But in each case the law provided notice and an opportunity to be heard. The decision of our courts has not yet been published, but it is safe to conjecture that the court expressed reluctance in being compelled to hold the law invalid.

That the decision was not a surprise to those at all familiar with the fundamentals of constitutional law is somewhat affirmed by the fact that some time ago in the North Carolina Law Review an authority on the subject predicted the recent declaration of unconstitutionality. —F.P.S.

"Ready for The River"

A pedagogue friend of mine once said to me, "If we knew what our students really think of us, we'd go out and drown ourselves!" Which reminds me that the grid-iron number of Carolina Magazine is out. One hasty glance at the sketches and caricatures in it, and several luckless schoolbuds are no doubt "ready for the river;" others, more graciously handled by some booting student fan, have probably had to put their hats into the stretcher.

I pass up these complimentary write-ups—orchids to those that have done the scholastic clog-dance well! More diverting are the broad-line literary cartoons of well-known faculty luminaries. Here with a splendid disdain for campus myth and the high and mighty, the student writers in reckless Havelockian mood have kicked the stool from under many an august figure, leaving the victim ridiculous but unable to retaliate. The

TWO DANCES ARE SCHEDULED HERE

Law School and Medical Society Will Have Dances Friday And Saturday Nights.

Two dances by the law school and the University medical society are on the dance schedule for the week-end. The law dance is announced for Friday night and the medical society dance is scheduled for Saturday night. Both affairs will take place in Bynum gymnasium. Jelly Leftwich will provide the music.

Bids from both dance groups have been extended from one to the other in a reciprocal arrangement which will allow members of either group to attend both dances. Each medical student has in addition received an extra bid to the medical society dance Saturday.

Dance Leaders

Leaders of the figure at the medical society dance will be Chalmers Carr, president of the society, with Miss Alice Carr of Mooresville. First assistant leader is James Gunter, president of the second year class in the medical school, with Miss Alice Fulton of Walnut Grove. Jake Shuford, president of the first year class, is with Miss Robin Fraley of Statesville.

Official chaperons for the medical society dance are Dean and Mrs. I. H. Manning, Dr. and Mrs. W. deB. MacNider, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Bullitt, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Mangum, and Dr. and Mrs. W. C. George.

Decorations are by Hamilton Hobgood. Foy Franklin, Grady Siske, Bill Withers, and Jake Shuford are assisting officers of the med school in arrangements.

For the winners Jacobs got eight points and Ostrow six to lead their attack.

Manly fell before Aycock, 36-29, in the only dormitory league contest of the day. Sim Efland stood out, scoring sixteen points for Aycock. Tucker added nine to this total. For the losers Kesselman got nine and Anderson eight.

Herbe Newcombe rang up fourteen points on spectacular long shots as Delta Kappa Epsilon bested Beta Theta Pi, 34-31, in a rough contest. Alexander got ten more to bring his season's total to 111 points. For Beta, Tenille and Trainer got eight points each while Barnett accounted for seven. After holding a 10-8 lead at the first quarter, the Dekes ran their lead to 22-8 at the half. In the second half Beta came back strong and was within one point of the lead near the end of the game, only to lose its chance to take the game.

A. T. O. gained its sixth win in a row at the expense of Sigma Nu, 26-17. Pollard and Menge scored eight points each for the winners, while Griffith's nine points were the best on the losing outfit.

value of this will depend upon the degree to which it makes faculty members heed the admonition of Burns' pediculously-inspired couplet.

Just one thing more. With canine companionship looming so large in these pictures of "puzzling personalities," what about fair play to those of us that do not own a dog? My own mind is made up: before the next faculty number of the magazine, I shall get me a Great Dane!

Lloyd meets his severest test of the winter this week-end when North Carolina's ringmen invade Duke's gymnasium. He'll be up against Captain Martin Levinson of the Tar Heels. This scrap between two of Dixie's best amateur featherweights is the feature bout of a match that will decide the ring championship of North Carolina.

Preliminary bouts of the seventh annual ring tournament sponsored by the conference will begin next Friday afternoon in the Memorial gymnasium here. As has been the custom in past years former champions and outstanding performers in each weight will be seeded.

This makes it possible, unless they are eliminated by dark horses in the early round, for winners and losers in the Lloyd-Levinson, Goldstein-Quarles, and Garner-Sides bouts to meet again in either the semi-final or the final matches here next week.

In the Virginia backfield Shaffer was the only consistent ground gainer, with Jackson, who played a nice defensive game, making a few good runs. Burnett got off several fine punts for the condition of the field and brought one punt back twenty-five yards.

Evins and Hobgood, two freshman tackles showed up well in the winner's line. Gardner of the Orange team however starred in the forward wall during the afternoon, breaking through time after time to throw the Green players for setbacks.

Beer and Wine Bill Re-Refered

The action of the house judiciary committee, number one, in voting a favorable report without any hearings on the Murphy-Bowie bill to allow the sale of beer and light wines in North Carolina in event Congress legalizes the sale of such beverages was overridden by the house at Raleigh yesterday when the bill was sent back to the committee.

Senate to Discuss Dry Law

The senate voted in Washington yesterday to take up for consideration the Blaine resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. The vote which brought up repeal for consideration is the closest approach to a real test of senate wet and dry strength this session, although it was not regarded as an indication of the prospective vote on the submission resolution itself.

of this University, the New York institution and its activities are such that they require great administrative abilities. Unlike North Carolina and Illinois, its student body is extremely heterogeneous, often having been cited as an excellent mirror of the New York melting pot. Founded in 1832 by a council of 169 prominent men among whom was Albert Gallatin, adviser of Thomas Jefferson in the development of the latter's plan for the University of Virginia, the school has continued to grow until it now enrolls approximately 40,000 students, 28,000 of whom are working for degrees. New York University is thus almost twenty times as large as Carolina and over three times the size of Illinois.

N. Y. U. an Education Factory

It appears to function as an educational factory with its twelve story buildings—in the Washington Square center—its continuous classes from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. and its vast extension system, branches of which are located in many neighboring cities.

New York University will have at least one policy familiar to Dr. Chase. As both the state institutions of Illinois and North Carolina consider service to their respective states their highest obligation, New York University has long striven to abide by the injunctions of its founders, "to assist in giving honorable direction to the destinies of the city and nation."

MISS CHAPPELL PREDICTS DOOM OF CAPITALISM

Open Forum Speaker Analyzes Unemployment Situation in Talk Here Last Night.

Miss Winifred Chappell, secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Service, led the Open Forum discussion here last night with her talk on "Breaking the Breadlines." She analyzed the range of unemployment in the United States, using the figures compiled by Business Week, a weekly magazine.

"The adjusted figures," she stated, "show that 15,252,000 men and women out of a gainfully employed population of 48,833,000 or 31.2 percent of the working population are jobless."

Cites Karl Marx

"Economists and business men and common everyday folk have long been familiar with the so-called business cycle with its up-curve of "prosperity" and down-curve of "depression." There is widespread question whether the present depression is just another down swing or whether it spells the final collapse of capitalism, which Karl Marx predicted would come as the result of the inherent contradictions of capitalism. Marx argued that depressions must become deeper, the returns to prosperity briefer, with finally chronic depression, a permanent surplus both of capital and population, a decrease in the rate of profit, the decline of living standards of workers—capitalism finally destroyed by the intensity of its own contradictions."

Shows Russian Contrast

In conclusion Miss Chappell said, "As Stuart Chase has recently pointed out in an article entitled "On the Paradox of Plenty," this is not a paradox at all where capitalism is concerned."

ACTION ON STATE COLLEGE BILL IS HALTED BY GROUP

Checks Consideration of Measure to Prevent Competition of Institutions in Retail Business.

Consideration of the so-called "State College bill" providing for the prohibition of state institutions from competing in retail business was checked yesterday by the House Committee on Propositions and Grievances following a declaration by Dr. E. C. Brooks of State College. Dr. Brooks pointed out that the bill had been drafted by Raleigh merchants without proper consultation with State College officials.

The measure was introduced as a result of dissatisfaction among Raleigh merchants about lower prices at the college on certain dairy, truck, and horticultural products because the license tax on these goods was not paid. The merchants were willing to co-operate with school authorities, but they felt that the widespread gossip in Raleigh concerning the cheapness of goods from State was detrimental to their business. The bill as introduced by Representative Womble applied, however, to all state institutions. As a result of Dr. Brooks' statement, it has been referred to a sub-committee which will undertake to adjust the differences between the college authorities and the Raleigh merchants.

Senate Passes Repeal

Blaine Repeal Bill Will Now Go to House for Passage.

The United States Senate today passed a flat prohibition repeal bill, proposed by Senator Blaine. Speaker John Garner, of the House, immediately made the following statement.

"As perfected by the Senate last night and with the Robinson amendment for the convention method of ratification, the resolution is satisfactory and in conformity with the Democratic platform. It will be brought up under a suspension of the rules in the House tomorrow," he said at his daily press conference yesterday.

Meanwhile, the House granted legislative right of way to the Celler bill, meaning that it will likely be brought up next week. The bill provides that the justice department would have the power to issue regulations restricting medical prescriptions of whiskey.

If the House passes the repeal bill, it will then be sent to the states to be passed by three-fourths of the forty-eight.

Freshmen Meet Today

The assembly period this morning will be given over to the freshman class meeting, which will be conducted by President Frank Rogers. This will be the first meeting of the entire class since the election of class officers early in the fall quarter.

STUDENTS INVITED TO HEAR LECTURE

Student Body Will Be Allowed to Hear Odum Lecture on "Social Trends" Monday.

Officials of the Y. M. C. A. decided yesterday that the importance of Dr. Howard Washington Odum's address on "Recent Social Trends" warrants attendance of the whole student body. The address, formerly planned to be delivered to members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, will be offered in Gerrard hall, Monday night, at 7:00 o'clock. All students are invited to attend.

The address comes as a result of three weeks' study by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets of a report issued by President Hoover's committee to study social trends. Odum was associate director of the committee, which studied social life in the United States for three years in an effort to supply information to assist in future development of the nation. The report reflects collective judgment of the material and sets forth matters of individual opinion as well as of scientific determination. A brief survey of the report, which was printed in two volumes and comprises 1,600 pages, was published by the New York Times. Copies of the newspaper report were distributed to the cabinet members for study.

Dr. H. D. Meyer, also of the sociology department, gave a lecture to the freshman friendship council last week preliminary to Odum's program Monday. The other councils have also made a study of the report.

Opera Star Gives Glimpses of Charm Which Made Him Popular Baritone.

By Vermont C. Royster

"The enthusiasm with which the Emperor Jones has been received, both by the critics and the opera goers," indicates the profound impression it is making upon the opera world," remarked Lawrence Tibbett, America's outstanding contribution to operatic roles, late Wednesday night at his room in a Raleigh hotel.

A few moments before he had been forcefully whisked away from a mob of autograph seekers who had clambered upon the stage and surrounded him following his concert at the Raleigh Memorial Auditorium. Somewhat bewildered, as he himself admitted, by the rush of curiosity hunters who greeted him at every turn he had been carried bodily through the hotel lobby to his room.

Dressed now in a dark suit for traveling, he talked quietly and affably as he snatched a bite to eat before catching his midnight train. "The combination of Gruenberg and O'Neil have made quite a stir in New York, he continued. "People today have become tired of the old diet. They want an opera with a plausible story and good music combined, not merely one filled with pretty tunes."

New Opera Great Step

The Emperor Jones of Gruenberg and O'Neil has, Mr. Tibbett feels, been a decided step in a new direction. He feels that the weakness of the opera, even those of Verdi and Gounod, is that the opera has been too lacking in dramatic appeal.

He seems to think that opera is dangerously on the decline. Speaking on the subject Wednesday afternoon following his practice hour, he said that the effort to rejuvenate the Metropolitan opera company would meet with difficulty unless something were done to popularize opera again.

Tibbett Is Popularizing

"Popularizing" is the reason I'm on tour now," he said with a smile that was almost a grin. He was wearing the resemblance of a dressing gown, and his hair was tangled in a typical "Rogue Song" fashion. His exuberant friendliness and apparent desire to please put the

GRANT TO SPEAK ON SEA AIRWAYS IN LECTURE HERE

Noted Meteorologist of British Admiralty to Tell of Sea-dromes and Ocean Line.

Captain Hugh Duncan Grant, superintendent of the meteorological department of the British navy in the Great War, will lecture in Gerrard hall Monday night at 8:30 o'clock on "Wings, Weather, and Seadromes." Captain Grant is appearing here under the auspices of the public lectures committee of the University faculty.

Captain Grant is a meteorologist of great note, having served as the British admiralty meteorologist during the historic naval raids on Zeebrugge and Ostend. He was the British delegate to the International Meteorological conference held in Paris, 1919-1920, and was subsequently appointed a member of the International Maritime Meteorological commission.

With Seadrome Concern

Grant is now in America as consultant to the Armstrong Seadromes Ocean Airways Company, a company undertaking the feat of planting a series of floating steel islands approximately 350 miles apart in line across the Atlantic from New York to Europe for the commercialization of trans-oceanic airplane traffic. These floating airports with their six acres of landing deck will serve as filling stations and safety harbors for Atlantic flyers and will make possible the operation of a twenty-four to thirty-six hour

NEGRO GLEE CLUB APPEARS TONIGHT

Lincoln University Singers Present
Second Program of Year
In Memorial Hall at 8:30.

The men's glee club of the musical group of Lincoln Negro University, Chester county, Pennsylvania, will present its second concert of the year here tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Tonight's concert has been arranged since poor weather conditions caused many to miss last Friday's appearance of the group.

This organization is considered by critics one of the best Negro choral groups now appearing in concert. The chorus has recently completed a successful tour of New England and is now presenting a series of concerts in this section. An audience of 1,500 people attended the concert of the group in Durham last Sunday. The group appeared in Winston-Salem last night and will appear at State College Sunday. Plans of the organization also include concert appearances at the Greensboro branch of the University and at Bennett College in Greensboro. They will sing Monday evening at the women's auditorium at Duke University.

The program tonight will differ from the one of last week's concert, and will feature several compositions by James E. Dorsey, conductor of the group and well-known composer of Negro spirituals.

There will be no admission charge for the performance tonight, but a collection will be taken.

Roosevelt Goes Home

President-elect Entrains After Visit To Wounded.

President-elect Roosevelt left Miami yesterday morning by train for New York, saddened inexpressibly by the shooting of five persons by a gunman who sought his own life.

Traveling away from Miami, the scene of his attempted assassination, President-elect Roosevelt sent the following message, which he had promised, to President Hoover about the condition of the victims who got the shots intruded for him:

"Have just visited hospital and seen patients. The mayor had a fair night as did Mrs. Gill. The other three are on the rapid road to recovery."

According to the secret service men who quizzed Zangara, his story runs as follows: he told them that he had intended to kill President Hoover, but when he read that Roosevelt was coming to Miami he decided to give attention to him. He stated further that he liked Roosevelt personally but he hated presidents. Ten years ago, when he was in Italy, he wanted to kill the King of Italy but he never had a chance while in that country.

ing Safety Responsibility.

John Wilkinson and J. M. Baley will represent the University tonight in a debate with the University of Virginia in Richmond on the question, Resolved: That the Safety-Responsibility insurance plan as revised by the American Automobile Association should be adopted throughout the United States.

The University team will uphold the negative side of the debate which will be broadcast over station WRVA in Richmond tonight at 10:30. Both of the University debaters have had wide experience in debating circles here. Williams S. Mundy and Walter Belcher, with David Yentis as alternate, will uphold the affirmative side for the Virginia team.

Argue A. A. A. Plan

The plan advanced by the American Automobile Association provides for universal drivers' licenses and has as its fundamental object the elimination of reckless drivers from the road. A further provision would make it necessary that the driver, upon having a wreck, shall, before being permitted to drive again, furnish proof of his financial responsibility for any future accidents in which he may be involved and satisfy judgments rendered against him.

Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial, has announced that the debate will be received over the radio set there.

Beta Gamma Sigma Awards
Charter to Local Group in

THIRTY - SIXTH CHAPTER

National Officers Will Attend Installation Ceremonies Here
February 20.

Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary commerce fraternity, has granted a charter to a petitioning group in the school of commerce of the University. Installation of this chapter, which will be called Alpha of North Carolina, will take place Monday, February 20, with officers of the national organization present at the ceremony.

Although a number of faculty members of the school of commerce is mostly responsible for the granting of the charter, the members will be composed largely of students. The constitution of the organization provides that not more than one fifteenth of the junior class of the school nor more than one tenth of the senior class may be elected into the fraternity. Membership in any other organization does not exclude anyone from eligibility to membership in this honorary fraternity. To be eligible for membership, candidates must be in the upper one fifth of their class, scholastically.

Endorsed by Association

Beta Gamma Sigma, which has thirty-five chapters in as many well-known colleges and universities throughout the country, has made a prominent place for itself in its field. Being the only organization of its kind bearing the official stamp of approval of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, the fraternity has established chapters in all but ten of the association's forty-six members, which include practically all of the higher ranking

PLAYMAKER WORK HERE IS PRAISED BY CARL CARMER

Assistant Editor of Magazine Declares South Is Rich in Material
For Books and Plays.

"One of the most amazing facts about the southern states, to the initiate, is their heterogeneity," Carl Carmer, assistant editor of Theatre Arts Monthly, says in the February issue of his magazine. "The variety of bloods, of races, of religions, and customs to be found in the south, should provide material for the writer and the student of society for many years to come." And the importance of this material, according to Carmer, is what Professor Frederick H. Koch is instilling into the members of his playwriting classes at the University of North Carolina.

Commenting upon the recently issued fourth volume of Carolina Folk Plays, "Carolina Folk Comedies," edited with an introduction by Professor Koch, Carmer says: "These merry one-acts springing from the soil of the Carolinas are happy evidence that the Carolina Playmakers have lost none of their initial impetus."

Carmer prophesies that some of the one act plays contained in this volume may, even as some of Paul Green's early exercises in the one-act form, later develop into important full-length works.

A Drop in the Budget Bucket

Following a characteristically heated debate, the Dialectic Senate passed a bill in last Tuesday's session calling for Graham building to be set aside by University authorities as a dormitory for the neediest self-help students. The measure suggests that room rents be lowered to a minimum, preferably on a co-operative basis, so that a large number of self-help students may be given cheap, clean, and convenient rooming facilities at the lowest possible cost.

Graham dormitory is unoccupied at present. The increasing number of withdrawals during the last few years have not been outwardly perceptible, but the decrease in the student body and concurrent increased rooming in fraternity houses has necessitated the closing of one dormitory. Since Graham is the most recent addition to the resident rooming section, it was deemed advisable to close this building. It has been empty for some time, with depreciation on the building resulting with the scarcity of its use.

Co-operative rooming has been found highly successful at Columbia University and at several western universities. Students, both men and women, have been able to obtain first class room and board for as little as fifteen dollars a month. In many cases the residents share the janitorial work, thus cutting the operating costs appreciably. Power and light are supplied at cost by the university power plant.

This proposal to convert Graham building into a low-cost dormitory for self-help students seems plausible if some standard can be set to determine who are the most deserving. At present the University loan fund gives money for rooming purposes which might easily be diverted into a project of this kind.

Though there may be many disadvantages in this plan, it is undeniable that the immediate utilization of Graham dormitory would be beneficial to eighty or one hundred needy students. Among our present sacrifices, if such may be termed a sacrifice, this plan would be a small drop in the bucket of budget balancing.—D.C.S.

Taking the "Outs"

With a Barrel of Brine

On the surface, at least, evidence of genuine concern for the nation's welfare may be seen in the recent willingness of our statesmen of both parties to accept—and even to seek out—advice from non-partisan and bi-partisan authorities. President Hoover has had two prominent Democrats for his counsellors: Bernard Baruch and Norman Davis. President-elect Roosevelt numbers several Progressive Republicans and research men, headed by Raymond Moley, among his advisers.

On the other hand, this policy is, no doubt, prompted as much by desperation as by any other motive. Perhaps, this willingness to receive counsel from any and all quarters is just another symptom of hardening of the arteries which has of recent years afflicted both the Republicans and Democrats and has thrown them into each other's arms. It is not long since that both parties began feeding out of the same trough generously filled by Big Business. And both of them well know the hand that feeds them.

Since the tariff issue has been abandoned as the last important point of difference between the two parties, they have come practically to stand for the same principles. There were no basic distinctions between the Republican and Democratic platforms in the last campaign. They sang the same tune with different words. If there existed any fundamental difference between the policies of the two parties, they could not now so readily accept advice from members of opposing factions. If the parties stand individually for distinct principles, their divergencies should not be reconcilable.

President Hoover announced in his Lincoln Day address that the Republicans would aid the incoming Democratic administration in any "constructive" measures that it undertakes. The quotation marks around "constructive" are intended to imply that his statement should not be bolted without first being well salted. To the "outs," constructive measures are those which will not damage their own cause or materially advance the fortunes of the "ins" before the time of next election.

The parties have identical principles. Their game is one of politics to get into and hold office. Already, the Republicans are mobilizing their forces for 1936. Meanwhile, the Democrats will always count to ten and look to the next election before making any move during the next four years.—E.C.D.

The Bombshell

Bursts at Last

The unrest which has been noticeable in the United States for more than a year has at last come to a head. In Miami Franklin D. Roosevelt, President-elect, was shot at and four other members of his party were wounded, one, Mayor Cermak of Chicago, rather seriously. Everyone has observed the existing spirit of disquietude which has been prevalent since the beginning of the depression, but very few have even thought that this flare-up would result.

The man who attempted the assassination said, "I kill presidents, kill all officers." He seemed to be a foreigner and was supposedly a gangster. The newspapers have long been crying that something must be done to rid the country of the gangster, the racketeer, and the other exponents of organized vice; the average citizen has been doing his usual talking and doing nothing, but the racketeer still exists. Now with this shooting comes an even greater opportunity for talking, but what is really needed is a pragmatic idea for the extermination of the gangster and hoodlum.

Everywhere in the world riots have been going on. England has had trouble with the unemployed at home and with Mahatma Gandhi in India; a president of France was recently assassinated; Germany has been having trouble with communistic factions, and Japan has been trying to take Manchuria from the Chinese. All the while the United States has been sitting back complacently little thinking that we could have any similar trouble. We have been thinking down in our hearts underneath the layer of talk that the country is too democratic ever to be bothered with the same thing that is happening in other countries, but now that we realize that there is something pending which may have even worse consequences than the Roosevelt shooting we should do more than sit around with our old attitude.

It is time that the people of the United States were realizing that the country is not immune from the same things that disturb the peace abroad. The populace should realize that it is they who support the gangster and crook and should make attempts to rid themselves of this evil. The people also have some animosity toward the government because they suppose it to be somewhat the cause of the depression. The people brought the depression upon themselves, and it is they who should do something about it by cooperating with the government in helping to alleviate the conditions existing in the country that brought about this outrage against the country's officials.—F.P.G.

No Time for Hysteria

"No more money in the bank" is a song with genuine meaning to many University students today. Disheartening indeed is the realization that money which has been saved to pay for school expenses can be tied up indefinitely through no fault of the individual depositor. We realize that this is no time for us to wax optimistic. We do feel, however, that hysteria or despair will help matters not at all.

A number of students, no doubt, find themselves financially embarrassed. Several will be tempted to drop out of school before the year is over. Some may be forced to discontinue their education temporarily. Before such a step is taken, however, we think that the individual should consult with members of the administration. We have no illusions about the omnipotence of the Deans, but we are certain that if any way out is to be found they can help find that way.—Tennessee Orange and White.

Autopsy

5-YEAR UNIVERSITY PLAN

Impoverished Russia took a look at herself and decided that housecleaning needed to be done; there is no reason why the University, with its frayed cuffs and shabby silk hat, should not do likewise.

Leaving the problem of financial improvement to brains better fitted to cope with it than mine, I proceed directly to:

First: I suggest that all factors producing discourtesy—and sometimes downright rudeness—be eliminated from our cultured institute.

Heading this list comes the greater part of the building department employees; these overgrown boys who burst into your room late at night to "see if everything is all right," these paunchy men who enter without knocking by means of a pass key and tell you to keep your shoes off the floor lest they be "swept out," these men who paint your floor and sleep on your bed in their greasy overalls when you leave during the holidays.

I suggest that they be gradually replaced by men who can perform their tasks as efficiently without being so brusque or otherwise obnoxious. Unemployed alumni may be the solution.

I suggest that Tin Can registration be abolished; I suggest that the pool room in Graham Memorial be conducted like any decent similar establishment, in which one is never annoyed by some person walking up to the table, disarranging the balls, and telling you that he has hired the table for the next half-hour—beginning immediately! I suggest that the guardians of South building be taught to smile while engaging in their daily chores.

Second: I suggest that the ballyhoo pertaining to the unusual heights of liberalism and culture prevalent at the University be toned down somewhat before outsiders begin to suspect that there is too much smoke coming from such a small fire.

Third: I suggest that the University be rid of all radicals—of whatever markings, genre, or sex. All persons who have as their creed "whatever is, is wrong" should be dismissed from the University and given 24 hours to leave the village. Penalty for disobedience: immediate and violent death.

The list of radicals would include, of course: those who wish to change from the quarter to the semester term, those who would change the school song, and those who would "improve" on the honor system by installing monitors in classrooms.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

If reports be true, a challenge has been flung to the liberal element of North Carolina's educational progress. Some of the Negro leaders of the state have asked that members of their race be admitted to the University law school. They request that the advancement of their people not be hindered by narrow lines of social prejudice and that they be helped to increase the sum total of happiness among our citizens regardless of color and status. Announcing their purpose to carry the fight, if necessary, to the highest court in the land, they are preparing for a struggle to take legally that which is morally theirs but which, perhaps, may not be freely given them.

At the close of the Civil War, the Negro race was given citizenship and the franchise. Since then, they have risen to such a position in politics that a recent appointment to the supreme court of the United States failed of confirmation because of their objection to the appointee's class discrimination. They have elected to the national house of representatives a man who compares equally with some of his colleagues and favorably with all. In the dawn of their freedom there rose a figure among them who is recognized as one of the greatest and most practical teachers in the history of education, the founder of Tuskegee Institute and an early initiator of live-at-home methods, one who contributed as much to the happiness of whites as to blacks. Roland Hayes, born a slave, interprets through song the emotions of his people in a way that has not been surpassed by any artist for any race. In the field of science there are several Negroes whose contributions are worthy of the world's gratitude, and, typical of scientific zeal, whose names are unknown to the general public. In entertaining the fun-loving mind of the white man, the black man is at his best. Who does not enjoy the Mills brothers and the nimble-footed dancers of the stage and screen? Who does not forget class hatred and prejudice when listening to the radio carousals of a group of Negroes? We even go so far as to lean back and say, "damn! I wish I was a nigger."

The niche they have made for themselves in the few years since the Civil War shows that they have adopted the white man's civilization to a degree that has made them an important cog in the wheel of our national life. It is, to me, conclusive evidence that they have an acquisitive mind and will eventually reach a level of intelligence equal to our own.

If we open the doors of our educational institutions to them and make the path to their goal easier, they will have no cause in future years to look on us nor our children as oppressors and foes to human happiness and advancement. Their right to knowledge is undeniable; the truth which knowledge imparts cannot be disputed. If, then, we apply the adage that "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," is it not reasonable to hope that combined efforts may lead us into new fields of human experience? —C. K. CARMICHAEL.

Tibbett Says That Americans Are Tired Of Old Opera Diet

Interviewer immediately at ease. He was in a rambling mood and it was difficult for the interviewer to keep him long on one subject.

"Excellent," he said in answer to a query concerning the promise of the voice of Wilson Anglin, Winston-Salem youth who won the Atwater-Kent contest. "He was one of the judges, you know, and I think him capable of great things. It will give North Carolina something to be proud of besides agriculture." This state, so he said, can well be proud of its achievements, yet he felt that it should not overlook its spiritual products.

Operas Poorly Filmed

It was not until after the concert that he got around to discussing the possibilities of opera in the talking pictures. When informed that the S. Carlos Opera company's screen presentation of Pagliacci had not been very enthusiastically received in Chapel Hill he laughed. That, he said, was merely a filming of an actual stage performance of the opera. No effort had been made to adapt it in any way to the screen, an omission the results of which were stultifying. He felt that if opera ever proved successful on the screen, it would have to be changed to fit talking picture requirements.

Southerners Not "Highbrow" He was exceedingly pleased by his reception in Raleigh and spoke highly of southern audiences. "Southern audiences seem to catch each little phase and humor of a singer," he said, ushering the interviewer to the door. "Anyway"—he smiled at this—"they're not so highbrow." And as the interviewer closed the door behind him he too smiled.

Revamped Carolina Quint Defeats Davidson, 39-26

New Tar Heel Combination Starts Slowly But Leads 19-9 at Half.

HINES LEADS PHANTOMS

Ross and Peabody Outstanding in Wildcat Attack; McCachren and Aitken Star.

Displaying a rejuvenated starting line-up, North Carolina's basketball team ended the 1933 home campaign last night in the Tin Can with a 39-26 triumph over Davidson.

By virtue of the victory, the Tar Heels mathematically secured second place in Big Five circles. To date Carolina has scored two victories over Wake Forest, and Davidson and one over State while dropping two contests to Duke's state championship quint. Only one more game remains on the Heel schedule—that with State in Raleigh Monday evening.

Phantoms Look Off at Start.
Although Coach Shepard's squad had a 19-9 advantage at the half, the squad looked badly off. The passing was erratic and the shooting, both on free throws and from the field, was of the lowest order. The Phantoms rid themselves of enough bad basketball to last through the conference tourney. It wasn't until the last eight minutes of the first period that the Tar Heels looked like a grade A quintet. In this brief spree the Wildcats were held scoreless while the locals crept away from a 9-9 deadlock to a 19-9 lead.

The Tar Heels didn't break the ice in the second session until Captain Hines found the basket on a long shot after the period had traversed three and a half minutes. This seemed to start Carolina on a scoring spree, for Weathers, McCachren, and Hines scored in rapid succession to bring the score up to 29-9 before Ross counted on Glace's fourth foul with twelve minutes to go.

Late in this period, Ross, sophomore forward for the Wildcats, threw a mild scare into the Tar Heel camp by running wild to score seven points and bring the count to 31-18. But the Tar Heel supremacy was never in doubt and the game ended with

TAR BABIES WIN NINTH GAME OF SEASON BY 53-16

Rankin, Nelson, Moore Lead Scorers; All-Round Play of McCachren Stands Out.

The Tar Baby five ran roughshod over the Davidson frosh last night, 53-16, to score their ninth win of the season.

Led by Bill Rankin at center and Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson at forward, the Tar Babies started slowly but soon began clicking and put on their best performance of the year.

Coach Dameron used his entire second team about half the game and during that time the play was much closer.

At the half-way mark the score stood at 26-8 and the regular Tar Baby five stretched this margin to 47-15 before Coach Dameron ran his second stringers in again in the second half.

Rankin and Nelson led the scoring with fourteen points each while Moore had ten. Burns was high scorer for the Davidson frosh with six, followed by Parker with five points. The all-round play of Jim McCachren coupled with the deadly shooting of Rankin featured the otherwise listless contest.

COLLINS CALLS OFF WINTER PRACTICES

Due to continued bad weather, Coach Chuck Collins announced yesterday that Carolina's winter football practice would be concluded after Saturday afternoon's game between "Georgia Tech" and "Virginia."

"We have been practicing four weeks now," Collins said, "but due to the siege of bad weather, we haven't gotten in two good weeks of work." Present plans are to hold another four weeks practice, probably starting March 27.

BOWLING, POOL, AND PING-PONG TOURNEYS BEGIN

Indoor Intramural Tournaments Draw Many Teams as Entry Lists Close.

With eighteen teams entered in the event at the close of the registration period last night, qualifying rounds of the bowling tournament today will open the way for the intramural indoor sports carnival to be conducted in Graham Memorial game rooms during the next two weeks.

No contests in the ping-pong or pool tourneys have been listed for today though registration for these events was completed last night.

Qualifying Rounds
Each team will bowl a qualifying round before match play begins. High team scores will determine the teams to be matched for competitive play in the elimination matches while those teams with the lowest total scores will not qualify for the next round of play. In the qualifying rounds, as in match play, each man on each team will bowl three games.

The registration list in the bowling event as completed yesterday includes Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, Chi Phi, S. A. E., Sigma Nu, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Delta, Beta Theta Pi, Grimes, Everett, Old East, Lewis, Aycock, Best House, Carr, Mangum, and Manly.

Twenty-one fraternity and dormitory teams have entered the ping-pong tourney in addition to a number of unclassified players. The teams listed are: Phi Delta Theta, Chi Phi, Zeta Psi, Theta Chi, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Chi Psi, Phi Kappa Sigma, S. A. E., Phi Sigma Kappa, Delta Psi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Old East, Everett, Best House, Mangum, Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, A. T. O., and Theta Kappa Nu.

The pool tournament drew approximately fifty participants and close competition is expected in this division of the carnival.

Intramural rules in regard to forfeits will apply to all of these bowling games. A forfeit will be charged to both teams if neither appears on scheduled time unless arrangement has been made with the game room manager before 1:00 p. m. on the day of the scheduled game. Game room managers will decide all controversies and will tabulate the results of the contests. Announcement of the schedules will be made daily.

Today's Schedule

Today's bowling events are as follows:
2:00 p. m.—alley 1, A. T. O.; alley 2, S. A. E.
3:00 p. m.—alley 1, Zeta Psi; alley 2, Phi Gamma Delta.
4:00 p. m.—alley 1, Old East; alley 2, Everett.

CHARLOTTE LEADS HIGH MIT CONTEST

Queen City Has Five Points; Nine Teams Finish Preliminaries Yesterday.

The preliminaries of the state high school boxing tournament were run off yesterday afternoon and the winners will enter the semi-finals which will be held this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The finals are this evening at 8:00.

Charlotte high finished the first day in the lead with 5 points and next highest was Rocky Mount with 3½. Goldsboro and Greensboro tied for third place with 2½ points apiece while Durham, Wilson, and Raleigh came fourth with 2 points each. Leaksville was fifth with 1½ points and Burlington wound up in the cellar with none.

During the afternoon, fifteen bouts were fought, three of them ending in technical knockouts, and eleven byes were given.

In the 108 pound class, Brake-man, Rocky Mount, defeated Moss, Burlington; Shaw, Wilson, defeated Hammond, Raleigh; and Haywood, Goldsboro, defeated Jett, Charlotte, in three rounds each. Llewellyn, Durham, drew a bye.

The 115 pound class had Garganus, Rocky Mount; Atrial, Charlotte; and Styers, Greensboro, win over Little, Raleigh; Daniel, Wilson; and Whitley, Burlington. Brogdon of Durham was given a bye.

In the only 125 pound match of the day, Edgerton of Raleigh won over Berini of Durham. Three byes were given, Boykin, Rocky Mount; Taylor, Charlotte; and Andrews, Wilson, being the recipients.

Gafford of Wilson drew a bye to start the 135 pounders off, after which Morefield, Greensboro, stopped Glass of Raleigh in the third, Staton of Rocky Mount stopped Lewis, Goldsboro, also in the third, and Epps of Charlotte won a three-round verdict over Thompson of Burlington.

After Evans of Goldsboro started the 145 pound show with a victory over Ferguson, Charlotte; Pate of Raleigh scored the prettiest kayo of the day, flattening Council of Rocky Mount in the first. Lamar of Leaksville and Reese of Greensboro each drew byes.

In the 155 pound division, Gwyn of Leaksville won over Taylor of Wilson, and Chaplin of Charlotte beat Hyatt of Greensboro in the only two matches in that weight. Mize of Durham and Langston of Goldsboro got byes.

The last bout of the afternoon and the most exciting one had Hearn of Wilson against Arenson, Charlotte. The two thrilled the spectators with a slugging party and, although Hearn lost, he put up a great fight and had Arenson groggy in the third. In the same weight, Clothier of Durham drew a bye.

The refereeing was capably handled by Norm Quarles and the judging by Furches Raymer and Tom Parsons. Jim Lothian was announcer.

STATE TEAM CONTINUES VICTORIES IN BIG FIVE

State's basketball team continued their victory march Wednesday night by downing Wake Forest 25-22 in a closely played contest. The victory was the second Big Five win of this week for the Wolfpack.

State took a 4 to 0 lead at the start of the contest and was never quite overtaken by the losers. The Terrors led 11 to 6 at the half. Clarke and McQuage, guards, stood out for the winners, while the work of Captain Owens, guard, was outstanding for the Deacons.

CAROLINA STARS CANDIDATES FOR "FLAMING FIVE"

Vergil Weathers Leads Charlotte "Observer's" Contest; Branch and Chandler Poll High Vote.

At the close of the polls Wednesday night in the Charlotte Observer readers' vote for the "flaming five" of Carolina athletes in 1932 three University students were ranked among the first ten.

Vergil Weathers with 246 votes had a long lead on first place, while Johnny Branch had 118 votes for fourth place, and Stuart Chandler was in ninth position with 98 votes. Many other Carolina athletes have been nominated in the voting so far and several stand high in the count.

This contest is conducted each year by the Charlotte Observer in order to choose five athletes which the sports fans consider the most outstanding. Anyone is eligible to send in one list of five to the Observer. The voting ends tomorrow night.

HIGH WRESTLERS FINISH MATCHES IN FIRST ROUND

Greensboro, Durham, and Bragtown Leading After Preliminary Matches in Tin Can.

First round matches in the high school wrestling tournament were run off in an unimpressive fashion yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. All the seeded entries survived their first mat tests, and will meet their second try this afternoon at 8:00 o'clock when the semifinals will be staged.

Durham's state title holders for the past two tournaments were tied up last night with Bragtown at 15 all. Greensboro's mat men were leading the tournament with 18, but by a strange quirk of fate, had won only one bout out of three actually wrestled and had four byes to their credit.

Title Holders Fight

Henry Miller, Durham, last year's title holder in the 115-pound division, gained a time decision over Fogleman, Bragtown wrestler, with 3:55 minutes to his advantage. Lee Roberson, defended his right to wear the champion's title belt, by carrying the Bragtown colors to a win over Barnhardt, High Point, via a time advantage of 5:50 minutes. The only other high school title holder, Fred Koury, Greensboro high's 135-pound representative, did not wrestle yesterday, getting a bye in the drawings.

Most of the matches yesterday afternoon were very slow with only one fall being registered on the official's score books. Vann, 135-pounder from Barium Springs Orphanage, pinned Murrow, of High Point in 4:55 minutes.

Other results were:

HIGH TEAMS TO PLAY FOR WESTERN TITLE

Charlotte high school went into a tie with Salisbury for the leadership of the western class "A" high school basketball championship Tuesday night by defeating Greensboro 36 to 8. The Queen City quintet meets Winston-Salem tonight at Winston-Salem.

Salisbury will meet High Point tonight in the other game in that division. In the eastern section, Raleigh and Wilmington will play in Wilmington. Durham, which has already clinched the pennant, will be inactive over the week-end.

The Can Opener

CLAIBORN M. CARR

THE FIRST REAL SIGN OF spring appeared early this week when Coach Bunn Hearn swam gracefully up to the pitcher's mound on Emerson field and announced with a loud Aho that he would meet all freshman and varsity pitchers and catchers in the Tin Can every afternoon at 3:00 o'clock starting Monday. Captain Willie Powell has been dashing out in the few balmy days we've had, pegging a few, then putting his wing on the shelf. Big Joe Griffith, the knock-kneed pitcher who should burn 'em in there this year, has been getting in shape heaving footballs and basketballs. Thursday afternoon Joe collided with that brute of a man Alan Smith, in an intramural fray, and is now in the infirmary awaiting results of an X-ray taken to determine whether or not he had broken or fractured his right ankle.

GRIFFITH'S INJURY IS A serious setback to Coach Hearn's hopes for an early start. The hefty coach will be minus his hurler for a month at least, no matter how slightly the ankle is turned. I saw Joe in the infirmary yesterday afternoon and his left ankle is swollen to enormous proportions and at the same time it is discolored. The X-ray had not been taken at that time and Griff's ankle was taped up and surrounded by two huge ice bags. Joe can move his foot, and it is felt that at most the ankle is fractured, which would mean about a six-week convalescence period for Griff. "This new doctor uses ice about as much as Dr. Ab used to prescribe his famous pills," laughed Joe.

COACH CHUCK COLLINS announced yesterday that after the intra-squad game which is scheduled for Saturday, the football squad would abandon winter practice until March 27. Coach Chuck said that the continued bad weather had prevented any work at all and that practice would be called off temporarily. A big squad has been out for the past month but due to the bad weather, less than a week of real work has been done. Collins plans to work the men for another month after March 27 and play the Monogram-Rookie game about April 27.

THESE FOOTBALL MEN should be given a hand. They have had about as rotten weather as possible to work in and yet each afternoon they have gone out and played hard. Muddy fields made the equipment sloppy and a thousand other things have combined to

BOXERS LOOKING FOR REVENGE AS THEY MEET DUKE

Mit Team Out to Repay Duke For Defeats in Football and Basketball Games.

When the Carolina boxing team pays a not so friendly call on Duke tomorrow night at Durham, the result promises to be as interesting as the recent visit of Virginia to Chapel Hill. Carolina against Duke in any sport is always hotly contested, and this meet, in particular, promises to be a hectic one as the Tar Heels are looking for sweet revenge after having lost to the Blue Devils in football and twice in basketball.

Duke fought last at Maryland two weeks ago and got a 4-4 tie with the Old Liners' crack pugs. The only two knockouts of the meet were scored by Duke, and the team showed that night that it has plenty of punch in the line-up and will be ready to give Carolina possibly the toughest opposition that it has encountered this year.

Of all the bouts, the one between Marty Levinson and Fred Lloyd holds the spotlight in individual interest. The pre-fight gossip is as hot over this brawl as it was over the recent Quarles-Goldstein encounter and the outcome may be equally as thrilling. Lloyd was bantamweight champion of the Southern Conference last year; but he has put on weight and moved into the featherweight division where he is undefeated so far this season. Levinson will be fighting in his last dual meet for Carolina and he wants to win this one particularly.

Norm Quarles, although his hand is still swollen and bothers him no little, will return to the Carolina line-up to meet Parrish of Duke who lost his last start to Burns of Maryland. The bout will be Quarles last one in his sophomore year and he has made a record to be proud of in scoring three knockouts and one decision, the decision coming over the previously undefeated Bobby Goldstein of Virginia.

Another fight that is arousing keen interest is the Nat Lumpkin-LeRoy Sides welterweight argument. Sides outpointed Charlie Garner, last year's con-

Lumpkin made a great comeback against Penn State and, although he dropped the verdict to Johnny McAndrews, he made the Pennsylvanian hustle all the way and more than atoned for his sudden kayo at the hands of Fishburne of Virginia.

Joe Jester, Duke's heavy-weight, has an unimpressive record for the season and against Maryland he was flattened once again in a round. Platt Landis will probably have a cake-walk with him; but when two big boys get together in there anything is liable to happen.

Cliff Glover, who suffered a bad cut over the eye just before the Penn State meet, will be back in the line-up against Duke and he will face Floyd Riddick, Duke bantam who won his Maryland bout by a knockout; While Sam Giddins, who has a bad shoulder and was feared lost to the team, was feeling better and will probably work tomorrow night.

A large number of the audience disagreed with Miss Chappell's theories in the open forum discussion that followed her speech.

Warren William and Loretta Young carry the starring roles in "Employees' Entrance," the First National picture which comes to the Carolina theatre today. Alice White, fresh from a ten months' triumphant personal appearance tour on the stage, together with Wallace Ford, who had a leading role in "Central Park," and Allen Jenkins, hold the leads in the supporting cast.

Over 1,000 extras are used as the employees of a mammoth department store in which practically the entire plot of the drama is laid. Those playing more prominent roles in the picture include Hale Hamilton, Albert Gran, Marjorie Gatenon, Berton Churcill, Ruth Donnelly, Frank Reicher, Charles Sellon, Zita Moulton, and Helen Mann.

Student Magazine Will Be Published

New York, N. Y., Feb. 16.—The organization committee of the National Student Mirror, official periodical of the National Student Federation of America, reports that plans are being made to gather articles from every college campus in the country. This will be effected through the regional chairmen who will act as associate advisers of the publication.

The National Student Mirror will be the first student organ in the United States to be issued on a national scale without any political, religious or fraternal affiliation, according to Edward R. Murrow, a member of the board of advisers of the N. S. F. A. Thus it will be in a position to reflect without prejudice problems facing the undergraduate mind.

The enthusiasm, as indicated by the number of subscribers to date, with which the announcement of the future publication of the Mirror has been received insures its distribution on a larger scale than was originally contemplated.

COACH COLLINS HAD SOME tough luck too. Harry Montgomery and Gus McIver both have injured their legs and may be permanently hindered. McIver, the big center, hurt his knee earlier in the fall and it had about healed until the other afternoon when Mac was attempting to catch a pass before practice started. He jumped up and as he did his knee slipped out again and since then Gus has been showing a decided limp. An operation is being planned now which will fix him up by next fall. Montgomery hurt some ligament or cartilage in his knee also. Monty was doing a little side-stepping in the setting-up exercises when something went wrong. He is wearing a knee brace now and hopes to be ready by March 27. Johnny Daniel is not injured so you could tell it, but a friend of his told me yesterday that Tige had received some dope about the entrance requirements and a big book of campus pictures from the Keeley institute. Surely John must be going up there as football coach.

The first chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma was founded May 18, 1907, at the University of Wisconsin, but national expansion of the organization did not begin until 1913 when Alpha of Illinois was installed at the University of Illinois. Since then the growth of the fraternity has been steadily increasing. National meetings convene every two years, and nine have taken place up to this year when the tenth is to convene. The national headquarters issues a quarterly magazine, the Beta Gamma Sigma Exchange.

The Intelligent Housewife Knows The Reason Why!

She has increased her daily order for milk. It is because she has learned from doctors, dieticians and other authoritative sources that milk builds strong, healthy bodies for less money than do other foods.

She knows that milk is the most versatile of all foods — that it is ready to serve direct from the bottle or that it can be made into delicious dishes adaptable to any menu.

"A milk dish for every meal," is the wise housewife's slogan and as a result her family grows healthy, happy and strong.

Consideration of higher education in the state again came before the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly Thursday with the announcement that the committee had tentatively set next Wednesday as the date for thrashing out provision for the appropriation to the University.

The chief item relating to higher education in the committee's activities Thursday was a recommendation for sweeping changes in state teacher-training colleges made in a report by a sub-committee appointed to investigate duplicating functions of the institutions.

May Transfer Geologist

Another recommendation concerning the University, which was announced Thursday, proposes to transfer the office of state geologist from Raleigh to the Chapel Hill division of the Greater University with the $4,645 annual appropriation for the office coming to the University.

Consideration of the University's appropriation Wednesday, the day tentatively set, is expected to take the form of discussion and drafting part of the appropriations bill regarding the University. The session will probably be conducted behind closed doors and the results will not be announced until the end of next week when presentation of the full bill is expected.

Comprehensive Examinations Give Students Responsibility In Work

Educators Throughout Country Hold Comprehensives as Important Because They Encourage College Men to Cooperate With Professors in Discussions and Conferences.

Comprehensive examinations, popularly considered one of the blacker moments of the senior year, have been introduced into leading American universities in an attempt to give students a more responsible attitude to their work. They are also aimed at effecting greater correlation between the individual courses comprising a major subject.

Contrary to a widespread rumor, comprehensive examinations at the University will not be discontinued. A flat denial of the likelihood of any such move was issued yesterday from the office of the college of liberal arts. As officials feel that since their founding in 1928, the tests have proven most successful, the system will be maintained with increased activity and rigor.

Nationally Approved

Educators throughout the country hold comprehensives as singularly important. At the last meeting of the American association of collegiate registrars, this development of the past decade was emphasized as the most significant of recent innovations in the field of higher education.

The present system in the University requires seniors in the college of liberal arts and the commerce school to pass to the satisfaction of the head of the department a comprehensive examination in their field of major study during their senior year. However, a student must have completed five courses in his chosen department before he is eligible to take the examination. They are given four times a year, once during each quarter of the regular term and once during the summer session. A student is given three opportunities to pass and if he fails to pass in all of these trials, his degree is withheld.

The heads of the respective departments prepare the questions with the assistance of the other departmental professors for the tests are devised to cover the entire range of the subject. A committee from each department grades the papers.

Reduced Failures

The fact that the number of failures has steadily decreased since the establishment of this system has justified its existence and points to its acceptance as a permanent part of graduation requirements. An attempt is being made this year to give

FORUM LECTURE DATE POSTPONED TO NEXT FRIDAY

Rippy and Herring Will Discuss Latin American Relations at Meeting February 24.

Due to a conflict in calendar arrangements with the scheduled Beard lecture series here next week, the seventh Open Forum Discussion has been postponed to Friday, February 24. Dr. Fred Rippy, professor of history at Duke University, and Dr. Hubert Herring, director for the Council for Cultural Relations with Latin America, will lecture. The topic is "America In An Interdependent World."

An "American" in the continental sense, Dr. Herring is noted for the good work he has accomplished in keeping relations between the United States and the countries to the south of us on terms of cordiality. Herring is perhaps best noted for his activity in promoting goodwill between the United States and Mexico during the tense days preceding the Morrow mission. In constant touch with the Mexican problem, Herring contends that our large volume of trade with Latin America makes the problem of peaceful relations with the southern countries as important as relations with Europe. This contention is based on a recent declaration by Washington authorities that "Mexican affairs may take a turn for the worse in the next few months."

Appears Before Committee

President Frank P. Graham of the University was a member of a group which appeared before the House judiciary committee No. 1 Thursday afternoon to speak against the criminal syndicalism bill proposed by Representative Taylor of Mecklenburg. Without a dissenting vote the bill was reported unfavorably.

STRINGFIELD WILL PLAY WEDNESDAY AT STATESVILLE

Flutist, Assisted by Pianist and Cellist, Will Present Recital at Mitchell College.

Lamar Stringfield, assisted by Adeline McCall, pianist, and Ralph Weatherford, cellist, will present a trio recital at Mitchell College in Statesville Wednesday evening, March 1, at 8:30 o'clock.

This trio has appeared several times here and recently presented a recital at Queens-Chicora College in Charlotte. The program in Statesville will feature a composition by Stringfield, Mountain Sketches, which since its completion in 1923 has been recognized as one of the outstanding modern American chamber music works, and has been performed repeatedly in the large musical centers of the country.

The program will include Sonata No. 2 for flute and piano by J. S. Bach, Nocturn by Georges Barrere, Syrinx (for flute unaccompanied) by Claude Debussy, and Tityre by Albert Roussel. The trio will play the Five Petite Trios of Caesar Cui and the two Mountain Sketches, Morning and In a Log Cabin, by Stringfield. Representing the works of modern American composers will be the Poeme for flute and piano of Charles T. Griffes.

Comprehensive Exams

Comprehensive examinations for seniors in the schools of liberal arts and commerce will be conducted this morning at 9:00 o'clock in rooms set by the various departments.

These examinations are given each quarter and seniors must pass one of them before receiving their degrees. The English department has announced that its examination will be conducted in 201 Murphey.

BAND TO PLAY AT SOUTHERN PINES SUNDAY EVENING

Symphonic Organization to Appear at Church of Wide Fellowship at 7:30 O'clock.

The University Symphonic band, conducted by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will present a concert at the Church of the Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

This concert has been arranged in connection with the plan of the University music department to present a symphonic organization drawn from the University parade band, which provides music for the football games in the fall. The University is recognized throughout the south as a pioneer in this respect. A survey has revealed that there are very few organizations of a symphonic type among the college bands of the country. The Carleton College band of Northfield, Minnesota, is an outstanding exception.

Band Rated 'High'

In 1929 the University band was chosen in a national survey as one of the ten outstanding college bands in the country. At that time a press critic remarked "These boys are starting something in the musical line that will be heard far from the borders of the state. Their band is a symphony orchestra without stringed instruments."

The program to be played in Southern Pines will consist of music from the literature ranging from the ancient classic suite to the modern works by living American composers. A feature of the program will be a violin solo played by Thor Martin Johnson, student musician, with band accompaniment. This is the first time such a combination has been presented to audiences in this section. The

Cigarette Price Reduction Aims To Run Cheaper Brands Off Market

Announcement of Reduced Cost of Popular Smokes Brings Many New Customers Into Chain Store; Increases Demand for Penny Boxes of Matches and Free Paper Folders.

In an effort to run cheaper cigarettes off the market, manufacturers of many brands of popular cigarettes have made it possible for chain stores throughout the country to sell the usual fifteen-cent pack for ten cents.

At 4:00 p. m. last Saturday, this reduction became effective in Chapel Hill. It has continued up to the present time, and will be, to the knowledge of the local chain store manager, effective until the cheaper brands of cigarettes are forced out of competition.

Large Sales Increase

In the chain store sales on cigarettes were highest Monday, when the cash register recorded 1150 separate sales. This was an increase of approximately 300 persons over the average number of shoppers to enter the store on a Monday.

Tuesday, the number decreased slightly, falling to 1025. Of course, all who entered the store did not buy cigarettes, but the decrease of one hundred may well be attributed to the decreased number of purchasers of foods. Monday is nearly always

Student Leaves University After Ruling Of Immigration Officials

Freshmen Vote Tentative Loan of One Hundred Dollars to Emergency Student Fund.

A tentative loan of one hundred dollars to be added to the Emergency Loan Fund was voted yesterday by the freshman class meeting. This loan is subject to a report by President Frank Rogers on the capacity of the class budget to stand the gift.

A provision of the addition to the fund was created to the effect that the amount would be used for short-term unsecured loans to freshmen only. The power to recall in event of class financial deficiency was also reserved. Student dues are the only means of financial accumulation employed by the class.

Graduates' Articles Published In Journal

Two University graduates, H. C. Thomas and W. L. Mattox, contributed articles to the February issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society.

Thomas' article "The Debye-Hückel Ion Size Parameter in terms of Ionic Radii; the Activity Coefficient of Lead Chloride in Solution of Cadmium Nitrate" was an extract from his M. S. thesis.

"Nepthol Studies" by Mattox was taken from his thesis for a degree of doctor of philosophy. The work was a continuation of research by Dr. Wheeler and D. J. Ergle. The first article by Wheeler and Ergle appeared in 1930.

Thomas now holds a fellowship at Yale. Mattox is working for the Universal Oil Products Company at Riverside, Illinois.

Feature Board Meeting

There will be a short but important meeting of the feature board this morning at 11:30 o'clock in the offices of the publication.

Jisaku Fukusato, Japanese College Graduate, Fails to Meet Immigration Requirements.

DEPARTS FOR TOKYO

Student of Economics in Graduate School Brought Here Through Efforts of Raper.

Jisaku Fukusato, the University's only Japanese student, was forced to leave Chapel Hill Wednesday for Tokyo, Japan, on the action of the federal immigration authorities. Fukusato, it was stated yesterday, failed to comply with regulations of the Immigration Bureau concerning non-quota immigrants engaged in educational work in this country.

His departure came as a result of a decision of the authorities reached after a hearing before a district representative. Under the immigration law, such a student must carry satisfactorily a certain amount of course work, in the University graduate school ten hours of semester work per quarter. Fukusato's lack of knowledge of the English language made it impossible for him to fulfill the requirements.

Japanese Graduate

Fukusato was a graduate of Waseda University in Tokyo in 1915 and has been a student here since September, 1931. He has been engaged in special study in economics and literature. It is understood that he has published in Japan several short stories or articles.

His admittance to the University came as a result of correspondence in 1916 with Dr. Raper.

Kreisler is recognized as the outstanding musical genius of the violin of the entire world and receives enthusiastic praise wherever he performs. He has toured the entire world since the beginning of his concert career as a child prodigy in Vienna at the age of seven. He entered the Vienna Conservatory of music at that time and continued his musical education at Paris where he was awarded the Grand Prix de Rome in competition with forty other violinists. At the completion of his study he toured America and has been forced to return here almost every year since by popular demand.

Kreisler is not only a great performer but is also a composer of note. He will present several of his popular compositions on his concert here. Among these are the familiar Caprice Viennois and Tambourine Chinois.

Almost a Progressive

At last North Carolina has a progressive—or so we are informed. The age-old question which has wracked the best minds of the Senate as to what is a progressive has at last been settled with a conclusiveness that borders on dogmatism. The Greensboro News yesterday carried the related in a story that nine senators who considered themselves forward-looking recently held what amounted to a formal caucus, but what was really a conference, and definitely established themselves as being progressives, surrounding themselves with an air of exclusiveness that precluded the rights of any other senators to lay claim to the title.

Just what constitutes a progressive is not, nor ever has been, quite clear. Senator Capper, for instance, has at times vociferously exclaimed that while he himself is a progressive, La Follette and Norris are radicals, and as a consequence of his ravings the latter two blackballed him from their group. Our own Honest Bob, being a freshman, was not invited to their first meeting but it was given out that he was listed as a progressive and was prominently mentioned for future membership.

Just what outstanding evidences of progressiveness have exuded from beneath his stolid surface is shrouded in mystery, unless, of course, opposition to prohibition in conservative Tar Heelia automatically makes one a progressive. On the whole, however, to be a progressive one has to be filled with imagination, and among all the accusations which we have hurled at our newest senator such was not among them.

Still, far be it from us to discourage any glimmerings of progressiveness, however faint, in North Carolina's cloud of conservatism. So here's a hand to Honest Bob, and we hope he makes the grade!—V.C.R.

Another Shot Heard 'Round the World

A colorful spectacle—the President-elect smiling at a sympathetic throng, milling, shoving to get a closer view of the man of whom great things are expected. Cheery shouts, laughter, —hope. Six angry snaps of a pistol and the pleasant throng leaps to feverish activity. The Roosevelt car roars off as if conscious and alive to danger. Shouts of anger, wild buzz of conversation—indignation, questions, answers drowned in tumult.

Thus once again, the world is roughly awakened from its illusion of culture and civilization. Once again it is fact, not traditional fiction, which shouts for recognition. A man in whose hands lies power to change the political policy and attitude of an entire nation, and as a result the world, is at the mercy of an unknown malcontent. What avails our bland refinement, our smooth-polish when the life of our country's pre-eminent figure depends upon the efficiency of an eight-dollar second-hand pistol? At what cost are we maintaining democracy, freedom for all? What price life, liberty, and happiness when the liberty and happiness of a degenerate may require the life of a President and as a consequence destroy the faith of millions.

Occurrences like these are no loss. They are of great value. They serve to revive and stimulate the minds of sluggish followers, to make them ponder, to make them stare with wonder at the illusions of security which they had formerly entertained.—B.B.P.

A Hot Dog Stand On Every Wave

Captain Hugh Duncan Grant, British meteorologist who speaks in Gerrard hall Monday night on "Wings, Weather, and Seadromes," is working toward the realization of one of aviation's choicest dreams. He is now in America as consultant to the Armstrong Seadromes Airways Company, which, as its name implies, is undertaking the fantastical feat of planting a series of floating steel islands approximately 350 miles apart in line across the Atlantic from New York to Europe for the commercialization of trans-oceanic air traffic.

Extensive air transportation, aerial jaunts over the Atlantic, luncheon in New York, dinner in Paris may not be so far in the future as some of us skeptical souls believe. Nevertheless, the proposed enterprise of the Armstrong Company reads like one of Jules Verne's or H. G. Wells' imaginative sprees. The floating airports will have six acres of landing deck for safety harbors for Atlantic flyers, and it is estimated that they will make possible a twenty-four to thirty-six-hour mail and passenger service between America and Europe. And it is highly significant to progress that the advocates of the scheme persist in calling our "aerodromes," "filling stations." Is it too much to ask, with apologies for our backwardness, that the movement be checked before a perfectly good Atlantic Ocean is cluttered up with hot dog stands?

But far be it from the DAILY TAR HEEL to deplore whatever disadvantages may attend our progressive era. The University is fortunate in having so distinguished a speaker as Captain Grant; his talk will undoubtedly be highly interesting to those who attend; and the project with which he is connected proves that after all it's not such a long way from Sunday-supplement science to reality. People even laughed at Columbus.—A.T.D.

With Contemporaries

A Great Educator

Harry Woodburn Chase, president of the University of Illinois, has been elected chancellor of New York University and will take over his new post at the close of the current scholastic year. Dr. Chase is to succeed Elmer Ellsworth Brown, who as head of the New York institution for better than twenty years, has built it up so that today it has the largest enrollment in the country.

A Massachusetts and Dartmouth man, who became a member of the University of North Carolina faculty when he got his doctorate at Clark, Dr. Chase quickly rose to a conspicuous position at Chapel Hill. He was president there for eleven years, a period during which this university won its national and international standing. The creativeness and the liberalism which the country came to associate with the University of North Carolina were the fruit of Chase's outlook and courage.

He has been at Urbana for only two years, and he has had to face serious difficulties, but he has evidently mastered them, since he was the unanimous choice as Dr. Brown's successor, and the selection was made after a thorough and leisurely survey of available men for the position. Surely, this New Englander who won his spurs in the South, who has had his trial in the Middle West, is uniquely prepared for the task of guiding a great metropolitan college. The many Southerners who regretted his going from North Carolina do not doubt that he will rise to the height of this noble obligation and opportunity.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The "dating bureau" is a flourishing institution at Arkansas Polytechnic college. The bureau has a scale of prices, and fees are in accordance with the desirability of the date secured for the subscriber. Men or women anxious to make an engagement must submit four names in the order of their choice. If the dater gets his first choice it costs him twenty-five cents. Second choice costs twenty cents, third costs fifteen cents and fourth choice the bargain price of ten cents.—Oklahoma Daily (N.S.F.A.)

Silverware from the Stanford University dining room continues to disappear although police periodically comb fraternities for the missing articles. Some of the tableware has been discovered in the dining hall of a New England college, and some in China.—Swarthmore Phoenix (N.S.F.A.)

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Magic

We believe it was Teddy Roosevelt, the famous lion hunter, who said "It's fun to be fooled—it's more fun to know." Or perhaps he said something about "you can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

At any rate, you may have noticed the epigram on the current Camel cigarette ads. In the lower left hand corner is a portrait of a grinning gentleman supposedly smoking a Camel. He is, an informant states to us, one J. O. Bender of Indiana. But Mr. Bender, chosen for his affable smile, smokes Old Golds, when he smokes. And then about one pack a week. Has never smoked a Camel.

Baritone

The peoples' representatives over in Raleigh are getting along all right, still possessed of that peculiar sense of humor which we take frequent occasion to note. One day last week, looking for recreation, the solons introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee to request a fellow named Tibbett to address the senate. The committee scurried around the halls of the capitol building looking for Tibbett. Someone thought that perhaps the whole business was a joke and that the bill referred to Tibet, an Asiatic mountain section or perhaps "tibets," a half dollar. But they finally found out that Tibbett was an opera baritone. Mr. Tibbett was to arrive the next day. He did . . . graciously agree to speak (it was a publicity tour, anyhow). We understand that this is a common practice for the legislature whenever a theatre or screen star is in town. They once had Anna Held, we are told. It was a long time ago.

Assassin

Radio, not as precise as the newspapers, returned a varying report of the attempted Roosevelt assassination down in Miami the other night. We heard it first when Edwin C. Hill, Columbia's political commentator sprung the news in his regular broadcast period. It was first reported that the mayor of Miami, a gentleman named Gaubier, or Gaubier, Graubier, was one of the wounded. Mrs. Cermak was also reported on the injured list, as well as various bystanders and little children. One report had it that the assassin was fifteen feet from the president-elect, another that he fired over his left shoulder. Various heroes of the hour including a Miami policeman, a woman in the stands, a news camera man, and two radio announcers, were designated in the "on the spot" broadcasts of the two principal radio networks.

Is Roosevelt a marked man? History tells us that in at least two instances, presidents who have been elected following a single term of their predecessor have been shot or killed. Or will the phenomenal luck of the Roosevelts hold out? Garner for president would be the last straw.

Twenty-Three in Infirmary

Twenty-three people were confined to the infirmary yesterday, one less than Thursday. These were John D. Lewis, R. C. Page, Jr., J. W. Dellinger, Richard A. Harris, Jr., J. B. Jackson, J. E. Waldrop, J. C. Gregory, Eunice Mae Pope, George C. Steele, C. E. Holley, Branch Craig, Jr., Edith Wladowsky, D. G. Brawley, E. D. Dillard, F. G. Wolke, W. H. Monty, Henry Wright, E. W. Comprehensives Give Students Responsibility more tutorial assistance by assigning a certain number of candidates to different instructors for directed study. It is expected that this will further decrease the number of failures in the various departments.

The general opinion among faculty members is that these examinations have helped to break down the irresponsible attitude of the students toward their courses. They agree that as long as a student thinks of an individual instructor as the sole judge of what he is to do in that course, the tendency of merely getting by is developed. But with the entrance of comprehensive examinations the professor and the student become partners and develop the basis for beneficial discussions and conferences.

Not Merely Fact Quiz

According to a report made by Dr. Fred J. Kelly of the United States office of education and an active supporter of the consolidation movement of the Greater University of North Carolina, these examinations are devised to reveal the changes in the students' attitudes and their power of drawing inferences rather than to test merely their knowledge of the facts of the course. It is along this line that an effort is being made to develop the system at the University.

Started by Hibbard

Addison Hibbard, former dean of the college of liberal arts started a movement in 1928 to establish a system of comprehensive examinations in the University. This resulted in the faculty and the administrative board passing a regulation to require senior students in the commerce school and the college of liberal arts to take this examination. The only exceptions made were the A.B., LL.B. students and those who receive an A.B. in education. This is because the former do not take their A.B. until they have studied law for a year and the course in directed teaching takes its place in the education school.

The comprehensive examination has been incorporated in the curricula of the leading colleges and universities throughout the country within the past ten years. Aside from being employed in schools which have a combination of requirements and electives similar to those of the University, it is being used in connection with a series of honor courses. In the latter type the students are left free to choose their courses and are permitted optional attendance. Several years ago a modification of this plan was begun here but was discontinued because of lack of student support. At the present time, fifty-two schools use comprehensives in connection with honors courses, forty-two in the field of major concentration, and sixteen in courses other than the major.

Student Leaves After Immigration Ruling

per, then dean of the graduate school, in which letters Dr. Raper promised Fukusato a scholarship for study at the University. He became further interested through advice of his professor, S. Kitasawa, a graduate of the University and who obtained a Ph.D. degree from Johns Hopkins. Fukusato was unable to avail himself of the opportunity at that time, but in September, 1931, appeared with a letter from Dean Raper, which he had kept in his possession since 1916. The offer of a scholarship was promptly honored by University officials.

Very Popular Student

According to Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school yesterday, it is doubtful whether any student in the University has ever received more individual attention than Fukusato. Every effort was made to assist him in complying with the minimum requirements laid down by the immigration officials. By courtesy of faculty members, he was permitted as much latitude as possible and was allowed to conduct his investigations and report his findings in conference with the professors.

Fukusato was a familiar campus figure. He was at a slight disadvantage here in that he was the only Japanese student on the campus, but during his brief stay, enjoyed the companionship of many American students.

Carolina Boxers To Clash With Duke Fighters In Durham Tonight

Landis-Jester, Brown-Ruff, and Lumpkin-Sides Fights Hold Attention of Fans.

SWAN SONG FOR LEVINSON

Freshmen Begin Battle at 7:15 Hoping to Redeem Defeat Suffered Last Week.

PROBABLE LINE-UPS:

| Carolina | Wt. | Duke |

| Ivey | 115 | Riddick |
| Levinson | 125 | Lloyd |
| Quarles | 135 | Parrish |

| Brown | 165 | Ruff |
| Parsons | 175 | Erschler |
| Landis | H. | Jester |

The Carolina boxing team will meet Duke at Durham tonight in the last dual meet of the 1933 season. Hostilities will begin at 8:30 o'clock and the varsity fights will be preceded by the freshman meet which will start at 7:15.

Captain Marty Levinson will lace on gloves for the last time in a dual meet for Carolina and in his swan song he will face Fred Lloyd, Duke's undefeated featherweight, in a fight that has been looked forward to for a long time and one that has all the earmarks of a good old-fashioned knock 'em down and drag 'em out brawl.

Three of the fighting positions are uncertain. The bantam-weight class may have Pete Ivey fighting, as Cliff Glover, who in addition to having a cut eye, also caught a slight-dose of flu that put him in the infirmary until yesterday. He will weigh in, however, and there is a possibility that he may feel strong enough to fight.

Quarles May Rest

Furche Raymer, who turned in one of Carolina's two wins up at Penn State last Saturday, may step into the lightweight breach in the place of Norm Quarles whose hand is still very sore. Coach Rowe may deem it wiser to let Quarles' hand heal

GREENSBORO WINS WRESTLING CROWN FOR HIGH SCHOOLS

Winners' Forty Points Leads Bragtown by Six Points and Durham by Sixteen Points.

Greensboro won the state high school wrestling championship last night with forty points. Bragtown high school with thirty-four points was second. Three of Greensboro's six finalists came through with wins to add nine points to their previous total of thirty-one points, and half of Bragtown's four finalists crashed through to add six points to the team's score.

Final Standing

The standing of the other teams sending men to the bouts was: Durham, twenty-four points; Barium Springs, twenty-two points; High Point, twelve points; Spencer, nine points, Leaksville and Burlington, three points apiece, and Asheville nothing, her one entry being defeated in the first round.

All the fights were decided by time advantages although several near-falls occurred. In the 155-pound class Love, of Durham was awarded a referee's decision over Grundman, of Greensboro, when each man stayed on top in his allotted two minute period. It was a tough one to call but the crowd approved referee Idol's decision.

Summary of Bouts

108-pound class: Bell (Greensboro) 4:18 minutes time advantage over Daniel (Bragtown).

115-pound class: Miller (Durham) 4:18 minutes time advantage over Daniel (Bragtown).

S. A. E. AND T. E. P. WILL CLASH FOR FRATERNITY CUP

The play-offs for the championships in the fraternity and dormitory intramural leagues are set for Monday night in the Tin Can, according to announcements from Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon will meet Tau Epsilon Phi in the first game at 7:15 o'clock to decide the fraternity champions, while Old East and Best House tangle at 8:15 to determine the winner of the dormitory race.

This is the second straight year that S. A. E. and T. E. P. have met in the play-offs, both clubs having finished their regular schedules last year undefeated. S. A. E. won the fraternity championship then in a close game, 14-13. Best House was a semi-finalist last year also but they lost to Ruffin 17-9 in the dormitory league. Both semi-final encounters will be played on the big court.

No definite statement was made yesterday as to when the two winners Monday night would meet for the campus championship.

MONOGRAM CLUB TO HAVE REGULAR MEETING TUESDAY

President John Phipps of the Monogram club announced yesterday that the organization would hold its regular quarterly meeting Tuesday night at 7:15 o'clock in room 214, Graham Memorial.

President Phipps stated that several important topics would be considered at this meeting and he urged every member to be there. Announcements of the meeting will be mailed to individual members today requesting their response to Secretary Weathers along with any suggestions that they might want to be brought up at the meeting for consideration.

An item of interest will be the proposed initiation for new members of the club. A tentative plan has been discussed in the executive committee meetings and action may be taken tonight.

Charlotte High School Boxers Win In State Tournament Finals

Coach Crayton Rowe has been walking about with a face much longer than is usually the case, and you can't exactly blame the boxing mentor for his gloomy appearance. Just when it seemed as if the Tar Heel maulers were in a bright spot to grab off state and Conference honors, Old Man Injury paid his annual visit to Chapel Hill.

First it was Glover, who suffered a nasty cut over his eye while working with Pete Ivey. Then Norment Quarles' right hand went back on him, and all this was topped off when Sam Giddins dislocated his left shoulder while sparring with Frank McIntosh. All three of these lads will probably answer the gong tonight at Duke, but a recurrence of their injuries will surely keep them out of the conference tournament at Charlottesville next week.

While on the subject of boxing, tonight's scrap with Duke is another battle for the state

PATE AND SHAW WIN K. O.'s

Fights Characterized by Many Close Decisions Before Unruly Crowd of Spectators.

Before a crowd that hooted several of the decisions, the finals of the state high school boxing tournament were held last night at the Tin Can. Charlotte high school nosed out Wilson by 7½ points to 7 and was awarded the cup.

Rocky Mount was in third place with 5½ points and Raleigh was next with 5, barely getting by Goldsboro which had 4½ points to its credit. Durham had 4 tallies at the end. Leaksville 3½, and Greensboro 2½. Burlington, failing to go beyond the preliminary round, got nary a point.

The 108 pound title was taken by Shaw of Wilson by a technical knockout over Llewelyn of Durham in the third after a hectic fray. Llewelyn was down twice in the second and Shaw punished him severely with a long left hand, until Referee Sapp stopped it after 50 seconds of the third. In the 115 pound bout, Arial of Charlotte took an unpopular decision over Broghas to be a different kind of tobacco from that used in cigarettes...and it has to be made by an entirely different process...

OUT in Kentucky, where they have pretty women, fast horses, and blue grass, there grows a tobacco called White Burley. It doesn't grow anywhere else in the world.

There is a type of this White Burley that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is neither too thick nor too thin. It is not light and chaffy; at the same time, it is not rank or strong. "U. S. Type 31" is the government classification for White Burley.

Since no other pipe tobacco has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley, this is what we use in making Granger Rough Cut.

Next, we use the Wellman Method, a famous 1870 method of making pipe tobacco, to give Granger its fine flavor and fragrance. Then, too, Granger is "Rough Cut"—just like they used to "whittle" their tobacco off a plug with a jack-knife. It smokes cool, lasts longer and never gums a pipe.

And finally, we want to sell Granger for 10 cents. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. Folks seem to like it.

'TECH' WILL PLAY 'VIRGINIA' TODAY

Teams Meet in Last Practice Game of Quarter in Kenan Stadium at 2:30 O'clock.

"Georgia Tech" and "Virginia" are scheduled to clash today at 2:30 o'clock in Kenan stadium in the last Carolina football practice game of this quarter. "Georgia Tech" has one win in only one start, "Virginia" has been defeated twice in two starts.

"Tech" has in the line Bill Collins and Jim Tatum, tackles; George Barclay and Edwin Kahn, guards; and Julian Frankel, end, are lettermen, while Leo Manly at the other end also saw much action last year. Gordon McIver, center, who played with the veteran team last week also is an experienced man but will be kept out as a result of an injured knee. His place will probably be filled by Murry Kanner, a star freshman player last fall and who played with the "Vanderbilt" team in its two contests.

The "Georgia Tech" backfield is also mostly old-timers. Johnny Phipps and Kay Thompson, halfbacks, and Bill Croom, fullback, are all two year lettermen, while Pepper Martin, quarterback, played a great deal last fall.

"Virginia" is made up of most of the outstanding reserves from last year. The probable starting line will be O'Kelly and Farrell, ends; Barrett and Moser, tackles; Caldwell and Blythe, guards; and Gardner, center. Henry Burnett, last fall's left-footed kicker and letterman, will hold down quarterback position, while Charlie Shaffer, who saw lots of action in the last few games last fall, will be at one half. Don Jackson, a promising player who was injured most of the football season, will play the other half, and Bell will be at full.

Cigarette Reduction Aims To Run Cheaper Brands Off Market

Buying their cigarettes for five cents less at the chain store, and either forgetting matches altogether, or lacking odd pennies, students and faculty alike made for the local drug stores and newsstands, demanding the complimentary folders. The strain on the supply of free matches became so great that one of the downtown merchants devised the trick of strapping the gratis matches to each pack of cigarettes by means of a rubber band and was most apologetic toward all free match customers who had bought their cigarettes elsewhere. This merchant reported the sale of exactly one pack of cigarettes—scaled at the normal price.

Meanwhile, cigarette fiends on the campus rejoice that it is no longer necessary to smoke "the bottom of the stable floor" at ten cents a bale, and cigar store and drug merchants tear their hair as they pass the windows chalked "cigarettes—10 cts."

GERMAN FILM WILL BE FEATURED HERE

The first part of the German film The Nibelungen will be featured at the Carolina theatre tomorrow night at 9:15 o'clock. The second part will be continued on the next Sunday. The Nibelungen is regarded as Germany's greatest silent picture.

The film is based on the Nibelungen epic, the Iliad of the Germanic peoples. Titles throughout the movie will be in English. The film will be introduced with a short lecture by Professor Meno Spann.

don of Durham after a very close six minutes of fighting.

Andrews Wins Featherweight
Andrews of Wilson took another close one from Edgerton of Raleigh in the 125 pound match. The milling was fast throughout and especially in the third, which found both men swinging with either hand and landing often without taking a back step.

The 135-pound affair was also won by an eyelash by Staton of Rocky Mount. He just did nose out Gafford, Wilson.

The second kayo of the night came in the 145 pound bout when Pate of Raleigh stopped Lamar of Leaksville with a whistling right to the jaw. The end came after 50 seconds of whirlwind milling, during which Lamar scored several nice blows to Pate's body. Langston of Goldsboro took the 155 pound title from Gwyn of Leaksville in another close one that got a rise out of the fans. Gwyn forced the fight all the way while Langdon countered effectively with both hands.

Aronson of Charlotte Wins
Aronson of Charlotte hammered out a decision over Clothier of Durham for the 165-pound championship. Aronson uncorked a beautiful left hook that landed effectively time and again.

The judges were Tom Parsons and Frank McIntosh, the timekeeper Norm Quarles, and the announcer Jim Lothian.

Semi-Finals

The semi-finals which were held yesterday afternoon before a slim crowd, were somewhat listless and did not approach the action of the preliminaries or the finals. Only one technical kayo was recorded and that was due to one of the contestants injuring his hand in battle and causing the fight to be stopped.

The two 108 pound bouts found Shaw of Wilson pound out a decision over Brakeman of Rocky Mount and Llewelyn of Durham trim Haywood of Goldsboro. Arial of Charlotte defeated Garganus of Rocky Mount and Brogden of Durham defeated Styers of Greensboro in the 115 pound fights, while Edgerton, Raleigh, defeated Boykin, Rocky Mount, and Andrews, Wilson, defeated Taylor, Charlotte, in the 125 pound division.

In the 135 pound fights, Staton of Rocky Mount won over Morefield of Greensboro and Gafford of Wilson walloped Epps of Charlotte. Lamar of Leaksville downed Evans of Goldsboro and Pate won the only kayo of the day by stopping Reese of Greensboro in the two 145 pound matches. In the 155 pound class, Gwyn of Leaksville defeated Mize of Durham, and Langston of Goldsboro beat Chapman of Charlotte.

The judges for semi-finals were Furches Raymer and Marty Levinson, the referee was Norm Quarles, and the announcer Jim Lothian.

championship, which seems to be the habit around these parts. A non-Carolina-Duke contest for the state crown seems to be as much of a rarity as a Wake Forest-Davidson basketball clash for Big Five honors. On season's records the Tar Heels ought to walk off with the title. The local team is undefeated against southern competition while Duke has fallen before Virginia.

Maybe the Southern Conference committee knows its business, but they certainly slipped up when the name of "Foots" Knight was absent from the list of officials chosen to work the tournament contests. Knight is without a doubt the best basketball official in the state, and why he wasn't selected to represent North Carolina is a matter of mystery. Some say personal grudgery was the reason; others say that the main objection to "Foots" was that he was too strict. Whatever it was, Knight's many friends in this section deserve some explanation.

Here and There

Something new in foot racing will make its debut at Columbus, Ohio, March 3. A six-day race—no less.

It seems as if Alonzo Stagg is entering his second childhood. No sooner had the former Chicago mentor accepted his post at the College of the Pacific than he issued a challenge to his former school.

Way out on the Pacific Coast, intercollegiate baseball is in full swing. The Stanford University nine has already dropped three pre-conference games. Some boost for California weather!

League Denounces Japan

Following are some of the outstanding recommendations of the League report on the Manchurian dispute: That the state of Manchukuo be dissolved, and a government set up in Manchuria to be administered solely by China; Japan must withdraw its troops; China and Japan, with a league committee assisting, should open negotiations with a view to settling their dispute; the United States and Russia, both non-members of the League, will be invited to participate as members of that league committee; and their dispute must be settled according to the principles of the League covenant, the Kellogg-Briand Pact and the Nine-power Treaty. Incidentally, the Japanese spokesman, Yosuke Matuoka, said yesterday that his government would not accept the recommendations.

Wolfe Favors Unemployment Insurance Before Committee

Dr. H. D. Wolfe of the University economics department appeared before the state senate committee on insurance Thursday afternoon with Senator W. O. Burgin and Dr. J. P. Troxell of Duke University in behalf of Burgin's bill to provide compulsory employment insurance to protect workers of the state.

Declaring the traditional attitude toward unemployment to be unjust and cruel, Dr. Wolf said: "Unemployment is an inevitable part of our production today, and its relief should be passed on as part of the cost of producing goods and services."

completely by giving it another rest tonight.

The 155-pound spot is the third one of uncertainty with Sam Giddins still feeling the effects of a dislocated shoulder and Frank McIntosh with his cut eye not entirely healed.

Peyton Brown, who dropped down to the middleweight class last Saturday for Penn State, will fight in that same weight tonight, while Tom Parsons who replaced him as a lightweight, will work in that capacity again. Platt Landis, heavyweight kayo artist, will fight in his usual place.

In a bout rivaling the interest of the Levinson-Lloyd affair, Nat Lumpkin will meet LeRoy Sides, Duke welterweight who recently trimmed Charlie Garner of State. Lumpkin may have what it takes to polish off the Blue Devil star, and their meeting should give the ring-siders a treat.

Kanner Returns to Frosh

The freshman team, after suffering a defeat last week at the hands of Oak Ridge, may come back strong tonight at the expense of Duke. Against the preppers a week ago, the Tar Babies were weakened by the loss of Kanner but the giant heavyweight will be on hand tonight.

Eutsler, who lost his first fight last Saturday, will be the bantamweight; Frucht or Edwards featherweight; Flaherty may once more fight as a welterweight, while Glenn or Jeanette will handle the lightweight. Hornaday will fight in the 155-pound class, Ellisberg in the middleweight division, and Owllick in the light-heavy.

After Dr. Odum's address, an opportunity for informal discussion will be tendered.

Made Three-Year Survey

After a three-year national survey, President Hoover's research committee made a report in two volumes, and thirteen volumes of additional supporting data are to be published. A summary of the first part of the committee's report was published by the New York Times and has been the object of study by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets for the past several weeks.

Dr. H. D. Meyer and Dr. L. M. Brooks of the sociology department, and Harry F. Comer, local "Y" secretary, have given preparatory talks.

ENGINEERING HEAD SHOWS PROGRESS IN RIVER SURVEY

A. M. White Reports on Investigation of Industrial Utility
Of Streams in State.

Excellent progress is being made in a survey of the streams of the state to determine the industrial utility of their waters, Dr. A. M. White, head of the chemical engineering division of the University of North Carolina School of Engineering, reported yesterday.

The purpose of this project, which is being done here by the University in co-operation with the State Department of Conservation and Development, which established a fellowship for this purpose, is to obtain information badly needed with respect to the utility of North Carolina waters.

The survey is being made "by a coordinated plan of sampling and analysis from representative sources of surface water supply, to establish their chemical quality with particular relation to industrial utility; to replace an impression as to their high excellence with authoritative proof; and in general to encourage their utilization to the benefit of the state."

McConnell To Address Electrical Engineers

A regular meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is scheduled in the physics auditorium of Phillips hall at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night. The principal speaker of the evening will be J. D. McConnell, who graduated from the school of engineering in 1931. McConnell will speak on some phase of electrical engineering.

While here McConnell was a member of the Playmakers and the Wigwag and Masque. Since his graduation he has appeared in several dramatic plays over station WBT in Charlotte. He was connected for a time with W. S. Lee and Company in Charlotte, later going to his present position of plant engineer of the Burlington Mills in Burlington. The meeting is open to the public.

Louis Graves Reports Story Brought From Florida on Snake Industry.

The latest delicacy offered to the American public is rattlesnake meat, according to Dr. W. C. Coker, University botanist, who brings here the first information about a vast enterprise in rattlesnakes down in Florida.

Here is the way Louis Graves tells the story in part, in the current issue of the Chapel Hill Weekly:

"The rattlesnake product now on the market bears this name: 'Genuine Diamondback Rattlesnake with Supreme Sauce, Positively the World's Most Delicious and De Luxe Foodstuff.'"

"A little way inland from the famous resort is the plant of the Floridian Products corporation, and it is here that rattlesnake products are prepared; not only food, but skins and skulls, and various ornamental articles made with rattles; charms necklace, pendants, hat bands and ear rings. Then there are rattlesnake-oil, put up in bottles, 'excellent for reducing inflammation,' and rattlesnake-skin lamp shades.

"When I expressed astonishment at the use of rattlesnakes as food, Mr. Coker told me that there was good precedent for it. He took from one of his shelves a book containing records of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and here was a letter from Henry Laurens of South Carolina, the eminent planter and merchant whose son, John Laurens, as George Washington's aide-de-camp, received from a British aide-de-camp the sword of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

"Writing in 1764 to Andrew Williamson in the Carolina back country, Henry Laurens said: 'I acknowledge the chestnuts, hazelnuts, telonis, and puccoon, for which I return thanks, as I do for the poor unfortunate rattlesnake whose body made an addition to my table today.'"

"Did you eat any rattlesnake meat while you were in Florida?" I asked Mr. Coker.

"No, I didn't," he replied. "But I'm thinking of ordering some and asking Mrs. Klutz to prepare it for me. I'll let you know when it gets here, and maybe you'd like to come around and have a taste of it."

"Maybe; and maybe not. I have not quite decided. I have a long-standing prejudice to overcome before I try such a meal."

"Rattlesnake meat is said to resemble chicken-breast in appearance; its eulogists say it has a far better flavor."

"A Frenchman who had been wounded in the World War came to this country. He had little money and he was looking about for some way to earn a livelihood. Like so many of his countrymen, he had a keen interest in the preparation of food

A frequenter of the Continent, he is known as well abroad as he is in his own country. For the last three years he has traveled through the United States, though spending most of his time in the states adjacent to the District of Columbia.

Grant's address, which will be on "Wings, Weather, and Seadromes," is given under the auspices of the public lectures committee of the University faculty.

Grant served as the British admiralty meteorologist during naval raids on Zeebrugge and Ostend and was a delegate to the International Meteorological conference in Paris in 1919-20. He was later appointed a member of the International Maritime Meteorological commission. Grant is now in America as consultant to the Armstrong Seadromes Ocean Airways Company which is undertaking the feat of planting a series of floating steel islands across the Atlantic to facilitate trans-oceanic airplane traffic. In his lecture he will picture the developments of this achievement.

New Song Committee To Convene Tuesday

The committee handling the writing of the new Carolina song will meet Tuesday afternoon to discuss further plans in regard to its writing. Nothing of a definite nature has as yet been accomplished, although several songs have been submitted, no song has come up to the desired standard.

At present there is a tendency on the part of the committee to have some member of the University compose the song in order to make it a true Carolina work.

Mrs. Graham at Home

Mrs. Frank Porter Graham will be at home to the graduate and professional women students of the University Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

HOUSE SETS FORTH NEED

Organization Is Established as Means of Grouping Together
Agencies With Same Work.

An Administrative Board of fifteen University officials and a student Advisory Board of nine outstanding student figures have been appointed by President Frank P. Graham to coordinate and promote the work of all University agencies affecting student life. Dean F. F. Bradshaw has been appointed chairman of the group which will act as an administrative head for the University of student welfare.

The work of the boards is understood to embrace all University relationships with students other than formal instruction. These relationships all have an educational significance and are recognized as an integral part of the educational program on the campus.

R. B. House, executive secretary, explained the need for such groups in announcement to members of the groups last week.

According to House, in recent years of University growth many agencies have come into existence to promote in various ways the wholesome growth of students and student life. To relate most effectively the respective functions of such agencies and to focus the entire guidance resources of the institution on the particular needs of students both as individuals and as groups is the responsibility of this division through its Administrative Board. INSTALLATION OF FRATERNITY WILL OCCUR TOMORROW

North Carolina Alpha of Beta Gamma Sigma, National Commerce Group,
To Be Installed at University.

Installation of the North Carolina Alpha chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary commerce fraternity, will take place here tomorrow. The initiation ceremonies will be in charge of Professor John W. Jenkins of the University of Georgia, national secretary and treasurer of the organization. Following the installation program, members and officers of the fraternity will gather for a luncheon in the banquet hall of Graham Memorial.

A charter establishing the local chapter was obtained through the efforts of a number of faculty members of the school of commerce. The constitution of the organization stipulates that not more than one-fifteenth of the junior class of the commerce school nor more than one-tenth of the senior class may be elected into the fraternity, and candidates must be in the upper one fifth of their class, scholastically.

Alpha of North Carolina is the thirty-sixth chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national organization having chapters in all but ten of the schools belonging to the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business. The association includes practically all of the higher ranking commerce schools in the country.

For Goodwill

Federal Immigration authorities have deported Jisaku Fukusato, the University's only Japanese student, from the United States for reasons of academic deficiency in excess of the marks set as requisite for non-quota foreign students. Although a graduate from Waseda University in Tokyo and a linguist in both German and French, the authorities ruled that he had not carried satisfactorily the ten hours semester work per quarter required in the graduate school. So Fukusato was hailed before an Immigration Bureau district representative and promptly told to pack up and depart from Chapel Hill. He is on a steamer somewhere out in the Pacific bound for Tokyo.

Possessed of a keen mind and ready wit, Fukusato was given free rein to conduct graduate research and discuss his findings with faculty men. His case was regarded with interest by the administration and all possible assistance was given him to reap the fruits of his findings. But Fukusato knew little English. It is said that he took his notes in German; and the task of translating a lecture in English to Japanese and into German is not one for a delinquent student. His English was halting, but he was making valiant efforts to overcome this difficulty.

This treatment with that accorded to other foreign students in the recent Lytton report, which recommended that foreign students be prohibited from remaining in this country during holidays to receive employment, is characteristic of numerous of our federal bureaus, whose glaring ignorance of academic matters is a menace to international good will, which, unlike the quality of mercy, is particularly strained in the Far East.—D.C.S.

A Renaissance in Student Activities

Critics of college students must think twice now before entering upon their usual tirade of the evil straits into which the college generation has fallen. Slowly the country is realizing that their former concept of the college student, an impractical worthless organism enjoying a four-year joy-ride, is unjustified. Certainly during the past five years the character of the college man has undergone a radical change. Financial reverses at home has caused many students to earn their own way through college as best they can, and it may be safely said that the majority are equal to the task. The depression, which is closing an era of materialism started in the World War, is also accomplishing a similar end for the college student.

At practically every college and university the story is the same: the student has become serious-minded. From Wisconsin come the news that more than 3000 students secured part-time jobs during the past year and that a sizeable group are able to maintain a maximum expense per year of $110. But this seat of learning is not alone in this respect, for everywhere the younger generation is scraping to make both ends meet. As this fact becomes evident, it is easier to make a true evaluation of the worth of students. Another news item reveals that a co-ed at New York University has been able to provide meals for herself at an average cost of $2.4 per day in order that she may continue her education. At Princeton, a name synonymous with wealth to many, nearly a third of the undergraduates are registered with the Student Employment bureau. From Maine to California and from Oregon to Florida the situation on every campus is practically identical. Certainly this is proof of a new and reorganized attitude on the part of students that may in time counteract the refrains of college critics which we have been so accustomed to hear.—G.R.

A Long Felt Need

The institution of morning devotional exercises by the Y. M. C. A. promises much toward helping students gain a more religious attitude. There is always a tendency for the student, when away from the influences of the home, to drift away from attendance at any exercises of a religious nature.

These devotionals will be an incentive to the student to form anew his interest in problems of religion. They came at a time of day when there are no classes to require him to be at any other places on the campus and when he is usually found trying to kill time until 11:00 o'clock. He will find that there is nothing better to do than to take part in these devotionals during this vacant period both as a means of passing time and securing a feeling of tranquility which he might otherwise not attain.

Attendance at these exercises is entirely optional and will, therefore, make room for the student to go only if he so wishes. This will bring about an attitude which would not result if the same devotionals were compulsory as are those at a denominational school. Also the fact that no one is forced to go is in keeping with the University's policy of liberalism which permits one to be free in his thoughts and actions. Religion that is forced upon one is never quite as good as that which is attained through free will participation in religious functions. It is indeed hoped that these exercises will make for a better religious attitude of the student because of their nature and because of their means of serving a long felt need on the campus.—P.G.

With Contemporaries

Education and The Social Order

Frequently re-occurring in press and magazine has been the definition of education as "the system by which, for a sum, the young man may best be trained to master the factual intricacies of any of a given number of livelihoods." Ben Belitt in the January issue of the New Outlook describes this interpretation of the educational system as the "pay as you enter" approach.

Placing the student in the American atmosphere "the American university may not justifiably be termed a perversion of the American mind and culture. It is neither a misfit nor a mockery; it is narrow and circumscribed, apathetic, impatient, self-sufficient; and we are all of these. . . . It is a parallel and counterpart of the American mind, and is therefore immensely qualified to serve the American people. Both are concerned less with theory than with application, less with causes and philosophical inquiry into values, than with results, utilities, patterns, accomplishments. It has dedicated itself to the immediate business of getting results."

It is evident that to discuss and criticize education there is the inevitable factor of the condition of society and the social mechanism in which education finds itself a part. . . .

Belitt is not the one to accept the present level of the system because society has made it so. Though he fails to carry the implication of the new social order into the new standard for education, the logical conclusion from his argument is none other than the transformation of society will see a transformation of education. In short, until society will demand something more, something finer and better, from its citizens and students, there will be no higher development in the educational system.—Wisconsin Daily Cardinal.

In Defense of Flaming Youth

And still they come! With the opening of the second semester at the University, there has appeared a new group of students on Mt. Oread. They have come from every corner of the state with high dreams of success and hopes of getting something out of college that will make them better men and women.

Many of them have come with empty pockets. The first of the month will not bring a check from home. But the lack of financial support has not kept them from driving on to the goal they have set for themselves.

They will be found in the laboratories and the library long after the average student has gone to more pleasurable fields. This student with the empty pockets will be found in the kitchens of the restaurants, behind counters in stores, and every place where a few pennies can be earned.

The student will have to sacrifice for his mind and his ambition, but he will do it—just as fifty per cent of the rest of us are doing now.

And we are called "Flaming Youth."—University Daily Kansan.

Duke Mit Team Defeats Carolina For State Title

Carolina Ringsters Lose for First Time in State as Blue Devils Win, 4½ to 3½.

HEEL YEARLINGS WIN, 5-3

Before a crowd of 3,500 fans who went wild over the intense excitement of each and every bout, Duke emerged the winner over the Carolina boxing team to hand the Tar Heels the first licking they have suffered at the hands of any team in the state. The score was 4½ to 3½.

Duke gained the state championship through the night's events which included not only superlative thrills in the ring, but many interesting sidelights. Just after the Lumpkin-Sides affair, the ring collapsed for comedy relief, and after the bouts someone took a lusty punch at Referee Bryan Hayes following a series of decisions which received little favor with the spectators.

Cliff Glover, the hard-luck fighter of the Carolina team, started the varsity show by running true to form and dropping his toughest decision of the season to Floyd Riddick of Duke in one of those things. Cliff scored the cleaner blows in the first, pounded in some good ones in the second, and was strong in the third; but the decision, which was tremendously unpopular with the fans, went to the Duke mauler.

Levinson Draws

Captain Marty Levinson, fighting his last dual meet for Carolina, met Fred Lloyd in their much-heralded fracas and the pair went three furious rounds to a draw. Without a hair to split during the match that far, Marty seemed to have an edge in the fourth which was the hottest of the fight. At the end of the round, however, Referee Hayes caused another uproar by calling it a draw.

Norm Quarles then stepped in to face Rip Scott, Duke's lightweight, in one of the best fights of the night. Scott more than held his own in the first, boxing neatly and keeping out of Quarles' reach. Quarles began to get to his taller opponent in the second, scoring effective blows to the jaw, but Scott took them and sailed back in for more. The Blue Devil gamester stooped up under a lacing in the last round during which Norm peppered him with copious left-handers. Quarles had a clear margin at the end and grabbed the nut-cake to the tune of much applause.

Lumpkin Wins

In what was perhaps the biggest upset of the night, Nat Lumpkin turned in his prettiest fight of the season and handed LeRoy Sides, Duke's great welter and last year's conference finalist, a one-sided cuffing. Sides came back after taking two rounds of punishing from Nat's educated left and cocked the Tar Heel 145-pounder with several stiff rights to the jaw, but his punches could not turn the tide, for Lumpkin had the brawl in the sack.

The 155-pound match found Frank McIntosh taking Sam Giddins scheduled place and putting up one of the finest slug-fests of the meet with Norman Ross of Duke. Ross dropped McIntosh in the first for a nine count but the Carolina entry got up to give Ross all he could handle.

Gamecocks Win

The South Carolina Gamecocks romped on Duke last night, doubling the score on the Blue Devils to take the game, 46-23.

Speedy Woman's Quint To Tussle With Local Five

Reports Say That St. Louis All-Stars, to Play Here Tomorrow, Are No Push-Overers.

A girls' basketball team, asking no favors and granting none on the floor, will meet the Strowd Motor company five tomorrow night in the high school Tin Can at 8:30 o'clock.

These gals have been touring the country, playing high school and local independent teams. They are originally from St. Louis and call the team the St. Louis All-Stars. The girls played teams in both Henderson and Shelby and reports are that they are no push-overs.

A large crowd turned out for the recent Pi Phi-Chi O contest when the action was mild, and the high school tent should be filled tomorrow night for a real scrap. The girls claim they are capable of taking care of themselves, and a look at a group picture on the placards would bear out this belief. They promise plenty of action.

The prices for the burlesque are set at thirty cents for adults and twenty for students.

CAROLINA TEAMS CLOSE PRACTICE IN MUDDY 0-0 TIE

Mixed "Georgia Tech" and "Virginia" Teams Stage Punting Duel in Wet Contest.

Carolina closed the first half of winter football practice yesterday afternoon with the "Georgia Tech" and "Virginia" divisions battling to a 0-0 tie. A great many other players who had played with other teams before saw action, as it was the last practice this quarter. The green "Virginia" team led in first downs 10 to 7.

As a result of the muddy field and rain, the game developed into a punting duel with neither team holding any great advantage. Martin and Jones, who played with both teams, Croom, of "Tech," and Woollen, of "Virginia," all got off frequent good punts for the condition of the field. Both teams were backed to within their ten-yard line on a few occasions, but managed to punt out of these dangerous positions.

First Quarter

Most of the first quarter the punts went back and forth in "Virginia" territory. Late in the opening quarter Bell recovered a fumble for "Virginia" and the green team held the upper hand nearly all the second quarter. "Virginia" led in first downs during the opening half 8 to 2.

During the second half there was not as much punting and both teams rolled up first downs on line bucks and passes. Kay Thompson led the Tech backs during this half, twisting through the line for several nice gains. Croom and Phelps of "Tech" also hit the line for gains. Shaffer was the big gun in the "Virginia" backfield, crashing over tackle for much yardage. Jackson also added some yardage to the "Virginia" total.

Bill Moore, orange end, figured in the two longest gains of the afternoon, each being twenty-two yards on passes. The freshman end took a pass from Phelps during the second quarter for the first long gain, while the other came in the third period on a heave from Phipps.

Moore also played a nice de-

Freshman Boxing Teams Improve Technique Much To Fans' Delight

INTRAMURAL FREE THROW CONTESTS WILL BE RUN OFF

Department Stages Tournament as Aftermath to Basketball Season; Three Rounds Planned.

As an aftermath to the intramural basketball campaign, which comes to a close this week, a free throw tournament will be run off by the intramural department. All members of any intramural quintet may enter and qualifying rounds will be conducted throughout this week from 2:30 to 5:30 o'clock daily in the Tin Can.

Every entry will shoot twenty-five free shots and all men sinking fifteen or more will qualify. All qualifiers will shoot twenty-five more shots, the twenty-five highest men entering the final round.

Every finalist will shoot fifty shots to determine the individual winner, while the team championship will be based on the first two rounds of the tournament; the score of the four highest men on each team counting as the team's total.

Points will be awarded to all individuals and teams entered, the points to be credited to the entrants total in the race for the intramural team championship and the Grail cup.

QUINTS PLAY FOR SEMI-FINAL LEADS HERE TOMORROW

Old East Will Meet Best House; S. A. E. to Play T. E. P. for Fraternity Championship.

All the leading intramural basketball fives wound up their seasons last week and the leaders are waiting the whistle which will set the play-offs in motion on the Tin Can's varsity court tomorrow night. In the battle for the dormitory championship Old East will play Best House, while in the fraternity loop the play-off will bring together S. A. E. and T. E. P. All of these teams except Old East were participants in last year's play-offs.

During the past week two teams fell from the class of undefeated quintets. Chi Psi, which bowed to S. A. E., was the fraternity outfit which met its first defeat, while Swain Hall, in the dormitory circuit lost to Grimes in an upset.

With the records of all the leading scorers in, Dennis Fox appears as the best man in this department, having scored at the rate of seventeen and five-sevenths points a game for the seven contests in which his team saw actual competition. Herman Snyder, Best House star,

CLAIBORN M. CARR

COACH HEARN WANTS ALL pitchers and catchers down at the Tin Can tomorrow as soon after dinner as they can get there. Coach Bunn says that he will have to work with the men early due to the crowded use of the circus tent by the regular winter sports. "Be sure and tell all the battery-men to come early 'cause we'll have to get out of here by four o'clock," Coach Bunn said yesterday at the high school bouts. Little Bunn, Coach Hearn's boy, was up here for the high tourney in the 165 pound class and put up a gallant fight against Aronson of Charlotte who finally won the weight. Little Bunn is a lefty like his pa and is long and lanky, very unlike the old man. He should have the makings of another famous twirler. All lefthanders have an advantage anyway in this diamond racket. Hornaday and I say so anyhow, and so will Red Mathewson. Come along fellas, shak'em up.

NORMENT QUARLES GOT IN a little practice for his old age Thursday and Friday, when he refereed the high championships. I noticed Norm was very alert in the ring and wondered why. Last night in a bull four-quarles the mystery was solved. Quarles and Cliff Glover were boxing councilors at Coach Bill Fetzer's summer camp in western Carolina this past summer. Coach Bill was having the camp championships and Quarles was the referee. Some bout in the lighter weights was close and Norm handed the decision to the winner as he saw it. The loser was enraged and sought his "big" brother. This brute of a man came to the rescue. He climbed through the ropes and started for Quarles. He was a huge fellow but Norm was fast hewing him down when the two were parted. Folks say that was the best fight of the tourney.

THAT WIN OVER GOLDSTEIN reaped Quarles no little reward. Obie Harmon allowed as how he would give Norm two

TAR HEELS WILL CLOSE SEASON AT STATE TOMORROW

Phantoms to Meet Red Terrors At Raleigh in Final Cage Contest of Season.

Carolina's White Phantoms will close their regular season tomorrow night against State's cage team in Raleigh. The contest will have no bearing on the Big Five championship, as Duke has already clinched the title. State has a chance of tying Carolina for second place in the state race, however, with a win over the Tar Heels.

Coach Shepard will probably mix the combinations again, as he did against Davidson, in an attempt to find a Southern Conference winner. This is the last Carolina contest before the tourney which starts this Friday. If none of the new changes work Coach Shepard will have to fall back on the old team of Weathers and Hines at forwards; Aitken and McCachren at guards; and Glace or Beale at center. George Brandt is almost certain of finishing this season at a guard post rather than center. Aitken is pretty sure of getting a try at forward again along with Stuart Chandler. Weathers, who was shifted to guard last week will probably remain at forward.

State, after a slow start, has finished the season with a string of victories, climaxing the win column last week by handing Duke its first and only Big Five loss of the year. State has a strong club and may surprise a lot of people in the conference tournament.

The freshmen teams of the two schools will open the night with a contest to decide the championship of the Big Five yearling teams. Both clubs have two defeats against them, but the Wolflets have the largest number of victories. If the first year Tech team wins, State will hold the individual championship of the freshman race. If the Tar Babies win, they will share top honors with Duke's Blue Imps.

WILL ROGERS TO PLAY IN PICTURE HERE TOMORROW

Famous Comedian to Appear in "State Fair" at Local Theatre;
Two-Day Run for Show.

"State Fair," Fox Film's all-star production, with Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven, and Victor Jory portraying the principal roles, opens the week's bill at the Carolina theatre for a two days' run, Monday and Tuesday. While most of the action takes place in the festive setting of a state fair in a large city, it revolves about the adventures, romances, and aspirations of a farm family.

"Whistling in the Dark," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen adaptation of the recent Broadway stage hit, with Ernest Truex and Una Merkel in the leading roles, is Wednesday's attraction. Truex has the same comedian role he had on the stage.

Prison Show Thursday
Thursday, "Ladies They Talk About," starring Barbara Stanwyck, depicts life in the woman's section of a prison in all its interesting phases. The prison depicted is the San Quentin penitentiary of California. The story presents the actual prison experiences of the co-author, Dorothy Mackaye, the actress who was sentenced to San Quentin after the mysterious death of her husband a few years ago.

A remarkable transition in character, both physical and spiritual, is developed by Ruth Chatterton as "Frisco Jenny" in the first National picture of the same title, Friday.

"Private Jones," starring Lee Tracy, is Saturday's production.

Duke Mitmen Defeat Carolina For Crown

The middleweight bout was wicked with Peyton Brown and Charlie Ruff giving and taking plenty throughout in one of those Pier 6 affairs. All through the first the two boys gave and took, but the second was even better and the crowd was frantic. The third looked to be in Brown's favor, but it was another close one. The hair-line decision went to Ruff.

Tom Parsons stepped in as a light-heavy and suffered the first kayo of his career at the hands of Chuck Winslow. The first round started with a repetition of the middleweight fight, but Winslow caught up with Parsons in the second and floored him three times, after which the towel came hurtling in from the Carolina corner. The end came after 1:13 minutes of the second.

Freshman Fights

The Tar Babies came back strong to take a 5-3 meet from the Duke frosh. After Eutsler won the bantam on a forfeit, Frucht stepped in as a featherweight and took a close decision from Denmark of Duke after a hectic encounter.

Seelza won for Duke in the lightweight bout with a three-round decision over Glenn; and Sipple of Duke scored a technical kayo over Dean in the welterweight fracas. Maness then won Duke's third and last of the meet with a decision over Hornaday in the 155-pound fray.

Ellisberg, the Tar Babies' crack middleweight, came back with a smooth three-round victory over Meachen of Duke. The light-heavyweight and heavyweight bouts were then forfeited by Duke to Owlick and Kanner respectively.

steaks and a day's vacation from work at Obie's Inn if he conquered. After modestly refusing the steaks Sunday, Quarles changed his mind after Monday's workout and demanded pay. "I was just trying to impress Obie," said Norm. "I'll take that vacation later." Then the other day Quarles got this mysterious letter asking for his address and full name. He answered enclosing the desired dope and waited. Soon another letter arrived and Norm found a ten dollar bill enclosed. The letter said, "I promised to give the first man to whip Goldstein ten dollars, and here 'tis."

THE DOPE I GOT IN ANOTHER
bull session about how South Carolina got the Athens, Texas high school team, has been borne out by Jake Wade in the Charlotte Observer. It seems that Jimmy Kitts was coach of the brilliant high team which won two successive national championships and South Carolina wanted Kitts to take up basketball duties for them. Arrangements were about completed and Kitts had persuaded his stars to accompany him to the Palmetto state. The players went to Columbia and registered with the Gamecocks. Everything looked rosy and Kitts promised a Southern Conference championship and what not. An ambitious schedule was arranged for the sophomore year of these boys and the stage was all set. Then the clouds burst, the university's funds ran low and Kitts was left holding the bag. Now comes the break in the conference. The Athens boys are hot nevertheless and they have played together so long they pass to particular spots on the floor instead of to men. That's right, and you will get plenty of chance to see them in Raleigh this week-end.

defensive game, coming down fast under punts and making deadly tackles. Collins, tackle, Croom, fullback, and Barclay, guard who was hindered a great deal by a bad leg, were the other outstanding 'Tech' defensive players. Gardner continued the good play which he has shown all during the practice session and led the play of 'Virginia's' line. Smith and Stevens, two toughies, also played well in the green forward wall.

New Setting To Be Used By Playmakers

Stage settings for Sad Words to Gay Music, the next Playmaker production, will be of an entirely new type, reflecting the farcical nature of the play, according to Samuel Selden, director of the play. The sets were designed by Selden in accordance with the principles which he explained in his book: Stage Scenery and Lighting—that stage settings should put the spectator in the proper frame of mind to understand a play and that they should reveal the nature of the play.

The settings for Sad Words to Gay Music are to be only decorative and in an exaggerated modernistic style, increasing the effect of the high comedy. Simple designs of straight lines and bright colors predominate. The first scene is in green, gold, and black, and the second is cream, blue, and silver. Conventional costume will be carried as far as possible to harmonize with the scheme.

Groups Named To Promote Work Of Student Agencies

ory Board of student leaders was appointed by the President to collaborate with the officials in certain instances and was formed because of the intimate relationships of this division with the student body. Members were nominated jointly by the president of the student body and the chairman of the Administrative Board.

The organization was primarily established as an effective and economical means of grouping together in one administrative unit the several agencies of the campus performing the same function. University functions, including the most important one of teaching, have been well organized with the exception of student welfare. The present period of financial retrenchment necessarily demands thorough integration of resources and it is felt by the President that the creation of this board will serve this end.

Members of the Administrative Board are: A. W. Hobbs, Mrs. M. H. Stacy, D. D. Carroll, C. T. Woollen, R. B. House, W. S. Bernard, W. M. Dey, English Bagby, H. F. Comer, Roy Robertson, R. B. Lawson, R. A. Fetzer, J. Maryon Saunders, Mayne Albright, and F. F. Bradshaw, chairman.

Students on the Advisory Board are: Clairborn Carr, Irvin Boyle, Edward Lanier, W. C. Medford, Ike Minor, Bill McKee, Charles G. Rose, Lenoir Wright, and Haywood Weeks, chairman.

A meeting of the Administrative Board will take place early next week.

HOWARD M. JONES VISITS WITH FORMER COLLEAGUE

Howard M. Jones of the University of Michigan and formerly with the English department here, is visiting Professor George Coffman at his home.

Jones will probably be in Chapel Hill until Wednesday, when he will leave to study in Europe. He will be joined here by his wife Sunday.

A reception for the friends of Dr. and Mrs. Jones will be tendered by Mrs. Josephine M. Jones at her home at 523 East Franklin street, Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. No invitations will be issued.

Freshman Executive Group

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the freshman class in Graham Memorial tomorrow night, it was announced yesterday by President Frank Rogers.

His researches informed him that the meat of reptiles had been held in high regard by the most fastidious palates in great civilizations of the past, and his own experiments convinced him that here was a custom that should be revived for the delight of discriminating people in the modern world. He succeeded in obtaining sufficient capital to launch his venture.

Ray chief engineer, of the Department of Conservation and Development, are maintaining a close contact with the survey.

This year the investigation relates to the Tar, Neuse, Cape Fear, Haw, Deep and Yadkin Rivers. Should the program be continued next year, it is proposed to study streams west of the Blue Ridge. That territory has been made particularly interesting by the announcement of President-Elect Roosevelt's water development program.

"During recent years large industries have been lost to the state because data authoritatively establishing proof of chemical water supply was not available," Dr. White says. "More recently others have located within the State because of proven superior quality. The present program is described to assist in a greater utilization of our natural resources."

STAFF OF "BUCCANEER" GATHERS FOR BANQUET

Thirty members of the editorial and business staffs of the Carolina Buccaneer, the University's official humor publication, met Friday night at Graham Memorial for a banquet, the first entertainment of this kind sponsored by the magazine for its staffs.

Highly informal talks by staff members featured the affair. Brooks Fryer entertained with a number of piano selections, and Billy Arthur further enlivened the evening's program with songs and a special skit.

If present plans go through, the banquet will be installed as an annual affair.

Dr. Dashiell Will Speak To Young People's Forum

Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the department of psychology, will discuss the general subject of science and the human being with the Young People's Forum of the Presbyterian church at 7:00 o'clock tonight. The Forum meets every Sunday night for discussions of various nature, and any interested students are invited to attend.

Playmaker Tryout Monday

The Playmakers will continue the try-outs for experimental productions Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Parts in eight of the plays are yet to be filled. Saturday's try-outs resulted in the selection of casts for the other seven plays.

Intramural rules apply to all games. Forfeits will be charged to both teams if neither appears on the time scheduled for the match.

The address, a discussion of "The Manchurian Problem," will precede the first Weil lecture at 8:00 o'clock in the same hall.

SECOND CONCERT TO BE PRESENTED

Harold Dyer Will Conduct Symphony Orchestra Sunday Afternoon in Music Hall.

The University symphony orchestra, conducted by Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present its second concert of this season Sunday afternoon, February 26, in Hill music hall at 4:00 o'clock.

The symphony orchestra follows a custom of presenting one concert on the campus each quarter. The first concert was given in December and another will be presented in May. The organization numbers fifty musicians from the music school, faculty, and residents of Chapel Hill.

Sunday's program will feature a concerto for violin by Bruch played by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, concertmeister of the orchestra. Other selections on the program will include Massenet's ballet La Source, an arrangement for orchestra of Wagner's Walthers Priestled from Die Meistersinger and Valse Triste by Jean Sibelius.

A. I. E. E. Meets Tonight

A regular meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is scheduled for tonight at 7:45 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall. The principal speaker of the evening will be J. D. McConnell, a University alumnus and plant engineer of the Burlington mills. His subject will be some phase of electrical engineering. The public is invited to attend.

H. M. Jones To Speak

Founder of "Bull's Head" Will Talk
At Weekly Meeting at 4:30.

Professor Howard Mumford Jones, former member of the University English department, will be the speaker at the weekly Bull's Head meeting this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Professor Jones, holder of a Guggenheim scholarship, has been teaching in Michigan since leaving the University. He has written poetry and is the author of America and French Culture and co-author of The Romanesque Lyric. He has also contributed to Scribner's.

While a member of the faculty here Professor Jones founded the Bull's Head bookshop.

DRAMA GROUP TO PRESENT COMEDY DURING WEEK-END

Playmakers Will Produce Former Student's Work, "Sad Words to Gay Music."

Continuing their policy of occasionally producing an original play by some University student or graduate, the Playmakers will present Sad Words to Gay Music, by Alvin Kerr, in the Playmaker theatre Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week.

Kerr's play is built around the character of an American girl who goes to London to visit the mother of her fiancé, a young Englishman whom she has met in New York. The young heroine's irrepressible spirits prove very distressing in the English household, and the worst suspicions of her intended mother-in-law are confirmed when she runs away and marries an old friend of the family.

Intriguing Home-Life

The home-life of this very unusual couple furnishes excellent comedy during the last two acts. The middle-aged husband decides to regain his youth by continually throwing parties, dancing on every possible occasion to the loudest and snappiest music, inventing a bar that pops out at the touch of a button, wearing violently colored pajamas, and, to cap the climax, coming down with a severe case of the mumps.

SALON ENSEMBLE TO FURNISH MUSIC FOR PLAYMAKERS

Thor Johnson's Ensemble Will Play
Overture and Entre-Act Music
Thursday and Saturday.

The Carolina Salon ensemble, conducted by Thor Martin Johnson, will play at the Playmakers theatre Thursday and Saturday evenings in connection with the current bill of the dramatic group featuring Sad Words to Gay Music, a Broadway farce written by a former member of the Playmakers.

The ensemble will present an overture and will play between the acts. This is the sixth campus appearance of the group this quarter. The most recent presentation was in connection with the Playmaker production of George Bernard Shaw's play You Never Can Tell which opened the Shaw-Henderson festival here. The ensemble has scheduled several other appearances before the end of the quarter among which will be a chapel program given before the freshmen assembly.

STUDENTS DESIRE RONALD TAMBLYN AS LOCAL PASTOR

Petition Circulated on Campus Requests Call for Substitute Presbyterian Minister.

A movement sponsored primarily by Presbyterian students in the University has been launched on the campus with the aim of having the local Presbyterian call Reverend Ronald Tamblin to the pulpit of the church, it was learned yesterday.

Reverend Tamblin has filled the pulpit of the church during the illness and since the death of the late Dr. W. P. Moss, and has gained popularity with both students and church members.

The movement has taken the form of a petition to the congregation of the church and sponsors are actively canvassing the campus to secure the names of eight hundred or more students who are well enough acquainted with the work of Tamblin to back the movement.

Capability Cited

The petition states that during his short residence in Chapel Hill, Tamblin has shown himself to be a capable, tactful, devoted and thorough leader and scholar in both religious and intellectual life; and that the presence of a man of his capacity in the community will be infinitely more beneficial than the presence of several less experienced men.

Reverend Tamblin, a graduate of Harvard Seminary, came to Chapel Hill from Greensboro. He is considered one of the most liberal ministers in the south.

Greek Weiner Purveyor Is Cosmopolite And Wanderer

George Colment, Who Operates Chapel Hill's Odoriferous Hot Dog Stand, Is Accomplished Linguist and Has Figured In Rare Adventures.

From olive groves to sizzling weiners. That's the history of George Colment purveyor of hot dogs in the little odoriferous shack adjoining the Carolina theatre.

But George has not always had the satisfaction of the midnight appetites of Hill residents uppermost in his mind. In his youth, years ago on the sunny slopes of the Attic hills that George always mentions with a yearning look in his eye, the desire for romance, for adventure burned in his soul.

Noted Traveler

Modern psychologists would call George's bewilderment weltschmerz, but to George it was only the call of something new over the horizon that drew him on. Leaving his native home, this modern Odysseus started on a travel tour that carried him to nearly every country in Europe and northern Africa.

Linguistic difficulties have never been George's problems. Not only can he speak and write seven languages—Greek, English, Italian, French, Spanish, Turkish, and some dialects of the Romany tongue—but, and what is more interesting and more striking, he can sing in each one of these. George has a fondness for France and Parisiennes, and to show that he really treasured his memories of Marianne in his mind, he offered to sing a couple of bars of Le Marsellaise.

BOTANY DIVISION SECURES VOLUMES ON WILD FLOWERS

Set of Paintings by Mary Vaux Walcott Is Composed of Most Complete Selection of Flowers.

The botany department has just received a five volume set of wild flower paintings by Mary Vaux Walcott entitled North American Wild Flowers. This collection was bought by the library through the Bibliographical Aids fund and represents the most complete selection of North American flowers in existence.

Mrs. Walcott has spent her life in painting and describing these various types of flowers. Many of them were done on geological trips with her husband, Dr. Charles Walcott, former secretary of the Smithsonian institute. The western flowers were frequently painted under very trying conditions. Often, on a mountain side or high pass a fire was necessary to warm her stiffened fingers and body. During a period of ten years she spent from three to four months a season in studying in the Canadian Rockies.

A secret process, which brings out the white very distinctly, has been used in printing this collection.

Monogram Club to Meet

The Monogram club will meet in its regular quarterly session tonight at 7:15 o'clock in room 214 Graham Memorial, according to an announcement by the president. The proposed initiation for new members of the club will be a topic for discussion.

New Walk Planned

Members of Faculty and Student Body Not Decided on Location.

Ten prominent members of the University faculty and student body met yesterday afternoon in front of Graham Memorial, deliberated for over a half of an hour, and failed to reach a decision on a new walk to be laid between Graham Memorial and the gate facing the post office.

Members of the grounds committee, making the survey, stated yesterday that no action on the new walk would be taken until student preference had been ascertained through a selected group of representative students.

Seventeen University men, eight members of the faculty and nine students, were initiated into the North Carolina Alpha chapter of the Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary commerce fraternity, yesterday. Following the initiation a banquet was held in Graham Memorial. John W. Jenkins of the University of Georgia, Grand Secretary and Treasury of the fraternity was in charge of the initiation ceremony.

The members of the faculty initiated yesterday were: Dean D. D. Carroll and Professors G. T. Schwenning, E. E. Peacock, R. J. M. Hobbs, R. H. Sherrill, J. B. Woosley, H. D. Wolf, and W. F. Ferger. The students taken in were: A. O. Carroway, R. D. Covington, R. D. Davis, C. C. Hamlet, O. J. Moore, Anthony Oliverio, Carroll Rogers, Jack Thompson, and Virginia Yancey.

The charter for the Alpha chapter was granted following the petitioning by a small group of the faculty and students. The constitution of the organization provides that not more than one fifteenth of the junior class nor more than one tenth the senior

DR. BEARD WILL COMMENCE WEIL LECTURES TODAY

President Graham Will Preside
Over Talk at 8:00 O'clock
In Gerrard Hall.

Speaking on the "Father's Conception of National Interest," Dr. Charles A. Beard, distinguished American historian and economist, will deliver the first of the annual series of Weil Lectures tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall with President Graham presiding. The series will consist of three lectures on the general subject, "What Is National Interest," the first of which comes tonight and the other two on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this same week.

The theme of Dr. Beard's lectures will be to give a clear conception of what is the national interest which must be maintained by independent nations while they are participating in international cooperative moves. The particular subjects of the other two talks will be "The Development of the Conception—Land and Sea," on Wednesday evening, and "Toward a New Definition of National Interest," on Thursday evening.

Dr. Beard, who, with Mrs. Beard, has been visiting in Chapel Hill for several weeks, is one of the most outstanding men in the fields of history and social science in America today. He comes to the University to continue this annual series of lectures and has had a long line of distinguished predecessors at the task, including former Pre-

JENNINGS SPEAKS AT CHAPEL HERE

Episcopal College Work Secretary Discusses Putting Zest Into Our Lives.

Coleman Jennings, college work secretary for the Episcopal church in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia, yesterday addressed the freshmen and sophomores during assembly period with a short but interesting talk in which he analyzed the two trends which tend to put zest in life.

The problem which confronts us all, according to Jennings, is: "How are we to get zest out of life?" He said that there are two trails to that end; one being a downward trail, and the other an upward trail. "Following the crowd, snobbishness, and filling our lives so full that we have no time for the really worthwhile things in life," were cited by Jennings as examples.

Jennings stated that religion was the best of the upward trends. Many people put religion in the "believe it or not" class, according to Jennings, but belief in the fact that there is a being above us certainly cannot be put in that class.

Giants in The Making

Among the more notable advancements of educational science during the past month is Harvard's creation of "The Society of Fellows," an organization to permit the unhampered research and detailed study of a group of college graduates selected from colleges and universities throughout the land. The Society is composed of the Senior Fellows—a group consisting of the President of the University and the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science, ex-officio, and a chairman and four others appointed by the Corporation and confirmed by the Board of Overseers—and of the Junior Prize Fellows, preferably recent graduates, who will be appointed by the Senior board from recommendations submitted by college deans and presidents.

The Junior Fellow plan reads like a pedagog's dream of Valhalla. Each year the Senior Fellows will select Junior Prize Fellows on the basis of their promise of notable contribution to knowledge and thought. They will devote their whole time to productive scholarship, and preparation therefor, free from academic regulations for degrees. Fellows will have the privileges of any instruction given in Harvard University, but shall receive no credit for courses and will not be candidates for any degrees. Junior Fellows will roam the libraries, laboratories, and class rooms unrestrained, pursuing any course that will lead them forward in their quest for knowledge.

Twenty-four Junior Fellows will be selected. Room rent, board, spending money, amusement, all the normal expenses of an academic life, will be afforded them by the Society. Each Junior Fellow is to receive in addition during his first term $1,250 a year, and $1,500 during the second. Every piece of equipment necessary for research and every item of financial obligation will be met by the Society. Appointments are for three years, with an additional three years if the Fellow gives an indication of production of a fundamental nature.

This Seventh Heaven of higher education is the first step of its kind taken in this country. Frequently employed on the Continent in the past, it has been responsible for the production of many world famous scholars. The situation is ideal, for the Fellow is freed from any financial worry and speculation regarding the whereabouts of the next meal, a plaint so frequent in this day. Harvard will undoubtedly turn out some intellectual giants.—D.C.S.

A Goal for Paul Green

"State Fair" appears at the Carolina theatre today. This production represents Paul Green's second contribution to the American cinema, the first one being "Cabin in the Cotton."

Mr. Green's achievements in the field of legitimate drama were such as to lead one to anticipate continued activity in that field. Abraham's Bosom was awarded the Pulitzer Prize, and The House of Connelly excited considerable comment last year. Both of these plays as well as other of Mr. Green's work have led our dramatic public to see in him a sincere and talented American playwright destined to contribute to the current dramatic scene an interpretation of southern life and manners hitherto unavailable.

It is difficult at first to understand why Mr. Green turned to Hollywood to exploit his dramatic talents. The ready explanation is that he was seduced by the lure of money. But any sort of familiarity with Mr. Green's point of view, philosophy, and artistic purposes will deprive one of this easy explanation. Mr. Green has been a serious, socially-minded artist. It is hardly possible that he would make a rapid roundabout face and discard his whole accumulated philosophy for a high salary.

The explanation for Mr. Green's migration to Hollywood is probably that he sees in the motion picture an artistic vehicle still in its infancy, but none the less attractive for its very pliability. Mr. Green sees in the cinema the most flexible of dramatic forms. A moving picture may achieve effects absolutely inconceivable on the stage. At once, the moving picture allows the dramatist to employ extravagance and finesse in his work. The long shot and the close-up are both out of the question on the stage. With this new flexibility drama should make revolutionary progress.

Strangely enough the majority of our playwrights have turned a cold shoulder on the presumptuous "movie." If they have allowed their plays to be adapted it has been with an air of kindly condescension. Mr. Green has entered the movie world with the frank intention of employing its machinery for the creation of an American cinematic art.

Mr. Green should receive the plaudits of artistic as well as movie going communities throughout the country for his activities in the pursuit of this new end. Hollywood has been, by and large, either arty, or sloppy. Mr. Green should introduce a new element of vitality, reality, and wholesomeness which will lift it above its present commercialism and put it on an equal footing with the other arts.—R.W.B.

Youth's Way Out

The conditions existing in the United States today are far from satisfactory to a large number of the people. The present economic system of capitalism has been under fire since the writing of Karl Marx's famous Communist Manifesto but during the last three years when the United States, the richest nation in the world, has been unable to meet the demands of several million men who are willing and able to work, the situation has become rather acute. Radicals cry from their soap boxes "men perishing in the midst of plenty!" They are further helpful with suggestions of some pet scheme such as socialism, communism, or fascism.

That the present system is far from perfect can hardly be denied; no more can it be denied that there is need either for modification or change. Several thousand banks have closed in each of the years of the depression; today ten million men wander the streets and frequent the bread lines; the farmer who raises products is unable to find a profitable market; foreign trade is at a standstill; nations are going deeper and deeper into debt. And still we find many who can afford million dollar yachts, spend winters in Italy and summers in Canada, contributing very little to the welfare of mankind. Justice?—Certainly not. What are we going to do about it? Nations spend more than five billion dollars each year for useless armaments and maintain tariff walls which, although a part of nationalism, are profitable to no one and serve to drive the volume of international trade to lower levels.

These conditions certainly demand correction; but, before jumping at any of the offered panaceas, we should recall the lessons of history which prove that schemes which are perfect in theory seldom prove so in practice. The economic doctrines of laissez faire as set forth by Adam Smith are as nearly perfect as possible. They have been tried and they have failed. Socialism in theory appears very feasible. What will it prove in practice? Communism? Fascism? Before accepting any of these or other theories and schemes we must consider whether it is even probable that they will prove better than the present system. If so, is the chance worth taking?

A fully satisfactory solution of the problem of an economic system will probably never be found; but the present situation is far from desirable. The solution of the present ills is worthy of the best efforts of our statesmen, our thinkers, and our leaders in all fields. The present day collegian can not too soon turn his mind to this problem. The solution lies neither in rabid radicalism nor in set conservatism; yet, in the suggestions of either group, many valuable viewpoints may be discovered. With this view in mind several campus organizations have brought to the campus representatives of both groups. The TAR HEEL hopes that the students may profit by these lectures.—W.R.E.

SENATOR BINKLE'S DIARY

Monday Well, Diary, here I am back in Washington after a snappy week-end in the country with some of the boys. If they talk any more about cutting our salaries we boys of the Finance committee will have to cut out some of those parties. I find Blotch of California a most interesting fellow, even if he does use the Culbertson system. Think I'll stroll down to the Senate Chamber after while and see how things are coming on my "Preserve the Smythe-Smythe War Memorial" bill.

Tuesday Dear Diary, please remind me to see about changing the brand of mineral water they're serving us now. Some people have no respect for the government, serving us senators that cheap sixty-cents-a-quart stuff. Got a long distance call from Marge, the girl I met on that Muscle Shoals inspection tour. Some trip, and did I lose sleep!

Wednesday We had a good session today, but Blotch and I got bored over that budget stuff and found a good game going on down in the wash room. Lost fifty dollars and that new watch the governor gave me. Mustn't forget about that mineral water.

Thursday Blotch brought up an interesting problem in the finance committee meeting today. Told us all about the new eight-inch golf cup and seemed to think it was quite the thing. I don't think a whole lot of it but the committee voted on it and will return a majority report.

Friday Went out to look over the Lincoln Memorial today. Wonder if that was the same Lincoln who led the charge up San Juan Hill? Not much doing in Washington, but some of the boys on the House Ways and Means are planning a little party in Baltimore this week-end. Mustn't forget to take some fresh Aspirin.

Saturday Called off that Baltimore party. Understand that Hoover will address a special message to Congress Monday and some of the boys must be on hand. Haven't heard this Hoover fellow speak yet, so it ought to be pretty interesting. Forgot about that mineral water again. I'd better put down that blonde's phone number before I forget it, MAIN 3-4501.

"STATE FAIR" AT CAROLINA AGAIN

Paul Green's Screen Adaptation Remains at Local Theatre for Second Day.

Showing for the second day at the Carolina theatre is "State Fair," Fox Film's filmization of Phil Strong's book of the same name. An all-star cast includes Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven, and Victor Jory.

Paul Green, University professor, who was secured by Fox Films to write the screen play adaptation of this picture, has done even a better job than "The Cabin in the Cotton," which was his first attempt at screen plays.

The story concerns the adventures of the Frake family at a big state fair. Abel Frake, the farmer father, has entered Blue Boy, his best hog, for the grand championship. Melissa, his wife, is competing for mince meat and pickle prizes. With nothing to do but see the sights and have a good time, the young Frakes, Marge and Wayne, find the fair a great place at which to learn about life and love.

COMMERCE FRATERNITY HEARS BAKER SPEAK

Professor John C. Baker, assistant dean of the school of business administration, addressed the Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity last night at 8:00 o'clock. Baker's talk was of special interest to the present day student, since it included a discussion of the proper means of preparation for future work and the attitude of a man toward his work. As to unemployment during the depression, Professor Baker pointed out where opportunities are today, and indicated which fields will offer the best opportunities in the future. He concluded his address by saying that it is up to the employed to cooperate fully with the employer.

STUDENTS FORFEIT FOOD FOR ATHLETIC PROGRAM

When curtailment of athletics was threatened, H. H. Ferguson, York, S. The motion passed.

S. A. E. AND OLD EAST TRIUMPH IN SEMI-FINAL TILTS

Winners of Fraternity and Dormitory League Will Play for Championship Tomorrow.

Old East and Sigma Alpha Epsilon won their semifinal intramural basketball games last night in the Tin Can to gain the championships of the dormitory and fraternity leagues respectively. The two teams will meet tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock for the campus championship.

Old East's win was over Best House. The team had plenty of trouble in downing the Best House outfit, but won 27-13. Red Hamlet was the star for the winners, getting twelve points, while his opponent, Herman Snyder, got all but two of his team's thirteen points.

Tom Henson, with eight points, was a big factor in Old East's win, while Dennis Fox, the highest scorer in both leagues during the regular season, was held to a solitary field goal.

S. A. E. Triumphs

Holding its opponent well in check except in the second quarter, S. A. E. gained its second consecutive fraternity league championship over the same semi-final opponent, Tau Epsilon Phi. The score was 30-17.

Allen MacDonald, a substitute, led the attack for the victors with eight points, while Morgan and Parsley had seven and six respectively. Jacobs' nine was the best individual contribution to the T. E. P. cause, while Morty Ellisberg added four to this total.

Other Games

In other intramural games yesterday, Kappa Sigma downed Sigma Nu, 14-13. Phi Delta Chi won from Phi Alpha and Zeta Beta Tau from Sigma Phi Sigma on forfeits.

Today's games are as follows: 4:45—1. Mitchell House vs. Everett. 2. Phi Delta Theta vs. Lambda Chi Alpha. 3. Pi Kappa Phi vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

WHITE PHANTOMS WILL PLAY V. P. I. TO OPEN TOURNNEY

South Carolina, Duke, Carolina And State Teams Seeded as Favorites in Play.

Dr. Ray R. Sermon, chairman of the Southern Conference committee on the basketball tournament, announced Sunday the pairing of teams entered in the twelfth annual cage tourney which opens at 3:00 o'clock Friday afternoon when Carolina and the Virginia Polys break the ice for the event. The games will be run off in Raleigh's new and elaborate War Memorial auditorium.

Washington and Lee's Generals, a quint previously not expected by the sports scribes to enter the tourney, has received the conference officials' invitation to come to the basketball tournament in place of V. M. I. The Cadets have won the same number of games that their neighbors, the Generals, have; but the V. M. I. quint has dropped one more contest than Washington and Lee. The Generals will meet State at 4:30 o'clock, immediately following the Carolina-Virginia Tech contest.

Duke to Play Virginia

The first game to be run off Friday night will be between Duke and Virginia; the event will begin at 8:00 o'clock. Little more than ninety minutes later the Gamecocks will take on Maryland.

ALL THAT GLITTERS IS NOT gold. This old adage was certainly borne out Saturday night. Everyone went over to Duke to see the fights. The gymnasium there was a beauty from the outside and looked good in the basement inside. We all went up to see the fights and there was the ring stretched out there on the floor with no cushion whatever for the boxers' feet, or what not. The ropes were not wrapped enough in each corner, and then about half way through the matches, the darn things collapsed. We got jipped all the way round, paying to see sixteen fights and getting only twelve. I'll take my boxing in the Tin Can, and if we ever have to have a ring announcer, I'll take Jim Lothian. How 'bout that guy at Duke? Erwin Walker said he heard that the announcer had been doing some de-

MANY PROSPECTS SPOTTED BEFORE PRACTICE STOPS

Collins Calls Halt to Winter Games Because of Winter Quarter Examinations.

Coach Collins called a stop to his annual winter football practice session until March 27. The vacation was given mainly as a result of continued bad weather, but Coach Collins also wants to give the squad a chance to get in some studying for the winter quarter exams.

Although bad weather stopped some workouts, many players were found who will probably be of value in next fall's contests. Five games were played.

Many fine prospects among the freshmen were out, and the old stars and reserves showed that they would be in their fighting mood next season. Among the best freshman prospects were Snyder, a hard hitting fullback, Phelps, an excellent passer and a halfback, and Montgomery, another halfback who, however, missed most of the practice games as a result of an injured knee. Montgomery will likely be ready to go by the time practice starts again. Among the freshman linemen showing promise were Moore,

HEEL BATTERIES LIMBER UP IN WINTER PRACTICE

Varsity and Freshman Baseball Batteries Take First Work-out in Tin Can Yesterday.

Coach Bunn Hearn, varsity baseball coach held his first practice for varsity and freshman pitchers and catchers yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. Coach Hearn announced that he would hold practice from now on for pitchers and catchers in the Tin Can starting every afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

There was a large squad working out during the first practice, players coming in from 3:00 o'clock on during the course of the afternoon. Coach Hearn had the players take a few turns around the track in order to get their wind in condition.

Among the outstanding candidates out were Whitley, Crouch, Carr, and LeGore, varsity pitchers and Parker, varsity catcher. The best looking freshman batterymen out were Spiers, Glasgow, Peters, and Mills on the pitching end. King and Lowe looked good behind the bat. Willie Powell, captain of baseball and star third baseman, Bill Croom and Johnny Peacock, letter outfielders, and Norman McCaskill, second baseman, were other varsity men out limbering up.

Conference Pairing Completed Sunday

Kentucky, Alabama, Vanderbilt, and L. S. U. occupied the inside track on the race for the cage title of the Southeastern conference in the basketball tournament which will get under way Friday, at Atlanta.

Pairings of the clubs were completed Sunday, with the tourney favorite, Kentucky, meeting the University of Mississippi in the first round of the tournament play. Mississippi State, Vanderbilt, and Florida gained byes for the first round.

up and Emerson field is gotten in playing condition Coach Hearn will probably move his practice outdoors and call for the rest of the candidates for this season's nine. At present Coach Hearn wants all the batterymen to report to the Tin Can at 2:30 o'clock or as soon after that as possible. The baseball players will have to work early in the afternoon as the boxing, basketball, and track teams use the Tin Can after 4:00 o'clock.

BOXERS PREPARE FOR TOURNAMENT BEGINNING FRIDAY

Levinson, Quarles, and Landis Are Strongest Carolina Possibilities for Honors.

With their last dual meet behind them, the Carolina boxers go into the final lap of training to muster every ounce of strength for the gruelling Southern Conference tournament which comes annually as a grand finale to the season's ring campaigning.

The tournament begins this Friday night at Charlottesville, Virginia, continues most of Saturday, and ends with the finals which will be on Saturday night. Ten teams are entered this year: Virginia, V. P. I., V. M. I., Washington and Lee, Maryland, Clemson, South Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State College, and University of North Carolina.

Coach Crayton Rowe will enter a full eight man team, but he has not decided as yet who the eight will be and he may not do so until just before the team is ready to leave on Thursday. Both Coach Rowe and the team

ILLUSION:

Look at this remarkable lady... with three lovely and perfect heads... all attached to a normal body. She appears to sit on the stage, with the lower part of her body concealed by flowers. She can wink, smile, and nod. She can talk, laugh, and sing—all at the same time. Thousands of people have seen this feat of magic and pronounced it a wonderful sight!

EXPLANATION:

Audiences used to pay an extra fee to go behind the scenes to see how this trick was worked. They discovered that the three-headed woman was merely a reflection in a mirror. The glass showed the heads of three girls but the body of only one. The other two were cleverly hidden so that only their heads showed in the mirror.

CAMELS

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

This "three-headed woman" trick goes 'way back to the early days of magic. Also old is the suggestion that protection for your throat and freedom from coughing can be achieved through some magic trick.

THE EXPLANATION: The easiest cigarette on your throat is the cigarette that is made from the choicest, ripe tobaccos. Cheap, raw tobaccos are, as you would naturally expect, harsh to the throat. Ripe, costly tobaccos are mild, mellow—gentle. The question is whether a cigarette is made from cheap tobacco or the more expensive grades.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

American men and women have smoked more billions of Camels than any other brand because of the appeal of more expensive tobaccos and matchless blending.

Won't you stack up your own experience with a cigarette made from milder, costlier tobaccos...against magic claims about "cigarettes and your throat"?

Try fresh Camels—in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack that seals the freshness and coolness, the mildness and flavor of Camels...inside.

WOMEN'S CHORUS FROM HERE WILL SING AT RALEIGH

Chapel Hill Community Club to Send Group to Annual State
Music Meeting.

A women's chorus of twenty-five voices has been formed by the music division of the Chapel Hill Community club for the purpose of appearing in connection with the annual meet of the North Carolina Federation of music clubs at Raleigh in April, according to an announcement by Professor Harold S. Dyer, musical director of the group.

The Community club presented its first musical project of the year in December when its mixed chorus sang the sacred cantata When The Christ Child Came by Joseph Clokey. The chorus will appear again during commencement week presenting Mendelssohn's oratorio Elijah with the University symphony orchestra.

Other Groups Make Plans

The present project of the group is similar to that being engaged in by several music clubs over the state. Representatives from several towns will form a women's chorus of one hundred voices which will present a program of choral works with several soloists at the Raleigh meet.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, who is national chairman of choral festivals for the National Federation of music clubs, has reported that a number of choral organizations have been formed in the state with the purpose of appearing at the Raleigh Federation meet.

Ellisberg, and Barwick, ends; Hobgood, Evins, and Bryant, tackles; Joyce and Shipman, guards; and Kanner, and Yoder, centers.

Among the veterans probably the outstanding play of the practice was that of the quarterbacks. Woollen, Jones, Martin, and Burnett all played outstandingly and it would be hard to say who will start at the post next fall. Gardner, sophomore, looked plenty good at center, while O'Kelly and Manly, ends; Barrett and Moser, tackles; Caldwell, Stevens, and Blythe, guards; and McIver, center, are the other reserve linesmen who showed up well. McDonald, Shaffer, Jackson, Bell, reserve backs ought to see some action next year.

Among the varsity lettermen back and showing their usual form were Frankel, end; Collins and Tatum, tackles; Barclay and Kahn, guards; Phipps, Daniel, and Thompson, halfbacks; and Croom, fullback.

Liquor Question Is Returned To States

The thirteen-year-old constitutional amendment for national prohibition went back to the states yesterday for a new decision on a 289 to 121 vote in the House of Representatives.

Duplicating the Senate action last week, when it favored submission of a repeal amendment to state conventions by a 63 to 28 vote, the House acted before being in session an hour and a half, cheered on by part of the galleries and in the face of ominous silence on the part of others there. The latter represented many of the prohibition organizations, which served notice at once through the Anti-Saloon League that the issue would be "fought to a finish in state capitals."

accepted the breaks of the Duke meet stoically and are pointing for the tournament where there will be opportunities for the boxers to meet some of their Duke rivals once more in the hope of turning the tables.

The Quarles-Goldstein fight which was the highlight of the dual meets, once more looms as a feature when the boys clash this week-end in the tourney. The first encounter was hotly discussed pro and con, and the impending one is getting just as much, if not more, attention. Quarles pulled the biggest stunt of the boxing year when he lambasted the Cavalier to take a clean-cut verdict and many fans claim he can not only do it next time they meet, but every day in the week and twice on holidays. Others, however, point to the fact that Goldy came back in the last round and imply that he will be wise to Norm and will take him next trip.

Platt Landis, who won three fights in less than a round each, won his last in the quickest time yet, not even having to enter the ring to do it, as Duke refused to put a heavyweight in there with him. Landis, along with Quarles, was the smoothest workman in the ring this year, and his undefeated record and the decisive manner in which he compiled it make him a heavy favorite to come through with the unlimited crown.

Should a return encounter between Tom Fishburne and Nat Lumpkin materialize, some beautiful scrapping will be seen. Lumpkin reached the heights last Saturday with a decisive victory over LeRoy Sides, last year's tournament finalist and recent conqueror of Charley Garner, and he will welcome a match with the flashy Fishburne to redeem himself of the kayo that he suffered at the hands of the Virginian in Chapel Hill a few weeks ago.

Captain Marty Levinson will go to the tournament wars for Carolina for the last time. The colorful little featherweight will finish his last year of college boxing and he hopes to leave the Hill with the championship, something he has never won despite his great record. Levinson, completes with Quarles and Landis, Carolina's strongest possibilities for conference honors.

tective work recently. I'll let Hawk tell the joke though. See my man Walker.

IT'S KINDA AWKWARD TO criticize the work of officials after we lose a contest, but nevertheless, when the same guy apparently works against us on two successive Saturdays, I find it impossible to keep quiet. The fights are over and we lost, consequently my criticisms are aimed at the Carolina officials who signed this fellow Hayes to referee the Duke match after he worked the Penn State bouts. To my way of thinking a man must be both honest and competent to be a good official. Old man Hayes was neither honest nor competent and on top of that he lacked another important requisite, namely: he did not have the respect of the fighters themselves or the crowd.

THEREFORE MY CRY IS, why did Carolina officials accept Hayes? I know for a fact that Coach Rowe protested his working the meet. Some have said that it was too late to change, that it would have cost more, and that it would have been unsportsmanlike. Nevertheless it cost us the Duke fights, the first time a North Carolina team has whipped our fighters.

DESPITE ALL THAT WAS said against protesting the referee, V. P. I. protested the man picked to referee the Gobbler-Tar Heel wrestling matches and he was changed, and then Virginia's protest cut Knight out of working the approaching basketball tourney. Now word comes that Hayes has been selected to referee the conference tourney bouts at Charlottesville, and also that Carolina may not protest. After Hayes got hit Saturday night by a Carolina rooster, he'll be just the man to decide our battles. If we don't protest, why spend the money to send the fighters up there?

AFTER THE DUKE BATTLES, I asked both Lloyd and Levinson what they thought of the decision. "I don't know," said Lloyd, "I thought it was a close fight and that I might have had an edge in three rounds. Maybe a draw was the best thing." Marty felt about the same way. "Last week I crabbled my decision at Penn State, 'cause I thought I won," he said, "but to-night, I don't know. I scored the most clean punches, but I don't know about the in-fighting. A draw was the best thing I guess." Add Warren, Duke coach, wondered whether or not the bout should have gone an extra round. He said that if it was a draw after three rounds, then Marty won on his showing in the extra period. All of which means nothing. Cliff Glover is the boy who was passed up. Cliff won that fight hands down. I think that Hayes got the two fighters mixed up. He must have, 'cause Glover certainly pounded that guy.

battle will meet the winner of the South Carolina-Maryland game Saturday night at 8:00 o'clock and the winner of the State-W. L. game will meet the conqueror of the Duke-Virginia contest in the second round finals, one hour and a half later.

The teams which follow are seeded in their proper order: South Carolina, Duke, Carolina, and State. This means that Maryland which has turned back by decisive scores, both Carolina and Duke will not be among the moneyed clubs. Maryland will draw South Carolina, the heavy favorite in the final contest slated for Friday night, and should be beaten by the Gamecocks.

Of the ten clubs in the Southern Conference, Clemson and V. M. I. will be the only colleges in the family not sending representatives to the cage games.

Neither Carolina nor State should experience much difficulty getting by their first opponents but the big test will come in their second games, if they win. Carolina would probably draw the high scoring South Carolina quint while State would meet Duke in an All-Tar Heel family affair. The Blue Devils are still smarting under the lacing the Wolfpack handed Duke in their gym and should give the fans a real game to talk about.

Carolina's White Phantoms have not been clicking in their recent campaigns, but all the Tar Heels' supporters are claiming that the Carolina five will go far in the tourney, in spite of all pre-tournament forecasts. Carolina fans will remember that an almost-unheard-of Tar Heel quintet came home with the bacon in 1922, 1924, 1925, and 1926.

FRITZ KREISLER TO GIVE CONCERT MONDAY EVENING

Famous Viennese Violinist Will Appear Here Under Auspices Of Phi Mu Alpha.

Fritz Kreisler, world famous violinist, will appear in Memorial hall Monday evening, February 27, at 8:30 o'clock. The concert is sponsored by the local chapter of the Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity.

Kreisler is considered the most cosmopolitan genius among present day performers. Although born in Vienna, he is by heritage a Czech. His musical training was under Austrian and French teachers. Among the greatest musical influences upon his career was the Italian music for the violin of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Since the completion of his conservatory course in Paris, Kreisler has made concert tours which have taken him to every large city in the world.

Never Played Over Radio

Kreisler has never appeared in a radio performance and sincerely believes that the concert stage is the only satisfactory means of musical presentation and that it will again be placed above the radio and "canned music" variety of entertainment now so popular with the public.

Kreisler's program here Monday will include the well-known Beethoven Kreutzer Sonata, a Mozart concerto, and a group of modern compositions including several by the French composers Ravel and Debussy.

Tickets for the concert are now on sale at the office of the department of music and may be reserved by telephone or mail.

COACH RANSON URGES MORE ATHLETIC SPIRIT

M. D. Ranson, coach of the University cross-country team, spoke before the freshman executive committee, Monday night in behalf of the betterment of athletics at the University. He pointed out the growing laxity in athletic training and the lack of support and enthusiasm of the student body in athletic events, and also emphasized the fact that several prominent alumni had expressed their dissatisfaction with the laxity of our athletic code. Coach Ranson urged the council to cooperate with the Monogram club.

The donation of a hundred dollars to the university loan fund for the use of self-help freshmen was also discussed.

DR. ODUM POINTS TO RISE OF NEW SOCIAL FRONTIER

Can Be Broken Down Only by Development of New Social Constitution, He Says.

The United States is facing a new social frontier, according to Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the University institute for research in social science who spoke Monday night in Gerrard hall. This new frontier can be broken down and a new social order established only when the people are willing to draw up a social constitution that will take care of the changing social trends of today, he declared.

Dr. Odum addressed the Y. M. C. A. cabinets and other interested students in an open forum in which he discussed the social trends of the country. Dr. Odum was associate director of President Hoover's committee of sociologists, which recently completed a three-year survey of the United States and on whose report Dr. Odum based his lecture.

Social Constitution Needed

Using the Constitution of the United States as an illustration, he emphasized the need of some form of constitution in all the phases of life. Our failure to adopt a social constitution, continued Dr. Odum, has been due to our fear of social training, of rationalization, in that respect.

He explained that the present disturbed social conditions are due to the incapacity of the people to absorb the results of the highly productive machines. In other words, the success of the projects which we formerly set out to achieve has been the cause for our present failure to coordinate our society with the results of the modern industry and science.

Dr. Odum offered no solution for the present economic and social ills, but presented the challenge of the committee that the people break up their society into units suitable for use in the construction of an embracing social constitution.

Chosen Festival Chairman

R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division, was elected chairman of the Dogwood Festival committee Monday afternoon. Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt was elected vice-chairman, and Felix Grisette secretary-treasurer. Committees are now being appointed by Chairman Grumman to complete the plans for the festival, which will take place in the latter part of April.

William Gaston Candler Oldest Living Alumnus Of University

Attended Law School Here in 1854 and 1855, and Has Practiced For Thirty Years; Reverend William Curtis Prout of Middleville, N. Y., Is Oldest Living Graduate.

In the year 1854-55, during the time when David L. Swain was president of the University and Elisha Mitchell was professor of science, a young man, William Gaston Candler, attended the law school here. At the death of Dr. William M. Richardson, '51, who died a few months ago at the age of ninety-eight, Candler became the oldest living alumnus of the University. Born in Candler, Buncombe county, Candler came to the law school at the age of twenty. Holding what is believed to be the oldest law license in the state, issued at the June session of the Supreme Court in 1885, he has practiced law for thirty years. He was elected to the lower house of the North Carolina legislature in 1865, 1868, 1874, and 1896.

In 1872 he ran for Congress on the Republican ticket against General Robert B. Vance, but, since the district was Democratic, he was defeated. Candler is a life long Republican and advocate of prohibition.

Fought in Civil War

During the Civil War, Candler served as first lieutenant in the sixtieth North Carolina regiment. Upon the death of his father, he was permitted to hire a substitute long enough for him to go home to wind up his father's estate. At this time he was elected prosecuting attorney for Buncombe, Transylvania and Madison counties. He held this office until the end of the war.

Candler still lives in Buncombe county with his family. April 15 of this year will see him entering upon his hundredth year. To be a centenarian has been his ambition for the past thirty years.

Oldest Living Graduate

Eight years after Candler entered the University, another young man, the oldest living graduate of the University, was enrolled. Reverend William Curtis Prout of Middleville, N. Y., received his A.B. degree in 1865. Born at Watauga January 31, 1848 he entered the University in 1862 and graduated at the age of seventeen years and four months. He was the only one that matriculated in his class as the others were enlisted in the Confederate army. He later graduated from the General Theological Seminary in New York and also received an honorary degree from Trinity College at Hartford, Connecticut.

Active in Ministry

Reverend Prout has been very active in the ministry, having served for the past fifty years as secretary of the Diocese of Albany.

At the time of the sixty-fifth anniversary of his graduation he said, "I look back over these sixty-five years and am very grateful for what the University did for me. Although I was a mere boy and did not at all appreciate the situation, there was given me a groundwork of education which has stood me in good stead and never left me unready for the work that I was called upon to do. And I think of the University with great gratitude and great affection."

This statement was part of an article which he wrote for the Alumni Review in June 1930. In this article he also described life during his stay at the University.

DR. MENG TO GIVE ADDRESSES TODAY

China Institute Director Will Continue Forums and Lectures on Campus Today.

Three gatherings today will hear Dr. Chih Meng, associate director of the China Institute in America. He addresses Professor K. C. Frazer's class this morning at 9:30 o'clock in Saunders hall on "International Relations."

At 11:00 o'clock Dr. Meng will speak in the Playmaker theatre on "The Chinese Theatre." Heng himself is deeply interested in the drama and has written a number of plays. The public is invited to attend this lecture.

He will conduct a forum at 12:00 o'clock in the auditorium of Bingham hall for several combined history, government, and commerce classes. Ample opportunity will be given today to ask Dr. Meng any questions that may arise during his lecture. There will be space for visitors to hear him at this forum.

Immediately after lunch Dr. Meng will leave for N. C. State College where he will conduct a similar series of forums and lectures.

Co-ed Tea

There will be a co-ed tea in Spencer hall this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. Elizabeth Johnson and Janie Jolly will serve.

SONG COMMITTEE WILL HAVE MUSIC PUBLISHED

At a meeting of the school song committee yesterday, important steps were taken toward securing publication of a number of school songs now on hand. A number of interested people both outside the University and inside are working for the publication of the available songs. The committee will meet next Tuesday to decide definitely as to the selection of the song.

A discussion took place about the publication and orchestration of Hark, the Sound. A number of calls have been placed for copies of the song by members of the alumni and various orchestras and broadcasting stations have asked for copies and permission to have them orchestrated for bands and orchestras.

RELATIONS WITH LATIN COUNTRIES TO BE DISCUSSED

Dr. Fred Rippy and Hubert C. Herring to Speak Friday on Open Forum Series.

The seventh program of the Open Forum discussion series scheduled here for Friday night in Gerrard hall will bring to the platform two of the best known authorities in the field of Latin American relations in Dr. Fred Rippy and Hubert C. Herring. Their topic, appropriately headed "America in an Interdependent-World" will be discussed from the cultural and social angle, since both are accredited with research into these phases of the Latin American situation.

Dr. Rippy, since 1926 a professor of history at Duke University, is the author of numerous books and magazine articles on Latin America, as well as a distinguished lecturer in this field. A graduate of Southwest Tennessee University in his native Tennessee, Dr. Rippy took his M.A. at Vanderbilt and his doctorate at the University of California, where he afterwards served in the history department. He was Albert Shaw Lecturer in American Diplomacy at Johns Hopkins University in 1928 and lecturer of the Instituto Interamericano of the National University of Mexico in 1929. Several of his best known literary efforts are The United States and Mexico, Latin America in World Politics, and Historical Background of the American Policy of Isolation (written with Angie Debo).

Herring Is Diplomat

Herring is best known for his work in promoting goodwill between the United States and Mexico during the tense days preceding the Morrow mission. As director of the committee on cultural relations with Latin America, he has for many years been active in promoting closer knowledge and understanding between the citizens of the Weil Speaker States Diplomacy Is Based on Conceptions of National Interest.

The ruling formula of modern diplomacy is that it is based upon practical conceptions of national interest, a formula that was one time enunciated by Supreme Court Justice Charles Evans Hughes, declared Dr. Austin Beard, noted historian and former professor of political science in Columbia University, in the first talk of the annual series of Weil lectures on American citizenship. Dr. Beard addressed a large crowd in Gerrard hall last night.

Dr. Beard will deliver the second and third lectures tonight and tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock. The Weil foundation, under which the series is given was established in 1915 through the generosity of the families of Sol and Henry Weil of Goldsboro, the first incumbent being William Howard Taft.

Muddle in Far East

Referring to the troubled situation in the Far East, with which he has had first hand acquaintance for many years, Dr. Beard pointed out that China and Japan have been for some time in effect at war, if theoretically at peace, and that it now appears a nominal war may become at any time an acknowledged war.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRODUCE PLAY BY FORMER MEMBER

New Version of Kerr's "Sad Words to Gay Music" to Be Given Tomorrow Night.

The Carolina Playmakers will honor one of their former members in producing Alvin Kerr's Sad Words to Gay Music, this week-end. The comedy will be produced tomorrow night for the first time in the new version, which was developed after two productions in summer theatres.

After several years with the Playmakers here, during which Kerr took a prominent part in all dramatic activities on the campus—playwriting, acting, directing, and scenery work—he went to New York to gain practical experience in the professional theatre. He has acted in a number of Broadway productions, including: Lolly, with Mary Young; The Novice and the Duke; and Everything's Jake, Don Marquis' sequel to The Old Soak.

Kerr has also acted a part in and stage managed Five Star Final, starring Arthur Byron, both in New York and on the road, and directed a production of the same play in Philadelphia.

A part in Wild Waves with Osgood Perkins and numerous roles in stock productions also contributed to Kerr's knowledge of plays and the theatre. Sad Words to Gay Music is his first long play. He has just completed a new one, Sour Lavender, which the Playmakers hope to produce later. Disregarding the traditional aspiration of playwrights, Kerr says that he never expects to write a novel.

Cabbages and the Price of Fame

It's tough to be famous!

At least that's what Rudy Vallee, America's radio idol, might have told a TAR HEEL interviewer, if the latter gentleman had been able to penetrate the wave of verbal cabbages and grapefruit hovering about the head of the titian-haired crooner. Raleigh received Rudy with open arms—open arms loaded with the odiferous eggs of the confirmed heckler. In short, Rudy "got the bird."

But don't think that Vallee is just a place between two hills. Rudy got tough. He fought back, with hand and tongue. Only the intervention of police officers prevented a pitched battle, Vallee versus Heckler, on the middle of the dance floor. Rudy said later that he "had a head ache."

Such rank exhibitionism on the part of both orchestra leader and the heckling audience bodes ill for the reputation of North Carolina public gatherings. The situation at Monday night's dance is in some ways analogous to the famed "tank town circuits" traveled by second rate stock companies in the latter decade of the nineteenth century. Then you had to be tough, and the price of fame was a barrage of rotten tomatoes.—D.C.S.

A New Deal From the S. E. C.

The Student Entertainment Committee has decided to have only one more feature this quarter and only one for the entire spring quarter. The student in the college of liberal arts is given at the beginning of every quarter a book of three tickets for which he pays a fee for entertainments obtained by the committee, but now the committee has pleaded lack of funds and is only having three entertainments for the winter and spring quarters.

In spite of this lack of money the student who pays for his tickets has a right to expect entertainment, but does he get it? At the first of the quarter the Shan Kar dancers appeared as a presentation of the committee. They were paid an amount which was not in proportion to the amount of funds and which was greatly out of proportion to the amount of enjoyment obtained by the average student.

It would be much better for all concerned had the committee gotten someone for less money who would have really entertained the student and at the same time enabled him to see the features which he rightfully expects.

The Woman's College of the University has been troubled financially quite as much as we have, but they have had entertainments which were enjoyed by those attending and can be said to have had a greater value for their price and to have been superior to those of the University proper. Recently they have had Drew Pearson, one of the authors of Washington Merry-Go-Round, to speak to them. From all reports everyone present had a very entertaining evening and paid only about a fourth as much for their entertainment than did we for the Shan Kar dancers.

It is our belief that the Student Entertainment Committee can and should have features which cost less, have more value from the standpoint of enjoyment, and appear more often than one and two times a quarter. They can easily give the student what he desires without unnecessary expense and in this way avoid the need for money which they are stressing.—P.G. Give and Take

"The lecture system is a process by which the contents of the professor's notebook are transferred by means of a fountain pen to the student's notebook, without having passed through the brain of either. As for recitation, if anything is to be learned, it is the student who should question the teacher, not the teacher the student. Did anybody ever get an education by being a sponge?" Thus does Mr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College fling a challenge at a fundamental concept of modern higher education. Mr. Holt claims that he received much more of an education from his colleagues with whom he rubbed elbows in an editorial room while he was an editor than from his college professors who were paid to educate him.

In his courageous stand, Mr. Holt is attacking the basic definition of education. Education has come to have a specialized meaning of training in "book-learning," and it is eternally a question to be thoughtfully considered as to whether or not a knowledge of books may be regarded as a preparation for the business of living. There are in general two types of students at our universities: first, the student who is preparing himself for an academic life; second, the student who wishes a cultural background for a life which will probably not be directly concerned with the world of research and letters. Although our university enrollments consist mainly of students of the second types, professors unconsciously are inclined to treat them all as potential scholars.

Clearly, to a certain extent, both types of student can and must benefit by a certain period of playing the sponge. The would-be scholar, needing a more thorough cultural background than the casual student, will have to play the sponge for a greater length of time. Yet in the case of each type of student, the ideal would seem to be approached when the academic curriculum so arranges itself that, as more and more technical background material is mastered, so correspondingly more and more opportunity is open for the students to contribute themselves to scholarship. Be the contribution of the student ever so humble and unimportant, still the very act of original and individual and personal contribution cannot but insert life and reality into an otherwise drab teacher-student feeding process. Let there be less consumption of fountain pen ink and more give and take in the realm of ideas.—B.B.P.

With Contemporaries

A Distressed Southland

Dr. Wilbur Gee of the University of Virginia recently conducted an investigation into the causes of research sterility in the southern professor, and he found that the "creative spirit within him is crumbled into dust," by the excessive hours of teaching and by financial struggle.

Further investigation shows that southern professors carry a teaching load about thirty per cent heavier and are paid approximately a third less than their colleagues in other parts of the country.

Dr. Gee believes that these conditions have played a prominent part in driving many southern scholars of note across the Mason and Dixon line.

It is rather disheartening to note that this state of affairs is threatening to become even worse; witness the appropriations cuts for the institutions of higher learning being considered in North Carolina. The University of North Carolina has long been considered the educational center of the south; it has enjoyed not only an American vogue, but a European one as well. During the past ten years many outstanding scholars have got their degrees from the Chapel Hill school. But the state Legislature is contemplating a budget reduction for the university that may well cause the loss of many able members of the teaching staff.

Southern lawmakers are unique in that they will gladly spend millions on paved roads and convict support, but as little as possible on higher education. "Me 'n' my paw didn't have no book-larnin'. What uz good enuf fer me oughta be good enuf fer my chillun."—Auburn Plainsman.

According to tests made by Dr. N. W. Marston at Radcliffe College, Tufts College, and Columbia University, all men prefer a million dollars to a perfect love affair, while ninety-two per cent of the girls preferred the love affair.—Butler Collegian.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

The worth and usefulness of the human soul cannot be judged by the color and texture of the skin. But the white race has set between itself and the rest of humanity a wall that has defied and will defy time to break it down. We glory in the fact that our skin is white and in the belief that our intelligence is superior to those whom we consider less fortunate than we in the matter of being born. We lay first claim on the Creator's greatest concession to mankind—the power to reason.

Common references to a Negro are "he can't tell what's best for himself," or "he's all right, if kept in his place." Regarding the first, the distinguishing feature between man and animal is the ability to think. The first law of nature, if we accept science, is self-preservation. No one will deny that the Negro race, as much so as any other, obeys that instinct and proves its capability to live in a competitive society. For what manner of man, unless he be the heir to his father's wealth, can exist to-day without taking thought of some kind? It is a long jump from slavery of mind and body to a position not unfavorable when compared to a race that has centuries of culture and intellectual achievement behind it. But so successfully have the Negroes made the jump that they have become a part of a social structure in a way that should excite admiration. They are not a brake on the speed of progress to slow it down; rather, they are a source of power and could be used to better advantage. Compare them to a stream of water flowing over a dam. The dam causes the stream to overflow lands that would be rich and fertile. Perhaps even as is, there are water lilies and grasses growing. But tear away the dam, drain the land, and watch how quickly new and more useful plants will bloom. The flooded banks typify our white-dominated society, the dam our intolerance and prejudice.—C. K. Carmichael.

sound," he asserted, "the policies and decisions of the United States are to be based on national interest, not an some theory of doing good to China in her conflict with her Japanese adversary."

What Is National Interest?

"What then is the national interest of the United States in China?" Dr. Beard asked. "Is it the American trade in tobacco, oil, and other commodities in Manchuria and China proper?"

"Is that trade of sufficient significance to warrant the United States to pour out blood and treasure in a war? How and by whom is the calculation and determination to be made? If that interest is insufficient warrant war, then the problem of diplomacy for the incoming administration should be conducted for the supreme purpose of keeping the United States out of the Far Eastern broil. No assertions, claims, or demands should be made which could possibly lead to war.

"If on the other hand national interest is not the supreme consideration controlling the diplomacy of the incoming administration, what is to be the controlling principle of rule? Some theory of peace? Some resolve to protect the weak everywhere, no matter how far removed from the American interest? If this latter alternative is to be the law of diplomacy, what is to be the limit imposed on sacrifice of the United States on behalf of the threatened and opposed? If the United States is to intervene in the affairs of China against Japan, why not in India against Great Britain?"

Defined by Fathers

With this introduction, Dr. Beard turned to an examination of the conception of national interest as put forth by the founders of the American republic. He examined the writings of the fathers and showed from their statements that they based their policies on national interest, that they constantly used the term, and gave it a realistic interpretation. In their minds, it included national defense, territorial integrity, the protection and promotion of commerce, and the possible use of the navy during quarrels of European powers extending to the western hemisphere.

Dr. Beard declared that Alexander Hamilton was one of the creators of the system of "Machtpolitik" which long afterward became dominant in Germany. Thus the original interest covered American territory and people and also commercial activities in all parts of the world.

Herring has had wide experience as a traveller, lecturer, and writer upon international relations, particularly with the countries of Latin America. He has edited several books on Mexican problems, in addition to several in the field of church educational work, and has contributed articles to the New Republic and various religious journals. He is at present secretary of the committee for education in social relations for the Congregational churches.

Friday's lectures, originally scheduled for Thursday night, were postponed to make way for the Weil lecture in Gerrard hall Thursday. The last program of the series is planned for the following Friday with Norman Thomas, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy and Socialist candidate for president in 1928 and 1932, speaking on "The Program For Action." The committee is busy on arrangements for various talks and luncheons being arranged for the speaker. Don Shoemaker, a member of the Open Forum discussion committee, will preside over this Friday's lecture program.

BARRERE LITTLE SYMPHONY GROUP TO PLAY AT DUKE

Stringfield Selection Will Be Included in Program on February 22 in Page Auditorium.

The Barrere little symphony, conducted by Georges Barrere, well known flute player and composer, will appear in concert at Page auditorium of Duke University, Tuesday evening, February 22, at 8:15 o'clock.

The Barrere little symphony was founded in 1914 and was the first small symphonic ensemble to appear in concert in this country. The organization is now an established feature of concert series in musical centers. The group is made up of thirteen musicians, all proven artists.

One of the feature selections of Barrere's program in Durham will be Lamar Stringfield's Cripple Creek from the Southern Mountain suite. Stringfield studied flute with Barrere at the Institute of Musical Arts in New York City, and since the completion of his course there has submitted several compositions to Barrere which the latter has played on his concert tours. Among these are From a Negro Melody and the Southern Mountain suite.

Papers Mailed Out For Latin Contest

Contest papers were mailed out yesterday by E. R. Rankin of the extension department to state high schools in the annual interscholastic Latin competition conducted by the University. The contest will take place throughout the state Friday morning.

Faculty members of the University Latin department will grade the papers and immediate announcement will be made of the winning entrant. The scope of the contest will include two passages of sight translation from comparatively easy Latin and questions of forms and syntax based on these passages. Three hours is the maximum time allowed for the completion of these tests.

Roxboro high school won the competition last year.

"Whistling in the Dark." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen adaptation of the recent Broadway stage hit, and starring Ernest Truex, showing today at the Carolina theatre.

These two stars, in the leading roles as a pair of lovers captured by a band of crooks and compelled to aid them in their ill-planned, have been surrounded by a cast of screen veterans. These include Edward Arnold, John Miljan, C. Henry Gordon, John Hines, Joseph Cawthorn, Pendleton, Tenen Holtz and Marcelle Corday.

"Whistling in the Dark" was authorized by Laurence Groves and Edward Childs Carpenter who evolved a new type of amusement by turning melodrama into material for laughter. The screen production was directed by Elliott Nugent, former Broadway playwright and actor who co-directed "The Most Piece" and "Life Begins."

Old East and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, winners respectively of the dormitory and fraternity league championships of the 1933 intramural basketball campaign, will meet in the Tin Can tonight at 8:00 o'clock for the campus championship. Old East gained the right to participate in this game by downing Best House in the playoff for the dorm league leadership, 27-13, while S. A. E. won from Tau Epsilon Phi, 30-17, for the fraternity supremacy.

Both of tonight's contestants came through their eight game schedules without suffering a defeat. Old East's first victim was Grimes, which bowed to the tune of 41-19. Everett was the next quintet to fall before the rush of Old East's powerful attack, losing by 58-6.

Next in order came Old West, which lost, 65-12; Independents, against which Old East set the season's high scoring mark as it triumphed, 102-21; Ruffin, the 1932 campus champion, which bowed, 29-20; Carr, which forfeited; Manly, which lost by 58-11; and the Crescent Cafeteria.

THREE CHAMPS IN 1932 MIT EVENTS TO GUARD TITLES

Fred Lloyd of Duke, Charlie Garner of State, and Reiss, Virginia, Defend Crowns.

Of the seven champions in last year's Southern conference boxing tournament, three will be back to defend their crowns in this year's clout carnival which begins Friday night at Charlottesville. Fred Lloyd of Duke, bantamweight title-holder who fought all this season as a featherweight, will drop down to the 118-pound limit for the tourney; Charlie Garner of State will defend his welterweight crown; and Lewis Reiss of Virginia will have his light-heavyweight title on the block. Bobby Goldstein of Virginia, featherweight champ last year for the second time, fought as light-weight all this season and will continue to do so in the tourney.

John Watt of South Carolina, winner of the lightweight championship, was forced to turn professional during the past summer in order to earn money enough to finish college and will, of course, be ineligible to fight in the tournament. Chandler Page of Mississippi A. and M., who knocked out every one of his opponents except Peyton Brown to win the middleweight title, and Doyle Hill of Tulane, who won the heavyweight championship for the second time, represented colleges that are now in the new Southeastern conference and they will not be back to defend their laurels at Charlottesville. Last year there was no 155-pound title-holder, as that fighting division was not inaugurated until this winter.

Virginia Is Defender

Virginia won the tournament with a total of sixteen points, while Tulane and Duke were tied for second place with eight points each. North Carolina State College, South Carolina, and Mississippi A. and M. were

Despite the precocious idea that Virginia's boxing team is unbeatable at home and regardless of the unexpected setback at Duke last Saturday, Carolina fans are enthusiastic over the chances the Tar Heels have for titular honors in the annual Southern conference meet set for this week-end in Charlottesville. Not since the halycon days of 1930 have Rowe's proteges garnered a championship, but this year with a well-rounded team of clever scrappers Carolina will enter the tourney as the club Virginia must lick to regain the first place she has held these last few years.

Lacking the potential team strength to establish themselves favorites, yet boasting outstanding individuals, State and Duke will prove plenty dangerous to would-be victors. Washington and Lee, Maryland, South Carolina, V. M. I., and V. P. I., also offer individual battlers of high calibre.

Defending the championship he won last year, Captain Lloyd of Duke is a heavy favorite to repeat. Lloyd has dropped from the 125 class where he has fought all year without losing a decision. State's Bilisoly and Hahn of Virginia are other first class contestants who can throw gloves from all directions. Our own Cliff Glover may pull a surprise.

Carolina's edition of Harry Greb—Captain Marty Levinson—leads the 125 sluggers and barring accidents should cop his first southern title. Levinson will meet a tough one in Gordon Rainey of Virginia and Crews of V. M. I.

THREE TILTS END BASKETBALL RACE

Phi-Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Phi, And Mitchell House Take Games as Season Ends.

Three games brought the 1933 intramural basketball season to a close yesterday in the Tin Can. Tonight's Old East-S. A. E. setto for the campus championship will be the final contest of the year for the intramural cagers.

Phi Delta Theta downed Lambda Chi Alpha in the best of yesterday's games, 24-14. The victory was the seventh in eight starts for the Phi Delt outfit and gave it a tie with Chi Psi and Zeta Psi for second place in the fraternity league standings. Hershey was the leading scorer for the winners, getting eleven points, while Mosier got five more. Ashcraft scored nine for the Lambda Chi Alpha team.

Pi Kappa Phi Wins

Pi Kappa Phi defeated Phi Sigma Kappa for the latter's sixth setback of the season, 20-15. Cameron with eight and Winstead with six stood out for Pi Kappa Phi, while Misenhimer's seven points were the best single effort by one of the losing five.

Mitchell House bowed to Everett, 34-32, in an overtime contest. Ross scored eighteen points for the losers to take individual honors for the game. Rabinowitz and Robbins scored eight each for the winners, the latter scoring the overtime goal which decided the contest.

CAPTAIN BOBBY GOLDSTEIN
VIRGINIA-NATIONAL COLLEGIATE LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION-THREE CONFERENCE
FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMPION

The lightweight division in Doyle lost a close decision to Goldstein and was floored by Quarles.

J. U. Watts, of South Carolina, won the Conference title in this 135 pound division a year ago by defeating Tom Fishburne of Virginia in the semi-finals and LeRoy Sides of Duke in the final bout. Watts is doing some professional fighting as a means of working his way through school. Sides and Fishburne are welters this year.

Burns, Goldstein, and Quarles constitute a triangular threat at the lightweight trophy, with Doyle, Yeggi, and Duke's Rip Scott and South Carolina's Rimmers as possible dark horses.

Captain Micky Doyle of V. M. I. and Joe Yeggi of V. P. I. are two dangerous contenders who may slip home under the wire.

FREE THROWING MEET UNDER WAY

Fifty-Eight Men Enter Contest Sponsored by Intramural Department; Fawcette Leads.

Fifty-eight men had entered the intramural free throw competition at the end of yesterday's play. The qualifying round is being run off all this week and anyone wishing to enter should report to the Tin Can between 2:30 and 5:30 o'clock.

All entrants shoot twenty-five fouls; all those making good on fifteen or more of their throws qualify. Every entrant receives one point of intramural credit whether or not he qualifies.

All qualifying men will shoot twenty-five more shots next week, and the best twenty-five men on the basis of fifty shots will be selected to shoot fifty more, the winner being decided on the best record out of the hundred shots.

Points are being awarded to teams entering the competition as well as to individuals.

Fourteen men had qualified at the end of yesterday's shooting, with Fawcette, of Pi Kappa Alpha, leading the field with a record of twenty-one successful throws. Following close behind the leader were: Spencer, Pi Kappa Phi, 20; Burnett, Delta Kappa Epsilon, 19; Trainer, Beta Theta Pi, 18.

FIRST BASEBALL PRACTICE FINDS MANY REPORTING

Coach Bunn Hearn to Begin Second Year as Diamond Coach With Many Candidates.

With the weather looking more like spring every day and both boxing and basketball scheduled to come to a close with the conference tournaments this week-end, baseball is rapidly taking front position among University sports.

Coach Bunn Hearn called practice for all the varsity pitchers and catchers Monday in the Tin Can. Yesterday between 3:00 and 5:00 o'clock the Can was well filled with ball players out for nearly every position on the team.

Starts Second Year

This will be the second year as baseball coach at the University for Coach Hearn and he will have a much better chance to put out a winning team than last season, as he will be better acquainted with the material. The former Giant pitcher will have many players on hand but will not have some of the stars of last year.

Among the pitchers Captain Longest, George Hinton, Jim Shields, and Tom Edwards will all be missing while Dick Patti-

Well, that's something about cigarettes
I never knew before the cigarette that's Milder

the cigarette that Tastes Better

I'd never thought much about what's inside a Chesterfield cigarette. But I have just been reading something that made me think about it.

Just think of this, some of the tobacco in Chesterfield—the Turkish—comes from 4000 miles away! And before it is shipped every single leaf is packed by hand. All because Turkish tobacco is so small and delicate.

Of course I don't know much about making cigarettes, but I do know this—that Chesterfields are milder and have a very pleasing aroma and taste. They satisfy—and that's what counts with me!

third with five each, and Georgia, Washington and Lee, and University of North Carolina each scored three points to tie for fourth place. Georgia Tech, Alabama, Maryland, V. P. I., V. M. I., Florida, Louisiana State University and Clemson were all entered, but failed to score a point.

In the tournament, the champion scores five points for his college and the runner-up three. Semi-finalists receive no points. Carolina's three points came as a result of Marty Levinson's reaching the finals, where he was defeated by Goldstein for the featherweight championship. Besides the ten points scored for the Cavaliers by Goldstein and Reiss, six more were garnered for them by Tom Fishburne who went to the lightweight finals, and Fenton Gentry, who had to forfeit his bout in the finals to Hill.

Tar Heel Sophs Enter
Norm Quarles and Sam Giddins, the two Tar Heels who go to the conference wars for the first time, are both sophomores and have excellent chances of coming home with titles. It has been done before by sophs Lloyd and Garner, both being second year men when they copped their crowns last winter. Norm Quarles figures to get his toughest opposition from Goldstein, while Giddins, if he works as a middleweight, will probably get his from Red Smith of Virginia, whom he has already defeated. Should Giddins work in the new 155-pound class, Dunaway of State and Stuart of Virginia will be his stiffest opponents.

Oddly enough, Marty Levinson and Platt Landis, Carolina's other two strong title possibilities, may encounter their hardest fights from men whom they have already kayoed in a round apiece. Gordon Rainey of Virginia was flattened by Levinson here, but he has since come back strong and threatens to give the Tar Heel captain a better tussle next time. Stephens of State has likewise recuperated from his one round flop at the hands of Landis, and he has been going like a house on fire ever since. Stephens and Platt may get together in the finals, for this pair look to be the cream of the heavies.

sall, first string catcher also graduated. In the infield the two main losses will be Paul Dunlap, first sacker, and Smoky Ferebee, shortstop. Both were heavy hitters and at times sensational fielders. Tom Blythe and Tony DeRose are the only outstanding outfielders not back.

Plenty of Material
Coach Hearn will have plenty of men out for every position, unless it is third base, and that will be filled by Captain Willie Powell, a star player for the past two years. Among the pitchers Griffith is probably the outstanding candidate. The big righthander has had a bad ankle for the past few days but it seems to be healing up all right at present. Crouch and Whitley are the other outstanding varsity material out for the mound, while Brandt, an outfielder last year, Scarborough, Brown, LeGore, star javelin thrower, Carr, and Frankel are other juniors and seniors out. Up from last year's freshman team are Joyner, Webster, and Manly, all hurlers.

Mathewson, Parker, Tatum, and Peacock, a letter outfielder, will be the old men out for the backstop while Farrell and Strayhorn are up from the 1932 yearling team. Dixon, who is out of school now but likely to return for the spring quarter, is a letterman and the main candidate for first base. Fox, out last year, and Berry, Hodges, and Temple, new candidates, are others out for the initial sack.

Weathers, a letterman, McCaskill and Leonard, reserves, and Rand, a sophomore are out for second base. At short Phipps and Harrell will be out while Captain Powell is the only man trying for the hot corner. Hornaday and Croom, both lettermen, and Vick and Zaiser, sophomores, are the foremost outfielders.

St. Helena Quartet Will Appear Here Next Sunday

give Quarles and Goldstein a smart fight, as will Burns of Maryland.

State's fine glove slinger, Captain Garner, is favored in the 145. Garner is defending champ but will have a time beating Nat Lumpkin of Carolina who recently handed Garner's conqueror, Sides, a neat shellacking. Mincer of W. and L., Fishburne of Virginia, and Kanner of Maryland are other leading contenders.

Another State leather thrower who is slated to go far is Bill Dunaway who is yet to taste a defeat in southern boxing circles. Dunaway packs a KO wallop in either mit and should beat Stewart of Virginia, and Pound of W. and L.

165

Sammy Giddins, Smith of Virginia, Fabri of State are the cream of the 165's. All of these boys are clever boxers and can uncork powerful punches.

175

Though he suffered a knock-out this year by a Florida man, Reiss of Virginia is the outstanding battler in the 175 weight. A defending champ, Reiss is particularly tough to beat at home. Kostainsek of V. M. I., is a tournament fighter, while Red Negri of V. P. I., who has gone down a weight will offer stubborn opposition. Negri extended Landis to four rounds—which is some feat in itself.

Heavyweight

Popeye Landis is the people's choice for championship among the big avoirdupois boys. Landis is undefeated this year but Collins of W. and L. is given an outside chance.

Eagle Scout Smoker

The Eagle Scout club smoker is scheduled for tonight in 209 Graham Memorial at 8:15 o'clock. All Eagle Scouts in the University are invited to be present.

English Tea

Members of the English department will be entertained at a tea in the lounge of Smith building from 4:00 to 6:00 this afternoon.

Old East's scoring average has reached the amazing proportions of fifty-eight and six-sevenths points a game in the seven games which the team actually played, while S. A. Paper First Issued in 1892 With Baskerville Editor and Murphy Managing Editor.

With the current issue THE TAR HEEL observes its fortieth birthday. On the morning of February 23, 1892, the University received its first copy of the publication which in four decades has grown from a struggling weekly to a daily of importance and power.

The rise of a weekly paper was to a large extent the result of the general expansion of the University during the early nineties. President George T. Winston, who had been inaugurated in 1891, quadrupled the enrollment in four years and encouraged the pursuit of such extra-curricular activities as debating, football, and journalism. As the University began to widen its scope, the need for a permanent record of campus events and achievements was felt imperative.

Origin Unknown

In just what manner the paper originated is still a matter of conjecture. Perhaps, like Topsy, "it just grew." At any rate, the most reliable source of information is to be had from Walter Murphy, first managing editor of THE TAR HEEL.

In an article written last year he gave his version of the publication's founding. In the fall of 1892 he and the late Charles Baskerville decided to lay before the Athletic Association a proposal for that organization to sponsor a paper which would be the official organ of the student body. The year previous there had appeared on the campus for the first time a student weekly, entitled The Chapel Hillian. It, however, expired before the end of the school year from lack of support.

Staff Appointed

The plan met with unanimous approval, and the Association appointed a board which consisted of Baskerville, editor, Murphy, managing editor, and W. P. Wooten, A. B. Andrews, Perrin Busbee, Caswell Ellis, and Crawford Biggs, assistant editors. Of this original staff, Murphy and Andrews are still active in University affairs as members of the board of trustees of the Greater University.

Baskerville and his assistants set to work in a tiny printshop located on the upper floor of a store room in the house next to the old Methodist church. After feverish meetings to determine that vague instrument known as a policy and an intensive but all (Continued on last page)

CHIH MENG SAYS CRISIS CAUSED BY JAPANESE POLICY

Chinese Speaker Declares Conditions in Manchuria Challenge Peaceful Countries.

"The crisis in the Far East is not incidental," declared Chih Meng, noted Chinese lecturer, who addressed an audience in Gerrard hall Tuesday night on "The Manchurian Problem." Instead, added Dr. Meng, it was brought about by a constant and ruthless expansive policy of Japan.

Dr. Meng conducted several forum discussions yesterday in addition to his lecture Tuesday night. He will proceed today to State College where he will lead similar seminars on Sino-Japanese problems.

Scores Japanese Policy

Dr. Meng expressed the view that the warlike conditions in the Manchurian area is a challenge to all liberty-loving and peace-loving people of the world. Japan's repeated encroachments in the territory accompanied by shady denials of any attempt on her part to take Manchuria were the reasons for the recent conflict. Japan's Manchurian policy is much the same as in the famous Korea affair of 1910 when, although Japanese statesmen swore that it would not interfere in that country, it annexed it under force with the pretext of self-defense.

Dr. Meng pointed out how the Japanese government took advantage of China and Manchuria during the flood and economic panic of 1931. The League of Nations intervened in Japan's policy of occupying Manchuria with force, but that country rebuked the League with the argument that it had insufficient facts to prove that any real attempt on her part to capture Manchuria. Japan, however, recognized the independence of the contested country before the League's official report of the (Continued on page two)

Student Assessed Damages For Alleged Injuries To Roommate

Peter Hairston Awarded Forty-Nine Cents Actual and One Dollar Punitive Charges From Bill Markham in Sensational Two-Day Trial; Courtroom Filled to Overflowing.

As the result of alleged injuries sustained in a fight with his roommate, Bill Markham, two weeks ago, Peter Hairston, first-year law student, was Tuesday night awarded forty-nine cents actual and one dollar punitive damages after a sensational two-day trial which created great interest in the law school.

An over-flowing audience heard the jury return with a judgment of forty-nine cents actual and $100 punitive damages in favor of the plaintiff, Hairston. Judge J. H. Chadbourne subsequently reduced the amount to one dollar before he would sign the judgment.

Ladies Embarrassed

The fight grew out of an altercation in contract class between the two men when Hairston is said to have jibed Markham upon his failure to go on a basketball trip and a fight ensued. Conflicting evidence was presented Monday night as to which of the two struck the first blow, and counsel later debated the question of whether or not the language used by either of the

The different conception of national interest in territorial and commercial expansion were explored here last night by Dr. Charles Austin Beard, noted historian and author, in the second of the annual series of Weil Lectures on American citizenship. The third and final lecture will be presented tonight in Gerrard hall at 8:00 o'clock.

Dr. Beard in his lecture last night started with an interpretation of the views of Jefferson and the Democratic Party. Jefferson, he said, had a "clear-cut conception of the American nation as a homogenous people capable of self-government. He believed that its economic base should be agriculture—the agriculture of the small and independent farmer. Jefferson opposed turning American people into factory hands dependent for their livelihood upon the casualties and caprices of trade. He believed that the 'mob of the great cities' were sores on the body politic.

"Under the administration of Jefferson and his party Louisiana was acquired, Florida, and the West to the Pacific. This territory was largely unoccupied and could be made the home of independent farmers. While the planting aristocracy sought to profit from this expansion, it was defeated by the verdict of history. True to its tradition the Democratic Party in 1900 opposed the annexation of dis-

Fat, Forty, and Ah—Fair

THE DAILY TAR HEEL settles back in its arm chair today and observes that it is nearing middle age. Forty years old, but you wouldn't think it, for we don't show our age.

Forty years ago today the University Athletic Association met and elected one Charles Baskerville, now in the ranks of departed alumni, as the first editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. His first editorial explained the task of the baby publication. "The growing demands of the University have shown the need of a paper. . . . The University Athletic Association, regarding itself as a means by which such a need could be supplied, at a stated meeting elected a board of editors and a business manager . . . space will be assigned . . . for the thorough discussion of points pertaining to the advancement of the University. . . ." Thus did THE DAILY TAR HEEL utter its first cry, and opening its little blue eyes and twisting its toes in a chubby hand, grow rapidly to the position it now occupies.

The best (for it is the sole) college daily between Pennsylvania and Texas, looks back into its album on this day and resolves to pursue its policy of serving the campus as did that first journal of the 'nineties, now in the summer of middle age.—D.C.S.

You Can't Get

Something for Nothing

What a strange paradox it is that in this enlightened age men should not have learned to profit by their experiences, that they should, despite their learning in philosophy, economics, and science, persist in the same age-old hallucination—"you can get something for nothing." The present depression which is being inflicted upon a helpless younger generation is due to just such vain, deluded dreams.

Now in the midst of the present chaos comes Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, who, in a fit of brain fever following a spell of intellectual delerium tremens, speaking before the Senate urges a form of nationally controlled currency inflation to "end the depression." "It is nothing short of a national disgrace that we have allowed the present condition to develop, and it will be the greatest economic crime in history if we do nothing to check the process of deflation," he said. He asserted without reservation that there must be a conservative, sound, and controlled inflation, or else the ultimate trend of deflation will place a greater strain upon our communities than they can stand.

Such, says O'Neal, is the solution to the problem. He seems to have forgotten that one of the prime causes of the depression was the inflation of currency during and immediately after the war, and that what he so glibly called "deflation" is in reality but a jolting return to the normal. Nor is this recent one our only experience with inflation. The complete upheaval following the Civil War, not only in the south but in the north as well, was due to the abnormal boosting of the currency as were the famous panics of '37 and '93.

If that were not enough we could go back to the great London panic, or the depression of the post-Periclean age in Greece.

It is indeed a paradox that men should not have learned to profit by their experiences and that you can't get something for nothing.—V.C.R.

Do We Please The Nipponese

As a sharp reminder of the existence of one of its laws, the federal government, through its officials, recently severed from the University one of its most respected foreign students. The contention was that, under the present immigration laws, it is necessary for an exotic student to carry satisfactorily a certain amount of work, and, since Fukusato, the Japanese student concerned, was not fulfilling this requirement, though the fault was not his own, he must be classed as a regular non-quota immigrant, and was therefore subject to deportation.

Fukusato has returned to Japan, to his own disappointment, no less than that of the University and liberal minded far-sighted men and women the country over. In the belief that this was the most progressive and enlightened country in the world, he came hither, at no little expense, to absorb some of our culture and learning, with the intention of returning to his native land, at the conclusion of his education, and disseminating the fruits of his American research for the benefit of his fellow-citizens.

This is not an action which the University nor the nation should be proud of, nor is the law, for the execution of which it was carried out, one to draw forth the admiration of the civilized world, particularly Japan.

Instead of inviting other peoples to study our civilization, our laws make it impossible for them to do so. Ours is a queer country; it seeks to impose its will and its culture and its religion upon fellow nations, but refuses to let their citizens learn what it is that we want them to adopt.

It would be interesting to know whether Japan views this country as an ideal center of liberalism, Christianity, equity and tolerance, or as one of the most self-centered, egotistic, hypocritical, intolerant, un-Christian, and class-ridden nations of the world. Wonder if the latter description wouldn't suit better?—W.A.S.

The Despot's Heel

Is on Thy Shore . . .

A freshman at the University of Maryland refused to take compulsory military training and was accordingly kicked out of school. There the incident would have ended, but it seems that this frosh was somewhat wiser than his proverbial brethren. Instead, he sued the University of Maryland for reinstatement on the grounds that he was conscientiously and religiously opposed to such instruction. And, surprisingly enough, Judge Joseph N. Ulman of the Superior Court of Baltimore rendered a decision in his favor, the first of its kind ever to be made in American history.

Judge Ulman's decision is necessarily unique in the annals of Maryland's Superior Courts. He ruled that refusing the plaintiff admission to the state University because of what was tantamount to his religious scruples was a denial of the existence of freedom of conscience and was contrary to both state and federal constitutions.

However, latest developments indicate that the University is planning to protest the decision. There is reason to believe that if it had been favorable to the University, Judge Ulman's decree would not have received the same publicity that it is now accorded. But with student attention focused on the outcome of the University's appeal, a reversal of the previous decision will rightly call forth a storm of protest. Refusal to uphold Maryland's Superior Court in the matter should be to twentieth century civilization what the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes was to the middle Ages. If the anonymous freshman is refused readmission after being justly granted it, the University of Maryland is guilty of a great crime—even greater because it occurs in this day of self-professed liberalism—against educational and religious freedom.—A.T.D.

With Contemporaries

Abolishing

8:00 O'clocks

The faculty of Rochester University have abolished 8:00 o'clock classes because they prefer to have students sleep in bed rather than in classes.

It is incredible that students have any difficulty staying awake in any class, for classes always hold the greatest of interest for the individual. The professor is always in a good humor, students never get behind in their class work, the assignments are short so that no necessity ever arises for them to stay up late to study, and above all, the lectures are never boring.

Students are never tempted to cut that early morning class in order to get a few more minutes of sleep. Yawns are uncommon in the classroom, which all goes to prove that if you are here for an education, the hour when you receive your learning will not be the predominant factor.

After all, the point is this: wouldn't it be nice to do away with 8:30 classes here? For we'll agree with the Rochester faculty that the bed is a much more comfortable place to sleep than these hard one-armed chairs.—University Kansan.

Our Times

Birthdays

This week we celebrate two birthdays. We forgot all about the first one until yesterday when we went down to the bank and noticed a sign on the door "CLOSED for Washington's Birthday." This reminded us of the classic radio joke of the year which hinted that the nation needs another George Washington—somebody to cut down the tree which we are up! (The preposition is ours.)

But today is the fortieth anniversary of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, an event of singular importance. This publication was founded, our feature board chairman tells us, in 1892, since it was evident that some sort of news sheet would be necessary to report the progress of the Spanish-American war, then only six years distant. The paper flourished. The grammar was fair and the editorials raved about walking on the grass and cheating on examinations. But in 1919 the dark days came. THE TAR HEEL was closed during that gloomy period known as the passing of the Eighteenth Amendment. The desks in the office slowly rotted, the typewriters housed countless hordes of grey rats, and grass grew all over the campus.

Then one night when all seemed lost, a brave old soul whom we have never been able to identify, but known remotely as Cornelia Otis Spinner, climbed the creaky stairs to THE TAR HEEL office, clump, clump, clump, etc. She reached the top step, faltered, but pushed grimly on to the city rooms. She parted the cob webs about the door and groped her way into the editorial office. Then with a mighty effort she seized the tapper on the great bell of the editor's Underwood typewriter and sent the peels of the bell resounding over the campus.

THE TAR HEEL was saved! The 18th amendment had been passed and now we could make our own beer. Three bottles of home brew in a fraternity house basement popped and the campus stirred to life. THE DAILY TAR HEEL opened its doors, and youths from every section of the campus poured into the office, eager for learning.

Errata

If it is any business of that exceedingly obnoxious campus publication, the Buccaneer, this department is perfectly willing to explain its whereabouts on the night of February 3. On that evening we put to bed, in order and disorder, the editor, business manager, and art staff of the unworthy magazine. Then we read the second installment of "Minnie Gets Her Man" in the Blood-Curdling Detective Stories Quarterly, supped on a glass of buttermilk and three graham crackers, and then went to bed.

Buses

An investigator of ours is of the opinion that the pen is truly mightier than the sword. He tells us that he happened in at the local bus office and told the manager about a piece we wrote requesting the Carolina Coach company to change its evening schedule so as to enable local swains to visit the Duke University women's campus at a comfortable hour. The manager scratched his head and finally said that all he could do about it was to send a copy of THE TAR HEEL to the Raleigh headquarters of the company, maybe they'd do somthin' about it. A few days later order came through to change the evening schedule. We are, you see, some good after all.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbourn

Dissension reared its ugly head in the upper house of the general assembly of the state of Great Expectations at yesterday's session when the Senator from Utopia was openly accused by the Senator from Lilliput of being an unregistered lobbyist for the light wine and beer interests. The Utopian solon had been caught in the act of reading The Rubaiyat:

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,

A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou

Beside me singing in the Wilderness—

Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

Upon motion of the Lilliputian legislator a committee was appointed to investigate all senators for poetic tendencies.

A bill introduced by Senator Literatus calls for the appropriation of a sufficient amount of money to provide a contact man for the Greater University's pride and joy, her most illustrious son, now residing in Hollywood. "Whereas and in the light of James Boyd's column in the News and Observer for February 12, I deem it not only fitting but also appropriate," expounded the literary law-maker, "that Hollywood should at least know which Mr. Green North Carolinians would be inquiring for and that a contact man would be the most effective means of convincing moviedom that a Pulitzer prize winner is neither a heavyweight champion nor the founder of the American Navy." Senator Demosthenes who is known to be affiliated with the classical interests then arose to his feet, draped his toga a bit more gracefully, and in mellifluous tones offered an amendment to the Literatus bill whereby the wording of said bill would include Author Boyd's descriptive phrase, "looks like Donatello's Apollo." "The Greeks had a word for it," said the Senator from Athens, "but I consider this to be the finest attribute we could pay to one who has brought so much glory and honor to our particular locale."

A youthful legislator, serving his first sentence, electrified the group by displaying the chip he had been carrying around on his shoulder all day. It seems that some upstart of a newspaper reporter, writing a feature story to fill the space which should have recorded the doings of the legislature, had said that there was only one goatee in the Senate. Now, as was quite evident from being seen, the gentleman who had the floor did not have a goatee but he did boast a minute hirsute adornment on his upper lip. He had been slighted, he cried, and he was demanding justice. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth! A veteran senator with graying hair saved the day by suggesting that the matter be referred to the committee that was handling the barber's bill. And that's where the cosmetologists got in.

The courtesy of the floor was extended to former Senator Blunderbuss (now a lobbyist) who stated that his prescription for the Hard Knocks from which we are all suffering was a certain anti-knock gasoline. "The financial situation is indeed grave," he remarked, "but six feet of earth make us all of the size."

Being thoroughly fatigued by the day's grueling task, the Senate adjourned sine die at noon tomorrow.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

What is the place of the gro in our social organization? Does he, by reason, perhaps his color and ancestry, occupy a special position on the ladder of evolution? To begin with, the mighty ones have accepted him as human. The best of this fact is that we have virtually forced our religion upon him. He had to give up his beliefs and precepts of his savior forefathers and profess a faith, a faith he found in a to which he was forced brought. His right to personal opinion was smothered, and a few years it blossomed after the pattern of his master. But then it was not forbidden, rather, it was nourished and encouraged, with the result that it became more spiritual and more than the source of his religion. He began to look forward to a hereafter of freedom and joy. Strange to say, the white owner of his body who furnished him food of a kind and a hovel to live in expected the same reward or punishment. Just so it is today. We live above them in mind and actuality, yet we allow them to practice our religion which teaches that all are equal in the spirit. Surely, a black skin, or a yellow skin, is not so vastly inferior to a white skin that covers the same kind of a soul. We spend millions in money every year and dedicate lives to the conversion to our beliefs of those whom we will not recognize as worthy aspirants to our level of intelligence and social status. Is our position justified?

ALUMNI HEADS TO MEET IN DURHAM FOR CONFERENCE

President W. P. Few of Duke University will address the delegates at an informal dinner tomorrow night at the Duke Union. There will be concerts especially for conference visitors before and after the dinner on the Duke University carillon and pipe organ.

Other activities of the conference will include a sightseeing tour of the Duke campus and a message from the American Council by Clara Byrd, of the Woman's College of Duke.

The American Alumni Council is composed of approximately 250 alumni organizations of colleges in the United States and Canada. The sponsoring of district conferences such as tomorrow's is part of the council's nationwide program of alumni organization and development.

situation. Japan's annual population increase of 850,000 people had full access to Korea and southern Manchuria and her expansion policy was unwarranted. Actually only 250,000 Japanese were settled in Manchuria, the Chinese population there exceeding ninety-six per cent of the total. It can be seen by the latter figure, pointed out Dr. Meng, that Manchuria, the "storm center," such as Alsace-Lorraine, differed from other "storm centers" in that her population was most wholly of one race.

Old East Downs S.A.E., 28-12 To Win Intramural Basketball Race

Victory Gives Campus Crown To Dormitory for Second Consecutive Year.

HENSON LEADS SCORERS

Henson, Hamlet, and Fox Lead Scoring for Old East; Morgan, Connor Best for S. A. E.

Old East's lanky quintet won the campus championship basketball game last night, crushing S. A. E. under a 28-12 score. The team which kept the championship in the dormitory league for another year completely outclassed the fraternity five and the decision was never in doubt from the first whistle.

Red Hamlet broke the ice on a beautiful tip-off play at the very start of the game and Dennis Fox followed immediately with another basket. After Benny Carr had sunk a foul shot, Fox made good a free throw and Henson got a field basket. The quarter ended with the score 9-2 and with the S. A. E. team having no field baskets to its credit.

Henson, Scott, and Hamlet accounted for the dormitory five's eight points in the second quarter, while Dave Morgan cashed in on two beauties early in the period to tally all his team's points. The score at the half was 17-6.

The third period was the closest of the game with the winners having an edge, 8-6, for the quarter. Pinky Connor was the bright star for S. A. E. this period, sinking two difficult baskets late in the quarter.

Old East ran in some reserves in the last period, but in spite of this weakening on the part of the winners, S. A. E. was unable to score a point during the last eight minutes of the game.

Henson led the scorers of both teams, accounting for ten points. Hamlet followed with nine, and Fox with five. Morgan and Connor, with four each, were best for S. A. E.

GOLF AND TENNIS TEAMS WILL BEGIN PRACTICE MONDAY

Varsity and Freshmen Netmen And Varsity Golfers Receive Call From Kenfield.

All candidates for the varsity golf team and varsity and freshman tennis teams are asked to report to Coach Kenfield at Emerson stadium Monday, February 27. Freshman golfers will be asked to report at a later date.

A few varsity golfers have already started practice, Carl Cramer seems to be setting the pace, having averaged a fraction more than 71 for seven rounds on the Hope Valley course. Some of the best prospects for this year's team are Joe Adams, 1931 Southern Conference champ, Alan Smith, Billy O'Brien, who is this year's captain, Carl Cramer, Erwin Laxton, Fred Laxton, and Will Sadler. The varsity golfers are the present Southern Conference title-holders.

The varsity tennis team, claimants to the National Intercollegiate championship, should have another excellent team this year. All the members of last year's squad, with the exception of Bitsy Grant, will be back again this season. Some of those having a good chance of seeing action this spring are Wilmer Hines, Lenoir Wright, Harvey Harris, Dave Morgan, John Dillard, Ike Minor, and Walter Levitan. Prospects for the freshman net outfit are bright. Bernard Friedman and Hunter Lott showing the best form among the freshmen.

CONKLIN REMOVED FROM WRESTLING SQUAD YESTERDAY

Flashy 155-Pounder Officially Suspended From Varsity Team for Breaking Regulations.

The latest blow to the Carolina wrestling team came yesterday when Don Conklin, flashy 155 pounder, was officially suspended from the varsity wrestling team due to a breach of training regulations.

This will come hard to the Tar Heels' grappling team since only two days remain before the Carolina matmen will entertain the Davidson Wildcats here. The Davidson wrestling team is rated to have one of the best clubs in recent years. Last week, the Wildcats clawed their way to a victory over the V. P. I. Techmen. The Virginia Techs defeated the Tar Heel grapplers by a small margin earlier in the season.

Conklin, who has been defeated only twice in three years of varsity competition, was regarded as one of the most outstanding men in the 155 pound class in Dixie. He was one of the mainstays of the club and a spectacular fighter. Paul Schallert, a sophomore with untried experience, will get the starting call in this weight Saturday. Schallert is a real scrapper, however, and should make good in his first appearance as a varsity man.

Following a lengthy session of picture taking for the Yackety Yack, Coach Quinlan pressed his charges through one of the hardest workouts of the year.

Football Managers Will Meet at Emerson Today

All football managers will meet at 3:00 this afternoon at Emerson field for an important meeting to arrange a schedule for attendance at Emerson field from now until the end of the term. Although regular practice has been discontinued until March 27, the managers will continue to report at the field for the convenience of any football men who show up for voluntary practice. Practice will be resumed about March 27 for a period of four weeks.

Conference Champs Who Fight In Tourney

Here are four of last year's conference champions, three of whom will defend their crowns at Charlottesville this week-end. Goldstein, Lloyd, and Garner are all captains, while Lloyd and Garner have another year of fighting. Goldstein is the only member of the quartet who has moved up a weight this year. Lloyd has been fighting in the 125-pound class in dual meets but will register in his old 115-pound division. Reiss and Garner will defend their welter and light-heavy titles. Goldstein will attempt to win the 135-pound championship from a tough field.

White Phantoms Have Played In Tourney Games In High Schools

All Members of Team Were All-State or All-County Players Before Coming Here.

These White Phantoms have all had a pretty good background at the court game, most of them having been all-state or all-county players before coming to Carolina. Four of them, Hines, Chandler, Long, and Beale played in the national high school tourney at Chicago and one, was named on an all-southern midget team.

Wilmer Hines was an all-state forward in South Carolina in 1929 when his team, Columbia, won the Palmetto state high school championship. The Columbians went up to Chicago to the national tournament and were put out in the third round. Wilmer was up there the first year that the Athens, Texas team, now of South Carolina, won the championship. He'll probably get a closer look at them about Saturday.

Beale Meets Kentuckians
Earle Beale is another Phantom who has played at Chicago and been on a lot of all-some-things or others. Earle played for Wilmington high when the New Hanover boys were the cream of the North Carolina high school basketballers. Beale played center and forward in high school and Wilmington won the state title his last two years, 1928 and 1929. Earle was all-state forward in 1928, the year Wilmington went to Chicago and won fourth place in the consolation tournament. To say that they won this is a polite way of stating they lost in the first round of the regular tournament. Dan Jones, a Phantom of last year, and James "Monkey" Moore played with Beale on that dazzer of a team. At the Chicago tourney, Earle played against Johnson, Darby, and Kent, then of the Ashland, Kentucky high team and now on the University of Kentucky quint, Southeastern conference favorites. Wendell Horne, Duke for-

VINCENT LEADS IN CONFERENCE LIST OF HIGH SCORERS

Vergil Weathers and Wilmer Hines Rank Eighth and Ninth Respectively in Dixie Loop.

Rufus Vincent, giant center on the University of Maryland basketball team, is leading the scorers in Dixie with 126 points in ten games. Vincent, who has another year to play for the Terps, has caged 51 field goals and 24 shots from the free line.

Trailing Vincent is Sawyers, flashy Washington and Lee forward, with 103 in nine games; Hall, V. P. I. captain and forward, comes third with 102 in ten games.

Hudson, Virginia center, is next in the rankings with 88; Hancock, brilliant center for V. M. I., is fifth with 84; Jim Thompson, Duke, 82; Johnson, State forward, 80; Weathers, Carolina forward, 75; another Tar Heel, Hines, is next with 74; Downey, V. M. I., 67. This partial list of scorers includes games through Monday, February 21.

Some fans may be amazed that the South Carolina Gamecocks have no men on the adding machine list of scorers, but the South Carolinians have only played a trio of games in the Southern conference, while having made a formidable showing against teams in the Southeastern conference.

Charlotte Engages Salisbury Tonight

Charlotte's undefeated basketball outfit will meet Salisbury, western state runner-up, in Salisbury tonight. Prior to the meeting of these teams Monday night, they were tied for first place in that section with six wins and no losses. Charlotte won, however, 30 to 27.

Other games for the week-end are the Gastonia-Charlotte clash tomorrow night, and the Greensboro-High Point and Winston-Salem-Salisbury games at the same time.

In the eastern division, Durham has clinched the title. The leaders meet Raleigh tomorrow night. Wilmington, which has staged a great comeback, will meet Rocky Mount tonight.

TAR HEELS WILL ENTER SEVEN-MAN TEAM IN TOURNEY

Quarles' Hand Practically Healed And Will Be Ready for Conference Boxing Meet.

Norment Quarles' right hand will be ready for all comers at the Conference tournament beginning in Charlottesville tomorrow, Coach Crayton Rowe announced today to the gratification of Carolina boxing supporters in every quarter.

The brilliant lightweight was suffering from a very sore right hand in Saturday night's meet at Duke, but he held that dynamic right in check and won his bout almost entirely with one of the most beautiful lefts ever displayed by a Tar Heel boxer. The injured weapon of destruction is almost well now, Coach Rowe says, and Carolina is definitely counting for two-fisted service on this brilliant little sophomore, who has won all his matches this year and whose string of victories has included one over the national intercollegiate champion, Goldstein, of Virginia.

The Tar Heels were much disappointed at the heart-breaking string of hairline decisions that went against them in their one Conference loss to Duke 4 1-2 to 3 1-2. They are writing that one off the books, however, and are working like Trojans in preparation for the bigger game at the Conference championship meet.

Other Stars

The team will present two other stars with records that stamp them as being of potential championship calibre. Captain Marty Levinson, featherweight, is undefeated in the south, although he was forced to a draw by Captain Lloyd, Duke's Conference champion at 115 pounds last year. Platt Landis in the unlimited is undefeated for the whole season and has rolled up an amazing string of knockouts.

The team will leave this morning at 8:15 o'clock and will arrive at Charlottesville this afternoon.

Second Attempt on Roosevelt
Secret service men were off again yesterday on the trail of a man who apparently sought the life of President-elect Roosevelt. A shotgun shell, crudely wrapped and arranged so it could explode if handled injudiciously, was found in a package in the Washington post office addressed to "Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington, D. C."

Revolt in Cuba
At least half a dozen outbreaks in widely separated parts of the island of Cuba were reported yesterday, heralding the long-predicted revolt against the Machado rule. The exiles, including many who participated in the unsuccessful revolt against President Machado in 1931, were expected to reach Cuba from Mexico and Honduras. Exiles in the United States were reported joining them.

Campbell Breaks Record
Sir Malcolm Campbell, famous British race car driver yesterday cracked the world's automobile speed record of 253.968 miles per hour wide open in a thrilling, breath-taking dash over the sands of the Daytona Beach speedway to set a new mark of 272.108 miles per hour, a speed at which he covers a mile in 13.16 seconds.

Cabinet Reported Complete
Word reached informed quarters in Washington yesterday that President-elect Roosevelt had completed selection of his cabinet, and that the list contains one surprise—Daniel C. Roper, of South Carolina, for secretary of commerce. The complete cabinet slate, as it is expected by Democrats in Washington to be announced shortly by Roosevelt, follows: State, Cordell Hull of Tennessee; Treasury, William Woodin of Pennsylvania; War, George H. Dern of Utah; Justice, Thomas J. Walsh of Montana; Post Office, James A. Farley of New York; Navy, Claude A. Swanson of Virginia; Interior, Harold Ickes of Illinois; Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace of Iowa; Commerce, Daniel C. Roper of South Carolina; and Labor, Miss Francis Perkins of New York.

may include the ousting of Dot Daniels as court stenographer. Miss Daniels' records of the proceedings were declared to be "fragmentary and poorly kept," when counsel examined them. Instead of taking notes, it is said, she played "tit-tat-to" with Sheriff Anderson during the trial.

Counsel for the plaintiff included Allen, Robert Hovis, and McCarthy, while Adams, Cannon and Jimmy Moore represented the defendant.

Members of the jury, selected after an entire panel was refused, were: R. W. Linker, foreman; Mary Parker, Mary Frances Parker, Eleanor Bizzell, W. P. Grier, and Seth Robertson.

This mock trial, for such it was, was sponsored by the local chapter of Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity, to furnish budding members of the law school with actual courtroom practice.

White Phantoms Have Played In Tourneys

Bull City boys went to the third round at Chicago the first year and then in 1927 Chandler said they won bronze balls for taking fourth place in the consolation tournament.

Dave McCachren is the Phantom who was named on the all-southern midget quint when he was playing with the baby Charlotte Y team. DeeMac played with Charlotte high along with Snooks Aitken, Sammy Bell of Duke, and Bruce Peabody of Davidson. He was an all-state guard in 1930. Dave also played with the Charlotte Y team on and off before coming up here.

Weathers All-County Star
Vergil Weathers came here with about the most impressive record of them all. Verge was named forward for about four years on the all-Cleveland county five. It is said they play outdoors up there and when the Lattimore high team composed of four Weathers brothers journeyed to Raleigh to enter the county championships, it was the first time Cricket had even seen a hardwood floor.

Snooks Aitken is another Carolina star who was weaned on the Charlotte Y floor. Snooks played with the midget team, the junior high, and finally the regular high team of Charlotte which won the state championship in 1930. He was named an all-state forward that year. He has played a lot with Sammy Bell too and Dave and Jim McCachren.

Morrie Long hails from no man's land, somewhere out in North Dakota, where they grow 'em tall. To see Morrie you'd think it was a land of pigmies. Fargo, North Dakota won the state championship in 1926, '27, and '28 and then went to the finals at Chicago in 1928. On the other two occasions Morrie's team was put out in the quarter-final round.

Stud Henry, Jack Glace, and George Brandt are other Tar Heel players of some note. All that could be found about Henry was that he played at New Bern high until the building burned down, then he went to Oak Ridge. Glace played on the Harrisburg, Pennsylvania high team which lasted two rounds in the state tourney once during his three years there. Brandt played for Central high in Washington where he played against the Thompson brothers of Duke. He didn't gain much from that experience though. He tried to claim Central went to the fourth round of some Pennsylvania tournament once but that could not be substantiated last night.

BEARD OUTLINES CONCEPTIONS OF NATION'S CONCERN

tant islands and peoples who could not become American citizens—a living part of the American nation."

Turing then to the Federalist-Whig - Republican tradition, Beard traced territorial expansion of a different kind. This expansion, Beard stated, was designed to secure points of support for expanding trade and investment.

He described efforts to seize the Bonin Island and Formosa in the far Pacific, and President Grant's effort to annex Santo Domingo. He reviewed the steps by which a base was secured in Samoa, and Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippines were acquired. By these actions, he said, millions of people alien in race and tongue were added to the United States, if not to the nation.

Beard then sketched the development of the concept of national interest in commercial expansion from the Hamilton statement, through Admiral Mahan's formulation of "sea power," through Bollar Diplomacy, to the Coolidge-Wilbur doctrine. The Coolidge-Wilbur doctrine, he said, is simple: "the business of the United States government is to promote foreign trade with all the engines of diplomacy, pressure, propaganda, and naval power; every American dollar invested abroad and every American citizen trading abroad is a part of the domain of the United States and must be protected by the Army and Navy."

This conception, he said, holds that the American nation must expand its foreign trade, that such continuous expansion is necessary and possible. All the weight of the government under Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover was thrown on the side of this theory of national interest.

In 1929 the dream blew up, said Beard. He then concluded by asking some questions which he will answer tomorrow night: "must America starve because Bolivians quit buying radios, Zulus cut their demands for gray shirtings, and Japan reduces her consumption of chewing gum? Is it really possible for all industrial nations to expand continuously for their foreign trade? Must America die in the midst of plenty because the world is in a turmoil and cannot buy? There is the supreme issue of the hour."

Budget Estimate Is Said To Be Incorrect

before the committee was to answer any questions in regard to the University.

Error in Estimate
The budget commission's error on the per capita cost to the state of students in the University was revealed to be about thirty-three per cent as it was estimated that the University had one-third students more than was accredited to it in the budget report.

The University's computation of per capita cost to the state was set at $148 per year instead of the $189 estimated in the budget commission's report. At either of these figures, however, the University's cost is the lowest of any member of the Association of American Universities.

This analysis was dramatically and effectively presented by Mr. Tillet as delegate of the University who has spent four days in an intensive study of the University's case.

Worth of University Cited

An estimate of the worth of the University was given by Hon. Josephus Daniels, nationally known political figure of Raleigh who headed the trustees' committee, when a member of the appropriations committee suggested that there was too wide a margin between the $40 per capita cost of the Appalachian Training School at Boone and the $189 per capita cost credited to the University by the budget.

Mr. Daniels replied to this suggestion that no more comparison could be made between the fine work done by the institution at Boone and that done by the University at Chapel Hill than the courthouse at Boone could be compared with the state capital in Raleigh.

Member Gives Estimate

Other highlights of the session at Raleigh yesterday included the estimate of one member of the committee that $596,000 would be the proper figure for the University's appropriation. The budget commission reported $391,000 as recommended figure for the Chapel Hill branch, a cut of $430,000 from the annual grant for the past biennium and a cut of $110,000 of the amount actually allotted the University this year.

The shortage of the revenue bill, as submitted to the finance committee this week by the sub-committee, was seen by President Graham last night to make the situation of the University more difficult.

President Graham and C. T. Woollen, the University's business manager, met with the trustees' committee yesterday morning and appeared with it before the appropriations committee yesterday afternoon.

In evaluating the hearing yesterday, President Graham stated last night that its value was that of having detached business men and women who have made an independent study of the situation at the University to report their findings to the appropriations committee.

Recommended That Tuition Be Raised At University

A sub-committee report in favor of the abolition of a system under which approximately 4,000 students are receiving free tuition at state-supported institutions of higher learning and suggesting a raise in tuition fees was filed Tuesday afternoon with the joint appropriations committee of the State House and Senate.

The report carried recommendations for economies in the educational grants of the state, and another sub-committee was appointed to study these suggestions and report findings

Paper Observes Its Anniversary Today

most fruitless quest for advertisements, the modest four page paper appeared.

According to Murphy, "it met the needs of the period and escaped with minor criticisms of its defects." He recalls a jocose comment from the pen of Dr. Collier Cobb, then editor of the Magazine, which observed, "There is no need for one reading Town Topics or The Police Gazette; for spicy matter, just read THE TAR HEEL." It may be well to state that at the time there was no humor publication on the campus.

Although it was conceived as a retailer of campus news, the first issue of the paper was over-run with editorials. The editors commenced their career in a pugnacious mood by attacking the Magazine as a gossip sheet. It was suggested that this publication devote itself exclusively to literary efforts and leave the realm of event and incident to the newly-founded paper.

The balance of the issue was devoted to editorials appealing for support, local news items, and a complete record of the contemporary activities in athletics.

Baskerville relinquished the editorship after one or two issues and Murphy was elected his successor, retaining the post until he left the University in 1894.

At the time of its founding THE TAR HEEL was in complete control of the Athletic Association. Acting as that group's trumpet, it resembled in its early years more of an athletic report than a newspaper. Sports stories invariably appeared on the front page. The election of staff officials was in the hands of the Association which comprised but a small part of the student body.

Free Tuition Students

It was stated in the report that at the University, 297 students were receiving free tuition; at State College, 414; and at N. C. C. W., 1,093, the latter under an agreement to teach.

Eight hundred and sixty-four students at East Carolina Teachers' College; 510 at Western Carolina Teachers' College; and 978 at Appalachian State Teachers' College, who are now exempted from payment of tuition with the understanding that they will become teachers in this state after graduation, would be required, under the sub-committee plan, to pay fees.

According to the sub-committee's idea, tuition fees at the University would be raised from seventy-five dollars to $125 per session for residents of the state, and from $175 to $250 for non-residents. The report also included suggestions for increases in tuition at the other state-supported schools.

Stanwyck Presented In Show At Carolina

"Women They Talk About" Warner Bros. picture starring Barbara Stanwyck, showing today at the Carolina theatre, depicts life in the women's section of a state prison in various phases. The prison depicted is the San Quentin penitentiary of California.

The story concerns the infatuation of an evangelist for an attractive though hard-boiled inmate, who had been sentenced for a bank robbery. Miss Stanwyck appears in the bandit role with Preston S. Foster, as the evangelist. Others in the cast include Lyle Talbot, Dorothy Burgess, Lillian Roth, Maude Eburne, Harold Huber, and Ruth Donnelly.

TILLET PRAISED FOR UNCOVERING BUDGET MISTAKE

Charlotte Lawyer Presents Concise Case for University to Advisory Committee.

University officials yesterday heaped praise on Charles W. Tillett, Jr., Charlotte lawyer for the effective manner in which he, as member of the trustees' committee, presented the case of the University in showing error in the advisory budget commission's report on the per capita cost of University students to the state before the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly in Raleigh Wednesday afternoon.

No information could be obtained last night on the action of the appropriations committee yesterday regarding the University.

Tillett appeared before the committee Wednesday as a member of the committee created by the board of trustees and appointed by Governor Ehringhaus to investigate matters pertaining to consolidation. He appeared, it was said here yesterday, before the committee as much a detached businessman interested in the welfare of the state as a trustee.

Recommendations Wrong
Tillett, in presenting the University's case, made the point that the budget recommendations are thirty-three per cent wrong, because of a mistaken estimate of students in the University. The basis of the report recommending appropriations, he said, was on an estimate of

COMIC OPERA TO BE OFFERED HERE BY BOSTON GROUP

"Robinhood" to Be Presented by Boston Light Opera Company Here March 2.

Robinhood, immortal comic opera, will be presented Thursday, March 2, in Memorial hall as the sixth in the series of entertainments sponsored throughout the year by the Student Entertainment Committee. The Boston Light Opera Company will stage the program.

The libretto for this famous three-act comedy was written by Reginald De Koven and the music by Harry B. Smith. It was first performed in Chicago, June 9, 1890, by a company of Bostonians who subsequently produced the opera more than four thousands times.

Twelfth Century Scene

The scene is laid in the twelfth century. At the beginning of the first act a merry-making is in progress in Nottingham, England. The three outlaws, Little John, Will Scarlet, and Friar Tuck, enter and sing of the free life in Sherwood Forest where they live. Then Robinhood enters, declaring he is the rightful earl of Huntingdon and demanding that the Sheriff so proclaim him. But the Sheriff protests that the youth was disinherited by his father, who before Robinhood's birth was secretly married to a peasant girl who died when her child was an infant. The child is Sir Guy of Gisborne, rightful heir to the earldom and the

Investigations Fail To Reveal Source Of Statement In 'Time'

New York Periodical Stated That Faculty Had Elected Chase
President of the University and That There Was a "Damyantee Club" on Campus.

Interviews with faculty members and Chapel Hill news correspondents have failed to disclose the source of the statement which appeared in Time, February 6, to the effect that in 1919 Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase was elected president of the University by a faculty vote.

Equally vigorous was their denial of the magazine's claim that there existed on this campus a faculty organization known as the "Damyantee Club" to which Dr. Chase belonged. Time's reference to such a group was branded as the figment of some energetic journalist's wild imagination.

Faculty Deny Claims

These charges were refuted by eleven members of the University faculty in an open letter to the magazine on February 20. The group, which styled itself "The Old Soldiers Home," is a faculty bachelors' eating club located at Mrs. Patterson's. It has been variously known as "The Bachelor's Club" and "The Thirteen Club."

The letter ridiculed the idea of a "Damyantee Club" by stating, "There was not at the time of the election of President Chase, nor has there been since, any division of the faculty along sectional lines. There has never been an organized group of the faculty known as the 'Damyantees.'" Time is here adding another legend to the already voluminous apocrypha of Chapel Hill.

Faculty members who signed the missive included George W. McKie, A. McLaren White, E. W. McChesney, T. P. Noe, Jr., John E. Carroll, Jr., Robert M. Wallace, J. Grover Beard, W. S. Jenkins, John D. Watson, C. B. Robson, and C. H. Pegg.

Described Chase Election

As for the faculty election of Dr. Chase, the protesters of the journalistic myth patiently described the University method of selecting its presidents and proceeded to outline the dramatic truth regarding Dr. Chase's rise to the presidency. "The Committee of the Trustees designated to recommend candidates for the presidency had made its reports to the trustees. Several nominations had been made, supported by various people, and speeches favoring this man or that were in progress when one of the oldest members of the board took the floor.

"Mr. Chairman," he said, "I am a Southerner, a Confederate veteran and a Democrat. I have voted for the last time for any man solely because he is a Southerner, a Confederate veteran, or a Democrat. My vote on this question goes to the man whom I believe to be best qualified for the presidency of the University. That man is Professor Chase. That short speech settled the question and the election was practically unanimous."

Time's Side of Story

Beside this version, the veracity of which is virtually uncontested, the Time story seems like a tale of the Arabian Nights. In reference to Dr. Chase's call to the presidency of New York University, the magazine commented on his Chapel Hill election in the following engaging but evidently erroneous fashion: "The Hill's thirty Northern professors, meeting occasionally for talk and drink, called themselves the 'Damyantee Club.' President Chase was a member. He was also, by 1919, the faculty's chairman, the college's acting dean, the University's acting president. In that year, the story goes, the trustees, tired of trying to agree on a new president turned the matter over to the faculty for a vote. Chief candidates were a Southerner and a Northerner. The 'Damyantee Club' tactfully cast 30 votes for the Southerner. The other 170 professors voted for Harry Woodburn Chase."

ROZZELL SPEAKS AT ANNIVERSARY OF ROTARY CLUB

Former Pastor of Methodist Church
Urges International Spirit
Of Understanding.

"In the face of the steadily increasing interdependency of one nation upon another, the reactionary spirit of self-sufficiency and seclusion that is abroad in the land today must give way to an international spirit of understanding and brotherhood if our civilization is to survive," the Reverend Excell Rozzell, pastor of the Methodist church in Lenoir and formerly pastor of the University Methodist church here, asserted in an address here Wednesday at the anniversary banquet of the Chapel Hill Rotary club.

Celebrating the twenty-sixth anniversary of Rotary, the Chapel Hill club made the event a special occasion, invited all former members to join with the present membership for this session, and asked "Parson" Rozzell, a very popular preacher during his ministry here, to come back "home" and bring a special message.

"The days of seclusion have passed forever," the minister asserted. "We are at the beginning of another epoch that is going to amaze the world. It is going to be an age of service and brotherhood, and in this new era Rotary is going to play a prominent part, for this spirit of international fellowship is the greatest thing in Rotary."

MURCHISON TALKS TO STATE WOMEN

Commerce Professor Outlines Plans for Recovery to Convention of Women Voters.

Three definite proposed government measures for speeding the recovery of business, including a mild form of government inflation, were outlined by Dr. C. T. Murchison of the school of commerce before the state convention of the National League of Women Voters. Dr. Murchison's speech on the subject, "Government and Business Recovery," was delivered at the luncheon meeting of the convention of the League Wednesday afternoon in Raleigh.

The speaker stated that it is necessary for our government to "cooperate with other nations in breaking down barriers of trade" such as war debts and tariff walls. He stressed the fact that the South especially depends for recovery on the development of its export trade, citing cotton as an example. "Bringing about a program of reduction in the number of working hours which constitute a standard day's work" was advocated as the next measure of relief.

The method of inflation proposed by Dr. Murchison is "a policy of government overdrafts on Federal Reserve Banks." This program would not include a policy of free silver or the issuance of greenbacks the speaker pointed out.

BEARD AVERS AGE OF EXPANSION HAS COME TO A CLOSE

Weil Lecturer Concludes Lecture Series on American Citizenship Here Last Night.

Delivering the last of the annual series of lectures on American citizenship here last night in Gerrard hall, Dr. Charles Austin Beard, distinguished author and historian, asserted that the "age of Jeffersonian expansion has closed—that there is no more free and unoccupied land to be seized or bought for occupation by American people."

Explaining that his views were his personal opinions based on his studies and travels, Dr. Beard declared that "the addition of other territories occupied by alien races that cannot be assimilated to American citizenship is a betrayal of American nationality, however large the profits reaped by investors and manufacturers from such operations.

"Congress has declared a restriction of immigration based on nationality; let it extend the principle, and apply it to peoples that cannot co-operate in the maintenance and development of American society," he urged.

Freedom for Philippines

"This means," added Dr. Beard, "absolute independence for the Philippines and also for Porto Rico." He pointed out that thousands of Porto Ricans have been pouring into the United States as American citizens only to find themselves unemployed amid the miseries of

Twentieth Century Justice

A tale of ignorance and abject shiftlessness so unbelievably horrifying that it shatters all belief in the ministrations of Justice is found elsewhere in THE DAILY TAR HEEL this morning. Incredible, it is nevertheless true.

Jisaku Fukusato, a Japanese student who was removed from the University a little more than a week ago by U. S. immigration authorities on the pretext that his academic standing in the University graduate school disqualified him for a further pursuance of study in the United States under federal immigration laws, has languished in a Raleigh prison for the past week. University authorities here thought him to be homeward bound for Tokyo, but it was discovered yesterday that Fukusato has been dumped into prison, awaiting the pleasure of the immigration authorities who have meanwhile departed from the scene.

Anyone who understands the delicate temperament of the Oriental cannot fail to appreciate the shame and repulsion accompanying the incident. Imprisoned for no crime of his own, Fukusato has been virtually kidnapped. Unacquainted with the queer process of our law, puzzling enough to some millions of native Americans, the former Japanese student has been unable to raise his voice in complaint over a twist of Justice so heinous that the mere thought pales the average citizen.

Fukusato came to these shores equipped with a degree from one of Japan's foremost universities to continue his studies and investigations of the American scene. Certainly his discoveries have been interesting—and revolting. Only yesterday were authorities aware of the fate of this one whom the University sought to guide intellectually in a manner suited to the oldest of state universities. The denouement has been swift and disgusting.

If this is an example of world brotherhood and freedom, Fukusato has learned a queer lesson—D.C.S.

The Outlook Is Brighter

It is generally agreed among the thinking portions of the state's citizenry and in the Legislature that a financial block must be put to the wheels of the University to keep it from rolling backwards downhill. It is practically impossible for the state to provide for material progress at this time, but retrogression must be stopped. Further retrenchment at this time has been shown to mean an almost irreparable impairment of the University's functions.

So, the joint appropriations committee is getting down to the cold facts about the cost of operating a front-ranking institution. Wednesday it was revealed by Charles W. Tillett, Jr., in a committee hearing that the budget bureau's figures on the University appropriation are thirty-three per cent in error, due to a miscalculation, deliberate or otherwise, of the number of students in the University. It was further shown by the Hon. Josephus Daniels and others that the University's estimate of $189 per capita cost was not unreasonable. In fact, it is the lowest per capita cost of any institution of the same national ranking.

Now that the General Assembly has its figures straightened out and its mind made up against severe retrenchment, the University's advocates have reason to hope. The legislature's grant will not be large, for the money is not easily available, but a bare subsistence wage at least can be expected.—E.C.D.

Inscrutable Pedagogues

A sage once remarked that "teachers are born, not made." Unfortunately, the term teacher seems to carry over into the realm of college instructors, for mother nature, in her wisdom, would hardly have predestined some of the incumbents on modern professorial staffs to the class room, had they obeyed her voice.

One of the most distracting things that can happen to the youth, swelling with enthusiasm for his work, and having a bright outlook on life, is for him, or her, to fall under the instruction of one of these pedantic masters, whose sole care is to impress upon the minds of his subjects his own omniscience, and the dreadfully decrepit, or vacuous, state of their own minds.

There are such instructors in nearly every institution of higher learning, as well as in the secondary schools, who, not being endowed by nature with the prerequisites for success in that field, pass the ill effects on to the hapless student who must bear the burden without a sigh. Such an instructor likes nothing better than to harangue his class with its short-comings and its hopelessness; his imprecations, his invective, hit biting, withering satire, he does not spare, but never does he condescend to praise the individual for a lesson well recited; never does he throw out a word of encouragement. He puts his questions in the most ambiguous form, and answers cynically and haughtily any query put to him.

Just at the time when he needs sympathy, understanding, and care, the student gets, from this misanthropic exponent of knowledge only blighting, blasting, frustrating malediction.

Long after the puritanic codes have surrendered their effectiveness to saner, more modern means of instruction, there are a few stragglers who preserve the most absurd of their antiquated principles to plague the unfortunate student.—W.A.S.

With Contemporaries

Cornell Goes To the Movies

To those of us who haunt Ithaca's citadels of the cinema, the habits and idiosyncrasies of local movie-goers have become a matter of course. To have passion rewarded with a chorus of peculiar splattering sounds, to have a scenario-writer's jewel-like sentence greeted with moans does not even surprise us any longer. We accept the treatment which is visited upon Hollywood's efforts more with a chuckle than with the raised eyebrow which it would receive elsewhere.

Only when an out-of-towner visits one of our movie-dispensaries do we realize just how markedly Ithaca audiences differ from others. Only when we consider it objectively instead of subjectively are we brought to understand that Cornellians and their hangers-on are a tough group to please, that it takes a masterwork to keep them quiet.

This is due, in all probability, not to a roisterous attitude which prevails among the movie-frequenters, but rather to a finely sharpened critical eye which cuts through the balderdash dished out by Hollywood's impresarios. Cornell men refuse to take too seriously the mawkish sentimentality, the glamorous adventure, and the bloodcurdling horrors which the artists of the silver screen pour into their followers' faces.

While we like the spirit of hypersensitivity which governs local response to the efforts of the moon picture magnates, it is obvious that Ithaca's entrepreneurs of celluloid do not. More than once minions of our nickeldeons have had to extract a writhing undergraduate with more than usually fluent Bronx Cheer from his seat and bum's-rush him to the street. But of late years Cornellians have assumed a more charitable air toward the screen, and with the advent of the talkies their criticism has grown less noisy than of yore.

Frankly, we respect the present part which the Cornellian audience plays at the cinema. Ungentlemanly it may be upon occasion, but it has its redeeming features. Any school of vocal criticism which can distinguish between the making of bedroom eyes and more efficient portrayal of gentlemanly desire, between the performance of the late Rin-Tin-Tin and Lionel Barrymore, between bathos and pathos is, we think, reasonably good.

Since "going-to-the-movies" plays such a paramount role in the life of the undergraduate, it is heartening to know that he refuses to take them without a grain of salt. The running-fire of repartee which studs the diadem of cinematic masterpieces is proof positive that the Cornellian, however lethargic he be in the classroom, comes out of his anaesthesia at least twice a week.—Cornell Daily Sun.

"Imperialism," continued Dr. Beard, "is up a blind alley and doomed. It is impossible to use armies and navies to conquer and exploit backward people without incurring the risks and ruin of world wars. It is impossible to expand continuously American foreign trade to take care of the so-called surplus of our expanding industries and to provide sure investments for American capitalists. International commercial rivalry will not permit it."

Free trade or the removal of trade barriers, as proposed for the coming economic conference for the League of Nations, Dr. Beard asserted, was a delusion and a snare—an attempt to turn back the clock of technological development which turns all civilized nations into industrial nations.

If the trade of the work were absolutely free, Dr. Beard contended, continuous expansion of industrial countries would still be impossible and recurring crises would still occur. There is no escape by that gateway, except into a house on fire.

The solution of the problem, the lecturer concluded, lies in an efficient distribution of wealth within the United States—a distribution of wealth which balances the buying power of the masses and the extension of plant resources. With this accomplished there will be no feverish demand for investment and selling outlets.

"Then foreign trade would become trade in the historical sense, in the rational sense; that is the exchange of commodities which are reciprocally useful to the exchangers."

"Until this fundamental fact is realized," insisted the speaker, "our statesmen and people will writhe and turn in vain. National interest is the proper formula, but it calls for a high concept of the American nation—a nation economically self-sufficient as far as its natural resources will permit—a nation not dependent for its essentials upon a world which is in flame about half the time."

"This concept means no enmity to any other nations or people, but peace with all nations and trade with them in goods useful to them and to the United States. The realization of this ideal will require statesmanship as high and as capable as that displayed by the founders of the American republic and a courage and daring as great as they displayed."

TILLET PRAISED FOR UNCOVERING BUDGET MISTAKE

1,745 students when the number really is 2,645. The basis set by the budget bureau would make the cost per capita to the state $189 whereas University officials, using the latter figure have shown it to be $148.

Tillett asserted he made a careful study of the enrollment in the University and found that it had been the habit of the bureau since 1926-27 to deduct one-third of the student membership.

This deduction was found by the University authorities two weeks ago, and a memorandum was sent to each member of the appropriations committee, it was learned yesterday.

The recommended appropriation was based on 700 less students than expected next year, University authorities said yesterday.

In addition to presenting these findings, Tillett went into the different departments of the University and their needs, estimating that the University could get along on $596,000 of the desired $691,000 requested. He made a plea for the maintenance of the medical school, the abolition of which has been suggested, as an institution operated on a low cost to the student, thereby allowing the state a training place for country doctors.

crown. However, the girl and Robinhood are very much in love, to the indignation of Sir Guy. Lady Marian protests against her marriage, hoping that on the return of the king from the Crusades she will be released when Robinhood plans with the help of the king to prove his right to the earldom. The outlaws sympathize with the pair and invite Robinhood to join them, promising him that he shall be their king and rule them under the Greenwood Tree, to which proposal Robinhood at length agrees.

In the last act, Robinhood brings the message saving Maid Marian from Sir Guy and the opera ends with general rejoicing at Robinhood's triumph over the plotting Sheriff and his ward. There is a very lively finale.

Several popular songs from the opera are still favorite throughout the world. Among the better known are "Oh, Promise Me," "Tinker's Chorus," "Brown October Ale," "Come Dreams so Bright," and "The Cross Bow."

Newspaper critics are unanimous in their acclamation of the Boston company's performance. The opera is presented in its entirety and includes a full rendition of the musical selections.

Tickets for the presentation can be obtained by those not holding entertainment booklets from Dean A. W. Hobbs. The price is one dollar.

He has edited several books on Mexican problems, in addition to several in the field of church educational work, and has contributed articles to the New Republic and various religious journals. At present he is secretary for education in social relations for the Congregational churches.

It has been reported from Washington that "Mexican affairs may take a turn for the worse in the next few months," due, it was said, to a change of attitude in the Mexican government. In view of this and of the political and trade relations with other countries of Latin America, Herring's address in the discussion series will be of special interest. It is his contention that our large volume of trade with Latin America makes the problem of peaceful relations with her as important as it is with Europe, which have been more in the spotlight recently.

The final program of the series will bring Norman Thomas, distinguished political theorist and candidate for president on the Socialist ticket in 1928 and 1932 to the platform on the subject "The Program for Action," a week from tonight.

tiousness the magazine ran beside the above story a picture of Dr. Chase, below which appeared the caption, "The Damsyankees' politeness didn't deter him."

Time wrote a charming little story for its millions of readers who doubtless now conceive of the University as the last battleground of the Civil War. However, at the same time it threw Chapel Hill into the most profound amazement quickly followed by resentment and amusement. Whether the aberration emanated from misinformed news offices in this state or possibly from the Illinois University publicity bureau has not yet been ascertained.

According to Charles T. Woollen, business manager of the University, the term "Damsyankee" in connection with Northern faculty members originated with one Parker Daggett, formerly a member of the local school of engineering, now at Rutgers University. Daggett was accustomed to apply the epithet to himself in jest and then swagger with pride over his little joke. While other faculty members from above the Mason and Dixon line joined him in the good-natured fooling, Woollen asserted that to his knowledge they never took the affair seriously enough to organize a club.

He went on to explain that "Damsyankee" has long been a common Southern expression. "In fact," he remarked, "Many children and adults have never learned that there were two separate words, but took 'Damsyankee' as a single indivisible word."

Carolina Meets V. P. I. In Curtain Raiser Of Basketball Tournament

White Phantoms Should Come Through First of Play Without Much Trouble.

HEELS ARE DARK HORSES

In Last Year's Tourney an Unseeded Carolina Five Breezed Through to the Finals.

North Carolina and V. P. I. will raise the curtain on the annual Southern conference basketball tournament this afternoon in the Raleigh Memorial auditorium at 3:00 o'clock. About 4,000 persons are expected to be on hand for Raleigh's first conference tourney.

The Tar Heels should not have any trouble entering the second round with a victory over the Gobblers. Earlier this season Coach Shepard's five smothered the Poly's and repeated with another victory on Carolina's recent northern tour. However, mainly through the individual efforts of Bus Hall, V. P. I.'s flashy forward and one of the circuit's leading scorers, the Virginia lads have spurted and are capable of giving the White Phantoms all they can handle. If the Blue and White can come through with a win today, they will meet the winner of the South Carolina-Maryland clash for the right to play in the finals Monday night.

Heels Are Dark Horses

Although they are not the favorites to win the title this year, the Tar Heels are the dark horses. Very few people who witnessed the tournament at Atlanta last winter can forget the impression Coach Bo Shepard's squad made in the Cracker State. Not conceded much of a chance to get past the initial round, Carolina defeated Tennessee, upset a great Kentucky club 43-42, overwhelmed a seeded Auburn outfit by about twenty points, and gave Georgia the time of its life before falling, 24-26. This season fairly much the same situation exists with South Carolina's juggernauts assuming the role Kentucky had last year, and if Carolina can maintain the form displayed last Monday night in defeating State, don't be surprised with a victory over the Gamecocks.

Other contests booked for tomorrow are: Duke-Virginia, and State-Washington and Lee.

GRAPPLERS READY FOR MATCH WITH WILDCAT MATMEN

Captain Idol and Mac Auman, Varsity Heavies, Put Boys Through Afternoon Work-outs.

In the absence of Coach "Chuck" Quinlan, Carolina's wrestling coach, Captain Percy Idol and Mac Auman, varsity heavies, supervised the work-outs yesterday afternoon.

Tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock the Carolina mat men will meet the Davidson wrestling aggregation in the Tin Can. The Wildcats have an exceptionally fine club this year, having counted wins over both Duke and V. P. I., and having made a formidable showing against the State College wrestlers, this year's state champions.

The entire Carolina team is in excellent physical condition and should look good in their finale for the current grappling season. There are several minor injuries in the 'Tar Heels' camp; however, they will not affect the Carolina team's starting line-up. Pickett, fine rookie heavyweight, had his eye brow split open yesterday afternoon in his work-out with Captain Idol. The eye is not hurt badly, although several stitches were taken in the opening. Mac Auman also received his share of trouble, getting a pair of facial mat burns in his work with Idol.

The Can Opener

by

CLAIBORN M. CARR

THIS AFTERNOON THE White Phantoms open the Southern Conference basketball tournament in Raleigh meeting the V. P. I. Gobblers. Sporting eleven wins and four losses, the Phantoms are conceded only a slight chance of wading through the tourney undefeated. Everyone seems to be taking this game with the Gobblers for granted and looking to the tilt against the winner of the Maryland-South Carolina fray tonight. This feeling may cost us a chance at South Carolina. Last year the Phantoms held about the same position the Gobblers hold now as underdogs and we hit our stride at Atlanta and went to the finals. V. P. I. may do the same to us this afternoon if we take them too lightly.

THE PHANTOM I AM GOING to be watching closest in the tournament is Dave McCachren. DeeMac is the hottest basketball player I've seen this year and when he displays his ability before the coaches, sports writers, and referees of the conference this week-end, he is certain to land an all-southern position.

Southern Conference Heavyweights

Here are three of the leading fighters in the heavier divisions of the Southern Conference boxing. Negri of V. P. I. has been competing this year in the heavyweight ranks but has gone down now into the lightweight division. Farrell is the South Atlantic A. A. U. heavyweight champion. This year he won three matches and lost one. His loss was to Collins of Washington and Lee in four rounds. Negri lost to both Farrell and Landis but won from Collins, Farrell's conqueror. Popeye Landis has three knock-outs and a decision over conference foes. Martin, Washington and Lee; Davis, Clemson; Stephens, State; and Morehead, V. M. I., are others in this class. Landis seems to be the surest bet, having real boxing technique, a rare attribute in the heavyweight class.

WEATHERS PICKED ON FLAMING FIVE BY FAN'S BALLOT

Several Other University Athletes Receive High Votes in Charlotte Observer Contest.

Vergil Weathers, Carolina's all-Southern basketball forward and second baseman on the baseball team, was selected as one of the outstanding sports figures of the two Carolinas in 1932. He was voted a member of the Carolina's Flaming Five, a contest conducted annually by the Charlotte Observer.

Weathers was chosen along with four other outstanding athletes of the two Carolinas, namely: Bill Goodson of Lincolnton, former Davidson basketball and baseball star; Chester Martin of McColl, S. C., star Charlotte southpaw pitcher in the Piedmont league last year; Charlie Pearce of Plant City, Davidson grid and baseball star last year; and Fred Webb of Shelby, youthful southpaw golfer of national fame.

Besides Weathers, several other Carolina athletes polled high totals in this contest. They were Jim Tatum, Wilmer Hines, Stuart Chandler, Norm Quarles, Platt Landis, Bitsy Grant, and Hanes Lassiter.

TAR HEELS RATED EVEN CHANCE FOR FOUR MITT TITLES

Levinson, Quarles, Giddins, and Landis Rate Better Than Average in Weights.

The 1933 boxing season comes to a close with the biggest show of the year, the Southern Conference Tournament, which will begin this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in Charlottesville, Virginia.

With all the glorious victories and heart-breaking defeats of an unusually sensational campaign now forgotten, Carolina will enter a seven-man team with its hopes pinned chiefly upon four of them: Marty Levinson, Norm Quarles, Sam Giddins, and Platt Landis. Their chances are considered better than even in the tourney; and, while Cliff Glover, Peyton Brown, and Nat Lumpkin have fair possibilities to come through, their season's records are not as impressive as the first four, and a title from any one of them would come in the nature of a surprise.

Levinson's Last Try

Captain Marty Levinson, great featherweight, will make his third and last trip to the tourney in search of the crown; and his Virginia jinx, Bobby Goldstein, now up a weight and out (Continued on last page)

Fukusato Freed From Jail By Secretary Of Labor W. M. Doak

Edwin B. Schmucker, district director of immigration at Norfolk, bringing no results, he finally received authorization from W. M. Doak, secretary of the department of labor, last night to go to Raleigh for the Japanese.

Whereabouts Was Unknown
Since Fukusato's departure from Chapel Hill Wednesday, February 15, University officials were under the impression that he was either in Washington or had left for Japan. W. W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school, under whose charge Fukusato had been working, understood from Jennings Otts, immigrant inspector, that he would be detained in Raleigh only over night.

Local authorities were uninformed on the details of Fukusato's case, holding him for inspector Otts until further orders, which were not forthcoming. United States district marshal, Edgar C. Eddie, stated that Fukusato was out of his jurisdiction, and he likewise seemed ignorant of the situation.

Fukusato, when reached yesterday by the DAILY TAR HEEL, said that he felt his position was disgraceful. Somewhat bewildered by the sudden disastrous turn which events took last week, and unable to converse intelligibly with his jailer, he had grown exceedingly morbid over what he termed the "rudeness" of the University authorities in permitting him to get into such a situation. He frequently threatened suicide if his friends in Japan learned of his ignomy.

While he admitted that the "government is always right," he felt that as a foreign student he deserved a little courtesy, and that the immigrant officials should permit him to return home as a free man, not as a prisoner.

"In Japan it is the custom," he said, "when foreign student break law, for University to ask government for trust until it is settled. The University says, 'Will you honor me to keep this boy, and he will not run away until law fix it.'"

"I was in Chapel Hill under the University and there I think I should remain, not in jail, until the government says I should leave country."

Fukusato said that he was under the impression that it was customary for the immigration authorities to give the students a warning to leave the country in a certain length of time, and then if they failed to leave to deport them. He said that he was given no such warning. The first inklings of the impending disaster, according to the Japanese, was a summons last Wednesday for him to appear before Dean Pierson. Packing his things, he left that day and has been lodged in the Raleigh jail since.

Fukusato was taken over by the immigration officer for a failure to pass a sufficient number of courses and for a lack of funds, though he claimed to have more on the way. Fukusato stated that had he known of the scholastic requirement he could have taken courses which he could have passed. It is alleged, however, that he had been warned, last fall by the University.

The release obtained for him by President Graham does not mean that the deportation proceedings have been dropped, but merely that he may await their outcome in more pleasant surroundings.

Courtship is expensive, marriage is costly, and alimony is a luxury.—Va. State Teacher's "Rotunda."

of his way, the Tar Heel is conceded a better chance than he has ever had. Barring upsets, he should come through; but he may encounter some stiff opposition from Gordon Rainey of Virginia whom he has already kayoed. Rainey has come back strong and he may be able to do a much better job in Charlottesville.

Norm Quarles will be gunning for the lightweight championship with all eyes on him after making one of the most impressive records ever piled up by a sophomore here. After scoring three knock-outs over some of the best fighters in the conference, one of them over Mickey Doyle of V. M. I., Quarles out-pointed Rip Scott of Duke with his left hand, and, prior to that, turned the most talked of trick of the year by giving Goldstein his first college defeat. The two are the best in the conference lightweight division and they will no doubt meet again. When they do, the second struggle will be another toss-up, for Goldy came back strong in the third round of their first bout and many fans think he has too much ring savvy for Norm to take him again.

The middleweight class will be held down by another sophomore with a good record and who, like Quarles, has a fine chance to come back to Chapel Hill with the diadem in his second year. Sam Giddins, past-master of boxing will be the 165-pounder upon whom Carolina rests its hopes for honors in this division. Although Giddins lost to Fabri of State, the decision in that bout nearly precipitated a riot and Tar Heels feel that Sam is really Fabri's master and that he will have no trouble with him should they meet again. His hardest fight may come, if he meets the dangerous, hard-hitting Red Smith whom he has defeated already but who has a string of kayoes for the season and will have to be watched carefully.

The heavyweight class is represented by one of the greatest fighters Carolina ever had there, Platt Landis. He is undefeated this year and has scored three one-round knock-outs, one of them over the State hope, Stephens, who made a strong come-back after his quick defeat at the hands of Popeye's mighty right fist. He has the best chance of all, for fighters in the unlimited class have not burned up the conference this year and Platt is the only one who has done anything to excite attention.

Nat Lumpkin has a chance in the complicated welterweight class and his stock has risen considerably in the last week since he trimmed LeRoy Sides of Duke, recent victor over Charlie Garner of State who wears the welter crown. It remains, however, to be seen how Nat Lumpkin goes against Fishburne of Virginia who stopped him in two rounds the last time they met.

Peyton Brown and Cliff Glover have outside chances to come through, but with Fred Lloyd back defending the bantamweight crown and Lewis Reiss the light-heavyweight, chances are not so very bright. Lloyd, although he has never met Glover, appears to be better than the Tar Heel on paper; while Reiss stopped Brown this year in one round and out-pointed him last year in three.

Dave is by far the most unselfish player I've seen, always interested in winning and not in just racking up points. How many times have we all seen him break up a dribble, wind his way down the floor like a streak, jump as if to shoot, and then cut an uncanny pass to a Phantommate, only to wake the latter out of some lovely dream. Besides being an unselfish player and an expert handler of the ball, Dave is probably the calmest under fire of all the Tar Heel players. Some of us remember last year how steady and unrattled he was in the last few minutes of that thrilling game in the Tin Can. Dave's play that night against Berger and Ronkin was somethin'.

GEORGE BARCLAY COMES through this week in great style. George got a letter recently written on black stationery in white ink. He says there is something sacred in this combination but he won't let any one in on it. Somebody got the dope though and I pass it on to you. In part the letter had something about her coming down here and there wasn't any stopping her at all. She wanted to get George, some mournful jazz band, and then let "rhythm take its course."

'Frisco Jenny' Stars Well-Known Actress

A transition in character, both physical and spiritual is developed by Ruth Chatterton as "Frisco Jenny" in the First National picture of the same title which is playing at the Carolina theatre today.

This transition covers twenty-five years of Frisco Jenny's life, from the time she is an innocent girl of seventeen until she becomes a woman of maturity. There is no rapid change from innocence to crime, but the character of Frisco Jenny is shown to grow gradually harder as she fights her way to the leadership of the vice ring of the old Barbary Coast of San Francisco.

In the supporting cast are Donald Cook, James Murray, Louis Calhern, Hallam Cooley and Pat O'Malley. The screen play is by Wilson Mizner and Robert Lord. William A. Wellman directed.

Composition Conditions

Composition conditions incurred in any course may be removed on Tuesday, February 28, in 201 Murphey hall at 4:00 o'clock, when the winter quarter examination will be held. Although no paper will be required in advance, it will be necessary for all who intend to take the examination to notify the English office, Saunders 104, by noon Saturday, February 25.

Pledging Announced

TABLE TENNIS AND POOL COMPETITION NEAR COMPLETION

The indoor sports carnival sponsored by Graham Memorial entered its final stages yesterday as the quarter finals in pool, semi-finals in the ping-pong ranks, and qualifying round of bowling was run off.

In the pool tournament D. R. Barbano downed Kalb 50-24; Patterson beat Bennett 50-6; Kanner beat Auman 50-39; Tucker turned back Buchanan 50-40 in one of the hardest fought battles run off in the rounds yesterday; Newell licked Hudson 50-38.

The table tennis tournament found Theta Chi ousting Phi Delta Theta 2-1; S. A. E. beat the Chi Phi's 3-0; the T. E. P.'s licked Phi Kappa Sigma 2-1; while Zeta Psi found a tartar at the hands of the fast Aycock dormitory club which beat them 3-0.

Four Bowling Teams Seeded
The first round of the bowling tournament had sixteen survivors qualifying via virtue of the first round frays. The first four teams were seeded by Manager Mayne Albright; they are Chi Phi, 1091; Sigma Phi Sigma, 1079; Chi Psi, 1057; and Grimes, 1019. Sigma Nu followed closely on the trail of Grimes with 1016; while Manly came behind 1015.

The other ten teams qualifying for the tournament which will get under way Monday were: Phi Kappa Sigma; Beta Theta Pi; Phi Delta Theta; S. A. E.; Zeta Psi; Phi Gamma Delta; Aycock; Old East; Lewis and Phi Sigma Kappa.

The Carolina bowling team which has already had some meets with other clubs in the state leaves for Atlanta today; the Tar Heels duck pin club is scheduled to meet the Georgia Tech aggregation there tomorrow. They will meet some other commercial team there also.

A story of the kind of women who are kind to men!

BRADSHAW TELLS FROSH TO ATTACK HEAVY PROBLEMS

Dean Addresses Freshman Assembly Yesterday on Facing Important Matters.

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw in freshman assembly yesterday brought forward the importance of taking care of the important matters that face the student before it becomes too late.

Most of the students at the University, according to Dean Bradshaw, manage their affairs so well during their stay at the University that they have no trouble with University officials. About twenty per cent of the student body, however, do not realize that the fact that they live in a group lays a restraining hand upon them and that they must work together with the rest of the group if they are to live together and attain mutual success.

Dean Bradshaw stated that of all things that affect the state of the student mind, probably none has a more important part than general attitude. The question is: do we run from a problem or do we attack it? In attacking a problem, according to Bradshaw, the student must pick out the spot of greatest difficulty and attack that. Once that point is solved, the student has the solution to the entire problem. According to the views of Dean Bradshaw, the student must always attack the hardest problem first. He must leap to the thing he is most afraid of. Bradshaw's philosophy is "a good offense is the best defense."

MUSIC CONTEST SCHEDULED HERE

Mrs. Norden Gives Out Entrance Requirements for Student Music and Artist Contest.

Regulations and dates for the annual state contest for musicians and young artists in the field of music to be conducted here in the Hill music hall Friday, March 24, were announced today by Mrs. Eric Norden, of Wilmington, state chairman of the North Carolina Federation of music clubs, which is sponsoring the contests in cooperation with the University music department.

Registration of entrants will begin at 9:30 o'clock March 24 and at 10:00 o'clock the contest for those competing in the classification of Student Musicians will get under way. The contest for Young Artists will get under way at 2:00 o'clock.

Applications, which should be sent to Mrs. Norden at Wilmington, must be in two weeks in advance of the contests. Entrance fees of five and ten dollars are being required for the student musicians and artists contests, respectively. These fees are to cover part of the expenses of holding the contest. Any musician in the state not under eighteen or over twenty-three in age is eligible to compete.

Contest Qualifications
The music to be played or sung in the student musician classification is definite and the information will be supplied by Mrs. Norden. In the artist classification, no set pieces are prescribed, but the contestant must have at hand the equivalent of three complete recital programs ready to play in full or in part as may be determined by the judges.

Contests will be held in piano, violin, violoncello, organ, voice (which is divided between coloratura soprano, lyric soprano and dramatic soprano, with mezzo soprano and contralto competing separately; the male voice being divided between tenor, baritone, and bass).

Winners of these contests will compete in the district contest to be held one month later, and those winners will go to the national contest.

Mrs. Norden reports widespread interest already. She urges that teachers of music make applications for blanks for their students.

Organization May Conduct Survey of Speech in South During Next Fall.

It is through the medium of language that the social, political, and economic life and customs of the individual is revealed. This opinion was expressed yesterday by Professor Anders Orbeck of Rochester University, on leave of absence to make a preliminary survey of strategic centers from which the Linguistic Atlas plans to conduct an exhaustive research of the various dialects still existing in the old south.

The Linguistic Atlas is an organization originated by a group of men interested in the variety of dialects in use in the United States at the present time. The Atlas will study the different dialects in the various sections of the nation and will publish its findings in a series of volumes when the study is completed. The project, which will require ten years at least, has the financial support of the American Council of Learned Societies.

Staff Appointed

Since by common acceptance the dialectic modes of the United States are divided into the three main regions of New England, the south, and the west, this organization sent a staff composed of Professor Hans Kurath, German instructor at Brown University, director, Professor Miles Hanley, at Harvard on leave of absence from the University of Wisconsin, assistant director, and six or eight trained assistants to begin actual field work in the New England section in September, 1931. This staff is making a thorough study of approximately 150 communities (Continued on last page)

NORMAN THOMAS TO LECTURE HERE ON FORUM SERIES

Open Forum Discussion Group Sponsors Socialist Speaker Here March 3.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President in 1932 who polled approximately four times the 1928 Socialist vote after a whirlwind campaign, will speak here March 3 during the lecture series arranged by the Open Forum Discussion group.

Mr. Thomas will speak March 3, in Gerrard hall. His subject will be "The Program for Action," one phase of the general discussion of the immediate question now facing America: "Where do we go from here and how?"

The series of eight lectures being offered here are part of a national lecture circuit in forty-five cities throughout the country, designed to assist in working out a constructive solution for the present economic collapse in the United States and throughout the world.

Thomas is recognized as one of the greatest speakers in public life. So effective is he as a platform speaker, either in oratory or in free debate, that conservative politicians and newspapers have for years attempted to entice him from his convictions with promises of "honors" and offices.

Before, during and since the last presidential campaign, Thomas relentlessly exposed what he calls the hopeless contradictions of the present economic system, offering in its stead an economic plan for America which he claims would wipe out, or at least drastically reduce unemployment, starvation (Continued on last page)

H. F. MUNCH WILL PRESIDE AT MATH MEET IN RALEIGH

University Professor of Mathematics Will Lead Department Sessions March 23, 24, and 25.

Professor H. F. Munch, instructor in mathematics in the University, will preside over the mathematics departmental meeting of the annual North Carolina educational association session which will gather in Raleigh, March 23, 24, and 25. There will be a number of general sessions scheduled during the three days with departmental meetings between times.

"A technique in diagnosing pupil's difficulties in Algebra," will be discussed by Miss Wilma Garner of Elizabeth City, and Dr. W. D. Reeve of Columbia University will speak on the subject "Mathematics has a Method of Thinking." There will be a business session of the meeting in which the officers for the department will be elected.

At 6:00 o'clock the teachers will attend a supper, and following this there will be another program. Dr. Reeve will speak again, his topic for this occasion being "National Council of the Teachers of Mathematics," including the happenings at the Minneapolis meeting. This address will be followed by a round table discussion of the problems of the teachers of mathematics.

SYMPHONY WILL PLAY IN CONCERT

Music Group, Directed by Stringfield, Will Appear at Southern Pines March 4.

The little symphony of the North Carolina Symphony Society, of which Lamar Stringfield is conductor, will present a concert at the high school auditorium in Southern Pines Saturday evening, March 4, at 8:15 o'clock. The concert is under the auspices of the Music club of Southern Pines.

The little symphony made its first appearance January 19 at the Playmaker theatre here with Stringfield as conductor and Earl Slocum of Greensboro as guest conductor. The group was formed for the purpose of presenting state-wide ensemble programs with more facility than is possible with an orchestra the size of the major symphony of the North Carolina Symphony society.

A feature of the Southern Pines concert will be the second performance of Nathaniel Burt's Prelude Aubade, which was given its premier presentation by the little symphony January 19. Burt is the son of Struthers Burt, the novelist, who is a resident of Southern Pines. He is now a student at Princeton University and has become well-known as a musician and composer.

Old and New Compositions

The program March 4 will include The Marriage of Figaro Overture by Mozart, the Andante from the fifth symphony of Beethoven, On the Steppes of Central Asia by Borodin, and the Ballet Music from Rosamonde by Schubert. The part of the program devoted to works of living American composers will include beside the Prelude Aubade of Burt, Danse Moronique by Herbert Hazelman, La Media Noche from the Hispana Suite of Albert Stossel, and Cripple Creek from the Southern Mountain Suite by Lamar Stringfield.

Japanese Student Is Bewildered And Humiliated by "Wonderful" Law of America.

DENIES SUICIDE RUMOR

Indignant at Story of Threat to Kill Himself Because of Dishonor of Being Jailed.

Vigorously denying reports that he had threatened to commit suicide, Jisaku Fukusato, Japanese graduate student of the University, expressed indignation and humiliation over the situation in which he found himself when discovered Thursday lodged in the Wake county jail following an investigation of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Last night President Graham announced in regard to the case that he would today make a complete report to Secretary W. M. Doak of the Labor department, through whom he obtained Fukusato's release. Secretary Doak was informed of the situation immediately upon its discovery by President Graham, though no formal report could be made at the time.

Acting upon authority of Secretary Doak, President Graham went to Raleigh Thursday night and brought the Japanese back to Chapel Hill, placing him in his home where he is to remain until definite action is taken by immigration officials. What stand the University will take, whether or not it will recommend that Fukusato be permitted to remain, was not divulged in the President's statement last night.

MENTAL CONTROL NEEDED IN MUSIC STATES KREISLER

Famed Violinist Says That Playing Violin Can Be Compared To Aiming a Pistol.

Musical technique is not a matter of muscular development, but of mental control, says Fritz Kreisler, famous violinist, who is to appear here in a concert in Memorial hall Monday evening, February 27, at 8:30 o'clock.

Kreisler backs up this statement by adding that he has often memorized a concerto on a train, and played it to an audience with little or no preliminary practice.

"It is like aiming a pistol," the great violinist explained. "You take aim, you cock the pistol, you put your finger on the trigger. A slight pressure of the finger and the shot is fired. Now the same thing should apply to technique on an instrument. You think before, and not merely as, or after you fire the note. Your muscle is prepared, the physical conception is perfectly clear in your mind, a slight flash of will power and your effort is achieved. But to rely on muscular habit, which so many do, in technique, is fatal. A little fatigue, a little nervousness, a muscle bewildered and unable to direct itself, and where are you? Technique is a matter of the brain."

Concentration Best

Nor does the violinist believe that memorizing is the best accomplished by repetition. Half an hour of intense concentration is better than a week of arduous (Continued on last page)

Informing the Misinformed

The error which Charles W. Tillett, Jr., Charlotte lawyer, found in the advisory budget commission's report on the per capita cost of University students to the state reveals quite plainly the misinformed manner in which the members of the Legislature have been dealing with a problem so important to North Carolina's development as the University's budget appropriation. Tillett's service in bringing this error to light before any actual Legislative vote was taken on the matter can not be too highly praised.

It was the excuse of Henry Burke, assistant director of the advisory budget commission, that because Dr. Harry W. Chase had over-estimated the number of students in attendance at Chapel Hill in one of his reports, therefore this year's report should be accordingly reduced. An investigation of this matter, however, revealed the fact that Dr. Chase's report was completely accurate, as was Dr. Graham's this year. It is quite unfortunate that such misinformation existed in this matter so vitally important to the state. But it would have been even more unfortunate had this false impression of actual University conditions still been present in the minds of the Legislators when they came to vote on the University's budget appropriation.

Tillett rendered further service to the University in the report of his survey by making the recommendation that this institution be given $596,000 as compared to the $391,000 advised by the budget commission.

If the Legislators will but give Tillett's report its proper and just recognition, there is little fear for any undue reduction in the University's budget. Tillett's work on this investigation may mean several thousand dollars for the cause of education in North Carolina.

A Running Sore in America's Flesh

At last Congress has taken action against the Eighteenth Amendment and has given the hope that a year or two will see the noble experiment brought to the inglorious close that is so late coming. Never in our history has a piece of legislation worked upon our nation the same insidious effects as has this offspring of puritan bigotry. Passed to improve the moral fibre of the nation the Eighteenth Amendment has worked such havoc upon our morale that a century will not eradicate its disastrous effects. The Prohibition Amendment has extended its corroding influence everywhere eating away our national honesty and leaving a land of lawbreakers, hypocrites, and criminals.

The people of the United States have always had and always will have what they want, legislation to the contrary notwithstanding. They demand liquor and to satisfy this demand there has arisen vast systems of highly organized crime which reaps great profits from the trade and under the guidance of crafty leaders and with the connivance of our politicians spread murder and corruption in their paths oblivious and immune to law. Racketeering, rum running, organized murder, hijacking, and massacres have become as familiar to us today as they were strange a few decades ago.

In conjunction with the rum trade the great gangs have added to their activities numerous other nefarious traffics. Scarface Al Capone is known to head a ring engaged not only in smuggling liquor but in the running of gambling halls, houses of prostitution, and in the shameful and beastly white slave trade. Systemized murder is merely a side line. To punish this rat the United States at whose name the world trembles is forced to trump up a triviality to place him behind the bars and deprive the electric chair from closing a career for which electrocution is far too merciful a death.

Across the entire nation men are engaged in dispensing bad whiskey and beer through the terrorizing agencies of the big rings or the furtive sneakiness of the small time bootlegger and moonshiner. The agents of government have joined the game and in many states the politicians in office as well as the police forces are a regular part of the system. As a result a tremendous and terrifying rot is eating into the structure of our government.

The Eighteenth Amendment was the work of that self righteous minority which feels that they are the ordained of God, that everyone's business is theirs, and that their narrowminded principles must be saddled upon the public. Aiding them were the rich capitalists who knowing that they could always obtain their fine wines and liquors hoped to increase the productivity of their slaves by denying them alcohol. But liberty though very sickly is not dead; bigotry and liberty have had a mighty struggle and liberty has won. She paid, however, a fruitful price, the price of a nation rotting with corruption and crime.—J.F.A.

The Business of a College Daily

There is no other student activity on this campus that requires of its participants the continuous routine work and attention to detail that is demanded of those on the staff of the Daily Maroon. There is no other activity on this campus that necessitates the presence of five students at a printing shop until 3:00 a. m. every morning a Maroon is published. There is no other student activity that offers its product to the campus one hundred and twenty-five times a year—every edition being a completely new expression of student talent and effort.

That is the task performed four times a week throughout the year by a staff that at present numbers nearly fifty students. Of these, six are seniors, fourteen are juniors, and the balance are sophomores and freshmen. Twenty-five of the juniors and sophomores are engaged every day in writing the thirty or thirty-five articles and features which appear in the Maroon's columns with every issue. Eight of them are special writers assigned to definite beats—the president's office, the dean of students' office, concerts and lectures, etc.—which must be covered daily in order to secure for subscribers the constant items of information about University life, administration and progress.

In the editorial office of the Maroon, four of the seniors work from four to six hours a day—one acting as executive director of the entire organization, another as a managing editor who makes up the front page and decides what stories shall go into the paper, a third whose responsibility is to edit and correct all material that is to appear, and a fourth whose task is to direct the twenty-five writers who must be carefully assigned to cover the hundreds of stories which are the news of the quadrangles each week.

In the business office, there are two other seniors directing the solicitation of advertising from several hundred merchants and firms throughout the city, and caring for the circulation of the paper. Ten or twelve students are working under them, making financially secure a newspaper that costs $7,000 a year to publish and that for thirty years has been successfully maintained by student enterprise, and student enterprise alone. In this business office there is transacted as great an amount of detail as in the editorial department. There is "ad copy" to write, cuts to secure, accounts to solicit, want ads to handle, books to be kept and bills to be mailed.

At 6:00 every day, practically all this editorial material and advertising matter has been sent to the printer, and the majority of the staff is dismissed. The material they have prepared, in its aggregate, totals over seven thousand words every day—one hundred and twenty-five term papers a year!

But several students still have their night shift to perform. One of them will probably cover an evening event—providing a report of a lecture or a review of some play for your morning reading, although the article will not be completed until after midnight. Four others work at the printing shop each night until about 2:00 a. m., reading proof, making up pages, and supervising production of the paper in its last stages.

The next morning, there will be two members of the circulation staff coming on duty at 6:45 to distribute the paper in campus mail boxes and throughout the University neighborhood.

This, then, is a brief outline of the task that the Daily Maroon staff performs every twenty-four hours. Other organizations call upon the time and energy of their students during seasonal periods, only. The Maroon staff works the year 'round.

We have not mentioned a number of "extra curricular" tasks performed by various divisions of the Maroon organization. Among them would be included the Theatre Ticket Bureau, membership in and contribution to a college press news service, promotion of various campus events through Maroon facilities, and the sponsoring of such University features as the straw presidential poll this fall and the recent concert for the benefit of the Student Relief Fund.

Such is the business of publishing a student newspaper.

Our Times

Music

The Hon. William H. Woodin, Secretary-Expect of the Treasury in the new cabinet, whom we feel will prove to be the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Ogden Mills, will put some pep into the new administration. Not only a banker and statesman, but also a composer as well, Woodin should add the Kaufman-Ryskind-Gershwin "Of Thee I Sing Touch" to the government that has promised to bring back prosperity to us and our posterity.

Woodin, who wrote "Spring In My Heart" or "Music of Love," we're not sure of the name (but we know you've heard it over the radio lately) is also the composer of the inaugural march to be used March 4.

That's what happens when you write a good song. Poland had Paderewski, the U. S. has Woodin. We feel that we, too, should get a post in the cabinet on account of the two marches we submit for the inauguration.

Our first melody is in six-eight time, whatever that is, and is dedicated to Frank Roosevelt and John Garner. Use no heavy brass and keep the saxophones in the background. Tune, "Frankie and Johnnie":

"Frankie goes down to the White House
Johnnie's the Senate head now,
'Choice rested with the people
So we put them in, and how!
They were our men, and we done 'em . . ."

That American classic, "Casey Jones" furnishes the melody for our second march:

"Gather all yuh voters, if yuh want to see
The In-au-gur-ation of De-mo-cra-cy
Four years of Hoover, more or less
Has turned the country into a Capitol mess."

But then, the Senate might not ratify our appointment.

Mail

We always like to brag about our mail, some items of which are extremely important. Yesterday we got a very interesting magazine The Angora Wooler, "A Publication for Angora Wool Growers and Rabbit Breeders," issued every two months. In it we find an interesting little professional motto "Fleece the Rabbit at Proper Intervals, but Never the Public." We also find a clever little ad:

Fukusato Here Awaits Further Actions By Secretary Of Labor

Hill after his humiliating experience, yet bewildered and incensed at the complicated legal proceedings of which he has been a storm center, Fukusato yesterday gave his impression of the melodramatic events of the past week.

He was more indignant at the report that he had contemplated suicide while in jail than at his seizure by Immigration Inspector Jennings Otts. "I had no reason to think of suicide," he declared with a scornful laugh. "I have two good hands, a clear head, and I feel fine. The statement was absurd."

"If the regulations of the United States oblige me to leave this country, I can always go to England or France to continue my study. Furthermore, I have a two year scholarship at the University of North Carolina. I am a Christian and could never entertain any thoughts of suicide."

It is possible that the suicide rumor had its origin in the fact that while in jail Fukusato ate little food. Questioned concerning this, he explained, "The jail was not so bad as I supposed it would be. However, the food was dirty and I felt myself so dishonored by having been put in jail that I could eat nothing."

Lack of nourishment was only one of his problems while in jail. He also complained that the hordes of bed-bugs in his cell made sleep an impossibility.

"I am no jailbird," he insisted with a note of Oriental pride in his voice. "That is the first time I have ever been in jail. However, it was a wonderful experience. It will give me good material for writing my impressions of America which are to appear in a leading Japanese newspaper."

Fukusato expressed his gratitude to President Graham for his part in his speedy extraction from incarceration. He is now living at the President's home and expects to remain there until officials decide his disposition.

Chapel Hillians Knew of Plight According to Fukusato, several people in Chapel Hill knew last Saturday that he was being taken to the Wake county jail for a period of at least two weeks.

At no time during the entire affair did Fukusato see the governmental papers which the immigration officer used to take him from the University. "I went with him," he explained, "because I fear the 'wonderful' law of this country and because my friends here advised me to go." He is still unable to understand why he was placed in jail.

Fukusato has written a letter to the Japanese ambassador at Washington asking him to officially protest the matter to the Federal government. As yet, he has received no reply.

"If I have to leave the United States," he said, "I am willing to go like a Japanese gentleman, not hurried out of here like a criminal."

At present Fukusato is undecided as to plans for the future. If he is not allowed to remain in this country, he believes it is possible for him to secure a position as foreign correspondent abroad for some leading Japanese publication. On the other hand, he may continue his academic work either in Europe or Japan.

As he phrased it with a slight laugh, "Right now I want to get out what it's all about."

UNIVERSITY AUTHORITIES GIVE STATEMENT ON CASE

University authorities, after investigating current rumors and reports on the case concerning the possibilities of self-surrender to Jisaku Fukusato, yesterday issued the following statement:

THE TAR HEEL has carried a number of articles relative to Fukusato's case. Inasmuch as two or more of these articles have expressed fear of some such violent action as suicide, and furthermore, since the TAR HEEL of February 24 made the statement that Fukusato had several times threatened suicide, University authorities interviewed Fukusato on this question. In the interview, he expressed surprise and offense that such a statement should ever have been made.

In answer to the direct written question put to him by Comer: "Have you at any time threatened to commit suicide?" he replied: "No. It is foolish—the statement."

To make sure the question was repeated, on which he wrote out the following statement: "I have no reason for suicide. I am a Christian. I have enjoyed an interesting experience which I never expected in my life, by 'wonderful' law of America as a civilized country."

It was his opinion that the report of his suicidal inclinations was based upon unjustifiable rumor.

Track Team Prepares To Defend Two-Year Title In Indoor Games Here

Flying Tar Heels Will Face Fast Field in Annual Contests in Tin Can March 4.

TEAM RELATIVELY GREEN
Carolina Has Lost Many of the Athletes of Last Year's Winning Squad.

The Tar Heel trackmen are working out daily in preparation for a strenuous defense of their two-year championship at the Southern Conference Indoor Games here March 4. This year the Phantom flyers will be facing a big, fast field with a relatively young team.

There are, however, several stars still with the Fetzer-coached men. Clarence Jensen, former cross-country captain and Southern Conference champion in that and also in the mile run indoors, and Floyd Higby, track and field star are among the best. Jensen is also two mile champion of the conference, while Higby holds the University broad-jump record at 22 feet 9 3/4 inches. Higby is a good prospect for the quarter mile run.

Lettermen Will Enter
Crook Stafford in the low hurdles and high jump, and Wick Smith in the spectacular pole-vault are two more of last year's letter men who are given a good chance to head the field in their respective events. The other lettermen available are Bob Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, who has been showing exceptionally well in the time trials, and Ed McRae, all distance runners; Harry Hodges, football star, in the shot; and Johnny Phipps, (Continued on last page)

STRONG NORTHERN PREP TEAM WILL RUN IN CONTESTS

Newark Preparatory School Will Enter Conference Meet Here With Crack Team.

A prep team which could take the measure of lots of good college teams and which has a hurdler who has beaten a world record holder, Newark (N. J.) Preparatory School will lead a big, fast field to the scholastic division of the Southern Conference indoor games here March 4. The crack New Jersey team will be making its first appearance at the annual southern indoor track classic this year. Their stars are primed to make a determined championship bid against the big, fast field that is gathering for the scholastic division. If the New Jersey boys live up to their past marks, this part of the meet may be comparable in performance and thrills to the conference division, in which every member institution is sending its finest stars.

Newark Has Potential Champ
The Newark team will present one potential world champion. Joseph Horton is national interscholastic 70-yard high hurdle champion, and in the Millrose games recently, he won the 50-meter hurdles over Jack Keller, sensational Ohio State star. Keller set a new world's record at the National Collegiate meet last year when he skimmed the 220-yard low hurdles in the hitherto unknown time of 22.7 seconds. The Southern Conference record for the same event is 24 seconds flat, held by Brownlee of Duke.

The New Jersey team will bring four other excellent men in the running event. Ed Lautenschlager won the New England championship at 600 yards in 1.18, and Dennis O'Keefe

VARSITY MATMEN WILL MEET 'CATS IN FINALE TODAY

Re-vamped Line-up Will Meet Davidson in Tin Can at 4:00 O'clock This Afternoon.

Carolina's varsity wrestlers will meet the Davidson Wildcats this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. This will be the finale of the season for the Tar Heels' grapplers.

The Presbyterians boast a strong mat team which won victories in an impressive fashion over both V. P. I. and Duke besides making a creditable showing for themselves against N. C. State, claimants to the state wrestling title.

Line-up Revamped
Carolina will present a revamped lineup against the Davidson team. The shift was necessitated by the recent loss of Don Conklin to the team in the 155-pound class. Jim Spell, regular 165-pounder, will be shifted to fill the gap left by Conklin. There is still a chance that Paul Schallert, promising sophomore, may get his first test in varsity competition today.

Pickett, 165-pound reserve, should get the starting call although he still has a bandage over his split eyebrow. The remainder of the lineup will probably be: 115, Hussey or Kellenberger; 125, Mathewson; 135, Davis; 145, Hiller; 155, Spell or Schallert; 165 Pickett; 175, Auman; unlimited, Captain Idol.

Batteries Practice Earlier

Coach Bunn Hearn announced yesterday that the regular baseball practice for pitchers and catchers will take place this morning at 10:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. The usual daily practice for batterymen comes at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon but has been moved up for Saturdays.

Track Stars To Appear Here In Annual Indoor Games

Featuring the indoor games will be the hurdle duels between Johnny Brownlee, Duke, standing at extreme left, and Eli Finklestein, W. and L., standing at right. Finklestein tied the conference indoor record at the 1931 meet, but Brownlee has since set the outdoor mark and equaled Finklestein's indoor record. Stafford, Carolina field man, will go far in the high jump and hurdles. Turner, V. P. I., is a star high jump and pole vault man. Henry Fulmer will carry Duke's colors in the quarter mile and the broad jump. Rex, State 200-pounder, runs the 100 and puts the shot.

Many Stars Enter Indoor Games

College Champions Will Match Speed and Skill in Meet Here March 4.

Carolina will be host to the fourth annual Southern Conference indoor meet in the Tin Can next Saturday, March 4. This year's indoor games should be better than ever before with a long parade of stars and potential candidates for stardom parading their wares before Dixie track fans in the events booked for Saturday afternoon.

Leading the large galaxy of stars will be Earl Widmyer, Maryland sophomore sprint flash, who recently topped Frank Wycoff in this year's Millrose games. He was beaten by Emmett Toppino, Loyola speed merchant, in the Olympic trials held at Boston last year with scarcely a step as a margin of victory. Widmyer did not go to the Pacific for further competition although he was eligible.

Has Brilliant Record
The Terps' sprint star set a brilliant record as a freshman losing only once in the nineteen meets that he participated in; and this record includes such big invitational contests as the Georgetown meet. Widmyer's best time for the century is nine and four-fifths seconds.

This Maryland boy will be slated for a spectacular race when he hooks up with Lynn, Clemson sprinter, and hopes of the Palmetto state, and Johnny Brownlee, Duke speed king.

Hurdling Duels to Feature
Speaking of Brownlee and great races one naturally recalls the famous hurdling duels staged between the Duke star and Eli Finklestein, Washington and Lee flash, who holds the indoor low hurdles record for the conference. This has been equaled by Brownlee while the Blue Devils' representative has also set the outdoor conference hurdle record. Finklestein tied the world's record for the low hurdles on the "boards" when he set his conference record in 1931. He did not run last year because of injuries, so this will be Brownlee and Finklestein's first meeting in the indoor games.

At the first of the current indoor season, Virginia counted a stirring victory over the W. and L. Generals and featuring in this Cavalier triumph was Everett's sensational triumph over Finklestein. With such a competitor, the low hurdles should take on a tri-cornered race for honors with no man having a decided advantage.

Old Rivalry to Continue
Still another great race lies in the continuance of the old rivalry between Captain Billy Lauck, of Virginia, and Clarence Jensen, Carolina star. These two men have had a great duel in the distances throughout the four years of their college careers. Jensen set a new record in the mile in 1931 and won the two mile in last year.

Duke, always a potential rival for Carolina, still has Brownlee and Fulmer and just those two men in themselves are a good team. Coach Carol Voyles, the Blue Devils' mentor, has promised a versatile club as the Duke representative in the meet. Brownlee will take care of the sprints and hurdles; Fulmer will do the quarter-mile and the broad jump; Bradsher and Lewis are two other fine distance men, liable to make a good showing in the meet.

Captain Higby will lead his Carolina mates in the indoor games and should stop Henry

PHANTOMS DOWN V. P. I. IN INITIAL CONFERENCE TILT

Duke Downs Virginia, W. & L. Upsets State, South Carolina Swamps Old Liners.

Flashing during the first half of the game the best brand of basketball they have shown this season, Carolina's White Phantoms opened the conference tourney in Raleigh yesterday with a 32-27 win over the V. P. I. Gobblers.

The score at the half read 14-5 for the Tar Heels. Vergil Weathers, with three goals and a foul, and Glace with two goals and a foul, led the first-half play. For the Gobblers, Bus Hall, speedy forward, had garnered all the five points his team had scored.

During the second half, the starting Phantom five was broken up with Glace being put out on fouls, and the Gobblers, led by their spirited captain, Hall, came up within four points of the Phantoms.

With the score 23-19 in their favor, the Tar Heels ran ahead to 31-21 on two goals by Brandt, one by Hines, and free throws by Hines and Beale. Hall, Thomas, and Holsclaw kept the Gobblers in the running and the game ended 32-27.

Duke Defeats Virginia
Led by Jim Thompson with 13 points, Duke defeated Virginia last night in the Southern Conference tournament, 38-24. Harrison starred for Virginia. The score was 20-11 at the half.

Washington and Lee scored the first upset of the tournament by defeating North Carolina State by the narrow margin of one point. The score was 35 to 34. The W. and L.-N. C. State game was the most exciting contest of the first round. By virtue of their win, the Generals meet Duke tonight immediately following the North Carolina-South Carolina game.

Gamecocks Swamp Maryland
With Fred Tompkins leading the way with 31 points in thirty minutes of actual play, South Carolina ran over Maryland to the tune of 65 to 28. South Carolina further established themselves as odds-on favorites to capture the Southern Conference crown.

In the second round of the tournament tonight the Carolina White Phantoms meet South Carolina at 8:00 o'clock. Immediately following this game, Duke will clash with Washington and Lee.

Fight Returns

According to information received late last night, six of the Carolina boxers came through with wins in the Southern Conference boxing tournament at Charlottesville, Virginia. Glover defeated Cleveland, Washington and Lee, in the bantamweight class; Quarles, featherweight, won from Crow, of Clemson; Lumpkin defeated Mincher, Washington and Lee, in the welterweight; Giddins won from Short, W. and L., in the middleweight; and Landis won from the V. M. I. heavyweight, Morehead. Captain Marty Levinson won from Scott of Duke in the lightweight division, despite having suffered a broken wrist in the second round. Peyton Brown was beaten by Reiss, Virginia light-heavyweight.

Levinson scrapped gamely and was given a great hand when helped from the ring. He will be forced to forfeit to Burns, Maryland, tonight. Levinson's wrist was set in a local hospital where he spent the night.

Will Attack Indoor Records Here March 4

Leading a long procession of stars at the indoor meet Saturday will be Earl Widmyer, Maryland soph sprint flash, gentleman in the center. He beat Wycoff at the recent Millrose games and lost by a step to Toppino in the Olympic trials last spring. Jensen, Carolina, and Captain Lauck, Virginia, are slated for a continuance of their mile duels. Wellford, V. M. I., is Virginia champion in the 440. Fulmer and Brownlee are Duke's hopes in the broad jump and sprints, respectively. Lynn, Clemson, will carry the Tigers' hopes in the century. Captain Higby, Carolina broad jumper, is the man carded to stop Fulmer.

HURLERS LOOKING GOOD AFTER LONG INDOOR WORK-OUT

Coach Hearn Expects to Call Entire Squad Out Next Week For Outdoor Practice.

Coach Hearn continues to give his baseball pitchers and catchers long work-outs in the Tin Can. The batterymen are fast rounding into shape and will be able to give the batters plenty of trouble when Coach Hearn calls his entire squad out to Emerson field.

Besides pitchers and catchers many more of the baseball players have been reporting for practice in the Tin Can, among them being Captain Willie Powell. Powell was a star at third base in 1931 and 1932 and is all set to lead the Tar Heel campaign this spring. Bill Dixon, slugging outfielder who will probably be shifted to first base this year, is almost sure to return to school next quarter. Dixon will be eligible for competition as he was in school during the fall quarter.

Coach Watches LeGore
Ralston LeGore, Southern Conference javelin title holder, is being watched more than any other pitcher out. The big trackman has lots of speed and if he can develop a curve and drop will add much to the Tar Heels' chances for a good season. Joe Griffith, star pitcher last year, injured his ankle in intramural basketball, but is getting along fine and will probably be out for practice next week.

Coach Hearn said he hoped to be able to get out on Emerson field next week. The field is in pretty bad shape at present, but if the good weather continues it can soon be put in playing condition.

Many Stars Enter Indoor Games Here

Fulmer's long record of wins in the broad jump. Another big star who will come down from the Old Dominion to invade the Carolina stronghold is Wellford, V. M. I. cadet, who holds the record for the 440 in Virginia. Another boy from Virginia who should look good is Bill Turner, wearing colors for V. P. I.; he will participate in no less than five events and specialize in the high jump and pole vault. Crook Stafford, one of Carolina's most experienced performers, is a fine Tar Heel prospect in the high jump and hurdles. Ray Rex, State College, closes the list of the North Carolina delegation. Rex is a bohemian, weighing little over 200 pounds and does the hundred under ten seconds and throws the shot prodigious distances.

Paderewski To Play In Winston Tonight

Ignace Jan Paderewski, world famous Polish pianist, will appear in the Reynolds Memorial auditorium in Winston-Salem tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Paderewski is the most famous of piano soloists today and is a consistent favorite with concert goers. He has appeared in concerts for half a century, having recently passed his seventieth birthday. Aside from his musical ability he is recognized as a statesman, especially for his service to Poland during the war. The Winston-Salem concert is the only one which Paderewski will give in this section. He was to have appeared in Raleigh this week but the concert was cancelled because of conflict with the Southern Intercollegiate basketball tournament.

SECOND PART OF EPIC TO BE SHOWN SUNDAY

The second part of the German epic picture, Die Niebelungen, will be presented at the Carolina theatre Sunday night at 9:15 o'clock. The first part of the picture described the death of the mythical hero, Siegfried. The sequel, "Kriemhild's Revenge," shows how Siegfried's wife revenged the death of her husband.

The historical background of the last part is the overthrow of Burgundian kingdom by the Huns in the year 437. Kriemhild uses Attila, king of the Huns as an instrument of her revenge. The picture in which there is no talking, is synchronized with sound, and has English titles. It will be introduced with a short talk by Dr. Meno Spann. Regular admission will be charged except for high school students who will be admitted for ten cents.

KENNEDY LEAVES TODAY TO ATTEND ORGANISTS' MEET

State Chapter of American Guild of Organists to Convene at Pinehurst Today for Session.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy of the department of music will leave today to attend the mid-winter meet of the North Carolina chapter of the American Guild of organists, which will convene at Pinehurst for sessions this afternoon and tonight. Professor Kennedy is dean of the North Carolina guild.

The group met in Chapel Hill last year, and will meet here again for its annual spring convention. In connection with this meet a contest for student organists of the state will be sponsored by the guild.

An organ recital by Professor Leslie P. Spelman, head of music at Meredith College, will be presented at the Pinehurst meet. Spelman is scheduled to appear here in a recital during the spring quarter. Dr. H. Augustine Smith of Boston University will address the convention.

RADIO DISCUSSION GROUP HEARS TALK BY KOCH

The radio discussion group which was organized here several weeks ago conducted its second meeting Thursday night in Phillips hall. The topic of the evening was "Power Amplifier Theory in Practice," and was discussed by George Koch. The meeting was afterward thrown open to round table discussion. The group will meet again Thursday, March 2; the topic, "Transmitting Antennas and Coupling Systems," will be discussed by Stanley Preston.

Roosevelt Appointee Once Attended University Here

Robert W. Bingham, who attended the University of North Carolina, will succeed Andrew W. Mellon March 4 as United States ambassador to Great Britain, by virtue of appointment by President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is a native of Orange county, North Carolina, and is the wealthy publisher of two independent newspapers in Louisville, Ky., the Courier-Journal and the Times.

Class to Go to Durham

Examiner Ed Egan will take the twenty-three members of the University life-saving class to the Durham Y. M. C. A. this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock for instruction in the pool there. Egan yesterday afternoon gave the class preliminary instruction at Graham Memorial.

According to statistics, bad checks were passed at the University of Missouri at the rate of seventy-five a day last year. — Vermont Cynic.

STRONG NORTHERN PREP TEAM WILL RUN IN CONTESTS

placed second in the 1,000-yard race at the same meet. Ed Neville is a leading quarter-miler and has also done 24.5 on the 220 low hurdles, while Willard Freeman, who will run in the 60-yard dash and the relay, has done 4.8 seconds for 40 yards and 33.2 for 300 yards. Newark also has a 6 foot 2 3-8 high jumper and New England champion, Clarence Edwards, but the West Indian boy may not be brought south.

The strong field which will seek to repel the New Jersey threat and keep the championship at home is headed by Boys' High of Atlanta, the defending champions; Woodberry Forest, leading Virginia team; Asheville School among the Tar Heel prep teams; and by such high schools as High Point, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Durham, Wilmington, Sanford, Rock Hill, S. C., Morristown, Tenn., and possibly Tech High of Atlanta. Teams are also expected from Hargrave (Va.) Military Academy, Darlington (Ga.) School, and possibly other preparatory schools.

tion and constant fear of insecurity.

Thomas has been successively a minister, a writer and an editor. He is now director of the League for Industrial Democracy, contributing editor of the Nation, the World Tomorrow and the New Leader. He was born in Marion, Ohio, and was graduated from Princeton University in 1905. After attending the Union Theological Seminary, he became a pastor of the Presbyterian church in New York. It was while director of the American Parish and working among the immigrant population of the upper East Side that he became associated with Socialism. When some time later Thomas was unable to agree with the churches' support of the war, he resigned and became active in the Socialist party where he has won a position of leadership.

physical labor, he asserts.

"When I memorize a piece of music," he adds, "it is as if I engraved this music on a disk in my head. Once engraved, that disk will reproduce its record for years. Perhaps the record gets a little dusty or blurred. Well, in that case, I take it out and clean it, and put it back again to be used when I like."

Kreisler is to appear here under the auspices of the Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity. Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the University music department, in charge of arrangements, says advance reservations indicate a complete sell-out. Only two dollar and a dollar and a half seats on the main floor were available yesterday.

Track Team Prepares To Defend Indoor Title

another football man, in the jumping events.

Ralston Legore, who was probably the outstanding man on last year's team is again with the Tar Heels. Last season he made the fourth best javelin mark among the country's collegians, but since the javelin event is not used indoors, he will be of no use to the team and is occupying his time working out as a pitcher on the baseball squad.

Many of the outstanding men of the 1932 team are lost to the squad this year, including such stars as Charlie Farmer, Ken Marland, Captain Lionel Weil, Rip Slusser, and Theron Brown. In that group were four University record holders and three State record holders.

Strong in Broad Jump

The strongest event for the Flying Phantoms in the coming indoor meet should be the broad jump. In addition to Higby, two prospects, Odell Childers and Charlie Hubbard, have shown signs of winning form. Childers is also a leading sophomore hope in the sprints. Gunter and Alexander are other sophs with outside chances of taking places in the meet. Tom Hawthorne is the best looking of the sophomore men trying out for the team. He is a hurdler who combines excellent form with fast time. Williamson, Abernathy, Jackson, Pruden, Marsden, Trubnick, Turpie, Curlee, and Waldrop round out the list of sophomore hopes.

The freshman tracksters are as yet an unknown quantity, but Conte, Mark, Montgomery, Keeney, and Smith have shown marked ability.

PHARMACY COLLECTION GIVEN TO MUSEUM HERE

C. N. Herndon, Greensboro pharmacist, has presented the University pharmacy museum with a collection of articles used as equipment in an old-time drug store, it was announced yesterday.

The collection, consisting of balances, mortars, spatulas, and a wooden plaster board, is over one hundred years old. It is regarded as a rare gift by the department here, as nothing similar has ever been presented before. Many of the silver pieces have the name of the pharmacist engraved on them.

A number of shelf bottles have also been donated to the museum by E. V. Woodard, an alumnus living at Selma.

Language Students Conduct Study Of Dialects Of Nation

and 350 individuals from these communities. The individuals selected to record their dialect are those from families that have lived in the same communities for a long period of time and whose native style of speech has not been affected by association with dialects from other districts.

Each individual selected receives a 102-page questionnaire on the style, pronunciation, idioms, and other qualities of his own language. Ten or twelve hours is required to fill out one of these forms. In addition, two or three recordings of each individual's speech is made on phonograph records. The staff expects to complete its study of New England this summer, but its reports will not be published for at least a year.

May Survey Old South

A prospective survey of the old south, including a part of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and a part of Georgia, may be started in the fall of next year. This project will require three or four years. Professor Orbeck is visiting the University campus and consulting faculty members interested in the linguistic work in an effort to select the most strategic centers from which the staff may work. He is leaving today to make a ten-week preliminary survey of the northeastern part of the state, with Elizabeth City as the center. He then plans to make a similar study of the Smoky Mountain region. Professor Orbeck stated that he is just beginning to realize the fertility of North Carolina, especially the mountain regions, in regard to the many different dialects spoken by the natives. Citing an example, he said that some families in the western mountain sections still speak the Shakespearian dialect of the Elizabethan era.

A line drawn a little north of Philadelphia, running directly west and meeting a line drawn from the approximate center of Texas roughly marks the boundary of the southern region. The New England states compose the New England region, and the rest of the nation composes the western division. Following the completion of the southern research, an extensive study of the western region survey will conclude the project.

Headquarters at Brown

The headquarters of the Atlas are located at Brown University, where all the records and data are sent to be assorted and classified. When the survey is completed, the organization plans to publish a number of Atlases containing several maps showing, by means of the phonetic alphabet, the essential differences of style and pronunciation over the entire nation.

Professor Orbeck believes that

FROSH WILL PLAY WASHINGTON TEAM IN FINAL CONTEST

Tar Babies Will Close Season Against High School Quint Tonight in Tin Can.

Carolina's freshman basketball team is scheduled to close its 1933 season tonight when it takes on Washington Central high school in the Tin Can at 8:00 o'clock.

The Washington team is rated as one of the best high school quints in eastern North Carolina and the Tar Babies will be trying hard to make big impression in their last contest as freshmen. The freshmen have a clean record against all prep and high school opponents this year. The Babies have met defeat only three times this season, State's yearlings downing them twice while the Wake Forest first year men defeated them once.

Coach Dameron will probably start the same five that has played most of the past contests. Nelson and Moore will be at forwards, Rankin at center, and Captain McCachren and Glasgow at guards. Tilley, forward, and Guarino, guard, will probably see action.

Postmasters in 1932 received $50,479,451 in salaries. — Stanford Daily.

the various dialects are merging and becoming modified. The records tabled from the results of this extensive study will prove invaluable for research in the linguistic field in years to come. Since the social, political, and economic life of the individual are revealed through the medium of language, these records will also be helpful in social, economic, and other types of surveys in the opinion of Professor Orbeck.

Memorial Hall Sponsored By Phi Mu Alpha.

Fritz Kreisler, who will appear here tomorrow evening in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock, is recognized as today's outstanding genius of the violin, and has appeared in every city of importance in the world and has received equal acclaim for his performance everywhere he has played.

Kreisler began his concert career as a child prodigy appearing in Vienna at the age of seven. He entered the Vienna conservatory and three years later was awarded a gold medal for violin playing. Following his study in Vienna he went to the Conservatory of Paris where his age created some excitement among his tutors who were dubious of teaching advanced courses in theory of music to a child ten years old. Here, however, Kreisler won the Premier Grand Prix de Rome in competition with forty other violinists who were all at least twice his age.

The concert here is under the auspices of the Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity. There are a number of tickets available for seats on the main floor.

The program will include the famous Kreutzer Sonata by Beethoven, Concerto No. 3 in G major by Mozart, and a group of short modern selections including Piece en Forme de Habanera by Ravel, La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin by Debussy, Spanish Dance by De Falla and Tango by Albeniz both arranged by Kreisler, and two of his own compositions Caprice Viennois and Liebesfreud.

PRESS RELEASES
SOCIOLOGY WORKBook by Katharine DuPre
Lumpkin Discusses Various Problems of Family.

The Family, a volume by Katharine DuPre Lumpkin, has recently been released by the University Press. This book deals with the average American family and grew out of an intensive case study of a selected group of families. It aims, by way of first hand materials, to illuminate certain basic sociological principles of family relationships and organizations.

The book is divided into two sections, one, The Social Process in Family Life, and the other, A Study of Member Roles. The first takes up the family as a whole and discusses the social situation of one family with another, while the second characterizes each member of the family separately. The author concludes that social insecurity would not be so serious for the modern home if it were not often accompanied by a widespread economic insecurity.

Families Insecure

The author states that there is no doubt that a great number of families in our capitalist society are at the mercy of an economic insecurity that makes solutions of problems and adjustments to conditions thoroughly baffling.

The source of observation of families was taken from a select group of forty-six families.

Appropriations Group
Adjourns For Recess

Adjourning Friday for a four-day recess over the week-end, the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly left the question of recommendations for state financial aid to the University over until next week.

After hearing one of its subcommittees make recommendations for changes in tuition at institutions of higher learning Tuesday and several officials and trustees of the Greater University present the institution's case Wednesday, the appropriations body failed to reach the University's case Thursday or Friday.

LECTURERS DECRY INDEPENDENCE OF AMERICAN PEOPLEDr. Fred Rippey and Dr. Hubert Herring Speak on Program
Of Open Forum Friday.

"The greatest need of the world today is an organization to allot markets, to provide raw materials, and to adjust national aspirations," Dr. Fred Rippey of Duke University, history professor and authority on Latin America culture, said in an address here Friday night on the seventh Open Forum program sponsored by the University Council for Student Expression.

Speaking with him on the program was Dr. Hubert C. Herring, director of the Committee on Cultural Relations with Latin America.

Stability Needed

"We need such an international organization in order to maintain stability," Dr. Rippey maintained. Our world is not one, he said, in which the nations are competing for raw materials wherever they are available, in which they are wrangling for markets, and in which territory for surplus population is dangerously disputed. The antagonism arising from such competition must be settled either by war or organized arbitration.

"America is decidedly now in an interdependent world. Catastrophes in one area are felt everywhere," Dr. Rippey continued. Since 1880 foreign trade and investment has increased 5,600 per cent. Population has doubled. "There has been a perilous increase in the instruments of warfare, and in our power to injure each other."

The final program of the Open Forum lectures sponsored by the Council for Student Expression schedules Norman Thomas, Socialist ex-candidate for the Presidency, to speak in Memorial hall next Friday evening, March 3, 8:30 o'clock.

Reverend Tamblin Returns

After an absence of two weeks, while on a visit to Plymouth church, Lawrence, Kansas, Reverend Ronald J. Tamblin will have charge of the Student Forum tonight at 7:00 o'clock at the Presbyterian church and will discuss the problem of "Military Preparedness and the Desire for Peace."

Griffin to Preach to Baptists

Reverend George W. Griffin of Wake Forest will preach at the Baptist church this morning at 11:00 o'clock.

St. Helena Negro Quartet Belongs
To Group Well Known For SongsNegroes Who Appear Here Today Have Great Reputation for Their Unique Presentation of Many Spirituals and Folk Songs;
St. Helena Island Studied by University Group.

The St. Helena quartet, appearing in a program of Negro spirituals this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., represents a group of Negroes far-famed for their folk songs.

This group lives on St. Helena Island, which lies along the coast of South Carolina, about midway between Charleston and Savannah. Ever since the Civil War, when the white people were forced to leave, the island has been almost a Negro community. There are now over 4,000 Negroes and less than a 100 white people on the island. Until recently the place was quite isolated from the mainland, but about six years ago it was made accessible to motor traffic by causeways and bridges.

Most Songs Religious

Among the sea-island Negroes are found quite a few remnants of the old English and Scottish popular ballads, but the majority of their songs are religious. Formerly a type of spiritual called "the shout" was very commonly used in religious services, but it is on the decline. The shouting referred as much to the foot movements of the shouters as to their vocal outbursts. The shout was a simple song, repeated over and over with slight variations in words, and accompanied by rhythmic shuffling, stamping, and sometimes by other footwork resembling the late Charleston dance.

Many of the spirituals heard in this part of the country are sung in the sea-islands, but some of them are sung differently. Roll Jordan Roll, for example, is sung to a tune different from the Hampton tune, and many people consider the St. Helena version superior. There are also many songs on the St. Helena which are not familiar to this part of the country, and it is said that the St. Helena quartet will specialize in these spirituals.

School Poorly Equipped

On the St. Helena Island there are several public schools, but most of these are one or two-room schools, very poorly equipped. The chief educational forces on the island is Penn school, founded during the Civil War, supported by philanthropy, and designed to equip the islanders to make a better living from their farms and trades. The quartet which will appear here this afternoon is sponsored by Penn school. The members have had no formal training in music. One of the singers is business manager of the school; another is manager of the blacksmith shop of the school; a third teaches basket making; and the fourth manages the school dairy.

A study of St. Helena Island was made in 1928 by a group of University professors under the auspices of the Social Science Research Council and the University Institute for Research in Social Science. Three volumes dealing with St. Helena Island were published by University faculty members. The first was Dr. T. J. Wooster's Black Yeomanry, a general summary of the whole study. Dr. Guion Johnson wrote A Social History of the Sea Islands, and Dr. Guy B. Johnson wrote Folk Culture on St. Helena Island. Dr. Clarence Heer and Dr. Roy Brown also assisted in the study.

Tar Heel Offers Survey Of University English CoursesService and Language Culture Are Two Aims of Department; Discipline and Beauty Are Objectives in Study
Of English Language.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE DAILY TAR HEEL begins today its second series of departmental surveys, with the intention of presenting student opinion on courses offered in the University curriculum, as a guide to students in registering for the spring quarter. Opinions offered in this series have been carefully secured from students and are not necessarily those of the DAILY TAR HEEL.)

The functions of the English department were stated last year by Dr. George Coffman as twofold; first, that of a service department, helping and setting up classes especially for other divisions of the University; and second, that of existing in its own right for the sake of the English language.

Objectives in Instruction

Two objectives are sought in student instruction. One regards discipline, and the other beauty. An attempt is made to discipline the student's mind so that he thinks more clearly and expresses himself more easily, and secondly to interest him in reading good literature and talking and thinking worthwhile things.

Students interviewed in the course of this survey feel that the department succeeds admirably in creating good taste in reading. However, the general charge was made that few members seek to arouse a thinking attitude toward the materials presented. Most of the pedagogues were indicted for "text-worship" and were criticized for failing to link their subjects with modern trends in literature and public affairs. It was observed that the men who have adopted this method are among the most popular in the department.

As in the survey last year, students complained of the lack of writing instruction after the freshman year. Many, however, feel that the courses in creative writing may eventually prove a remedy along this line.

The following is the consensus of student opinion on various courses taught in the department:

English 1-2-3

Fall quarter extremely dull due to emphasis on grammar and rhetoric, themes chiefly in auto-biographical subjects, and a poor text. Winter and spring improve under greater choice in writing and better texts. Provides a good introduction to the study of poetry. Carolina Will Debate
Tulane Here Monday

The debating team of the University will meet the team from Tulane University Monday morning on the question, Resolved: That American individualism is a menace to western civilization. Part of the debate is to be presented in the assembly. Debater for Carolina are T. P. Russell, freshman, and Edwin Lanier, experienced debater, who will uphold the negative side of the question.

Tentative plans are being made for the Carolina team to make a southern tour during the spring holidays, and in all probability Tulane will be met in a return debate.

SYMPHONY WILL OFFER CONCERT
THIS AFTERNOONUniversity Orchestra Will Present Program Here With McCorkle as Soloist.

The University symphony orchestra, conducted by Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, will present its winter concert in Hill Music hall this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The concert was originally scheduled for 4:00 o'clock, but a change in time has been made in order to avoid conflict with the concert of the St. Helena quartet at 4:00 o'clock in Memorial hall.

The orchestra is one of a few full symphonic groups of college communities in the south. It was organized by the department of music but has a volunteer membership, including both students and faculty. The orchestra has presented a series of Sunday afternoon concerts on the campus for the past several years, consisting of one concert each quarter. Following today's concert the group will play in May its spring quarter appearance.

Concerto by McCorkle

A feature of this afternoon's program will be a concerto for violin and orchestra played by Professor T. Smith McCorkle. The composition, Bruch's Concerto in G minor, although not so well known, is one of the better modern works for the violin and is considered one of the most melodious of its composer. Professor McCorkle has recently given a violin recital and will be heard again in a similar recital next quarter. He is acting concertmaster of the orchestra for this afternoon's concert.

Other selections on the program will include La Source a ballet for orchestra by Delibes, a paraphrase on Wagner's Prize Song from the third act of Wagner's opera Die Meistersinger, and Valse Triste for string orchestra by Jean Sibelius.

Fewer Persons in Infirmary

Those confined to the infirmary yesterday were Fred Dlugin, T. L. Worsley, Jr., Nelson Lansdale, W. G. Springs, Frances Brennecke, Craig Wall, Jack Riley, Walter Graham, Ruth McAuliffe, H. W. McGalliard, Jean Rose, and Dorothy Norman.

No Debate Meeting

The weekly meeting for the debate squad, conducted Monday night, has been called off this week, W. A. Olsen announced yesterday.

GRADUATE HEAD GIVES REPORT IN
FUKUSATO CASEReport of Department's Relations
With Japanese Student
Made to Administration.

A full report of the relations of the graduate department of the University with Jisaku Fukusato, Japanese student whose difficulties with immigration officials have created considerable interest here, was made yesterday to the administration by Dr. W. W. Pierson, head of the graduate school.

Fukusato, freed from confinement in the Wake county jail Thursday, remained in Chapel Hill yesterday awaiting orders of the Labor department in Washington.

Principal Points

The principal points in Dean Pierson's report may be summarized as follows:

1. Relations with Fukusato began in 1916 with correspondence between him and the graduate school resulting in the offer of a scholarship by the University then and again in 1929 when the offer was renewed.
2. Fukusato was granted a consular visa, was permitted to enter the country, was given two University scholarships, and, after converting his Japanese money into United States currency, had $750.00 which should have been sufficient to have supported him for more than a year in Chapel Hill.

3. His appearance for registration in September, 1931, was the first information the graduate office had regarding his entering the University. It was immediately apparent that his knowledge of and ability to use English in oral communication was lacking, and only through

SYMPHONIC BAND
TO GIVE RECITALUniversity Program Will Be Presented Wednesday Evening, March 1 in Music Hall.

The University symphonic band, under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will play its first campus concert of the year in Hill Music hall Wednesday evening, March 1, 8:30 o'clock.

Since the formation of the symphonic band following the football season, it has presented one program in Southern Pines. A number of concerts have been scheduled, however, for the remaining quarter of the school year. The purpose of the group is to develop a symphonic type of musical presentation in an organization generally considered capable of only a military function.

Wednesday evening's concert will feature a violin solo, Romance et Rondo, played by Thor Martin Johnson, a junior in the music school. Johnson has arranged the accompaniment for his solo especially for this quarter's series of band concerts.

The program will include an arrangement for band of a suite by Bach, The Pilgrim's March from Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony, the Andante Cantabile from the fifth symphony of Tchaikowsky and the Atlantis Suite by Safanek.

There will be no admission charge for the concert.

Brushing Aside

The Red-Tape

One salient fact which has been much overlooked in the recent excitement attendant upon the announcement that our only Japanese student had been lodged in the Wake county jail for the past week is the decisiveness with which President Graham went to the heart of the affair, cutting through the miles of red-tape to secure the Japanese's release within six hours after he had learned of his imprisonment. Informed late Thursday afternoon that Fukusato was in a Raleigh jail, he immediately began moves to secure his freedom.

Realizing, after telephonic communications with Edwin B. Schmucker, district director of immigration at Norfolk, had failed to accomplish anything, that due to the excessive complications of the affair nothing short of a senator or cabinet officer would be of any avail, he put in a call for J. W. Bailey, North Carolina's senior senator. At the same time frantic efforts were made to locate Assistant Secretary of the Interior Shaunessy and W. M. Doak, Secretary of Labor.

When Senator Bailey was reached and made cognizant of affairs he dropped whatever he was doing and began to pull strings. During the interim, however, Secretary Doak had been located by President Graham and he agreed to wire the United States marshal in Raleigh orders to secure Fukusato's release into Graham's custody, Graham taking personal responsibility for the Japanese.

Thus having spent a week in jail for having failed to pass his curriculum work, Fukusato was free five hours after his predicament was made known to the University authorities.

Although Fukusato's arrest and imprisonment was fully within the bounds of law it was not in accordance with gentlemanly and hospitable treatment towards a foreign student who was in America as a guest of the University. President Graham deserves commendation for his action, and it is only to be regretted that we must have lost much in the estimation of a scholar and a gentleman.—V.C.R.

A More Worthy Cause

Action has finally been taken to make void the Eighteenth Amendment. A bill providing for this was introduced into the Senate and was passed by much more than the required majority. From there it went to the House of Representatives who in turn passed it by a margin greater than the needed two-thirds.

This action upon the part of the representatives of the people indicates a desire upon the part of the citizens of the country to go back to our former state which was in existence before our present era. They have realized that the Eighteenth Amendment is an unnecessary part of our constitution and wish it abolished.

There is a small minority of the people in the United States who are still holding out for the useless state of Prohibition in spite of the attitude taken by most of the country. They are organized into parties called the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Anti-Saloon League and persist in saying that our so-called Noble Experiment is a success in spite of its utter inability to work.

It is time that they were realizing the futility of their weak efforts and were giving in to public opinion. The women of the W. C. T. U. would not wear cotton stockings and corsets because they recognize their inferiority to silk hose and brassieres, but they still continue to adhere to their obsolete society with a tenacity which would be much better placed if it were used in making the present state of affairs better. By still ranting about the glory of being a dry country in the face of the majority who look at the state of the country with an unbigoted viewpoint, they are merely creating a dissension that to the present condition is unnecessary and could be very easily abolished.

The Anti-Saloon League is still attempting to hold its head above water in the same manner. To show that they are absolutely right they quote numerous statistics although they are aware that practically anything can be proved by their use. They still refuse to admit that they are unbiased in their work regardless of the fact that they are so narrow-minded that they permit only the most biased of arguments to penetrate their dogmatic minds.

It would be much better for the entire country if this minority were to cease fighting for a cause which is only too obviously a failure and devote their energies to alleviating conditions which are more pressing, more worthy, and more needful of aid.—P.G.

THE INK WELL

By Nelson Robbins

Someday, when I have written The Great American Novel and made more money than I know how to spend, I shall, first, buy myself a pair of those gray suede spats that I have always admired and, then, devote the rest of my fortune to establishing a school which Jack and Jill, Mary and Bill, and Tom, Dick, and Harry will not have to be bullied into attending.

In my school, there will be no lesson assignments, no instructors, no prescribed courses of study. The entire scope of school activities will consist of extra-curricular interests. There will be no faculty supervision, for there will be no faculty.

There will be debates, athletics, glee clubs, dramatics, journalism, orchestras, home economics, dancing, and anything else which the students are well enough interested in to initiate and carry forward. But, there will be no formal curriculum as such and no teaching staff. If the pupils want to follow the old-fashioned text book method of studying in some of their work, they may do this in their own fashion without being under the dominance of some professional pedagogue.

There will be no set time for reaching school, nor any specified hours of class meetings. In fact, there will be no classes in the popular meaning of the word, unless the students desire to meet together at some time to talk over their work or assist each other. Students will come to school whenever it pleases them to do so.

When school is reached each student may participate in whatever activity appeals to him at the moment. If part wish to play basketball while another group engages in learning a new song, that will be perfectly all right. Another bunch of students may, at the same time, be interested in preparing a newspaper feature story on some activity that has taken place recently. Perhaps, some will be rehearsing a play, while others are learning a new dance. A certain group may be preparing or rendering a debate upon any subject that appeals to them. Some will, probably, be drawing, some working with clay models, some surveying the grounds for a sidewalk, some rehearsing a play. Others will, probably, be interested in nature study, still others in scientific research or architecture, while some will, undoubtedly, be just loafing.

There will be extensive libraries, laboratories, gymnasiums, conservatories, musical instruments, tools for manual labor, drawing materials, reference works of all sorts, athletic supplies, and all other facilities that the students may wish to use.

This will not be a Project Method school or a Unit Plan organization, as both of these require professional teacher guidance in all school work and presuppose the use of certain text books in greater or less degree, under the supervision of a taskmaster.

In the school that I will build, there will be no teachers hired. The students will initiate their own activities and carry them out cooperatively or individually, as they see fit. There will be no objection to students' teaching each other, but no one will receive money for this. It will probably resolve itself into a sort of mutual helping to understand and apply knowledge that is worthwhile.

Students may use any books that they wish and follow any method that may suit them in organizing the activities of the school. They may wish to meet in formal class organization and prepare certain self-imposed assignments in Latin before preparing a stage play upon old Roman life and customs, or they may wish to do this work in some other way. They may use the class meeting to learn certain aspects of

THE THEATRE

SAD WORDS TO GAY MUSIC. Comedy in three acts. By Alvin Kerr. Directed by Samuel Selden. Playmaker Theatre, February 23, 24, 25, 1933. Marion Tatum, Edward Martin, Carl Thompson, Eugenia Rawls, James McConaughy, William Bonyn, Aileen Ewart, Irving Suss, Ormae Davis, Bradford Bissell. (Performance of February 24 reviewed.)

The selection of Alvin Kerr's Sad Words To Gay Music proved a very happy one for the current offering of the Playmakers. The play was eminently suitable for Playmaker talents. A pleasant concoction of nice dialogue and amusing situations, it offered no great strain on the acting ability of the respective players and enhanced the generally favorable impression of the production.

As to Mr. Kerr's play, it is a delightful one in several respects. It is not a finished piece of high comedy, nor is it good technically. Its incidents are jumbled and the piece as a whole lacks unity. Yet the cleverness of the dialogue and the adroit manner in which the author handles situations combine to make one forget these faults. To have taken such a tenuous thread of action and with it succeed in sustaining the interest of the audience is no mean accomplishment. As soon as Mr. Kerr has gained a mastery of construction technique and is able to find more valid subject matter for comedy, he will be very good indeed. There are several minor defects other than those mentioned above. A tendency to

GEORGE ARLISS WILL PLAY STAR ROLE WEDNESDAY

Carolina Program Thursday Filled by John Barrymore's Latest Hit: "Topaze."

Lion Atwill has the lead role in "The Mystery of the Wax Museum," technicolor production which opens the week's program at the Carolina theatre Monday. Others in the cast are Fay Wray, Glenda Farrell, and Frank McHugh. The plot of the picture, taken from the play by Charles S. Belden, evolves about the actions of a strange master.

Wynne Gibson's latest appearance is with Stuart Erwin and Frances Dee in "The Crime of the Century," showing Tuesday.

George Arliss' latest screen play, "The King's Vacation," Warner Bros. production, is the feature Wednesday. Included in the cast are Dick Powell, Patricia Ellis, Dudley Digges, O. P. Heggie, Marjorie Gatenon, Florence Arliss, Vernon Steele, James Bell, and Maude Leslie.

Thursday, John Barrymore's newest screen stardom finds him in a famous comedy, the screen version of "Topaze." Contrary to usual design, no one in the play can be said to be a hero and no one exactly a villain, for each individual mixes a little good with a little bad.

The development of a woman's life through trials and hardships to a final haven of happiness provides the dramatic motif of "The Secret of Madame Blanche," now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering Friday, with Irene Dunne in the starring role.

The famous comedians, Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey tread deep into the animal infested jungles of the darkest of the dark belts in Africa, in their latest comedy, "So This Is Africa!" produced by Columbia Studios, and winding up the week's bill Saturday.

White Phantoms Downed By South Carolina 34-32 After Two Extra Periods

Captain Hines, With 18 Points, Plays Brilliant Game to Close Varsity Cage Career.

DUKE DEFEATS GENERALS

Blue Devils and Gamecocks Will Battle for Conference Title
Monday Night.

Raleigh, February 25.—
(Special) — North Carolina's White Phantoms were downed here tonight in the second round of the Southern Conference tourney in Raleigh by the South Carolina Gamecocks, 34-32, after two extra periods.

The North Carolina team put up a surprising battle to force the heavy conference favorites into two extra periods in one of the tightest games of the season.

The Tar Heels led the whole show throughout until near the close of the game when a rally by the eventual winners pulled them up to a tie at the end of the regular session. The deadlock was not broken in the first extra five-minute period, but the South Carolina team scored four points to the Phantom's two in the second extra inning to win the contest.

Captain Wilmer Hines of the Tar Heels led the scoring with eighteen points while Aitken and McCachren also played stellar ball for the Tar Heels. Ed Tompkins was outstanding for the Gamecocks.

In the second game of the night, the Duke Blue Devils defeated the Washington and Lee Generals by a score of 41 to 32 to advance to the finals with the Gamecocks Monday night.

was the second loss out of year.

Captain Jim was unusually hot last night in playing his last game as leader of the freshman basketballers. McCachren showed that he was almost as good offensive as defensive, scoring fifteen points which was high for the night. McCachren counted on both long and crisp shots, some after a fast dribble the length of the floor. On defense the Tar Baby captain played his usual stellar game.

Fresh Defense Strong

The high school team had a fast passing attack but were unable to get by the freshman defense and as a result counted most of their score on long shots. The Tar Babies got off to a fast start at the opening of the game, running up eight points before Washington scored. Washington, however, pulled up near the end of the first half and took a 19 to 18 lead when Shore dropped in a field goal, a foul, and another field goal in succession. Glasgow, freshman guard, however, gave the Tar Babies a half-time lead of 21 to 19 with a foul and field goal in succession.

Washington tied the score for a moment at the opening of the second half on Captain Nau's shot. The Tar Babies then opened up, and pulled away from the high team for good.

HEEL GRAPPLERS TIE DAVIDSON IN SEASON'S FINAL

Score Fourteen All as Tar Heels
Hold Last Meet Before Conference Tilt.

Davidson's Wildcats wrestling team lived up to its proverbial cognomen and held Carolina to a 14-14 tie yesterday afternoon.
This was the final meet of the regular season for the Tar Heels and some 600 fans witnessed the contest which was the last before the Southern Conference tournament.

The Carolina matmen started off fast coping time decisions over the first two Davidson lightweights and then with Hiller's fall, victory seemed safely in the bag, but the Wildcats rallied clawing their way to a 14-11 lead as the last bout of the afternoon was called. Captain Percy Idol, the Tar Heels brilliant heavy, who had gained a fall over every opponent this year, was to meet Whitfield, giant bohemoth, outweighing
Idol some thirty odd pounds.

Last Bout Hair-Raiser

This match proved to be the hair-raiser of the entire card.
Whitfield was big and rough enough to stall while Idol was straining all his ability to get the necessary five points for the victory margin. The fight was clearly Idol's all the way but the big Davidson tackle blocked every move which might prove his downfall. With seconds left to go Idol came near pinning his man, but again Whitfield thwarted the attempt and Carolina was forced to be happy with a time decision and a tie.

In the bantamweight, Thad Hussey, Carolina 115 pound class, gained a time decision of 7:55 minutes over Harris.
Throughout the fight Hussey was trying hard to get a fall, but the Wildcat mat man staved over the pinning several times when nothing but Providence and John Calvin could have predestined otherwise.

Clark Mathewson, Carolina
125 pounder, and Jenkins put on one of the best bouts of the afternoon in the lighter weights.
Jenkins started off fast and looked as if he might come through with a win in the end, but Mathewson proved to be the clever man, gaining a figure "4" hold on Jenkins and then the fight was all over. The time was 7:35 minutes.

In the 135 pound class Sprunt, Davidson, gained a time decision over Davis. This fight was slow but both men showed lots of fight and the advantage finally went to Sprunt with 3:08 minutes margin.

Morton Hiller, Carolina 145 pounder, looked good in his fall over Griffith, stocky Davidson scrapper. Hiller pinned his man in 7:50 minutes with a crotch hold.

Davidson Wins Three Straight

Then followed three straight Davidson victories, two more time advantages and then a fall. Quarterman counted a time decision over Jim Spell, Tar Heel who had come down to make the weight, with a 2:57 margin. Captain Taylor, Davidson, gained a fall over Pickett in 4:23 minutes. Pickett wrist-led with a badly cut eyebrow which hindered his style a great deal. In another heart-breaking bout, Potter, Davidson, 175 pounder, won a time advantage over Mac Auman with only a minute for victory margin.

The score then stood 14-11 in

Annual All-Campus Cage Team Picked By Intramural Officials

Old East, Championship Winner, Places Two Men on Mythical Outfit.

The all-campus, all-fraternity, and all-dormitory selections of mythical stellar teams from the hundreds of intramural basketeers who took part in the campaign just closed was announced yesterday. The selections were made by Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics,
and John Peacock, Dan Jones, and Willie Powell, intramural referees.

Old East, which won the campus championship by downing
S. A. E. last week, is the outfit to gain two places on the all-campus quintet. Henson at forward and Fox at center are the honored members of the championship team. S. A. E., the runner-up for the championship, places Connor at guard, while Jacobs, T. E. P. leader, gets a forward berth and Stuart of Ruffin, is named at guard.

On the all-fraternity five, besides Connor and Jacobs, are Baukney of Chi Psi and Everette of Kappa Alpha at forward, and Alexander of Delta Kappa Epsilon at center. Hamlet of Old East and Irwin of Best House round out the all-dormitory five, which placed three members on the all campus selection.

COMMITTEE SAYS PLEDGES CANNOT PRESENT DANCE

Representatives of Fourteen Lodges Refused Permission to Stage
Dance During Spring.

Plans for the pledge dance organized several weeks ago have been abandoned, following the refusal of the University dance committee to grant permission for the affair. Representatives from the fourteen fraternities presented the case before the committee, which body refused the permission, after a joint meeting with the faculty committee, on the grounds that there were too many dances scheduled during the spring quarter. Among those dances previously scheduled are the official dance of the freshman class, the Junior-Senior, and the Finals.

The action taken by the committee is consistent with action taken by previous committees, as the dances of other large organizations have been refused.
Tentative plans for this dance were drawn up several weeks ago by the pledges of fourteen of the leading fraternities on the campus; the purpose of the dance being to foster better feeling among the various fraternities.

favor of the Davidson aggregation, but then Captain Percy Idol rallied the uncertain Carolina ship of state and won a time advantage over Whitfield, tying the score 14-14.

Carolina will lose only two men by graduation, Captain Idol and Jim Spell.

S. A. E. AND BEST HOUSE TAKE LEAD IN FOUL-SHOOTING

Best House Qualifies Fourteen Men; S. A. E. Enters Twenty-Nine, Qualifies Five.

Qualifying rounds of the intramural free throw tournament were completed last week with two hundred and forty-one men competing. One hundred and four men, fifty-five representing dormitories and forty-nine representing fraternities, qualified for the semi-final round by making good on twelve or more of the twenty-five shots allowed them.

Best House took first place among the teams entered by qualifying fourteen men. S. A.
E. gained the advantage in number of men entered by sending twenty-nine men to the line.
Only five of these, however, succeeded in qualifying.

Shoot Again Next Week

All men who qualified will shoot twenty-five more shots
Monday and Tuesday afternoons this week. Intramural officials will be at the Tin Can these days from 2:30 to 5:30 o'clock to check the shooters.

On the basis of their work in the fifty shots they make in the first and second rounds the twenty-five highest men will be selected to enter the finals. Each of these twenty-five will shoot fifty more throws, the winner being the man with the best score on his hundred shots.

The Theatre

wards superfluity of minor incidents and a lack of adeptness at creating definite climaxes are among them, but such mistakes are fully atoned for by his amusing manner of portraying such incidents as the love-scene between Sheila and Bart at the beginning of the second act. This scene and the lines of Miss Tatum were the high-spots of the evening.

Mr. Selden's direction was especially good in this production.
He enhanced the good qualities of the play and successfully glossed over its deficiencies. To him is due the chief credit for the enjoyable character of the evening.

As to the acting, it was unusual in several ways. Miss Rawls as Sheila gave a performance that showed unexpected ability as a comedienne. Miss Tatum, as usual, won the laurels however. Her performance was polished and delightful. Miss Ewart completed the trio of good performances.

In the leading male role, Mr.
McConaughy provided a pleasant surprise. He is the one Playmaker who can take a male lead without absurd posturings and grandiloquent gestures. He has excellent stage presence and is a much-needed complement to the good actresses of the Playmaker group. Mr. Martin was a washout. Mr. Bonyun demonstrated his inability in two ways.
He is not quite as poor an actor as another Playmaker, but he is every bit as poor a singer.

The rest of the cast, Mrs.
Davis and Messrs. Thompson,
Suss, and Bissell were adequate.
Despite the flaws of Mr. Martin's and Mr. Bonyun's performances, the production was good, the settings good, and the evening pleasant.

Virginia Gets Four Champion- ships to Retain Mitt Title by Overwhelming Margin.

QUARLES AND LANDIS WIN

Captain Levinson Forced to Forfeit Because of Broken Wrist;
N. C. State Takes Third.

Charlottesville, Va., February
25.—(Special)—The University of Virginia retained its Southern Conference boxing crown tonight by taking four of the eight championships and sending seven men into the finals.
North Carolina was second with two semi-finalists and two conference champions. N. C. State followed the Tar Heel boxers scoring with one championship and two finalists. South Carolina followed in fourth place with Willard's upset win over
Smith of Virginia. Duke,
Maryland, Washington and Lee, and V. P. I. tied for fifth, each having a man in the finals.

Quarles opened the finals with a sensational second round technical knockout over Rainey of Virginia. The end came after one knockdown, 1:59 minutes of the second round. Quarles fought beautifully and was not pushed at any time. Hahn of Virginia had taken the bantamweight title from Lloyd of Duke when Lloyd had to forfeit on account of broken wrist sustained in the semi-final bout. Landis won a close decision over Negri of V. P. I. to raise the Carolina score. Platt floored Negri twice in the second round but Red came back strong.

Dunaway Wins K. O.

The most exciting bout of the night came when Dunaway met Stuart of Virginia. The bout started slowly with both men very cautious. Dunaway slowly opened up to floor Stuart in the second round. He rushed Stuart at first but the Virginia battler rallied. Dunaway floored him again and had him groggy as round ended. He knocked Stuart out in the middle of the third round.

Willard of South Carolina beat Smith of Virginia through clever boxing to take the middleweight crown. Fishburne of Virginia dethroned Garner of State in the 145 pound class. The fighting was fast but Fishburne had an edge. Reiss of Virginia retained his lightweight weight title by outpointing Collins of Washington and Lee.

Goldstein of Virginia won a close decision from Burns of Maryland in a hectic battle to annex the lightweight championship.

Captain Levinson was unable to participate in the fights because of an injury to his wrist acquired in his bout Friday.

GRADUATE HEAD GIVES REPORT IN FUKUSATO CASE

His wishes on this were vague and later variable; he first wanted to study the Negro problem, then changed to transportation, and finally to difficult studies in economic theory.

4. Fukusato was gladly given unusual time and consideration by his instructors and members of the graduate department, who guided his studies with patience and kindness. Concessions were granted him which no other student enjoyed, and no American student with a similar academic record would have been allowed to remain in the University. Efforts to improve his knowledge of English, including permission to enter courses in the high school, failed, and he was unable after his attempt of one year and five months to make effective use of his language.

5. His academic record included three passes in nine courses taken during the four quarters he was at the University; these three courses of credit were granted him at the beginning of the fall quarter of 1932-1933 after he had spent the entire summer in writing reports on his investigations.

6. As long as there was any chance of improvement, the graduate school was willing to assist him in an effort to stay in the country. The ruling of the immigration authorities on the question is that a non-quota immigration student shall carry twelve semester hours of work satisfactorily, further providing that a graduate student may continue residence in case he carries the maximum load permitted by an institution although that load falls below the twelve semester hours regularly required. During one quarter of his stay, Fukusato carried three courses or ten semester hours; for the remainder of the time he carried two courses each quarter. Having to see the law enforced, the University reported the facts in Fukusato's case.

The immigration officials also have a financial requirement that the student shall be financially independent. Secretary H. F. Comer of the Y. M. C. A. received permission for Fukusato to work for his board and room, but the Japanese made no effective use of this permission, fell behind in his payments, and received aid from his friends.

7. In the fall quarter of this year, a committee, composed of Professors C. T. Murchison and M. S. Heath of the economics department, Edwin Lanier representing the Y. M. C. A., Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw, and Dean Pierson, met, on the suggestion of the economics department, to discuss Fukusato's case. His ability as a student, his educational endeavor, immigration regulations, his temperament as a man, and his finances were taken up.

8. Fukusato's health and possible attitude and reaction to any decision of the University that he leave were considered as a matter of temperament. It was suggested that self-violence or possibly suicide would result from such action, and reports of this disposition and inclination were of decisive weight with the committee, determining in a large measure the conduct of the graduate office in the case.

In regard to finances, the committee considered the fact that he did not have funds for his own support but was dependent from time to time on interested persons in the community and on leaders of an organization in the Baptist church. It was also learned that he had attempted to make loans from the University, that he was behind in room rent and fees, and that his funds were inadequate for living expenses. An effort had been made to interest the Japanese Embassy in his case but no funds were available from that source.

It was also reported by his instructors that he was unsatisfactory as a student.

9. The decision of the committee was that it was futile for him to stay in the University longer. Dean Pierson was asked to communicate with Washington in an effort to secure governmental assistance in returning Fukusato to Tokyo.

10. Communicating with Commissioner Hull of the bureau of immigration, Dean Pierson reported the data filed in his office—that Fukusato was not a satisfactory student, being unable to carry on his program, and he was not self-supporting. He asked for the advice of the bureau in dealing with the situation.

11. In January immigration authorities sent Inspector Jennings Otts, district representative, to investigate the case and make a report. Otts returned February 15 with authority to conduct a hearing.

Advised to Leave

12. In the meantime Fukusato, aware of the investigation, came to Dean Pierson's office for a talk. During the conversation Dean Pierson attempted to explain the immigration law, tried to ascertain the student's financial condition, advised him that he should carry on in Japan the same kind of research he was conducting here as possible benefits of study in the University would be impeded by his language difficulties, and also suggested that he should initiate his own return to Tokyo.

In a later interview, the Japanese student asked that in the event the government should refuse further stay he be allowed the right of voluntary return to his home and received promise of assistance.

13. The hearing was conducted February 16. It was found that, in contradiction to a current rumor that Fukusato had money in reserve, he had only $3.00. With the points that he was not taking the required amount of work and that he could not support himself brought out, a warrant was executed for his detention pending deportation.

14. Friends of the student were present at the hearing. At the conclusion, the graduate office, with the co-operation of the president's office, signed and sealed a document testifying that Jisaku Fukusato had been a welcome student and had conducted himself in this community as an honorable gentleman.

Tar Heel Offers Survey Of University Courses

English 9 a-b-c A competently presented course for engineering students which treats largely of mechanics of writing.

English 21-22 Two quarters of hasty skimming through the whole range of English prose, drama, and poetry. Though the material is excellent, it is entirely out of proportion with time allotted. Best results obtained by concentrating on individual figures.

English 44-45-46 Good "bull-session" courses which give student opportunity to express his ideas in addition to learning the rudiments of public speaking.

English 47 Continued "bull-sessions" with more attention to the definite factors involved in oral expression. Deservedly popular course.

English 50 Shakespearean drama in large bites. Under Koch it is one long monologue on the subject of Koch. Studies only one play thoroughly. Dr. Taylor approaches material in a masterly scholarly fashion and affords student excellent background for appreciation.

English 51 Good training in business correspondence for students in commerce school.

English 52-53-54 Excellent practice in frequent writing with unlimited choice in subjects. Valuable for personalities of professors. More direct criticism from Russel would be helpful.

English 75-76-79 Courses in Browning and Tennyson and recent English literature which are extremely interesting under a unique gentleman and scholar. Good choice of material but method of presentation often makes it difficult for the undergraduate.

English 81-82 Thorough, conventional, methodical, uninspired handling of American literature from 1830 to present. Professor insists on reading text to class.

English 91 More emphasis on history and development of the novel and authors' life and style than on criticism of individual novels. Those who understand Dr. MacMillan's personality will find it a splendid course.

English 103 Genuine appreciation of vast Chaucerian material and rich background of medieval thought provided by Dr. Coffman's dynamic treatment.

English 105 Dr. Thrall's best course. Limited to those interested in legendary medieval background.

English 111 Dull Renaissance material poorly organized.

English 112 No place for an undergraduate. Scholarly study of Spenser with regard for minute details. Professor makes allowance for comparative ignorance of undergraduates.

English 125 Dr. Taylor's vivid personality makes this Milton course exciting and inspiring. Gets epic sweep of the poetry but tends to neglect prose works.

English 131 Survey of non-dramatic literature from 1700-1780. Though a fine scholar, Dr. Bond injures course by expatiating on its difficulty and maintaining "stand-offish" attitude with students. Dr. MacMillan's lectures excellent.

English 141 Dr. Hudson's dry, monotonous technique enervates this study of the romantic period which should be one of the best courses in department.

English 143-144 Victorian literature 1832-1890 well presented despite tendency to dwell for weeks on a single subject. Detailed study of personalities of the period. Courses noted for unusually difficult exams and extra evening and afternoon class sessions.

English 151 Materially practically limited to mediocre early American writings and presented in mediocre, superficial style.

English 161-162 Recommended to those interested in further acquaintance with the personality of Frederick H. Koch. Little attention paid to drama from anybody to anybody.

English 167 English, Scottish, and Southern ballads are Dr. Hudson's specialty. Gives considerable attention to form and folk background. Worthwhile and entertaining.

English 170 Exhaustive study of the history of the English language under a linguistic scholar, Dr. Ericson. Difficult for those who have not had old and middle English courses.

Master's Examinations

The written examinations for candidates for the master's degree in chemistry will take place on March 25, in the library of Venable hall. The first half of the test, physical and analytical, will be given in the morning at 9:00 o'clock. The second half, organic, inorganic, and industrial, will be given in the afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

Department Makes Slight Change in Chemistry Course

At the suggestion of many former students, the nature of the work in chemistry 71, food chemistry, will be slightly changed beginning with the spring quarter, so as to include laboratory work.

The course will consist of three lectures and six laboratory hours per week. The lectures will be given at 12:00 o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and the laboratory work Tuesday and Thursday from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

INVITATIONS SENT OUT FOR LIBRARY CONFERENCE HERE

Meeting April 7-8 Sponsored by American and Southeastern Library Associations.

President Frank P. Graham last week issued invitations for a library conference to be conducted at the University April 7-8. The conference is being sponsored by the American Library Association and the Southeastern Library Association.

The library will be considered in its relation to the other agencies of the community and in its governmental aspects, with a view to discovering how it supplements the activities of the other agencies. At the same time plans will be discussed by which present facilities can be extended. From a recent survey of libraries in the southern region it has been found that two-thirds of the people in the south are without access to local public library service.

The list to whom invitations were sent includes newspaper editors, civic organizations, women's organizations, welfare agencies, college and university presidents, representatives of educational foundations, public school men, representatives of church boards, agricultural extension workers, librarians and library trustees.

There will be four sessions with a dinner Friday evening. Leaders of the sessions will be Louis Brownlow, director, Public Administration Clearing House, Chicago; Wilson Gee, director, Institute of Research of the Social Sciences, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia; Belson Y. Landis, executive secretary, American Country Life Conference, New York.

SECRETARY DOAK SILENT ON CASE OF JAP STUDENT

Action of Department of Labor Pends While Graham Receives No Communication.

Dr. Frank Graham revealed yesterday that Secretary Doak, head of the department of labor, had not yet acted in the deportation case of Jisaku Fukusato, former Japanese student in the University, who was released from a Raleigh jail into President Graham's custody last Thursday pending proceedings in Washington. Graham stated that further particulars in the case were sent the department of Labor Saturday.

Fukusato is at present awaiting developments here. He is residing at the Graham home and is not expected to leave until official orders are received from the Washington headquarters of the Labor department.

Graham also stated that no communication had been received from the Japanese embassy, to which Fukusato appealed during his confinement in the Wake jail.

Firemen Save House

The local fire department was called out to a fire near Henderson street at about 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The roof of the house, which is said to be owned by Will Mike of Haw River, was ignited by sparks from a chimney. Firemen extinguished the fire before the house was badly damaged.

Selden Will Read On Bull's Head Program

Sam Selden, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, will read George S. Kaufman's and Edna Ferber's drama, Dinner at Eight, at the weekly meeting of the Bull's Head bookshop this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A.

This play, which is in eleven scenes, opened on Broadway in October last year and is still playing there.

Kaufman has written Of Thee I Sing and The Diary of an Ex-President, while Edna Ferber is the author of Show Boat, Too Big, and Cimarron.

ONE-FOURTH LAW STUDENTS MAKE HONOR AVERAGE

Five Make All "A's" During Semester While Twenty-Eight Average "B."

More than twenty-five per cent of the students of the law school are on the honor roll for its first semester which ended January 31, according to figures made public yesterday by the dean. Four and one-half per cent maintained an "A" average.

Out of the 110 students in the school twenty-eight made an average of "B" or better. Included in the number are twelve first year students, seven second year, and nine third year students. Three of the ones who averaged "A" are second year students while the first and third year classes have only one each in this group. "A" students for the semester are W. J. Adams, I. E. Erb, Jule McMichael, R. H. Schnell, and E. C. Willis.

The complete honor roll for the term is as follows: First year: J. B. Adams, C. C. Bell, A. A. Block, C. L. Eady, E. E. Ericson, R. F. James, J. A. Kleemeier, E. D. Kuykendall, H. W. McGalliard, W. V. Shepherd, H. H. Taylor, and E. C. Willis. Second year: Dorothy Andrews, W. E. Anglin, E. P. Dameron, I. E. Erb, Jule McMichael, Cecil L. Piltz, and R. H. Schnell. Third year: W. J. Adams, A. T. Allen, R. A. Hovis, J. M. Little, H. S. Merrell, J. C. Moore, W. C. Parker, E. M. Perkins, and F. P. Spruill.

Robinhood is the sixth of a series of programs presented throughout the school year by the Student Entertainment Committee. Students not holding entertainment booklets and townspeople can obtain tickets to the program from the office of Dean Hobbs in South building, or at the door Thursday night. There will be no reserve tickets.

The well-known comic opera was first produced in Chicago in 1890 by a group of Bostonians, who subsequently became known as the Boston Light Opera Company and produced the play more than 4000 times. The libretto was written by Reginald DeKoven and the music by Harry B. Smith.

WINDSOR SPEAKS IN ASSEMBLY ON DEBT PAYMENTS

World Traveler Addresses Freshmen And Sophomores on International Economics.

Philip B. Windsor, world traveler, graduate of Cornell, and authority on international affairs, yesterday spoke to the freshmen and sophomores at assembly on "International Economics."

Windsor presented the fact that the fundamental economic law in international relations is that obligations arising from war debts can be repaid, in the long run, only by goods and services. According to Windsor, gold is misused when international debts are repaid with it. Along with this fundamental principle, Windsor gave two corollaries. The capacity of debtor nations to pay debts is equal to the excess of its exports over its imports. Windsor's second point was that the capacity of the creditor nation to receive payment is equal to excess of imports over exports.

Windsor closed his talk by emphasizing the fact that all talk about United States' debtors spending money on armaments is all very foolish because the money used to pay for armaments is the nation's own paper currency and not gold, which is the currency used for paying off international debts.

Buccaneer Staff To Meet

The business staff of the Buccaneer will meet at 7:00 o'clock tonight in the offices at Graham Memorial.

History And Government Study Aimed To Aid Broad Education

Increased Student Interest Accounted for Through Connection of Courses With Contemporary Problems in Political Science, Government Economy, and Cultural Development.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE DAILY TAR HEEL continues today its series of departmental surveys with the intention of presenting student opinion on courses listed in the University catalogue, as a guide to students about to register for the spring quarter. Opinions offered in this series are not necessarily those of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.)

History and government as taught at the University aim to meet the needs of both students who desire only a general knowledge of the subject and those who require detailed information. "It must, therefore," explained Professor R. D. W. Connor in stating the purposes of history and government department of which he is head, "include in its offerings both general survey courses and detailed courses." Dr. Connor is convinced that history and government are so closely inter-related that his views here presented may be taken as of both subjects.

Quoting from a great English historian, he describes one purpose of history as acquiring the ability "to enable one to read the morning newspaper with intelligence, that is, understand the world in which he lives and moves and has being."

To this view Dr. Connor adds, "Historical studies have, also, important cultural values. Properly pursued they should broaden a man's outlook, cultivate in him the habit of taking the all-around, long view perspectives of contemporary problems and situations, and, like the study of literature furnish him with resources of pleasure and interest within himself.

"Whether these aims and objectives can be attained depends on both the teacher and the student. A narrow conception of the subjects—as a mere antiquarian conception of history, or a purely legalistic conception of government—by either teacher or student; a presentation by the teacher that divorces the subject from human life; a pursuit by the student for the purpose of piling up courses or chasing grades, will inevitably defeat the legitimate purpose of the study."

In surveying student opinion on the courses offered in the department of history and government, it appears that there has been a renaissance of interest in these subjects. The revival is apparently accounted for by the indisputable fact that all matters centering around present problems of political science, government economy, and cultural development have become imbued with new life in recent years. The new interests evinced in these former abstract and theoretical subjects is due, it is generally felt among students, to the present economic crisis and the issues of moment which are being discussed in Congress.

Interest in the courses themselves sometimes lags because of the manner in which they are presented. A more thorough manner of class discussion and better organization of subject-material were recommended as

Meredith Organist To Play Recital Sunday

Professor Leslie P. Spelman, head of music at Meredith College, will appear here Sunday afternoon, March 5, in an organ recital in Hill Music hall at 4:00 o'clock. The recital is presented as an exchange with Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, University organist, who appeared at Meredith last month.

Spelman is considered one of the leading organists in the state. He recently presented recitals at Duke University at the mid-winter meet of the North Carolina guild of organists at Pinehurst.

PLANS MADE FOR NEW SQUARE AND WALK ON CAMPUS

Preliminary Surveys Taken for Walk From Student Union to Battle-Vance-Pettigrew.

Workmen of the buildings department were yesterday morning making preliminary surveys for the construction of a walk from Graham Memorial to Battle-Vance-Pettigrew dormitories and to the gate opposite the post office.

Plans drawn up by H. D. Carter of Atwood and Weeks, University architects, include a new walk from the union building, a fifty-foot circle between Graham Memorial and the three dormitories, and the re-laying of another walk.

These plans have been submitted to the grounds committee and members have expressed their approbation. P. L. Burch of the buildings department is at present making an estimate on the project which is expected to cost around $1,000.

The proposed circle will be placed at the intersection of two diagonal paths in the court between the union building and the three dormitories. A straight path will be laid from the front of the union building across the campus through the circle to the dormitories. To be in harmony with the landscape scheme of the campus, the diagonal path coming out at the Franklin street gate near Graham Memorial will have to be re-laid.

Tulane Debate

Lanier and Russell Represent University in Discussion Yesterday.

Carolina met the University of Tulane in forensic battle in Gerrard hall yesterday. Edwin Lanier and R. P. Russell, representing the University, supported the negative of the query stated, That American individualism is a menace to western civilization. Wilmer and Hyman of Tulane contended that individualism was a menace. Wilmer is rated number one debater at Tulane and Hyman number two.

Last night they met Duke on the subject of centralized control of industry.

Minor Gwynn, superintendent of the school, will speak on the topic "Organization and Purposes of the Chapel Hill School."

PRESS OFFICIALS ASK RETRACTION BY DAVID CLARK

Editorial Statements in Southern Textile Bulletin Questioned by W. T. Couch.

A complete retraction for statements in his editorial in the Southern Textile Bulletin of February 23 containing disparaging information concerning the activities of the University of North Carolina Press has been demanded from David Clark, long-time journalistic antagonist of the University, by officials of the press through W. T. Couch, director, it was learned here yesterday.

Attacking the recent volume by Columbus Andrews Administrative County Government in South Carolina, Clark declared in an editorial head "Their Usual Meddling" that the "taxpayers of North Carolina paid for printing the volume and that they are even now contributing approximately $25,000 per year for printing and publicity at the University of North Carolina, much of which is for the purpose of spreading socialistic and communistic doctrines."

South Carolina Pays

From entries in the journal of the University Press dated January 7 shown to a representative of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, it was fully shown that the volume Administrative County Government in South Carolina was actually paid for by the state of South Carolina. Correspondence with Dr. S. M. Derrick, a member of the University of South Carolina faculty and from the secretary to Governor Ira Blackwood, all filed in the Press offices, substantiated the statement that the state of South Carolina paid for the

A regular meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is scheduled for 7:45 o'clock tomorrow night in 206 Phillips hall. The feature of the meeting will be an address by Roy A. Palmer, illuminating engineer of the Southern Public Utilities company of Charlotte. Palmer's topic will be "Illumination," and the talk will be demonstrated by special lighting apparatus, showing modern and future methods of illumination.

Palmer is considered one of the outstanding illuminating engineers in his field, and has addressed numerous bodies on this subject. He spoke on this topic last spring to the state wide convention of the A. I. E. E. which met here. Since that time he has added additional equipment to his apparatus, making it more complete.

Members of the Playmakers and commerce students studying illumination are especially urged to attend this lecture. The public is cordially invited.

All's Imaginary

An illustrated section in a recent number of Americana, that unpolite but amusingly bombastic humor magazine, and a portion of an address made here Friday night by the distinguished Dr. Hubert Herring cast an interesting light on the much mooted "Youth Movements." The sarcastic and liberal (merely in a sense that it is against everything) Americana exhibits four photographs of "Youth Demonstrations" in various European and South American republics and the United States. Three of them depict students in some sort of a semi-violent uproar over government principals. The fourth shows the American student demonstrating—a vacuum cleaner to a housewife. In describing the Cuban scene, which he has recently quitted, Dr. Herring told of the efforts of Cuban students whose high schools and universities lie padlocked, in agitating for better government under the Machado regime. The Cuban student situation is almost identical with Youth movements in Spain, Germany, Italy, and other nations.

The Anglo-Saxon undergraduate is peculiarly apathetic in his attitude toward national matters. His scope is generally limited to his own campus and its social machinations. If he is conservative it is merely because conservatism is inbred. Apparently it must remain.

That American youth can awaken collectively to any form of energetic youth movement is doubtful. Our more than five hundred colleges and universities are too widely divided along both religious and social lines. Our provincial and geographic barriers are too difficult to surmount for this generation, at least.—D.C.S.

Yale's Misplaced Emphasis

President James Rowland Angell of Yale University in addressing Yale graduates who recently returned to New Haven for Alumni day, stated that should the City of New Haven's proposed attempt to tax the University's property succeed, "Yale would ultimately sink to the level of a third rate purely local college." President Angell's remarks can hardly be expected to carry weight when the interested person attempts to reconcile them with a news item which appeared in newspapers last fall. The article stated that Yale men would return to several new buildings that had been added to the campus during the summer, among which were the new $5,000,000 Payne Whitney gymnasium, the $3,500,000 Hall of Graduate Studies, and the $2,500,000 Sterling Divinity Quadrangle.

Loyal Yale men will undoubtedly come to the fore and preserve all standards of this aristocrat of colleges if New Haven's money raising scheme works out. Though we sympathize with our northern neighbor in trying to retain at least part of her property tax exempt, yet taken in the light of a university continually receiving millions of dollars in gifts and bequests, it would seem that Yale places too much emphasis on a costly plant with expensive equipment. Buildings, quadrangles, and dormitories of the sort that Yale builds are mere accessories to education that mean practically nothing in comparison with the deep-rooted loyalty and spirit of the Yale faculty, student body, and alumni, which will preserve Yale from falling to the level of a third rate local college far more effectively than millions of dollars from alumni invested in buildings on her campus.—G.R.

Awkward Equalization

In connection with alleged movement of negro leaders in this state to obtain admittance for their race to the University law school, Mr. C. K. Carmichael in one of his numerous open forum letters to the TAR HEEL poses the question: "What is the place of the negro in our social organization?" Mr. Carmichael answers by pointing out this inconsistency, that we have taught the negro a religion of equality and yet refuse to recognize him "as a worthy aspirant to our level of intelligence and social status."

Perhaps this inconsistency is true. Even granting that it is true, he who evidently is in favor of breaking down all barriers between the two races, should be reminded that his position is not quite justified, with all due respect for his opinion. For we cannot approach the issue by pointing out religious inconsistencies, or by arguing for or against it in the heat of emotional fervor. This brings us back to the writer's own question: "What is the place of the negro in the social organization?" The problem is distinctly a social one, and on no other grounds can it be profitably considered.

There is, admittedly, a distinct difference between the social status of the white and the negro race. No sane person would attempt to deny it, and none realize it better than the negroes themselves. But it is impossible even to consider attempting what is essentially an equalization of the two races by allowing admittance of negroes to the law school of this University. If such a situation ever does occur, it will be as a result of a long time social trend in that direction, and not of a nominal equalization which would be awkward for both racial elements.—A.T.D.

How They Will Vote

The recent action of both houses of Congress in voting for the repeal of the Prohibition Amendment sets a precedent in our legislative history. By their decision, the Senate and the House have turned the question of repeal or continuation of national Prohibition back to the states. The next step is a vote on the part of the respective legislatures or a calling of state conventions to meet this question. Such action must come essentially from the legislatures of the different states. The process by which thirty-six states may ratify Congress' decision will necessarily be a long one.

Will the states vote to abolish national Prohibition? If so, how long will it take? These questions are uppermost in many minds at the present time. Let us examine a few facts: new legislatures have convened in forty-three of the states this year, supposedly representing the mandates of their constituencies. Florida's new legislature will not open its sessions until April; Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi and Virginia will not institute new assemblies until next year. Alabama's Assembly chamber will be silent for almost two years. Meanwhile most of the states' representative bodies are now in session or have just adjourned. With economic considerations weighing so heavily on the hands of the states as well as the nation as a whole, it is highly probable that many attempts will be made at present sessions to push through legislation relating to Prohibition. Moreover it seems especially improbable that any state whose session is limited to sixty days or less (adjourning March 2 or earlier) will take up the question this year.

In regard to the popular sentiment concerning the repeal question, there seems little doubt that a nation-wide popular vote on the subject would result in an overwhelming victory for the Repealists. The Literary Digest's Prohibition poll of last spring showed thirty-three of the forty-eight states voting against the 18th amendment by at least a two to one ratio. These states, therefore, seem almost certain to ratify Congress' recent repeal vote. Thirteen more states exhibited anti-Prohibition sentiment in the Digest's straw vote, with only two states—Kansas and North Carolina—proving to be advocates of the status quo. However in a few districts (i.e., Tenn., Ala., Miss., Ark., and Okla.) it is quite possible that dry sentiment, at this time at least, is strong enough to win the day.

States which may act this year: (1) those which will probably vote for repeal: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Vermont, Wisconsin; (2) those which will probably vote for continuance: North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee.

States which will probably not act this year: (1) wet sentiment predominant: Arizona, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming; dry sentiment predominant: Alabama, Arkansas, Kansas, Mississippi.*

* (Note: states marked with asterick will not convene legislatures until next year. Alabama and Virginia not until 1935.)

Speaking in only the most generalized sense, we may expect an interval of at least two full years before enough states will have concurred in order to seal the doom of the 18th amendment and the Volstead Act.—V.J.L.

Our Times

Death in the Afternoon

Gore, we observe in one of our favorite afternoon newspapers, is spread over every section but the sport page, though now and then the claret flows from the nose of a pugilist and a racing automobile into the grandstand squashing its occupants.

Though we may be an old prude (we smoke Picayunes and vote Blaine every four years) the current newspaper gore is alarming. The writers are so cheerful about it that maybe it is a trend. So let us quote a few clippings from our scrapbook of the New York Daily Mirror, London Times, and Time mag. and one from a recent Char. te Obse. er (no advt.)

"Montreal, Feb. 22—(U.P.)—In the beginning, Andrew Gibson accidentally shot Jean Kelly, but he could not stand seeing her suffer so he cut her throat and then killed himself, he wrote in a suicide note."

MIRROR REPORTER UNCOVERS MURDER PLOT IN WEST SIDE

Zink will catch the lead as he steps into his limousine after leaving his swanky pent house apartment in the Wooster-Picadilly-Dunasy Arms. (See page 2 for pictures.)

Men Are Murdered by Thugs

There was an unfortunate incident on the Green Tree road SW near St. Josephus Hill NE last fortnight. A man, whom the Times learns is a labourer, was found lying on his face. Coroner reports him as being dead from a stab in the back. There was blood all around.

Twelve other men were found lying nearby, all of them lifeless.

CRIME-OF-THE-WEEK

As it must to all men, Death came last week to the 21st Infantry. Encamped at Fort Hagg, South Carolina, the 21st marched out to the parade ground, banners flying, to be reviewed by Uncle Sam's svelte, swarthy, diminutive Major-General "Fightin'" Sam O'Grady (TIME, Oct. 13). Suddenly a terrific detonation shook the clear, cloudless, blue sky. A powder magazine in the arsenal near the Fort exploded hurling bodies of the 21st high into the air. Mangled bodies lay all about the blood-soaked parade ground (See Front Cover). Said "Fightin'" Sam, erstwhile Air Corps tycoon, "It all goes to show, d—n—t, that this country needs airplanes, instead of infantry troops, d—n—t" (TIME, Oct. 20).

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

For Women Graduate Students

This is an attempt to explain the idea of a Graduate Women's Association as a coordinate branch of the Women's Association. It may clarify matters to state in the beginning what it is not. First: it is not in any sense a competitive idea. Nor is it a secession. Before any definite steps were taken in sponsoring the plan the leaders of those branches of student life and University affairs who might be concerned were consulted. In one case illness prevented a conference but cooperation was assured by the representatives in the office. In the other instances the reception was cordial and enthusiastic.

It should be made clear in the second place that the idea does not represent a feminist movement. Certain general considerations not irrelevant to the subject must be given here. Feminism as it has been historically known has been competitive in a competitive day. But the old feminism is gone. The woman's movement of our day, call it the new feminism if you wish, is a constituent element in the new liberalism and takes its place with such principles as regionalism and internationalism and better administration, all of which are based fundamentally on the idea of autonomous operation.

As a segment in a larger plan here sponsored finds its justification in very practical (Continued on last page)

INJURED HURDLER HARMS CHANCES FOR TRACK TITLE

Stafford Is Probably Eliminated
From Conference Meet in Tin Can Can Saturday.

BULLETIN

Reports from the University infirmary failed to indicate the extent of Crook Stafford's leg injury. Attendents said, however, that it was quite probable that he would not be able to compete in the indoor meet Saturday.

Carolina's chances of retaining her Southern Conference indoor title were dealt a serious blow yesterday afternoon when Crook Stafford injured some muscles in his leg and will probably be unable to take part in the meet.

The Carolina star was being counted on to place high in the hurdles, high jump, and dashes and his loss would hinder the Tar Heels' chances materially. Stafford hurt his leg while practicing starts in the Tin Can yesterday.

Work-out Daily

The track men are working out twice daily now, in the afternoon and at night. Those men that have afternoon classes are working at night under the direction of Coaches Fetzer and Ranson.

With Virginia, Duke, and Maryland presenting strong line-ups of stars, the Tar Heels are going to be hard pressed to retain their championship.

Carolina's hopes will be carried by seven men who may come through and aid in retaining the championship. These men are Smith in the pole vault, Hodges in the shot put, Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, Jensen, and Bob Hubbard in the mile and two mile, and Higby in the broad jump. Other Tar Heels who may come through are Alexander, sprinter, Williamson, half miler, Gleen, hurdler, and Hawthorne, hurdler.

Strong Cast Offered In Show At Carolina

Stuart Erwin, Wynne Gibson, Frances Dee, Jean Hersholt, and David Landau head the cast of "The Crime of the Century," Paramount picture showing today at the Carolina theatre.

In this production Miss Gibson plays the role of the wife of a prominent alienist. The latter goes to a police station at night and begs to be locked up to be prevented from carrying through plans he has developed for committing the perfect murder. Policemen, impressed by his reputation as much as his manner, accompany him to his home. But there, under their very needs, not only the murder he has planned, but a second one, takes place.

Erwin has the role of a reporter, and Miss Dee that of the alienist's daughter by a previous marriage.

Stamp Club Organized

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt presided at a meeting at Graham Memorial Saturday night for the purpose of organizing a stamp club here. There were twenty-four persons present at the meeting. The following officers were elected: president, Professor George Howard; vice president, J. A. Warren; secretary, Mrs. H. D. Crockford; treasurer, Dr. Charles Mangum. The club is to be divided into two sections, one for adults, the other for juniors. The future meetings of the club will be announced in this paper and all those interested are invited to attend.

The Can Opener

by
CLAIBORN M. CARR

AFTER THE FIGHTS AT VIRGINIA Saturday I talked with the three referees, Hayes, Brockman, and Miller. I asked them all who they considered the outstanding star of the tournament.

"Quarles by a long shot," said Brockman, "he's the prettiest boxer I've ever seen." Miller felt almost the same way. "I have never seen a cleaner boxer in any ring," he said, "Quarles is by far the best in the south. Did you see him lunge at Rainey tonight and catch him with that left?" Was Miller telling me? Our friend Hayes was just as enthusiastic for Quarles in saying, "Quarles by far, he's certainly a honey." Thank you, Mr. Hayes, all our boys back home wanted me to ask you particularly.

I ALSO ASKED THEM HOW they thought Norment would have looked against Goldstein in the tourney. Brockman who has probably seen Goldy fight more than anyone else, said, "Goldy couldn't have held a candle to Quarles. Why even Bobby Goldstein's brother knows that Quarles is a better boxer. 'Little Mr. Miller and Hayes both agreed that Goldy would have gone down against the flashy Norm. Miller helped raise Bobby and he still declared that Quarles was the better boxer by far. Coach Crayton is going to take Quarles and Landis up to the National Intercollegiate soon and Norment will still fight in the 125 pound class.

THERE WERE SEVERAL other sidelights of the tournament which should interest you. Cliff Glover fought a sweet fight against Archie Hahn in the semi-finals and to me he took the battle. Jack Fabri, State boxer, was sitting right beside me and he thought Glover won also. Jack had one eye closed though, so he might not have seen it all. It was a close fight but the three judges voted in favor of Hahn. I asked Miller why Glover lost. "To many, Glover seems to have the edge," said Miller, "but he does not lead the fighting nor does he score inside. All of his blows are outside and usually after the other man has led a right or a left." Maybe so, Mr. Miller, you're the doctor.

CHARLIE GARNER OF N. C.

State lost another close decision which many thought was wrong. Miller cleared this up for me by saying that the State boxer hit too many blows with his open glove. His glove may have been open but Tom Fishburne certainly felt them. Fishburne came to his corner after the third round shaking his head and feeling certain he had lost the bout. Nat Lumpkin put up a good fight against Garner and the decision was close, but the refs made no mention of any open glove hitting then.

MARTY LEVINSON certainly won the praise of all the spectators and boxers at the meet for his game battle with a broken wrist. Marty said he knew immediately that the wrist was broken and that he told Ed Kerr, Carolina manager, so between rounds. "Ed said that the coach wanted me to stay in there and use my left more," laughed Marty, "so I kept on, thinking that Kerr thought I was joking about my wrist being broken."

CHARLOTTE WILL BATTLE DURHAM FOR STATE TITLE

Queen City Will Defend Championship; Jonesboro and Dobson to Meet Tonight in Class B.

Charlotte high school's flashy basketball quint will meet Durham tomorrow night in the Tin Can in defense of its state class "A" basketball championship. Play will start at 8:00 o'clock.

The Queen City outfit has won ten straight conference games this season and has not been defeated. Durham, likewise, is unbeaten, but has only won six league games. Both teams easily won their respective state divisional titles.

Charlotte won the title in 1931 and 1932, defeating Raleigh, eastern winner, on both occasions in the final tilt here.

Dobson and Jonesboro high schools will meet in the Tin Can tonight at 8:00 o'clock for the class "B" champion. Dobson beat Paw Creek, 50-26, for the western title Friday night, and Jonesboro routed Ayden, 68-18, in the eastern final.

Squads Meet For Pictures

All members of varsity basketball and freshman basketball first teams, varsity boxing team, and varsity fencing team will report at Emerson stadium at 3:30 this afternoon for retake of their picture for the Yackety Yack.

CARNIVAL FINALS START TOMORROW

The finals for the indoor sports carnival conducted in Graham Memorial for the past week will take place tomorrow and Thursday.

Quarter-finals in the pool tourney will be run off today, both matches taking place at 5:00 o'clock. Mosier will meet the winner of the D. Barbano-Peterson match last night while Kanner will play the victor in the J. F. Barbano-Cohen contest.

Four bowling matches are billed for today. The scheduled runs as follows:

2:00 o'clock—Phi Sigma Kappa vs. winner of the Chi Phi-Old East match yesterday; Sigma Nu vs. Grimes.

3:30 o'clock—Beta Theta Pi vs. winner of Sigma Phi Sigma-Lewis contest.

ILLUSION:

The Oriental girl reclines on a sheet of plate glass supported by two slaves. The magician waves a white sheet in front of the pretty maiden... pronounces a few magic words... Presto! She has disappeared in thin air.

EXPLANATION:

"Disappearing" acts are among the most popular in the repertoire of the magician. Dogs, horses, girls, whole rooms disappear—whisked into wings, dropped through trapdoors, hidden by mirrors. But this "disappearance" is a bit different. One of the "slaves" is a hollow dummy. When the magician holds up the sheet the little lady disappears completely—into the convenient figure of the dummy.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED ...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

There is also a trick of cigarette advertising, whereby a few magic words are used to create the illusion of "Coolness."

EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes, retaining their full moisture, burn more slowly... smoke cooler. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They taste hot. This makes the method of wrapping very important.

Improperly wrapped cigarettes begin to dry out as soon as packed.

Camels are cooler because they come in the famous Humidor Pack of welded, three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane... and because they contain better tobaccos.

A cigarette that is fresh, full of natural moisture, and blended from choice, ripe tobaccos tastes cooler than one that is harsh and acrid. For coolness, choose a fresh cigarette, made from costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels... give your taste a chance to sense the difference. You'll appreciate it!

Speaking Campus Mind

matters. It is obvious that graduate women do not actively participate in the Women's Association. And this is perhaps a good thing because that body may well be considered an instrument for undergraduate women. And yet the advisability of refraining from active participation there does not prevent graduate women from feeling that the one dollar fee that is paid every quarter might be utilized to further the interests peculiar to graduate women.

We are ready now for the questions: what does it involve, and what justifies it? Four justifications may be listed, among which the first is fundamental. It is this: an organization of the kind suggested would enable graduate women to further their particular interests and thereby take their due part in campus and University life.

Second: an association of this type could assist in securing better fellowship conditions for women. Co-education in the undergraduate division may still be in the latter stages of controversy but co-education in the graduate school is a fact. If there is to be substantial equality in the positions of graduate men and women in this point, then graduate women must bestir themselves to create it. The fellowships that have been established have been for the greater part set aside for men. Certainly a substantial part of the three dollars a year which over one hundred of us pay might be set aside for such purposes, to say nothing of other possibilities that might be pushed.

Third: someday graduate women will be housed in a home of their own. Would it not be well to impress its character with their needs?

Fourth: women of note in the state and outside might bring the stimulation of their viewpoints to the women of the campus at an occasional dinner or luncheon if there existed an organization to arrange for such meetings.

This does not say all that may be said but it is perhaps enough. There may be weaknesses in the proposal but first we must know what it is.

Marjorie Mendenhall.

means of enhancing the benefits derived from the courses. Where the professor has a vibrant personality, the soliloquy can be borne without any great effort. Students also expressed the opinion that courses in which trends and tendencies were featured rather than facts and dates were the most valuable and best-retained.

The following is the consensus of opinion on courses.

History 1-2-3

According to the freshmen, who are nearly all required to take these three courses in European history covering the period from 1500 to the present, these are the only truly cultural courses that they have. The tremendous amount of work covered many times leaves only vague ideas behind.

History 12

An interesting course in American biography. A rational attitude is taken toward famous American figures. Readings add somewhat to interest.

History 41-42

A rapid run through the field of ancient history. Dr. Caldwell stimulates student interest.

History 45-46

English history presented in an uninspiring manner. A mass of factual material not easy of digestion.

History 47-48

A general survey of the history of the United States. Dr. Crittenden possesses an open mind and wealth of jokes that are synchronized with the material, revealing uncanny knowledge of Rosemary Lane and the Arboretum.

History 51-52-53-54

A comprehensive survey of ancient history. The lectures follow a set pattern and at the end of the quarter the student finds himself with a quantity of notes and a sympathy for the ancients.

History 64-65-66

Medieval European history treated sympathetically by Dr. MacKinney whose own exuberant interest brings the period to life for the class. The material is rather unorganized, but the student is taught to draw his own conclusions.

History 81-82

A clear, concise survey of the American colonies. Quizzes are comprehensive in nature. Certain aspects of early American history are gone into intensively.

History 91

The United States and Latin

American relations—trade, cultural, immigration, Monroe Doctrine—treated by Dr. Pierson in an interesting manner.

History 121-122

History 64-66 repeated in a more thorough manner by Dr. MacKinney, with special emphasis on cultural and economic aspects of the period.

History 131-132

Early European history presented in a complete manner, but dry, and necessarily, factual. No student discussion.

History 137

Interesting course in nineteenth century England that calls for student opinion and ability to rationalize. "John Bull" is inspected through a microscope.

History 161-162

A comprehensive study of North Carolina well presented by Dr. Connor who has sympathy for the subject. Dry presentation kills any interest the student may have in the course.

History 164

A study of the South since Reconstruction, conducted by Dr. Hamilton whose own interest is very evident. Hamilton can hold class by virtue of his ability as a raconteur.

History 167

A more detailed study of the United States with emphasis on economic history. Social and political problems involved in the economic development are taken up. Crittenden at his best.

Government 21

A factual course in American government that covers much ground. As a rule it is generally uninteresting. Quizzes are apparently graded by a reader who has little sympathy with the students.

Government 22

A study of European governments. Ability to master a mass of facts required. Frazer seems to believe he is addressing the British Parliament.

Government 121

An intensive treatment of the government of England under Professor Wagstaff. This course should be of interest to all future barristers. But it's not.

Government 122

A study of European municipalities in comparison with American cities. Professor Woodhouse is cognizant of all modern trends. The course is dryly presented.

Government 131

A survey of American state government, with emphasis on North Carolina. Conducted in a methodical manner by Professor Jenkins, but with student participation. Lectures lack vigor and stimulation.

Government 132

A dry course in "Professor Woodhouse," and incidentally American civic government. Of obvious benefit to future politicians.

Government 141-142-143

A study of international questions involving international law, relations, and American diplomacy. Not very well organized. Recent problems are handled. Mechanical under Robson and dispersive under Frazer.

Government 155

A repetition of Government 21. Lectures are mechanical.

Government 156

Another course in "Woodhouse." The student is inspired to delve deeper himself into problems presented in class.

PRESS OFFICIALS ASK RETRACTION BY DAVID CLARK

Refuting the editorial in a letter to David Clark, the director of the press stated in part: "Your issue of February 23 carries an editorial entitled 'Their Usual Meddling' containing two serious misstatements of fact concerning the publishing activities of the University of North Carolina.

"First, you say: The taxpayers of North Carolina paid for printing the volume, Administrative County Government in South Carolina.

"Second, you say: In fact, they are, even now contributing approximately $25,000 per year for printing and publicity at the University . . . much of which is for the purpose of spreading socialistic and communistic doctrines.

No Cost to Taxpayers

"The truth with reference to your first statement is that the volume mentioned has never cost the taxpayers of North Carolina one cent in any way, either for the research that went into writing it or the money that was paid for printing it. The governor of South Carolina and his advisors considered the volume sufficiently excellent to justify spending $600 of South Carolina's money to get the work printed, and it was printed at South Carolina's expense.

"The truth with reference to your second statement is that the University of North Carolina has not spent one cent of money through this organization during the past two years for the publication of books or anything except strictly scholarly periodicals.

"We insist that you publish this letter in full in your next issue and that you retract the erroneous statements you have made in this instance."

Legislative Incidence

Clark charges in his editorial: "We note the following newspaper dispatch from Columbia, S. C.:

"Columbia, S. C.—Placing of copies of a volume, Administrative County Government in South Carolina from the University of North Carolina Press, on the desks of members of the General Assembly was termed an 'insult' by Representative Randolph Lee, of Dorchester, in the House tonight.

"When the House convened, Lee asked, 'What has North Carolina go to do with South Carolina. We can run our own affairs.'"

"Representative Lee should know that all the wise men in the world are employed at the University of North Carolina.

"They know exactly how cotton mills should be run, what taxes should be paid by the people of North Carolina, just how South Carolina should conduct its affairs.

"The taxpayers of North Carolina paid for printing the volume, Administrative County Government in South Carolina, in fact, they are, even now, contributing approximately $25,- 000 per year for printing and publicity at the University . . . much of which is for the purpose of spreading socialistic and communistic doctrines.

"We are glad to say to Mr. Lee, that only a small portion of the professors at the University of North Carolina are concerned with the attempts to attend to the business of other people.

"There is not a member of the small group of radical and meddling professors who could hold a regular job in the business world for three months but equipped with the money of the taxpayers of North Carolina they presume to tell everybody exactly how things should be done.

"If the $25,000 which they waste had been distributed among the professors who are engaged in legitimate teaching, those professors would not have received such severe cuts in salaries.

"We can also say to Representative Lee that many of the radical and meddling group are men who were brought to North Carolina from the Middle West.

"North Carolinians agree that the people of South Carolina are fully capable of handling their own affairs."

Not First Instance

This is not the first instance of an editorial outburst against the University from the verbal guns of Clark's Textile Bulletin battery. The policy of the University in the past has been to ignore the textile editor, even in the face of lambasts considered so terrific as to approach constituting criminal libel.

It was understood yesterday that the press does not now contemplate a suit of libel against the Southern Textile Bulletin in the event that a full retraction is not made. It is also considered doubtful that Clark will make such a retraction.

If you're really sorry for Bill Boner, give him a pipe and some good tobacco. That will straighten him out—or a pipe filled with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco clears the brain for straight thinking. As you know, Edgeworth was proved by a recent investigation to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Numerous seminars, informal talks and a banquet Friday night have been planned for the visit of Norman Thomas, Socialist ex-candidate for president, who comes to the campus for the final Open Forum discussion program to speak on the topic "The Program for Action."

Plans have been laid tentatively for seminars in Gerrard hall from 11:00 o'clock until noon, with short talks before various groups in the afternoon. Tickets are being placed on sale for a banquet Friday evening in Graham Memorial, when Thomas will make a short address to preface his remarks at the forum discussion lecture later in the evening.

Thomas has appeared on the campus several times in the past few years and has always received a warm welcome. Recognized as one of the greatest speakers in public life, effective as a platform speaker, either in oratory or free debate, he is constantly being sought after to address various groups.

Tickets for the banquet may be obtained from members of the Open Forum committee including Bill McKee, Alton Lawrence, Don Seawell, Vernon Ward, Bill Eddleman, and Don Shoemaker. Full details of the banquet and the evening lecture will be announced later.

The University symphonic band, under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will present its first campus concert of the year in Hill Music hall tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

This is the second concert appearance of the symphonic group selected from the University parade band which played at the football games last fall. The group presented its first concert of the year in Southern Pines February 19.

Tonight's concert will feature a violin solo Wieniawski's Rondeau et Rondo which has been arranged for solo with band accompaniment by Thor Johnson, who is soloist with the band on this quarter's series of concerts.

The remainder of the program will include a suite by J. S. Bach, Pilgrim's March from the Italian Symphony of Mendelssohn, Andante from Tchaikovsky's fifth symphony, and At-Lantis Suite by V. F. Safranek.

There will be no admission charge for the concert. E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, is presenting a benefit moving picture Sunday from which the proceeds will be used to defray the expenses of this year's band concerts.

This Afternoon.

Beginning their program of thirteen experimental productions, the Carolina Playmakers will present three one-act plays at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon and a second group of three at 8:00 o'clock tonight in the Playmakers theatre. The first play for the afternoon performance will be Fool's Justice, a negro tragedy by Harry W. Coble. The cast will include Jo Orendorff, Henry Page, David McIlhenny, Jack Riley, and Elmer Oettinger. The play is directed by Harry Coble.

A Little Boat to India, a modern American comedy by Foster Fitz-Simons, directed by Marion Tatum, will follow. Peggy Hervey, Dan Weiner, Foster Fitz-Simons, Eugenia Rawls, and Walter Terry compose the cast.

The afternoon program is concluded with Heart Trouble, a folk comedy by Bradford White. The characters are Jo Orendorff, Betty Barnett, Jack Riley, Mrs. Millard Breckinridge, J. A. Walker, and J. L. Womble, Jr.

Commerce School Includes Theoretical And Practical

Economic and Commerce Courses Are Distinct Units, States Dean Carroll; Economics Deals With Theory and General Trends; Commerce Courses Are Intensely Matter-of-Fact.

The purpose of the department of economics and commerce as was indicated last year by Dean D. D. Carroll is as follows: "The two divisions of subject matter dealt with in the department are economics and commerce. In the first, our economic structure, its functions, relationships, and problems are considered from the social point of view. In the second, the organization and administration of current business activity are studied from the standpoint of the business administrator."

Dean Carroll also called attention to the fact that the department is a distinct unit from the commerce school and offers courses open to all University students.

Economics Called Theoretical
The most oft-repeated criticism given by students seems to be that University courses in economics and commerce are largely theoretical and even "impractical." However, as is to be expected, this is only the case in the more elementary courses. Economics 31-32, for example, is a course which introduces the student to the entire field of economics, and in the short time of two quarters it cannot afford to dwell specifically on any single phase of the subject.

Every effort has been made to obtain representative opinions of the following courses, and it is believed that they show accurate criticisms which are composite pictures of the reactions of several students to the courses. Most of the students asked to give opinions have majored in economics or commerce and consequently are better able to judge than the average undergraduate whose study in these fields has been little more than elementary.

Economics 11. Generally considered to be one of the best courses in the University. Offers a comprehensive survey of the interrelations of various countries as to their economic resources, and stands on middle ground between geography and economics. Dr. Zimmerman and his lectures are excellent, the latter containing digressions worth-while in themselves. The course is a genuine aid to intelligent reading of newspapers, and its one criticism is that it is perhaps too mature for freshmen.

Economics 31-32. Often dry, too concise, attempting in two quarters to expound the whole of economic theory. The text, Ely, Outlines of Economics, is competent and complete, too complete. Suggested improvement: Omission of some of the niceties of economic theory and a concentration on the fundamentals. However, the course should not be passed up because of this. Preferable professors: Winslow and Heath; Wolf and Wager, who attempt to "explain things."

Economics 35. This takes in economic history from the Stone Age to Wall Street. Special emphasis on the Industrial Revolution. Professor Spruill knows his subject thoroughly but is dry in delivery. Ho-hum.

Economics 71. Statistics under Feger. Too difficult for any but those who wish to specialize in the field. Usual criticism: introductory course, therefore too much covered.

Economics 81-82. Money and Banking, the latter giving a commendable practical knowledge of the Federal Reserve, branch banking, and other forms. "Er" Woosley will start on the Federal Reserve, but probably end up on the Sino-Japanese war. Both he and Dr. Murchison, a nation-wide authority in the field, are good. The course is coherent and well-organized.

Economics 111. Advanced Commodity Economics, offering detailed price analysis of types of economic goods. Dr. Zimmerman makes it a worth-while course.

Economics 121. Risk and Risk-Bearing under Lear. Generalities superficially covered with main attention to stock market operations. Just another economics course.

Economics 124. Principles of Marketing, which every intelligent student should avoid. The method of instruction does not cover the essential problems of distribution. Dr. Taylor bothers too much with insignificant details.

Economics 141. Public Finance under Dr. Heer. Dry, uninspired and uninspiring, but good background for political scientists, including statistical exercises. For the indifferent.

Registration Report Changed Yesterday

A change in registration schedule of juniors and seniors was announced yesterday by Dean A. W. Hobbs. The corrected schedule for the two upper classes requires students whose names begin with "A" through "J" to register next Thursday, March 9, "K" through "S" Friday, and "T" through "Z" Saturday, in the offices of their respective deans.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS KREISLER

Famous Violinist Again Pleases With Brilliant Presentation Of Program Here.

Governor and Mrs. Ehringhaus led the group of hundreds of out-of-towners who came to Chapel Hill to join with the student body to hear Fritz Kreisler in Memorial hall Monday night.

Duke, Meredith, Saint Mary's, the Woman's College of the University, and other schools were well represented in the audience.

Altogether, the hall was filled to capacity with an appreciative crowd of music lovers.

Kreisler and his assisting pianist, Carl Lamson, have played together for many years and have molded their work into a smooth functioning unit.

Beethoven Composition Opens
The program began with the Beethoven Kreutzer Sonata, a favorite opening number with these artists. The Mozart G Major Concerto was second. Graceful, delicate, precise, these works offered all possible contrasts for which one could wish.

After a brief intermission, the program was resumed with Ravel's Piece en forme de Habanera, always enjoyable. Then there was the lovely Girl with Flaxen Hair. Gorgeous tone marked the playing of this number. Kreisler's transcriptions of De Falla's Spanish Dance and Albeniz's Tango followed in order, to give further delight.

Plays Own Creations
Kreisler next played his immortal Caprice Viennois, and with the last note the applause shook the walls. The number was repeated. The violinist's Liebesfreud was the last programmed number, and drew another ovation, as did three encores: Kreisler's transcription of Londonderry Air, and his own compositions, The Old Refrain and Shon Rosmarin. Still there was thunderous applause, and probably the dawn of a new day would have found Kreisler still playing these popular encores if the audience could have had its way.

Committee Raises Budget Figure
Set for Institution's Appropriations by $36,000.

The joint committee on appropriations voted fifteen to fourteen yesterday in favor of increasing the University's appropriation as recommended by the advisory budget commission by $36,000, according to a report to President Frank Graham last night from inside the appropriation committee.

The economy bloc in the committee put on a hard drive to hold to the budget bureau's figures of $390,520. The fight will now be carried to the floors of both branches of the state legislature.

This increase of $36,000 will raise the University's appropriation from $390,520 to $426,520. The committee also voted to increase the appropriations of Woman's College and N. C. State College $18,000 each.

No Comment From Graham
President Graham when asked about his feelings regarding this latest development last night, had no statement to make.

University officials originally asked for $691,000 annually for proper maintenance of the institution during the coming biennium. The amount allotted for this year will be $504,000; and should the general assembly pass the recommendation of the appropriations committee in its present form, it will mean a reduction of $78,000.

SONG COMMITTEE PLANS TO PUBLISH UNIVERSITY ARIAS

Old Carolina Tunes Will Be Prepared in Lieu of Long-Deferred New Battle Song.

Plans to have Hark, the Sound and Come, Fill the Cup, University songs printed were formed by the University song committee yesterday. Professor H. S. Dyer and other members of the music department have been requested to prepare these songs for publication.

At the meeting yesterday the group received permission from Wex Malone, graduate of the University and author of Come, Fill the Cup, to revise and publish it.

This song, in the form of a "toast," was submitted two years ago in a contest to secure a new University hymn.

Other matters taken up were the financing of the publication and the announcement of the requests for suggestions from three popular orchestra leaders.

Hal Kemp and Kay Kyser, University alumni whose orchestras are nationally popular, have been asked for suggestions as well as Guy Lombardo, who is said to have expressed a desire two years ago to submit a song for the University.

Engineering Magazine Available

All engineers are requested to come by the senior electrical room this afternoon or tomorrow at assembly period for their copy of the Carolina Engineer, which will be available after 3:00 o'clock.

Little David

Swings His Sling

With the persistency of a famous Biblical hero, David Clark has swung the pebbles of his particularly type of rancid journalism at Goliath, the enemy, the University of North Carolina. Entrenched in the stodgy confines of Victorian of his Southern Textile Bulletin with frequent editorial jibes at the University. The most deplorable fact is that scores of respectable Tar Heel citizens read his journal with interest and may be unconsciously wont to indict the University on some of his ludicrous charges.

But Mr. Clark has gone one step too far in his attack on the University Press. That redoubtable institution, which has made a name for the University and the state in the publishing world, has taken affront at Clark's recent flouting concurrently demanding a retraction in full. His charges that the University of North Carolina Press receives $25,000 per year for the publication of books and articles relative to socialism and communism was denied and repudiated on two counts. The Press has neither published such volumes nor has it received over a period of two years the fabled $25,000. Not one cent of the taxpayers' money goes toward the publications of the University Press.

Mr. Clark further charges that the much discussed volume Administrative County Government in South Carolina was paid for by the tax ridden populace of North Carolina. The Press has in its files the cancelled check from the state of South Carolina for the full cost of publishing the county government book—$600.

Clark's editorial is more illuminating as it progresses. He tells the textile men of North Carolina that a small radical group of "meddling professors" attempts to virtually dictate economic and governmental policies in the two Carolinas. This group, we are led to suppose, is responsible for the great wave of socialism and communism permeating our campus institutions.

Unquestionably Mr. Clark has put his foot in it this time. Wisely the University has disregarded him in the past, but a specific attack on an institution of such repute as the University Press is the proverbial last straw in Mr. Clark's bundle of militant chaff.—D.C.S.

On the Spot

On the front page of yesterday's Raleigh News and Observer there is a story announcing a mass meeting sponsored by the North Carolina State Grange and the Merchants Association and the North Carolina branch of the National Economy League to protest the imposition of further taxes upon the people of the state. The object of the meeting will be to show the General Assembly that all classes of people are paying all the taxes they can afford and that further levies would dry up tax sources, undermine business, and endanger the government itself. What the merchants, grangers, and economy leaguers advocate is rigid economy, "cutting expenditures to the bone." It is better, they say, for example, to have a shorter school term this year, if necessary, rather than to run the risk of having to close the schools completely next year.

The argument of these organizations is reasonable. Of course, they have group interests to protect. The Grange wishes to avoid additional taxes on farm lands and farm products. The Merchants Association is afraid of the harm that a sales tax might do to business. The Economy League is continuing its fight against governmental extravagance. But, the altruistic reasons which these organizations offer against increased taxes are, all the same, valid. Governmental expense has mounted excessively; prostrate farmers and bankrupt merchants cannot bear much increased tax burdens.

Of this situation the News and Observer editorial writers are aware. In an editorial published in the same issue that carried the mass meeting article, the Raleigh paper agrees that: "Depression has dried up many sources and reduced others. Land is no longer a basis for credit and agriculture is largely prostrated. Mills are running on short time. Unemployment has caused millions of dollars to be distributed as doles." Yet, the N&O continues, "the state is neither going to cease its functions nor deny a fair chance to its children. Therefore, the money must be found. Where?"

The sources for taxation recognized as legitimate by the News and Observer are generally well known: "Get the money where the money is." And it is, according to that paper, to be secured from (1) franchises, licenses, and similar taxes; (2) a production tax on power; (3) a tax on the $196,000,000 allegedly invested by North Carolinians in foreign stocks; and (4) a production or sales tax, to be specific, in order that the merchants can pass it on and to be placed only on non-essentials.

None of the sources of taxation proposed by the News and Observer seem to conflict directly with the aims of those groups sponsoring the Raleigh mass meeting. Which, if any, of them the General Assembly will adopt is doubtful. So far as the people of the state as a whole are concerned, the franchise, foreign stock and power production taxes appear least obnoxious. Merchants, naturally, will oppose increased license or franchise taxes, unless they are placed upon large corporations. Power companies will continue their lobby fight against production taxes. In spite of the fact that it is evident from the salary scales of representative companies as published in the News and Observer for Tuesday that the utilities can afford such a tax, it will require considerable courage on the part of the General Assembly to put through a measure of this kind. Further, the financial powers that be are also the ones who have money invested in foreign stocks; they will resist efforts to reduce their income from those stocks.

So, it seems that the farmers have nothing to fear from the legislature at this time. Additional revenue for the state must be had either from the big industrial or from the merchants in the form of a sales tax. The outcome of the battle will depend largely upon the comparative lobbying strength of these two groups. Which of these two groups is the stronger the reader, as well as the writer, is left to guess. Between these two forces, the General Assembly and all its members are in a situation that no citizen, whatever his other troubles may be, would wish to occupy.—E.C.D.

An Integral Part Of Any College

Of all the institutions peculiar to American college life perhaps none comes in for more adverse criticism than the fraternity. Fraternities are constantly attacked as childish, undemocratic and conducive to bad habits and poor scholarship. No week goes by but what some "authority" warns them in solemn tones to find a new place in the scheme of things or to drop off into oblivion. This is no new thing; fraternities have been frowned upon and attacked from their beginning, yet they have survived and grown until today they are so integral a part of college life that to dispose of them would be almost impossible even if advisable.

Some part of the flood of criticism is justifiable. The fraternity is contrary to principles of democracy but why demand or hope for democracy on the campus when it does not exist anywhere in our national life? The campus is not democratic nor ever will be. In certain schools where fraternities have been barred or are in disfavor, their aristocratic place has been filled by eating clubs, societies, and orders of a similar nature and more undemocratic. College men as all others tend to settle into certain levels and it is folly to attempt abnegation of this rule of human nature.

With all its faults the fraternity plays an active and wholesome part in college life. On many campuses it serves to house and feed many men who might otherwise not be provided for. According to statistics, it raises rather than lowers the academic standing of the individual. It crystallizes a large percentage of the student body into groups with which the university may act in furthering plans and ideals. The fraternity establishes and maintains a close relationship between the alma mater and the alumni and provides for association and better feeling among the different schools. It assures its members of a cordial reception in many college towns throughout the country.

The Musical University

By Vermont C. Royster

Seldom, indeed, is the opportunity granted to a Chapel Hill audience to hear in one evening two such artists as appeared in Memorial hall Monday night. The appearance of Mr. Kreisler alone would have been enough to have sent the audience home feeling that the evening was one which would remain with them; but under the skillful guidance of Mr. Lamson, who has for many years been Kreisler's accompanist, it became something doubly memorable.

That the evening should have turned out so delightfully for the audience with such an inauspicious program is as great a tribute as this critic might pay to the two artists. For, although the Kreutzer Sonata, with which Kreisler opened his concert, is one of the best known of Beethoven's ten sonatas, it is scarcely fitted for an introduction to University students. The opening adagio and presto movements gave ample opportunity for Mr. Kreisler to display his dexterity, yet it lacked the softness in theme which is more appreciated by the untrained ear.

Andante Pleases

In the andante movement, which came after a rather rude interruption to permit latecomers to be seated, the audience found something more suited to their spirit. It contained more melody, and in the pizzicato passages we caught our first glimpses of Mr. Lamson's artistry as an accompanist. The presto movement, with its dashing conclusion, was the final touch needed to set the audience on fire. Mr. Kreisler, however, despite the insistent demands refused to encore.

The introduction of Mozart's Concerto No. 3, which followed, arranged as a piano solo is almost as well known as the concerto itself. In the adagio movement, the theme of which was repeated with the muted strings, profane observers may have detected the familiar melody of an old bar-room favorite. Forced to an encore at the end of the concerto, Mr. Kreisler rendered one of his own compositions, Cavatina, a plaintive melody derived from a longer work.

After the intermission the program became more decidedly modern, two numbers being from Kreisler's own pen and two more of his own arrangement. Ravel, composer of the first number, is still living and has gained some reputation as an impressionistic composer much after the manner of Debussy. He is perhaps better known in America for his Myrrha, which won him the Prix de Rome. The number included on Monday evening's program was moody, depending mostly for its effect upon the piano background. Mr. Kreisler barely succeeded in lending it the essen-adapting himself to his new life and surroundings and sees him off to a good start which is so very essential. It supplies opportunity for the moulding of lasting friendships and teaches important lessons in leadership and cooperation. Within themselves and in conjunction with one another they provide a very desirable and necessary modicum of entertainment and social activity. In scholastic, social as well as other fields the fraternity plays an important role for which there is no substitute. It has its faults as does every other human institution, but here the good far outweighs the bad. This has been recognized by educators everywhere and the fraternity is here to stay.—J.F.A.

Debussy Number Played

Debussy followed Ravel, and here Kreisler succeeded much better in creating the illusion. The opening strains of La Fille aux Cheveux, rendered by the muted violin alone, struck the spirit of the composition. Since the appearance of Mme. Galli-Curci and Mr. Spalding, Debussy has become a popular favorite with Chapel Hillians, and they were more than delighted by Mr. Kreisler's interpretation.

Of the next two numbers by DeFalla and Albeniz, both Kreisler arrangements, little may be said. While both were pleasant enough, they are from the pens of lesser composers and need little comment. Of the two the first was possibly the most enjoyable.

Although Kreisler made his first success as a concert artist, he achieved his international reputation as a composer. There is a simplicity and charm in all his melodies, a human touch, which has endeared him to audiences the world over. So it was not until he took up the strains of his Caprice Viennois that the audience felt that it was hearing the real Kreisler. Of the entire program, this number stood out, it was with this number that Kreisler became Kreisler. So insistent were the demands, that he repeated it with perhaps even greater feeling.

Quiet Final Number

The concluding number, even though as well known as the Caprice Viennois, failed to sweep the audience with the same intensity. It presented the quietest picture of the evening and was designed to leave the audience in a more subdued mood. The fourth number of the Viennese's own composition, which came as an encore, was probably his best known work, the Old Refrain, and the ovation which greeted the opening strains bespoke its popularity.

Mr. Kreisler showed himself to be more than a great performer—Mr. Spalding was that—he was an artist. There was more to his performance than mere technical accuracy; he seemed to imbue his interpretations with a deep feeling, a feeling born of understanding. The appearance of Mr. Kreisler here will stand out as the high-light of the year's entertainment program.

Hines And McCachren Placed On "Tar Heel's" All-Southern Team

South Carolina Gamecocks Also Put the Tompkins Brothers On Mythical Quint.

V. P. I. STAR AT FORWARD

Bus Hall Given Post Despite Handicap of Playing on Mediocre Squad.

Tar Heel's All-Southern Wilmer Hines f. Carolina
Bus Hall f. V. P. I.
Fred Tompkins c. S. Carolina
Ben Tompkins g. S. Carolina
D. McCachren g. Carolina

Two White Phantoms and two Gamecocks won positions on the DAILY TAR HEEL's all-southern team. The team was picked for the most part on the play at the tournament.

The most significant point of this team is the fact that Freddie Tompkins, regularly a forward, appears above at center. The reason for this shift is the fact that Freddie appeared the best pivot man in the tourney. On offense the Gamecocks had the eighteen-year-old Texan rotating with Henderson, their regular center, between the foul line and a forward position. When he was "in the hole," Fred was much more deadly and dangerous with overhead shots and one-handed tosses. Besides he is about as tall as Henderson and much more alert on the floor.

Dave McCachren certainly deserves a position on the all-southern team. Anyone with the poise Dave had on the floor, his speed while dribbling, and his accuracy with passes, can hardly be kept off any all-star team. Ben Tompkins and Dave should make a sweet pair of guards. Ben was one of the steadiest players of the tourney, besides being a good shot.

Bus Hall and Wilmer Hines are the two forwards picked. Hall, though playing with a mediocre team, was picked unanimously on the coaches' and officials' team. He is a dead shot, a good ball handler, and a tireless player. Hines, by virtue of his fine showing against South Carolina, is placed at the other forward. Four members of the South Carolina club declared that Wilmer was the best forward they had played against.

HIGH WILL MEET IN TITLE CONTEST

Charlotte Will Play Durham in Tin Can Tonight for State High School Crown.

Charlotte and Durham high schools are scheduled to hook-up tonight in the Tin Can in a basketball game to decide the high school championship of North Carolina. The teams will start play at 8:00 o'clock.

Charlotte will be after its third straight title in as many years. The Charlotte team defeated Raleigh high in 1931 and 1932 in the finals. This year the western conference team has another strong club with Peabody, Bell, Brady, Ruth, and Mullis probably getting the starting call. Bill McCachren, a brother to Dave and Jim of the varsity and freshman Carolina teams, is likely to see action before the battle ends.

Durham, winner of the eastern conference has a strong team that will be out to take its first victory over Charlotte since 1930, when Durham won the state high school title.

Both teams have had Carolina cage stars on past championship teams. Jim and Dave McCachren and Snook Aitken starred on Charlotte teams in the past, while Chesty Chandler and Bill Markham were both outstanding on Durham teams.

CLAIBORN M. CARR

"IF I HAD A DIAMOND ON this here thing it'd shine like a buckeye," shouted Ben Tompkins, South Carolina guard, Monday night after the Duke game. The "thing" was the tiny gold basketball he had just been given by the tourney officials. "I'm telling you now," said Ben, "since you asked me, that Wilmer Hines was the best forward I've seen at the tournament." Which team did you like the best, Carolina or Duke? "I'm telling you again, I believe Duke has the best team, they play cleaner ball," he said. "Those Carolina boys were dirty Saturday night, hacking a lot under the basket, while Duke played us clean both at Columbia and here tonight." Tompkins' reaction can be explained by the fact that the Tar Heels had the Gamecocks' water on and they not only began crabbing themselves but trying their best to find anything wrong with Carolina's play.

PING-PONG FINALS SCHEDULED TODAY

Pool Players and Bowlers Also Active Today as Sports Carnival Nears Close.

The teams representing Aycock dormitory and S. A. E. fraternity will cross paddles this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the finals of the campus ping-pong tournament conducted by Graham Memorial. Both teams are strong and have won all their matches via the shut-out route.

Cartland, the Aycock ace, is reputed to be one of the south's best paddle wielders. Harley Shuford, south-paw tennis player, is slated to furnish the opposition for Aycock's number one man. Both players are left-handed and should give the spectators a new slant on the game.

Pool Tournament

Only one match is scheduled in the pool tournament today. J. F. Barbano will meet Nowell at 4:00 o'clock for the right to play in the finals. J. F. Barbano yesterday defeated Cohen 50-20, and Kanner 50-13 to gain the semi-final round. D. Barbano has already advanced to the final round in his bracket. His advance yesterday was at the expense of Peterson 50-12, and Mosier 50-13.

Bowling Matches

In the semi-finals of the bowling tournament Chi Phi meets Grimes at 4:00 o'clock. At 8:30 o'clock Aycock bowls Zeta Psi and the winner will play Sigma Phi Sigma tomorrow in a semi-final match.

JONESBORO WINS OVER DOBSON FOR CLASS "B" TITLE

Jonesboro Gets 39-33 Victory in Game Which Decides Championship of Class "B" High Schools.

Jonesboro, winner of the eastern conference, downed Dobson, winner of the western conference, 39 to 33 to take the state basketball title among class "B" high schools. The contest was fast and well played throughout.

Both teams started on nearly even terms during the first quarter and were tied several times. Jonesboro got a slight lead of 12 to 9 just before the quarter ended and were never quite overtaken from then on. At the half the winners held a 23 to 17 lead. During the third quarter Jonesboro put on speed and ran their lead to 35-19. However, the more rugged Dobson team came back in the final period fighting and clearly outplayed the winners scoring twelve points to their four.

J. Womble, forward, led the Jonesboro scorers with thirteen points.

Chi Phi, paced by Captain Hudson continued its fine team play with a win over Phi Sigma Kappa, 1126-1008. Hudson rolled a 469 set with a 190 single game, the highest in the tournament.

FINALS IN FREE THROWING TODAY

Twenty-Eight Men Left in Final Round and Each Will Have Fifty More Foul Shots.

Semi-final rounds in the intramural free throw tourney were completed yesterday, and twenty-eight men were named to compete in the finals this afternoon.

The tourney started last week, and almost 250 participants tried their skill, shooting twenty-five shots each. All those making twelve or more entered the semi-finals, and over one hundred men were included among the qualifiers.

Originally the plan had been to have the twenty-five highest men at the end of the second round enter the finals, but due to ties more than that number have been selected.

Fifty More Throws

Each competitor will shoot fifty more free throws, and the winner of the tourney will be the man making good on the most out of the total of one hundred shots.

The qualifying men who will participate in the finals today are: Stimpson, A. T. O.; Scott, Old East; Dillard, Delta Psi; Skinner, Kappa Alpha; Leonard, Best House; Kerr, Sigma Nu; Smith, A. T. O.; Fawcett, Pi Kappa Alpha; Tucker, Aycock; Barnard, Chi Psi; Peterson, Mangum; Trainer, Beta Theta Pi; Lawrence, Chi Psi; Rogers, Phi Delta Theta; Clark, Zeta Psi; Baukney, Chi Psi; Smith, Mangum; Barnett, Beta Theta

"Chesterfields Satisfy"

WHEN smokers keep buying the same cigarette day after day... it's a pretty good sign that they're getting what they want... mildness, better taste—a smoke that's always the same.

So we're going right on making Chesterfields just as we always have... selecting choice, ripe tobaccos... ageing them... blending and cross-blending them... making them into cigarettes in the most scientific ways that are known.

As long as we do these things we know that smokers will continue to say, "They Satisfy". For that's what people are saying about Chesterfields.

If you smoke, why not find out about them? A package or two will tell you the whole story.

THEFT OF PARTS HALTS STUHLMAN IN EXPERIMENTS

Which Makes Away With Most Important Equipment of Valuable Microphotometer.

Several pieces of valuable equipment have been removed during the past week from the physics laboratory in Phillips hall by unknown persons. Although the monetary value of the pieces is not extensive, their importance is such that work has been made practically impossible, thereby jeopardizing two master theses and much research work.

Someone broke down the microphotometer and removed one of the essential optical parts, a reflecting prism, which can be replaced only after a delay of six to seven weeks, as it must be imported from Holland. This microphotometer valued at over $3,000.00, is not the property of the University, but was presented to Dr. Otto Stuhlman for research work under his jurisdiction through an appropriation from the National Research Council, the Rockefeller fund, and the Smith fund. At the same time an eye piece for a traveling microscope was taken and two dozen 5x7 photographic plates.

A $10.00 reward is offered for the replacement of these articles, no questions asked.

Prehistoric Exhibit In Geology Museum

The implements and art of early man from Paleolithic through Archeolithic and Mesolithic into Neolithic time are exhibited in two of the four newly arranged exhibit cases in the geology museum.

Many of the implements in this collection from western Europe came from ancient caves, where they were found in association with the bones of the cave-bear, hyena, ancient elephant, rhinoceros, horse, and extinct species of mammals. The earliest are extremely primitive and date from the Cromer Forest bed of probable late pre-glacial time. The record shows a marked advance in man's skill and artistic ability as he is traced through the great glacial time by his implements. The earliest known carving and sculpture of ancient man are also in the exhibit, which was loaned to the museum by Dr. J. B. Bullitt.

The other two exhibits include representatives of the six crystal systems and a collection of thirty new species, types, and cotypes of extinct paleozoic invertebrates which have been described by members of the geology department in recent years.

Style Showing Given By Store Monday

A showing of new spring styles was sponsored Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock by The Little Shop at the home of Mrs. P. C. Farrar on Laurel Hill road. It was given in connection with the meeting of the local garden club.

The sports attire which was modeled consisted of mannish flannel suits, knit suits, and checked tweeds. The selections for afternoon wear were white trimmed silk suits in gray and navy blue, for evening, pastel shades of chiffon predominated, followed by several models of striped mousseline de soie.

Fifteen dresses were modeled by the following girls: Muriel Wolfe, Betty Barnett, Jo Orenthoff, Elizabeth Strickland, Frances Wagstaff, and Virginia Hendrix.

School Of Commerce Includes Theoretical And Practical Work

Economics 144. Theories and Forms of Business Enterprise. Comprehensive view of a field that is hard to organize. "Heh-heh" Heath.

Economics 151. Transportation. Specialized subject matter treated to give relation of economic factors in transportation. Heath again. More heh-heh.

Economics 161. International Trade. Dr. Zimmerman, by his broad background and broad perspective of social as well as economic relations, is especially fitted to make this course a valuable one.

Economics 171. Advanced Economic Statistics, which speaks for itself. Ferger is liberal and competent in his field.

Economics 182. Types of Banking under Murchison, who knows plenty about the subject. However, commercial banking is not considered, which may or may not be a criticism.

Economics 185. Dr. Murchison appears intensely interested in Business Cycles, and his presentation of this course is excellent—never dogmatic. Attending class a pleasure—well, almost, anyway.

Economics 191. This course in Labor Problems lacks a definite point of view, but covers most of the problems adequately. Mostly outlines. Wolf specializes in this field and gives competent instruction throughout.

Economics 192. Social Control of Labor Problems. Also under Wolf. See above.

Economics 195. The solicitous David Clark would have apoplexy if he saw the outside reading list to this one. Its view of Economic Reform embraces everything from Henry George to Lenin. However, there's nothing to be alarmed about; generally considered a genial bull-session under Dean Carroll.

Commerce 51. Business Organization answers the oft-repeated prayer for a "practical" course. Conducted by Schwenning, whose lectures are well-organized and well-delivered, with emphasis on scientific methods in modern business. However, the course suffers the unavoidable penalty of being an introductory one, and therefore extremely comprehensive.

Commerce 71-72. Principles of Accounting, which demand strenuous physical and time requirements. The subject matter is largely mechanical, but is essential to every commerce graduate. Preferable: Sherrill.

Commerce 91-92. Business Law under Hobbs. A comprehensive consideration of legal procedure in business and a valuable course to any student who intends to enter into some form of business activity. Professor Hobbs has a sense of humor, is well-liked by his classes, and conveys his subject matter efficiently, considering its extent. Good course, but better consult lawyer for legal advice.

Commerce 145. Ocean Shipping. Dr. Zimmerman makes this worthwhile.

Commerce 155. Personnel Management. Dr. Schwenning's technique in lecturing makes a dry course easy to follow and sometimes interesting.

Rankin to Lead Devotional

The second of morning devotionals led by members of the freshman friendship council will be given today by Claude Rankin of the freshman Y. M. C. A. group. Preceding and following scripture reading and prayer by Rankin, Walter Patterson will play several meditative selections on the organ.

GRAPPLERS LEAVE HILL TOMORROW FOR TOURNAMENT

Eight Wrestlers Will Represent Carolina in Southern Conference Mat Tourney at V. M. I.

Carolina's varsity wrestlers, eight strong, will leave for the Southern conference wrestling tournament tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock. The tournament will be held this year under the auspices of V. M. I. over the interim, March 3-4.

Although Carolina's grapplers have won but one Southern conference meet, they have made good showings against all opponents and have been nosed out of victory several times with their vanquishers taking only a small arithmetical margin.

Coach Quinlan put his charges through hard drills yesterday afternoon and another is scheduled for today. All the men are in fine physical trim and should look good in the tournament.

Six Teams Enter

There will be six teams entered in the mat tourney. Duke will send only four men and while State will send five; Carolina, V. P. I., V. M. I. and Washington and Lee will all send full teams.

The following men will leave for the Virginia trip: Hussey, Mathewson, Davis, Hiller, Spell, Pickett, Auman, Captain Idol, and Manager Barnard.

TRACK MEN TAKE FINAL WORK-OUT TODAY FOR MEET

while several state high schools will be entered.

Save for Crook Stafford's recent leg injury the Tar Heels should be in excellent physical shape and if conditioning means anything the coaches have a right to be optimistic, but just one glance at the long list of conference stars will throw terror into the hearts of Carolina supporters. Maryland will undoubtedly head the field of contestants being lead by a sophomore. Widmyer whose fast sprints have dazzled the sports world. Fulmer and Brownlee, of Duke; Lauck and Everette, of Virginia; and Finklestein, for Washington and Lee, should provide loads of competition for the "dark horses."

A. S. M. E. Meeting

A meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers is scheduled for tonight at 7:00 o'clock in 319 Phillips hall. The purpose of the meeting is to select a delegate to the annual convention of the student branches of the A. S. M. E. which will convene in Birmingham, Alabama, April 1. Papers will be presented at the meeting by George Gorham, J. A. McLean, and A. C. Furchgott, and one of these papers will be presented at the convention in April.

Meyer Discusses Fraternities

Professor H. D. Meyer, of the sociology department, addressed the interfraternity council Monday night on the influences and the qualifications of fraternities. The state as a whole, said Dr. Meyer, is deeply indebted to fraternities here for the cultural advantages it affords men by offering them a home and closer relationships with others during their college life.

Gamecock center had nothing but the highest praise for Jason Glace, Tar Heel pivot man.

"Thompson may be a more finished player, but this here Glace is a harder man to jump against. He ought to be a wonder before he finishes college," said Henderson. Jim Thompson took time enough Monday night to crack Henderson on the head going down the floor. Neither of the two referees saw the action however. Yet Referee Proctor heard Lorie, South Carolina sub, question his ancestorage in a whisper and ordered him off the floor. Glace certainly pulled the surprise of the tourney. He played two beautiful games and seems to have "arrived." Coach Shepard should feel well repaid for the amount of work he has spent on developing Jack. Coach Bo has spent more time with Glace than anyone else on the squad, teaching him to jump, to take shots off the backboard, and to handle himself better. Jack responded swell and should burn up the loop for the next two years.

JAKE WADE OF THE CHARLOTTE Observer deserves some sort of prize. He got all heated up about pushing Bus Hall for an all-southern berth and wrote about half a column in Sunday's Observer on the V. P. I. star. Jake wrote and wrote, all about what a great player he was, but alas, it was all in vain 'cause Jake called his man Bus Long. That's not all, for Monday night when they sent ballots around for the sports scribes all-southern team, Jake insisted on voting for Bus Long again. That's O.K. Mr. Wade ole boy. You can take the celluloid bath tub.

JOHN ROWLAND, SOUTH Carolina's hairy man at guard, thought that Carolina was better than Duke and that Wilmer Hines was the best forward he had seen. "I'm telling you like a friend, Carolina had the fastest ball club I've ever played against," he said. Coach Billy Laval is a great fellow. He is about the calmest coach I have ever seen. Monday, when his team was behind, the only signs of nervousness I could see was that he kept patting his foot rapidly. When I asked him for his all-southern team, he said, "Oh well, put Hall at one forward and run the rest of my team, I don't care what they say."

COACH SHEPARD NOR ANYONE else can yet venture a plausible explanation for that foul Mention called on the crowd Saturday night which cost us the South Carolina game. The referee kept insisting that he was not penalizing the Carolina team but the crowd. Who the devil did he penalize if it wasn't the Phantoms? The tournament was being held on a neutral court and besides everyone likes to see

MILLER RESIGNS AT WAKE FOREST

Acceptance of Resignation of Grid Coach Follows Ousting Move.

Pat Miller, head football coach at Wake Forest College, yesterday submitted his resignation to the college's athletic council which voted unanimously to recommend his successor at the June meeting of the board of trustees.

Miller's resignation did not come as a big surprise to fans in the Big Five. Miller has been undergoing a series of charges and accusations by both alumni and members of the student body who have repeatedly held mass meetings demanding the coach's dismissal.

Although his successor will be named in June, Miller will continue in the capacity of gridiron mentor throughout this fall. His resignation does not become effective until December 1. Miller was a former Fordham football star, and is reputed to have been named as one of the football coaches at Holy Cross. His home is Atlantic City, N. J.

Grail And Freshmen Sponsor Dance Series

In place of one of its quarterly smokers, the freshman class will stage a dance in the Tin Can Friday night, April 7. The affair will be given in conjunction with the Grail, which will sponsor a dance the following Saturday night to which freshmen will be admitted. An announcement will be made soon concerning the receiving of bids for decorations.

Arrangements for the dance are in charge of a dance committee appointed from the freshman executive committee composed of Russell Mickle, chairman, Johnny Bost, Harry Montgomery, Tom Evins, and Bill Coan.

Palmer to Address Engineers

A meeting of the American institute of electrical engineers is scheduled for tonight at 7:45 o'clock, in 206 Phillips hall. The feature of the evening will be an address by Roy A. Palmer, of the Southern Public Utilities company, of Charlotte. Palmer, an outstanding illuminating engineer, will discuss "Illumination," demonstrating his talk by lighting apparatus. The public is urged to attend.

Dean A. W. Hobbs will meet with all freshmen of the school of liberal arts in Gerrard hall during chapel period this morning.

Smith Favors Bond Issue

A straight-from-the-shoulder counsel from Alfred E. Smith to the senate finance committee yesterday embraced recommendations for a federal bond issue to finance enlarged public construction, a war debt moratorium aimed to expand American foreign markets, and recognition of Soviet Russia. He was out to help the committee in its search for ways and means to improve the national situation, and he let his hearers know at the outset of his opposition to inflationary schemes.

Two Millions Allotted State

An allotment, by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to North Carolina of $2,018,000 in federal relief funds for March and April was announced yesterday by the governor's office. This sum exceeds by $418,000 the $1,600,000 this state received from this source for the same purpose for January and February.

Arliss Featured In 'The King's Vacation'

George Arliss is starring today at the Carolina in his latest Warner Brothers picture, "The King's Vacation," supported by an excellent cast. He is famous on the stage for his portrayals in such plays as "Becky Sharp," "Marco Millions," "The Brothers Karamazov," "Hedda Gabler," "Peer Gynt," and others equally well-known.

Another player, O. P. Heggie, was famous for his characterizations in such plays as "The School for Scandal," "Trelawney of the Wells," "Madame X," "She Steps To Conquer," and "We Moderns."

Marjorie Gatenon, who plays the role of the other woman in the Arliss picture, is also a noted stage star, having been for years with Walter Damrosch and the Shuberts. She made an exceptional hit in "Her Soldier Boy."

Others in the cast are Dick Powell, Patricia Ellis, Florence Arliss, Vernon Steele, James Bell and Maude Leslie. The story is by Ernest Pascal, author of "The Marriage Bed."

Romance Languages Aimed At Culture And Fluency

Department Is Generally Popular; Dey States That Fluency of Conversation in Other Tongues Should Be Acquired After Short Stay in Foreign Atmosphere.

"The Romance language department in view, in the offering it presents to the students, has an objective: cultural and practical," stated Dr. Dey, head of the Romance language department.

PLANS FINISHED FOR STATE-WIDE DRAMA TOURNEY

Thirty-Two Organizations Are Entered; Finals to Take Place Here at Drama Festival.

Plans for the annual state Drama Festival and finals of the drama tournament, to take place at the University, March 30, 31, and April 1, are nearing completion, according to Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic association which is co-operating with the University extension division in sponsoring the festival, which will mark the culmination of the state-wide play contests among college, high school, and community dramatic groups.

Many Entries

Entries in the preliminaries, which are soon to get in full swing throughout the state, include eleven city high schools, five county high schools, two junior high schools, three junior colleges, six senior colleges, and five little theatre organizations. In all, these make thirty-two groups of actors in as many communities.

In addition to the plays entered by these groups, twenty-six original plays have been submitted for competition in the festival. These have already been read and judged by a competent group of authorities in Chapel Hill, and eleven have been selected for production at the festival.

Juniors To Pick Dance Leaders And Marshals

As a result of a movement launched last year by several of the campus leaders the right to elect marshals for the final week has been returned to the junior class. For many years it was a tradition for the juniors to elect the marshals, but due to the failure several years ago of a class to do this, the election was put in the hands of the German club. The marshals will serve all during the commencement exercises and at the final set of dances, and will be elected at a smoker the second week of the spring quarter. The junior dance leaders will be elected at the same time.

Courses In Psychology And Sociology Surveyed

Department Head Says Psychology Courses Provide General Survey to Facilitate Higher Study; Sociology Department Offers Background for Acquaintance With Social Problems.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE DAILY TAR HEEL continues today its series of departmental surveys with the intention of presenting student opinion on courses listed in the University catalogue, as a guide to students about to register for the spring quarter. Opinions offered in this series are not necessarily those of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.)

Two sorts of objectives influence the instruction in the psychology department of the University. According to Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of that department, an attempt is made to offer the general student a survey of the field of contemporary psychology and to provide specially interested students opportunity to pursue certain lines of higher study.

For the former group, which comprises the vast majority of students enrolling for psychology, a course is devised which presents a non-speculative study of man and joins to academic discussion acquaintance with experimental methods.

"On the negative side," said Dr. Dashiell, "this general orienting involved training to avoid looking to non-verifiable claims such as those of telepathy and spiritism; to shy away from gold bricks such as phrenology and other superficial methods of reading personal traits; and to avoid the facile generalizations of the globe-trotter as

'ROBINHOOD' WILL BE GIVEN TONIGHT BY BOSTON GROUP

Famous Comic Opera Will Be Presented in Memorial Hall At 8:30 O'clock.

Robinhood, as the sixth of a series of programs presented throughout the year by the Student Entertainment Committee, will be staged tonight in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock. The Boston Light Opera company will give the performance.

This well-known comic opera is one of the most popular ever written. It was first presented in 1890 in Chicago by a group of Bostonians who subsequently became known as the Boston Light Opera company and who produced the play more than 4000 times. The libretto was written by Harry B. Smith, and the music by Reginald De Koven. Several famous musical pieces, including "Oh Promise Me" and "Brown October Ale," are from the opera.

Students not holding entertainment booklets and townspeople can obtain tickets to the program from the office of Dean A. W. Hobbs or at the door tonight.

The opera is laid in the time of Richard I of England in the twelfth century. It presents the romantic tale of Robert, Earl of Huntington, who in the guise of Robinhood, leads a band of outlaw rangers in Sherwood Forest. His love for Lady Marian and his antagonistic struggles with Sir Guy, claimant to the Nottingham estates which Robinhood also claims, lead into a series of romantic and humorous adventures. Needless to say, Robinhood conquers his rivals in the end and gains the hand of his sweetheart.

well as the novelist."

Advance courses have as objectives: (a) the assistance of the student to get insight into his own personal problems that he may more adequately adjust his own peculiarities to the problems of everyday life; (b) training in clinical applications to human problems in crime, poverty, industry, education, and the home; (c) an emphasis upon the technique and the critique of the experimental methods applied in the study of man.

In the course of this survey, it became apparent to the investigator that students are beginning to look to psychology in their search for solutions to their personal and social problems and are recognizing it as a factor in the efficient administration of various vocations and professions. Few, however, take psychology as a profession in itself, but rather as an avocation, an aid in their lives and works.

The introductory course is disappointing to most students, because it is highly technical and text-bookish. Expecting psychology to prove a panacea for all problems, they object strenuously to the extensive physiological discussions and the lack of practical material. However those who take the advance courses generally express satisfaction.

Look Homeward Angels

The inception of morning devotional services under the guiding hand of the Y. M. C. A. is a quiet yet reassuring note in this day of ubiquitous utilitarianism. It would seem to indicate that there has been a reaction to a reaction. First came the wide-spread collegiate opposition to compulsory chapel, part of a general movement against all that smacked of discipline in the collegiate world. There was a certain pride involved in scoffing at the antiquated notion that daily religious meetings were of value. Compulsory chapel, like pedantic professors, became a target for sophisticated "collegiates." One who would defend any such primitive custom was an outcast, or an object of derision. With the abolition of this chapel at a majority of the large colleges, there came an apathy to the whole subject. The blessing of no longer having to abandon a comfortable bed in answer to the chapel bell was appreciated with the coolness of indifference.

Yet quietly, almost imperceptibly, there has come a change of heart. There were always those who could feel the benefit of morning prayer as a refreshing stimulant to a lagging spirit. The continued their morning devotionals as before. They had not made it their business to be noisy on the subject anyway. But in addition to those faithful few, we now find silent reinforcements returning to the fold. Perhaps it is curiosity or perhaps the recent lack of infallibility of Insull and American Tel. and Tel. At least, it is safe to guess that a significant realization has dawned upon the student of today. The material world, with its ticker tape and soaring prices, has never looked quite the same since '29. A return to the realm of the spirit and a little searching of the soul may not be out of place.—B.B.P.

It Still Speaks

Those who bewail the lethargy with which American courts have been wont in late years to dispense justice have occasion to rejoice at the speed with which the case of President-elect Roosevelt's would-be assassin has been disposed. On Wednesday night, of February 15, Giuseppe Zangara, an Italian anarchist, attempted to take the life of the incoming chief magistrate, failing in his objective, but seriously injuring three bystanders. Six days later a Florida court sentenced him to eighty years in the state prison.

An interesting contrast to this prompt retribution is furnished in the case of Col. Luke Lea and his son. Lea, a publisher and financier of Nashville, Tenn., and the younger Lea, his associate, were arraigned in the superior court of Buncombe county in the summer of 1931, charged with defrauding the Central National Bank of Asheville of several millions of dollars, through unscrupulous manipulations and false securities, culminating in the insolvency of the bank. They were convicted of the charges held against them, after a long and stormy litigation, and sentenced, but there, justice was thrown off the track, and the imposters have not yet felt the hand of the law. There have been countless legal squabbles during the year and a half interim, but the law has proved incapable of coping with such strong adversaries.

Having escaped to Tennessee, the Leas are apparently free from any legal molestation, and all attempts at extradition to North Carolina, where they would become victims of the suspended sentences from which they fled, have been futile.

After a comparison of these two cases, one is led to wonder at the discrepancy existing between the efficacy of the law in handling the two situations. Certainly one crime was not so much more dastardly than the other as to warrant such an increased degree of promptness and austerity on the part of the judiciary. The Leas are held by many as being public enemies co-equal with the anarchist, yet under the self-same laws, the former go practically free while the latter has already begun harvesting the fruits of his rashness.

Granting that Zangara's case did not run the ordinary course of the law, but was given precedence over the normal docket for the sake of example, the dilatory manner with which justice has dealt with the swindlers is no whit accounted for.

It is hardly credible that the law in Florida should be so much more punctual and persevering than in North Carolina and Tennessee, so the only explanation left, it seems, is the fact that the Leas were wealthy and prominent while Zangara was obscure and spent his last nine dollars for the fatal pistol, and the only conclusion to be drawn is that, in the courts of Justice (?), as everywhere else, money talks.—W.A.S.

An Old Tale Retold

For some time there has been a movement to prevent the student's making unsightly paths across the campus by walking on the grass, but he has continued to make his own paths and disregard those already placed there for his convenience by the University.

Ever since the founding of the University the campus has been famed all over the country for its beauty. Magnificent oak trees grow profusely to shade the student on hot days. Walks in convenient locations and geometric design have been laid to enable the student to go from one place to another with the least amount of inconvenience. Beautiful green grass and flowering shrubs have been planted to make the campus even more beautiful. There is only one flaw in the whole setting of the campus; people have insisted on forming new walks on every side merely to save themselves a few steps in going from place to place.

From the northern corner of Venable Hall to the library the grass has been worn away because the student is too lazy to take a few extra steps. Several other such paths criss-cross in front of the library. From the entrance across from the postoffice to Old East the student has formed another walk. However, the most unsightly of all these illegitimate walks is the one which has been made from Battle, Vance, and Pettigrew dormitories to Graham Memorial.

On this foremost part of the campus, the place where visitors to Chapel Hill get their first impression of the University, this latter eyesore has become more and more pronounced. To such an extent has this stretch grown that the University has at last been forced to construct a regulation path at a time when it has other more necessary uses for these funds.

The construction of this path will again remove one of the disfiguring elements of the campus and will increase greatly its justly famous beauty. It is hoped that since the heedlessness of the student has caused this expenditure, he will appreciate this path and also will not grow more careless at other spots so that he may gain another of this sort.—F.P.G.

An 8-Cylinder Body on a 4-Cylinder Chassis?

We pointed out recently that in spite of the repeated invitations of men in political positions, the political life, as a predetermined goal, draws few undergraduates.

But almost any college in the land does give a man experience and training in the ground work of politics. The University is a training field for this profession if certain distinctions are valid.

Modern higher education emphasizes, as does politics, appearance and not results. It places a premium on deception and on "putting it over." It emphasizes not what the student learns, but what he can convince his professor he knows. Not what he is and does, but what he appears to be and do. Not on getting things done, but on getting things to look like they are being done. Not on assimilating knowledge, but on passing examinations. Not on developing initiative, foresight, resourcefulness, and accurate judgment, but on getting grades. Not on amassing knowledge, but on amassing credits. In short, not on building up and tuning the engine concealed under a hood or hat, but on polishing the body.—Minnesota Daily.

Capitalism

The business staff of North Carolina's leading college daily newspaper passes along to this department (which seems to be a sort of receptacle for odds and ends) a letter from the System Sales Corporation, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City, who claims that you can make something like five thousand dollars by a mere flip of the hand. The letter which accompanies the sales chart takes first prize for optimism. "Put your money on the order blank and send it in. Never mind the money. You can't lose. Frankly, we don't think we can either." Strangely enough it is signed "P. H. Byers."

But we are getting away from the system, which we feel is just about as good a proposition as renting office space in the Empire State Building. Goes something like this: You sell one System Bridge Pencil (of arresting and unusual appearance, of excellent material and workmanship . . . body is black and orange giving a modernistic effect that is distinctive) to yourself or a convenient mother-in-law and at the same time get three other salesmen to sell three. Now on the last one of the three pencils sold you get a commission of twenty-five cents. The three new purchasers become sellers and you receive additional two-bit commissions on their first three sales. The new buyers sell three each and so on. Our chart tells us that you make $20.25 on the fifth round, $188.25 on the seventh, $1,640.25 on the ninth, $4,920.75 on the tenth round . . . pretty soon you retire to a modest little 75-room farm in the Adirondacks where you can sleep 'till noon and sneer at comprehensives before every meal.

All this we pass on to the Budget Commission, feeling that it is economically sound, eliminating many of the high costs of distribution, and if adopted by the state would banish the sales tax bugaboo.

Plan

The most lucrative plan yet advanced for saving the green sward of Carolina's campus comes from Mr. Bob House. He suggests that the Confederate soldier, who stands on the North campus facing Franklin street and that ugly path from the Post Office to Old East be armed with a machine gun instead of a blunderbuss.

Horses

Our feeble French escaped the spelling of a number in the Kreisler concert, but we later had it pointed out to us. La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin (The Girl of the Flaxen Hair) was written La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin. The typographical mistake of an "a" instead of an "e" makes it read The Girl of the Linen Horses. And please keep off 'a the grass.

ALICE IN BLUNDERLAND

Alice never remembered quite when she fell asleep nor how nor where nor why (and since she is by no manner of means to be confused with Sleeping Beauty her nap must have lasted somewhat less than a century), but when she came to from her dream of peace she was sitting with a group of students in Professor So and So's classroom. After listening to the dull monotone which was the professor's medium of conveying his exceedingly valuable thoughts to the students who were privileged to attend his class each day, Alice became aware that his lecture contained neither jokes nor puns. "And what is the use," thought Alice, "of a lecture without jokes or puns?"

"Young lady," accused the professor, who having become aware of her vacant stare which he presumed bespoke the vacant mind, "you are not attending." Now he used the word attending as you or I would use the word listening.

"Very well," answered Alice, looking vainly about her for something which bore the label EAT ME or DRINK ME as that had been her favorite method of escaping from embarrassing situations back in the good old days. The only thing she saw was a crushed dope cup in the hand of the boy who was sleeping peacefully in the chair next to hers. Then she recalled the lines once written by a famous poet: the individual withers and the world is more and more. Saying this magic formula over three times, Alice withered until she was able (her chair was nearest the door) to jump through the keyhole. Down the hall she skipped chuckling to herself, "I'm not attending . . . I'm not attending . . ."

Now Alice needs must grow back to her normal size again else she could never get out of the long narrow hallway. She racked her brain as she paced back and forth Felix-like. And the green grass grew around, around, around, and the green grass grew around. As she sang she grew. When she was again of normal size Alice entered Professor Blank's classroom and was amazed to find the chairs scattered systematically several spaces apart and Professor Blank himself patrolling the classroom while the students scribbled hastily in quiz books.

"Why," exclaimed Alice, "I thought we had an honor sys—"

"Hist!" advised a Caterpillar, "that's one thing we just don't mention around here. There are certain things, you know, that one can't talk about."

Properly chastised, Alice slipped out of the classroom and decided to take a stroll on the village green. She was accosted there by the Mad March Hare who introduced himself as a candidate for an office held in the land. "I will appreciate your support," he told her after he had explained what a wonder person he really was.

"Support for what?" queried Alice.

"The Caucus-race," was his reply. And thereby hangs a tale.

She was scarcely on her way again when she was stopped by the Dormouse who told her that the Mad March Hare was quite a bit of humbug and just a little mad, and to prove that his intentions were honorable he asked if he might take her to the Lobster-Quadrille scheduled for tomorrow evening, it being a week-end night.

"You can take anything you like," responded Alice, "I'm going over to the cafeteria and take some Beau—ootiful Mock Turtle Soo—oop!"

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor
DAILY TAR HEEL:

Mr. Dill points out that there is a distinct difference between the social status of the white and Negro race. He answers the question "what is the place of the Negro in our social organization?" by saying that it is, essentially, a social problem. Having said that commonly-known fact, he then asserts that "it is impossible even to consider attempting an equalization of the two races by allowing admittance of Negroes to this University." His statement is not made according to reason, and the question "Can such a position be justified?" arises.

There is no justification for any stand that claims as its basis prejudice and sentiment rather than reason. Removed from the slough of bias to the peak of fair-minded judgment, racial relations would present no difficult problems. That part of society which by the age of its culture and intellectual development has progressed further would act as a magnet drawing to it all the attractions of the other part and the unsuitable ones to away. By this is not meant biological fusion of the two races which science has rejected as being undesirable, but the liberation of minds toward and of greater happiness and mankind. And, to repeat, would be the reasonable thing to do, since a common life of life

Over Forty Teams And 300 Men Will Take Part In Indoor Games

Duke and Virginia Favored to Take Conference Title From Carolina Saturday.

TAR HEELS WEAKENED

Atlanta Boys' High Sends Team To Defend Championship in Scholastic Division.

More than forty teams and 300 athletes will participate in the fourth annual Southern Conference indoor games which will take place in the Tin Can Saturday afternoon and night, it was announced by R. A. Fetzner, director of athletics, yesterday.

Coach Fetzner stated that he had entries from all ten of the conference teams, from seventeen high and prep schools, giving a record field for the scholastic division and four non-conference schools. The non-conference schools entered are Davidson, Furman, Wake Forest, and William and Mary.

Carolina is the defending champion in the conference division, but the Tar Heels have lost several of the brightest stars of their championship team and have been weakened by a couple of recent strokes of bad luck.

Tar Heels Weakened

In the line of tough breaks, Bob Hubbard, captain of cross-country last season, has had to drop from practices due to heavy work as a self-help student. Crook Stafford, promising candidate for honors in the high jump and a potential prospect for laurels in the hurdles and relay, pulled a leg muscle in practice this week and may be lost to his team Saturday. Wick Smith, the third in the ill-fated trio, who had a 12 foot 6 inch possibility in the pole vault, is not in his best physical trim due to an attack of tonsillitis.

Duke and Virginia Best Bets

When it comes to clubs looking good for chances of victory, Duke and Virginia should come through. Both clubs have their best teams in years and stand an excellent chance to snatch the title from Carolina. Maryland, led by a sensational sprinter, Earl Widmyer, and Washington and Lee, led by a brilliant hurdler, Eli Finklestein, also have fine chances to cop top honors.

Atlanta Boys' High is the defending champion in the scholastic class. Newark, N. J., Episcopal High, Woodberry Forest, and John Marshall, all have teams which may come through with the crown. The remaining thirteen clubs will come from Hargrave Military, Asheville School, Darlington, and from high schools of Charlotte, Greensboro, Salisbury, Durham, Winston-Salem, High Point, Wilmington, Sanford, Rock Hill, S. C., and Morristown, Tenn.

BASKETBALL AND BOXING PICTURES TAKEN TODAY

The varsity basketball and boxing teams will be photographed for the Yackety Yack this afternoon at 3:50 o'clock in Emerson stadium. Members of these teams are asked to convene promptly at that time.

Chemistry Article Published

The February issue of the Journal of Physical Chemistry contains an article by Dr. H. D. Crockford and N. L. Simmons of the chemistry department of the University. The article is on "Binary Systems of m-Nitrotoluene and p-Nitrotoluene with Naphthalene p-Toluidine and o-Nitrophenol."

The writing, given in condensed form, is a continuation of a series of papers by Dr. Crockford. Simmons is a candidate for a B. S. degree in chemistry.

Fast Stepper

Here is one of the many stars who will be seen in the Tin Can Saturday for the Southern Conference Indoor meet. He is Joseph Horter, Newark Prep's hurdling flash. This potential champion recently defeated Jack Keller, national intercollegiate champion. Besides beating Keller, Horter is also the national interscholastic champion over the 70-yard high hurdles. He should feature the scholastic division of the meet.

FREE THROWING TOURNAMENT IS WON BY ALAN SMITH

Jakie Pepper Places Second; Stimpson and Peterson Tie For Third in Contest.

The first annual intramural free throw tournament came to a close yesterday with A. T. O. walking off with the lion's share of the leading places. Alan Smith won the individual competition with a total of seventy-six good throws out of a hundred. Clarence Stimpson gained a tie for third place with sixty-eight, and the A. T. O. team, composed of those four men who scored best in their two preliminary rounds, copped the team championship with 123 out of 200.

Second in the individual race was Jakie Pepper, of Lewis dorm, while tied with Stimpson was Peterson, of Mangum. Scott, of Old East, and Skinner, of Kappa Alpha tied for fourth, with sixty-seven, while Baukney, of Chi Psi, was fifth with sixty-six. Sutton, of Best House, and Barbano, of Ruffin, tied for sixth with sixty-five, while seventh place was a three-cornered deadlock involving Kerr, Sigma Nu, Joyner, S. A. E., and Trainer, Beta Theta Pi.

Smith scored his seventy-six as follows, shooting four sets of twenty-five each and scoring nineteen, fifteen, twenty, and twenty-two. Pepper's rounds were fifteen, fourteen, nineteen, and twenty-two.

Second place in the team score went to Chi Psi, with 119, while Best House came in third with 118. These scores, based on the two sets of twenty-five each shot in the first rounds, were as follows for the leading teams: A. T. O., Stimpson, 37, Smith, 34, Parker, 29, Thompson, 23; Chi Psi, Barnard, 33, Lawrence, 32, Baukney, 31, Halley, 23; Best House, Leonard, 35, Sutton, 30, Connelly, 27, Miller, 26.

MILLER TO SPEAK FOR N. C. CLUB MONDAY

The next meeting of the North Carolina club is scheduled for Monday night, March 6, at 7:30 o'clock in the Rural Social Economics library. The speaker of the evening will be Dean Justin Miller of the law school of Duke University, who will discuss the topic, "The Depression and Government in North Carolina."

VARSITY MATMEN LEAVE TODAY FOR TOURNEY AT V. M. I.

Eight Wrestlers Enter Southern Conference Tournament at Virginia Tomorrow.

The Carolina varsity wrestling team will leave on its second Virginia invasion this morning at 9:00 o'clock when they embark from Emerson field for the Southern conference mat tournament which will be held at V. M. I. tomorrow and Saturday.

Six strong wrestling aggregations will be entered in the tournament with Washington and Lee and V. M. I. holding the inside track on the seeded positions. Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan was noncommittal concerning the Tar Heels' chances for the Dixie mat title, but he expressed hopes that Captain Idol, Matthewson, and Hussey would come through in their matches.

Quinlan Favors Idol

Coach Quinlan was quite optimistic concerning Captain Percy Idol's chances to cop the Southern conference unlimited title. He said, "I feel confident of Idol's chances to win, because I don't feel that there are more than two college men in the United States who can touch him in ability as a college wrestler. Idol is easily the best lightweight in the south and the east and I believe the best in the west. I think that he is certainly better than Caldwell, Oklahoma A. and M. wrestling star, who went to the Olympics and national intercollegiate wrestling champion for two straight years."

Carolina is taking only eight men for the tournament: Hussey, Mathewson, Davis, Hiller, Spell, Pickett, Auman, and Captain Percy Idol.

CHARLOTTE WINS CAGE TITLE FROM DURHAM BY 25-21

Airtight Defense of Charlotte Team Is Feature of Slowly Played Contest.

Charlotte high won its third straight high school cage championship as many years by downing Durham high school 25 to 21 last night in the Tin Can in a slow but closely played contest.

The winners had an airtight defense which held Durham to seven field goals, all of these coming on difficult shots. Charlotte, however, was unable to pull away from the Durham team, although they had four more field goals. The losers stayed in striking distance as a result of their 7-3 lead in foul shots.

Durham Scores First

Durham counted first on a foul but a few minutes later Charlotte had three straight field goals, getting a lead which was never quite overtaken by the losers. Charlotte never did get more than six points ahead and many times their lead was only two points. A few minutes before the game ended, Cheek, Durham guard dropped in a basket which put his team only two points behind. Peabody gave Charlotte their four point margin with a basket just before the contest was over.

Thomas, Durham center was the high scorer of the night with ten points. Bell, Charlotte forward was close behind with nine. Ruth, guard on the winning team, played the outstanding game guarding beautifully and getting the ball down the floor with fast accurate passes. He also counted for seven points.

SEVEN CAROLINA TRACK STARS

The services of the seven Tar Heel track stars pictured above will be needed next Saturday when Carolina will defend a two-year old Southern conference indoor track title in the Tin Can. These men are: (reading from left to right) Smith, pole-vault; Louis Sullivan, distance man; Hodges, shot-put; Jensen, one-mile; Stafford, hurdler; Higbee, broad-jumper; and Hubbard, distance man.

CANDIDATES FOR BASEBALL TEAM PRACTICING DAILY

Griffith Is Only Letterman Pitcher Back; Peacock Will Probably Be Catcher.

Approximately a score of bat-tery-men are out daily in the Tin Can contending for positions on the Tar Heel baseball team this year, with the hurling candidates outnumbering the receivers about three to one.

Although it is a bit early, the hurlers are beginning to bear down on the ball, and as soon as the weather breaks enough to permit outdoor work, baseball at the University will be in full swing.

In an interview yesterday, Coach Bunn Hearn deplored the lack of good pitchers and a hard hitting shortstop. Joe Griffith is the only letterman pitcher back this season, and on him will fall most of the hurling duties. However, Hearn expects to develop a capable pitcher from among Legore, Brandt, Crouch, Scarborough, Manley, Childers, and Webster, right-handers, and Brown and Joyner, southpaws.

Peacock Catching

Johnny Peacock will probably go back to his first love—behind the bat. Johnny was first string receiver as a freshman, but was converted to an outfielder the last two years. Johnny is just as good a catcher as a fielder, and in him Carolina will have a hard hitting, fine fielding catcher. In addition to that Johnny can handle pitchers with the best of them. Rivaling Peacock's bid for a first string berth will be Strayhorn, a hard hitting soph, McCaskill, a converted infielder, and Parker, Tatum, and Mathewson, reserves.

At first base will be a merry scramble between Dixon, a monogram outfielder, and Foxx, a reserve. Both are hard hitters, although Foxx will have the edge in fielding. Hodges and Temple are the other candidates for the initial sack.

Vergil Weathers, crack basketball star, will have little trouble in clinching his berth at second. Verge hit well over .300 last season and is a dependable fielder. At short, two of last year's reserves will battle for the post left vacant by the failure of co-captain Ferebee to return to school. Both Johnny Phipps and Leonard are fair hitters and fielders, and will see plenty of service at the short field.

In all probabilities, the candidates will be following the custom of preceding years and will remain in Chapel Hill during the spring holidays working out at Emerson field.

VIRGINIA TO ENTER STRONG TEAM IN TRACK MEET HERE

Conference Meet to Wind Up Indoor Season for Cavaliers; Have Win Over W. & L.

University, Va., March 1.—Virginia's indoor track season will end Saturday in Chapel Hill where the Cavaliers will compete in the annual winter track meet of the Southern Conference.

Coach Archie Hahn has been taking advantage of good weather to have his charges train in the open as much as possible in preparation for the out-of-door season which will begin in six weeks.

With Captain Billy Lauck running the mile, Hunsdon Cary and Aldrich Dudley in either the half or quarter mile, Warren Ballard in the two mile, Grover Everett in the hurdles and Milton Abramson and Henry Sackett in the dashes, Coach Hahn feels he has the running events well cared for not only this week-end, but in the April and May meets as well.

George Coles, who broke the local indoor shot put mark during the indoor meet with Washington and Lee, George Flock, Fenton Gentry, Chris Thompson, and John Dawson will look after the weight events. George Wyllie is expected to give a good account of himself in the pole vault as will Floyd Johnson and John Edmundson in the high jump.

A. E., in five sets but Shuford and W. C. Harris, S. A. E., proved too much for Rosenstrauch and Harvey Harris, respectively, and took their matches to give their team the win.

VARSITY GOLFERS TO START SEASON WITH HOME MEET

Schedule Eight Definite and Four Tentative Dual Meets Before Tournament.

The varsity golf team has an excellent schedule arranged for this spring, having eight definite and four tentative dual meets in addition to the Southern conference tournament.

The schedule begins here on March 23 with a series of three matches with Richmond University, Washington and Lee, and Duke. This match with Washington and Lee should produce some excellent golf, as W. and L. will be represented by Billy Howell, international star.

Road Trip in April

The road trip will begin the last week in April, in the form of a northern tour. This tour will include Georgetown University, William and Mary, Washington and Lee, Richmond University, and Virginia.

Upon the completion of this schedule the Tar Heels will compete in the Southern conference tournament at Sedgfield country club in Greensboro. This tournament begins on Saturday, May 13, with the team competition. The following Monday and Tuesday the individual competition will take place.

Carolina Has Veterans

Carolina will be represented this season by most of the members of last year's varsity squad and all of the members of last year's freshman squad. Among them will be such stars as: Joel Adams, former Southern conference title-holder; Alan Smith, Billy O'Brien, this year's captain; Will Sadler, who starred in last year's southern amateur championship; Carl Cramer, Erwin Laxton, Fred Laxton, and others.

But, as usual, we are wasting time in chipping away the bark rather than cutting into the knot at once. After the bark is gone, the knot will still be there, and when laid open will present the same view. Why waste the time?

The answer is practical. Need for material support to carry on the "education" of the "superior" white race is imperative. We are objects of charity, the source of which for the most part is a populace saturated with bigotry and inimical to financing the search for knowledge and truth unless it flows from established springs. They are unwilling to dig for treasure where it is known to be.

It is not presumptuous to predict that history no farther removed than one generation will consider us in the same light that we look upon those who opposed by word and sword the advancement of religious toleration. "Foolish!" we say of them. True. And knowing that, is it not foolish to let time dub us so? Perhaps. But the chain of events must not be broken!

Courses in Psychology and Sociology Covered

Psychology 21-22. This general survey of the field is confusing under Dr. Bagby because his lectures are frequently at variance with the text. His introduction of practical matter is stimulation. Dr. Dashiell's treatment is dull in the main by virtue of too close an adherence to his own text. Laboratory, which is generally condemned as futile, is not linked with the course by Bagby but under Dashiell takes almost equal rank with the academic side.

Psychology 125. Animal psychology is the most interesting of Dashiell's courses because it allows him full range in a field in which he has done most of his work. Despite a mass of technical reading and experimentation, subject-matter and ability of the professor are interesting enough to make this one worthwhile.

Psychology 126. Too much concentration on experimenting in this study of child psychology. Dr. Bagby fails to provide an adequate survey of the literature on the subject.

Psychology 135. Industrial and vocational psychology. Meetings at 8:30 make it unpopular. Supposed to be experiments, reading, and lectures. Actually nothing but reading. Bagby gives a good history of the Chesterfield factory.

Psychology 136. A good course in advertising psychology that somehow has been neglected by the students. Too much routine, for one thing, but Dr. Crane knows his subject.

Psychology 138. Would be a good course in legal psychology if Dr. Dashiell didn't apologize for it incessantly. Poorest constructed of his courses. Interesting at first, but the poor type of student it attracts slows Dashiell down.

Psychology 140. An excellent course in psychology of personality under Dr. Bagby—for those who have not had him in 21 or 22. Otherwise about half is repetition. Replete with interesting case histories.

Psychology 145-6-7. Like all of Dr. Crane's courses, the lecture is nothing but dictation which must be taken and memorized word for word. First two weeks of this study of phases of abnormal psychology are interesting. From then on it is merely a re-hash of the original material. Crane has an interesting personality but holds it back.

SOCIOLOGY COURSES

According to Dr. Harold D. Meyer's statement to the DAILY TAR HEEL last year in the survey of the sociology department, that branch operates on three main objectives. First, to provide the necessary courses in social theory and applied sociology for the student who wishes to major in sociology or to elect subjects from this department adequate for his purposes. Second, to give the necessary background, philosophy, and ecutives will be the guests of the Alpha Phi Omega scouting fraternity at a banquet in Graham Memorial tomorrow night. Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the University Y. M. C. A., will speak on "Character."

Saturday's program will feature Dean Dudley D. Carroll's talk on "Isms." An R. O. T. C. officer from Raleigh will close the session with an interesting speech.

Engineering Prize Offered

The North Carolina division of the American Society of Civil Engineers is offering a cash prize of $25 for the best paper to be submitted by any member of the civil engineering class. There is no restriction as to number of words or subject except that the subject must bear on some phase of civil engineering. The prize will be awarded in the late spring.

technique prerequisite to preparation for social work in the larger and more effective way. Third, to acquaint the student with the field of social principles and social problems in modern life.

The following is the consensus of student opinion on courses in the department:

Sociology 41. An elementary course which studies chiefly the elements of social theory. Brooks tends to disregard assignments in class discussion but is certain to take them up on quizzes. Much better course under Meyer.

Sociology 42. Discussion of social problems such as race, immigration, the family, and community. Not intensive enough—merely a superficial scraping of the problems presented.

Sociology 53. A better course in statistics than that presented in the commerce school, but one would do well to take it there and read up on the sociological aspects elsewhere.

Sociology 62. Marriage ably presented by Dr. Groves. There is a wholesome outlook on marriage and family life and their relation to sex. A course that means much to student of today, but offers more to those who have not read extensively on this subject. Enrollment limited to male senior students.

Sociology 151. A well conducted study of social anthropology under Dr. Johnson. Some emphasis on the physical and archaeological aspects. Mainly of interest to future politicians and to those attracted by the subject itself.

Sociology 152. Social theory under Vance who knows his subject well and presents it impartially. Not for the general or casually-minded student, but good otherwise.

Sociology 185. A study of the negro with regard to race question and the negro's cultural background. Also of interest to those who expect to go into politics. To get anything lasting from the course real work is necessary, yet it may be called a "crip."

Sociology 192. Criminology course. Compellingly presented under Brown who is familiar with the field and makes it worthwhile. Under Brooks, whose knowledge is inadequate, just one prolonged bull-session. Excellent material to be handled.

Romance Languages Aimed At Culture

the usual stereotyped manner. If conscientiously taught, extremely dull. If handled intelligently, bearable.

French 4. Impossible texts in both reading and grammar. With suitable material as a basis for the work, the course might be made interesting.

French 21-22. The first is a survey course of French literature through the seventeenth century. The other brings the study down to the present day. Both are interesting and well worth-while. Smith and Linker are easy.

French 25. Business French made as dull as possible under Staab, whose French and German are more comprehensible than his English—"You should have learned that in French 1." Unreasonably difficult.

French 51-52. Advanced courses in conversation made entertaining by Dr. Lyons. Fluency is seldom acquired.

French 109. Latter half of the nineteenth century in French literature. Subject matter interesting. Very formal presentation, offering little opportunity for original work. Dr. Dey's scholarly lectures make the course somewhat dry.

French 126. For an "A" or a "B" this course in history of the French language as given by Dr. Holmes is heartily recommended. He gives no quizzes.

French 131-132. Dr. Wiley, an exceptionally fine instructor, gives these courses in French drama from its source through the nineteenth century in the most interesting and entertaining manner possible.

Spanish 1-2. These elementary courses in grammar are taught thoroughly and effectively. Insofar as possible, made interesting.

Spanish 3. A resume of all grammar studied in Spanish 1 and 2, requiring little work if the student put forth effort in the preliminary courses. Affords an adequate background for future literary study.

Spanish 4. Introduction to reading Spanish as it is written for the Spanish people. Just another language course, but not entirely objectionable.

Spanish 21-22. Introductory study to Spanish literature handled in the manner usual to language departments. Regards works of art chiefly as dates in literary history rather than achievements. Dr. Stoudemire is competent.

Spanish 131-2-4. Courses in Spanish drama under Dr. Leavitt whose scholarly traits are not complemented by teaching ability.

Barnett Chosen For Part In "Holy City"

William G. Barnett, voice student in the school of music, has been chosen for one of the solo parts in the sacred cantata, The Holy City by Harvey Gaul, to be presented by a combined chorus in Fayetteville Sunday, March 5, according to an announcement made by Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department and director of the Fayetteville chorus.

A group of seventy-five vocalists has been assembled for the presentation of the cantata by the Chaminade club of Fayetteville. Professor Dyer was chosen to direct the group. In addition to Barnett as tenor soloist, Dr. Robert T. Clark of the Duke University medical school, Mrs. Hugh Williamson, wife of the dean of music at Flora MacDonald College, and Miss Ethel Rowland, head of the department of vocal instruction at Meredith College, have been chosen to sing solo parts in the cantata.

Barrymore Stars In "Topaze" At Carolina

John Barrymore's newest starring role is in "Topaze," film version of the French play of the same name by Marcel Pagnol, showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Professor Augusta Topaze, played by Barrymore, promises at the start to be a goody-goody, for he is seen teaching worldly wise modern boys that honesty is essential to success.

This maxim gets its first jolt when his conscientiousness loses him his teaching job; and its second when he finds his honesty is enabling the unscrupulous Baron de Latour-Latour to wallow most happily in ill-gotten gains.

It's the baron's mistake. For the modest little professor discovers his own ego and the glory of putting something over on the baron, who put something over on him. Topaze even goes to the extent of confiscating the baron's mistress.

Showdown on Sales Tax

In the face of statements that the removal of the fifteen cent ad valorem tax for support of the six months schools virtually means a sales tax, the House, in Raleigh yesterday, by a vote of 99 to 7 refused to direct its finance committee to retain the ad valorem tax that was adopted in lieu of a sales tax in the turbulent 1931 session of the General Assembly when that body passed an act requiring the state to maintain the six months schools.

DRAMA GROUP TO PRESENT BILL OF SIX PLAYS TODAY

Playmakers Continue Experimental Productions This Afternoon and Tonight.

Six one-act plays, written, cast and directed by students in playwriting courses, will be presented as experimental productions before an invited audience at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon and at 8:00 o'clock tonight in the Playmakers theatre.

The plays were written by students in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting courses and are produced experimentally as a continuation of the work in these courses. Since the authors are allowed only one week to cast and rehearse their plays, the works are not presented as finished productions. However, it is thought that some of the plays may later be produced at public performance.

"Last Skirmish" Opens

The Last Skirmish, a play of West Virginia mountain folk by Marguerite McGinnis, will begin the program this afternoon. David McIlhenny, Betty Bolton, and Marguerite McGinnis are the cast.

The second production of the afternoon is Second Edition, a psychological drama by Robert Barnett and directed by Bobian Bartum. The characters are Foster Fitz-Simons, Marion Tatum, Basil Hall, William Bonyun, and Robert Barnett.

Comedy Ends Program

Lights In The Sky, an American comedy written and directed by W. A. L. Bonyun, is to complete the afternoon program. The cast includes James Queen, Martha Hatton, Phil Stein, Ellen Stewart, and Frank McIntosh.

The evening performance will begin with Design For Justice, by Elmer Oettinger, directed by Oettinger and Marion Tatum. Characters are Everett Jess, John Whitehead, Marion Tatum, (Continued on page three)

LUNCHEON OPENS SCOUT PROGRAM

Dean Jackson Welcomes Visiting Scout Executives of Region Six at Opening Meeting.

The region six Scout Executive seminar, which is being conducted at the University, was opened yesterday with a luncheon in Graham Memorial, at which the visiting officials were welcomed by Dean W. C. Jackson, of the school of public administration. Following the opening exercises the executives were addressed by Hubert Stuckey, assistant regional director. As guest of Dr. Harold D. Meyer they attended a buffet supper last night at which an open forum was held on "Social Trends."

The program for today is scheduled to be opened with Professor K. C. Frazer of the history department speaking on "International Relations." Others who will speak today are Russell M. Grumman, Professor Lee M. Brooks, E. C. Metzenthin, and F. K. Cameron.

One of the features of the conference will be the banquet tonight given by the Alpha Phi Omega scouting fraternity. O. H. Benson, national director of Rural Scouting, will be the principal speaker.

Freshmen To Register First Of Next Week

Registration for the spring quarter will begin Monday with the freshman class. First-year students will register in the offices of their respective deans Monday and Tuesday.

Sophomores whose names begin with "A" through "H" register Tuesday, and "I" through "Z" Wednesday. Juniors and seniors whose names begin with "A" through "J" register Thursday, "K" through "S" Friday, and "T" through "Z" Saturday until 1:00 o'clock. Engineering and pharmacy students will register at the same time as other undergraduates. Graduate students, and library science and medical students will register during the week of March 6-11.

NEW PUBLICATION FOR ENGINEERING SCHOOL RELEASED

"Carolina Engineer," Containing Work of Students and Professors, Off Press.

The first issue of the Carolina Engineer, new organ of the engineering school of the University, was released to students this week. The magazine, which is expected to appear three times yearly, is edited by students in the school with assistance of the engineering English department. Articles written by professors and students appear in this number and are expected to appear in subsequent issues. Surveys of the activities of engineering societies will appear in each edition.

Featured in the first number is an article by T. F. Hickerson dealing with highway construction problems. A. C. Furchgott in a study of radio and aircraft operations gives a brief history of this phase of aviation and defines its possibilities. J. E. Hunter presents ideas of methods of lighting in the future. E. L. Midgett tells of the construction of the new wind tunnel which he helped build in the laboratory here. The article identifies various working parts of the instrument. Articles on activities of four societies were written by representatives from each organization.

MEDICAL SCHOOL IS HIT BY LOCAL CRIME WAVE

Officials in the medical school yesterday accounted for the disappearance of projection lenses as a part of the wave of vandalism in which the physics department suffered this week.

The medical school lenses were discovered to have been taken Wednesday afternoon just before a class, with the result that the class had to be called off.

Theft of a reflecting prism from a microphotometer early in the week caused discontinuance of important research and work on two master theses in the physics department.

Fifteen in Infirmary

The following were confined to the infirmary yesterday: Frank Anders, Francis Glenn, W. C. Powell, L. C. Bruce, Jr., Vivian Guion, T. L. McLaughlin, L. T. Dildy, Jr., W. F. Henderson, Martin Levinson, Olive Newell, Rebecca Moose, Jack Riley, H. W. Winstead, P. W. Markley, and R. B. Johnston.

Dr. Francis W. Shephardson Will Be Guest of Eta Chapter Today.

Dr. Francis W. Shephardson, national president of Beta Theta Pi, will be present at and will aid in conducting a special initiation of the local chapter of that fraternity this afternoon. He will, likewise, be the principal guest at a banquet held in his honor tonight at the Beta house.

Dr. Shephardson is at present attending the national convention of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary fraternity, at Duke. Immediately following the banquet tonight he will return to Durham to be one of the principal speakers on the night's program of the convention.

With the conclusion of the O. D. K. convention tomorrow, Dr. Shephardson will journey to Davidson to conduct initiation ceremonies there Sunday night, going on to Georgia Tech for a similar occasion Monday.

He plans to return north towards the latter part of next week, visiting the Beta chapters at Washington and Lee and Virginia on his trip home.

Courses Of Six Science Departments Surveyed

Tar Heel Offers Survey of Courses in Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Botany, Zoology and Geology in Sixth of Series of Articles Containing Student Opinions of Values of Courses.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE DAILY TAR HEEL continues today its series of departmental surveys with the intention of presenting student opinion on courses listed in the University catalogue, as an aid to students about to register for the spring quarter. Opinions offered are not necessarily those of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.)

Although the various departments of science at the University—mathematics, physics, chemistry, botany, zoology, and geology—have somewhat the same general aims, it was found in the course of this survey that they differ in important details. Therefore, each science is considered as a separate unit. Since there is small enrollment in most of these courses beyond the sophomore year, the more advanced courses have not been covered.

The following are the opinions of students on the courses offered by six University science departments:

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, outlined the purposes of the mathematics courses as threefold. The primary objective is cultural. All mathematics is to be interpreted as a course in philosophy, or in a larger sense, a course in abstract logic, which, in turn, must be interpreted as the most accurate logic that life offers.

WELL-KNOWN MEN LISTED ON STAFF OF INDOOR MEET

Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus Is Invited As Honorary Referee for Saturday Night Affair.

Several men whose names are nationally prominent in athletic circles are included in the competent staff of officials which R. A. Fetzner announced yesterday for Saturday's fourth Southern conference indoor games here. Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has been invited to serve as honorary referee, and the honor guests will be President Frank P. Graham of the University and President C. P. Miles of the Southern conference.

Ed Thorpe to Referee

Ed Thorpe, an executive in the New York office of A. C. Spalding & Bros., and a widely known athletic official, will serve as referee. Two former Olympic track stars, Fred Alderman of Atlanta and Coach Archie Hahn of the University of Virginia, will act as starter and chief timer, respectively. Alderman started the conference outdoor meet last year.

Other leading officials will be Captain N. G. Pritchett, of Davidson College, associate referee and assistant starter; Colonel H. M. Read, track coach at Virginia Military Institute, chief finish judge; Reverend A. S. Lawrence of Chapel Hill, chief field judge; L. C. Belding of Greensboro, clerk of course; and Coach K. C. Gerrard of Duke University, announcer.

Prayer Service Today

The service for the World Day of Prayer will take place in the chapel of the Episcopal church this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The women of the community are urged to be present.

Yackety Yack To Run Co-ed Group Picture

The co-eds in the graduate school will have a group picture included in the annual this year. This will be the first time that any division of this kind has been made of the co-ed group in the year book.

All co-eds in this group are asked to assemble on the steps of South building Tuesday morning at assembly period to have the picture made.

The action was decided upon because of the increasing number of women students taking graduate work at the University, and the idea of the editor of the Yackety Yack is to give recognition to this growing group on the campus.

DRIVE BEGINS TO FINANCE WORK ON STRATFORD HALL

Campaign to Sell Medallions for Restoration of Lee Home Will Start Soon.

A nation-wide drive for funds needed to complete the restoration of Stratford Hall, birthplace of General Robert E. Lee, famed Confederate leader during the Civil War, was started this week. The Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., purchased the title to the property four years ago. The estate comprises more than 1100 acres bordering the Potomac river.

Each state organized under the foundation has been urged to make every effort to do its part to raise the necessary funds. The quota set for North Carolina is $10,000 which is being collected by the sale of pewter medallions of Lee. The legislature of the state of Virginia has under consideration a request that an appropriation of $200,000 be made to assist in the work at Stratford. There are nineteen states organized under the foundation.

Mrs. Lanier, Director

Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, who spoke here some time ago in the freshman assembly, is president of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., for life. She has under her, many able assistants who are working daily to bring about a complete restoration of Stratford Hall. All students of the University are urged to make contributions to the fund by purchasing medallions of Lee, which will be placed on sale in Chapel Hill in a very short while.

Speaker Says Australia Has Outlived Depression

The Australian government has solved its financial problems and the country is well on its way to economic recovery, according to Dr. A. Grenfell Price, of the University of Adelaide in Australia, who addressed an economics group in Bingham hall here Wednesday night on the subject of "Australia's Methods of Overcoming the Depression." According to Dr. Price, so well has the Australian government handled its economic problems that it now boasts a surplus.

Dr. Harry W. Crane, professor of psychology, addressed the Durham Crime Study club at the "Palms" in Durham Wednesday night on "Relation of Mental Abnormality to Crime."

TALK BY THOMAS TO CLOSE FORUM LECTURE SERIES

Prominent Socialist to Begin Series of Lectures and Seminars At 10:30 in Assembly.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president in 1928 and 1932 and prominent lecturer and author, appears here tonight in the last of the series of eight lectures sponsored by the Open Forum discussion group. His topic, winding up the seven lectures of the year dealing with politics, economics, banking, labor, social work, international relations, and farming is "The Program for Action." The lecture is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Plans announced previously for a series of afternoon seminars and a banquet in Graham Memorial tonight were rescinded by members of the executive committee when it was learned that Thomas would not be available for the contemplated programs. Holders of tickets for the banquet may call at the information desk in the Y. M. C. A. building this morning for a rebate.

To Speak in Chapel

Thomas will speak first in freshman-sophomore chapel in Memorial hall at 10:30. His other talks will include a brief lecture to 11:00 and 12:00 o'clock classes in Gerrard hall.

The distinguished Socialist has made several previous appearances here on the University campus. He was one of the principal speakers in the Human Relations Institute in 1931 and has made additional trips to the University since that time.

A noted lecturer, scholar, and author, Thomas is perhaps one of the most interesting figures on the American social scene. In his campaign of 1932 he toured every section of the United States, speaking in many cities and towns in both south and west.

GROUP TO ASSIST LIBRARY FORMED

"Friends of Library" Seek New Members to Aid in Development of Institution.

A special drive to obtain new members to aid in the development of the University library during the current depression has been launched by Friends of the Library of the University, it was revealed yesterday by acting-librarian R. B. Downs.

To combat effects of cuts in appropriations and declines in gifts to the institution, the organization was formed last spring and is now attempting to gain the support of persons interested in the library to maintain the local institution's prestige among the libraries of the country.

Letters Sent Out

Three classes of memberships have been created in the Friends of the Library, annual membership costing $5.00, sustaining $25.00, and life $1,000.00. At present many letters are being sent out to interested parties as invitations into the society.

Another work of the organization lies in the securing of special historical collections to boost the already valuable materials on the south's history now in

So Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee

Athletic, musical, and dramatic recreation seem to share a bright place in the public eye, despite the four-year stretch of depression since the famous "Windy Day" of October, 1929.

More than forty teams comprising 300 men will take part in the indoor games scheduled here tomorrow. The field of entries sets a new record, with all ten S. I. C. teams, four non-conference teams, and seventeen prep school aggregations from all sections of the south entered in the famed event at the University's Tin Can.

Fritz Kreisler, the North Carolina symphony, Albert Spaulding, and various University muscians have all drawn record and capacity crowds this winter. The great Kreisler enchanted a packed house with the magic music of his Stradivarius—at two dollars a head.

The Carolina Playmakers report a number far in excess of previous years entered in the annual drama festival here this spring. At no little expense, dramatic groups from every section of North Carolina will bring their theatrical troupes to Chapel Hill to compete for the coveted honor so desired by all amateur Thespians.

Perhaps these recreational outbursts are the natural reaction as the populace lets off steam after a four-year upgrade struggle. Perhaps this depression has brought a modicum of physical and intellectual happiness in its wake of economic chaos.—D.C.S.

An Open Mind for The Open Forum

Norman Thomas comes to the University campus again today. Recalling the bitter contention and furor that came in the wake of his visit here last spring, it is with misgivings that we look forward to the aftermath of his address tomorrow night. Why should not all parties who are concerned with Mr. Thomas's visit, the press, the public, and the University, consider his visit sanely and in the light of good reason?

It is the University's established policy to allow the honest proponents of any creed to present their views from the campus platforms. Freedom and open-mindedness are the principles underlying this policy.

Norman Thomas comes here on an open forum lecture series sponsored by a group of campus organizations. The purpose of the series is to offer an insight into the social problems of the day and the measures proposed for reforming them. Both liberals and conservatives have been fairly represented on the program of the series. No effort has been made to discriminate in favor of one or the other side. The series is merely an open investigation. Audiences are not bound to accept the views of either side. In fact, they have been encouraged at the conclusion of each set of lectures to interrogate the speakers and to form opinions of their own. It is merely as a speaker on this lecture series, a representative of a particular viewpoint, that Mr. Thomas is appearing. He comes not as a teacher or a dictator of ideas, but as the representative of a particular social and political creed of which intelligent people should be cognizant if they are to understand fully our situation today. His ideas are not necessarily those that University students would themselves practice and preach but of which, as intelligent people, they should have some knowledge. Whether they would attack them or defend them is not the concern of those sponsoring the lecture series; in either case, students should know what those ideas are.

Norman Thomas comes here a defeated man, much worse defeated than he himself would have believed possible a year ago. That he is honest and sincere in what he says, whether it be right or wrong, no one who has known him, whether friend or enemy, will deny. If in nothing more than the name of good sportsmanship, he should be given a fair hearing tonight. As it is, he represents a rejected ideal, a defeated party. The nation that rejected him in the past election has a fair cross-section in the University student body. Although he is personally popular, Mr. Thomas holds no more sway over student thought than he does over that of the nation. It is an insult to the intelligence of our student body to hint, as the state press often does, that our minds are the ready prey of every radical or near-radical idea in circulation.

We are not dupes, nor is ours "a cloistered virtue." We do not play ostrich at the appearance of any and all bugaboos. We have courage, intellectual integrity, and open-mindedness enough to hear what any man has to say. What we afterwards believe we hope to be the product of our own minds and the burden of our own consciences.—E.C.D.

The Passing of The Old

Time was when the University was known throughout the country as the gathering place of gentlemen, where honor, integrity, and culture filled the air. Time was when all eyes turned towards Chapel Hill in its rustic quiet as the home of literature and music, the abode of progressive thought and liberalism. Time when all eyes turned with mingled envy and longing to the calm and peace of this little village hidden away from the world.

But time has passed. Democracy and prosperity threw open the doors of the University to hordes of students in whom was no feeling for the traditions and ideals of the men who made it. The ivy is gone from the buildings and with it the beauty of the things that were, a beauty which lay not on the surface but was imbedded deep within the life of the University itself, worn there by the dreams of the men who have come and gone.

Life has come to Chapel Hill. Automobiles, radios, and telephones have made it a part of the rest of the world. Hurry and bustle, the rush to Raleigh and Greensboro over the weekend, the rasping of radios on Franklin street in the wee hours of the morning, the University is caught up in the whirl of the age.

Honor, integrity, and culture. We cling to our honor with the hopeless clutch of a dying man, yet amidst the cheating and stealing we know that it is hopeless. The old is gone, dead. Culture is our last hope. Yet spring no longer finds animated groups about the Davie Poplar or the old well. Students walk the paths, their heads bent down, eyes staring at the ground, never a moment to pause to drink in the quiet beauty of the campus. Never a moment to gaze at this old tree or that crumbling brick and reflect on what may have been. Hurry, hurry, hurry.

Yet time was when Chapel Hill was the home of literature and music, the abode of thought and philosophy, the gathering place of gentlemen and scholars.—V.C.R.

With Contemporaries

Hail Bureaucracy

Just as managing editors are lamenting the fact that the magic word of technocracy no longer possesses that extra something—front page allurements—the inventive genius of the American mind conceives another startling idea for doctoring the ills of the stricken world. "Biocracy" is the name for it, and it is a rival to the technocratic cure-all.

The new hypothesis is the brain-child of Dr. Walter B. Cannon, Harvard physiologist, and it proposes the application of simple biological laws to economic and social problems. The basis of the theory according to its founder rests upon the similarity of the body politic to the human body in susceptibility to maladjustment.

Just what the champion of the new doctrine means by stating that the theory utilizes the "calm and sensible equilibrium" is not absolutely clear; nor is it apparent just what the biological basis for the solution of financial, industrial, and governmental problems actually may be. Obscurity may prove to be one of the theory's strong points of appeal, however, for in the light of current history certainly, the attractiveness of novel schemes seems to vary inversely with their capacity to be clearly understood.

The eagerness with which such cure-alls are seized by the American public gives a very good indication of the general feeling of despondency and gloom caused by the depression. The average American is willing to grasp at a straw and to cling tenaciously until the last vestige of hope is withdrawn. It is a bad sign of the times. After Biocracy what?—Cornell Daily.

THE CAMPUS MIND

Dear Mr. Editor:

I guess you must remember me. I am the man who wrote you a series of brilliant letters last term relating to the pertinent and interesting subject of whether all races should or not be admitted to the University.

Now, Mr. Editor, you know me. You know what a courageous and intellectual stand I have taken on matters of these kind, and I sorta think that the girls oughta git a break. Standing as I do for equality first, last and always I think that the co-eds should be permitted the healthful activity of being allowed to be on the boxing team of our fair and glorious University.

I believe this new thesis of mine will be just as interesting and vital to your readers as the one I wrote last term.—Z. K. COMIKLE.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have not noticed any replies to my letter of last Wednesday, so here goes again!

It's a shame that the co-eds are not allowed to be on our boxing team. They are losing much valuable exercise and healthful recreation, thereby.

Show me where there should be a distinct difference between the social and exercising status of the co-eds and men students. You can't! I got you there.

I do not advocate the biological fusion of the races, but it does seem to me that some of the girls ought to be let wear some of these Mack Sennett gym girl outfits around the Tin Can. I wonder what your readers think?—Z. K. COMIKLE.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I see where a co-ed has gone and wrote you that she and all the rest of the girls don't even want to get on the boxing team of our noble University.

Now, Mr. Editor, it seems to me to be—if I may speak right out—a damned shame that a girl such as she should write in a thing like that. Where's her feeling of equality? I don't hardly think you should let her print such propaganda as that when here am I trying to do so much to emancipate her and her friends.

And how does she get off, speaking up so pert for her whole tribe? And why don't she sign her name? I sign my name: Z. K. Comikle, of which I am justly proud, to every letter I let your paper print. I don't go around signing open forum notes with names like: "A Co-ed Tired of Reading Goofy Letters." No sir! I sign myself simply as: Z. K. COMIKLE.

Dear Mr. Editor:

So now you got your editorial writers writing things about me! Well, I might have thought you would do something like that when here I was trying to just quietly defend the girls, no fanfare. I just wanted to be ignored by those disagreeing with me, and you can believe that.

I am proud to state that I am from the glorious state of South Carolina, whose motto is Dum Spiro, Spero, which means "While I Breathe I Hope," and down there we have our women on the same plane as us. We let them do all the activities in which we engage, and in some of these healthful things, we even let them do more than us; as, for instance, plowing.

Now, I think that the women

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

We, the members of Mr. Brook's Sociology 192 class, noted with interest the obviously unfair criticism of this particular course. We can't see how your writer got his material for such criticism since this is the first time Mr. Brooks has taught it. And we, as members of this class, who should be first hand authorities on this subject of criticism, feel that the criticism in the DAILY TAR HEEL was entirely unwarranted.

For one thing, this is not a bull session course. Mr. Brooks has his material well in hand and presents it very interestingly.

Sociology 192 Class.

P.S.—We all want to pass this course (Editor's note).

Irene Dunne Plays At Carolina Today

Irene Dunne, supported by Phillips Holmes and Lionel Atwill, has the leading role in "The Secret of Madame Blanche," today's attraction at the Carolina theatre.

In this production, Miss Dunne again demonstrates her ability at a characterization covering a span of years by first playing the part of a young American chorus girl in England in the '90's who marries a titled young blade, portrayed by Holmes. A tragedy leaves her, alone to raise a son who, taken away from her, returns years later.

The well-known stage and screen character actor, Lionel Atwill, plays the father-in-law who refuses to accept Miss Dunne and who fights her with court procedure in an effort to seize the child.

The English actor, Douglas Walton, plays the son at maturity, and prominent parts are also filled by C. Henry Gordon, Jean Parker and Mitchell Lewis.

Coal . . . silk stockings . . . meat —and the telephone

Keenly aware of the problems of business, large and small, Bell System commercial men are constantly devising special telephone plans to custom-fit service to the user's needs.

For example, a plan they worked out for a coal distributor helped him to contact 50% more dealers. A manufacturer, using a telephone selling plan, sold 700 dozen pairs of hosiery through one Long Distance call. A great meat packer handles complex sales and distribution problems efficiently with the aid of planned Long Distance and private wire services.

Systematic telephone plans are helping many users to build business—cut costs—handle collections—unify nationwide organizations—increase profits. And Bell System men are seeking still other ways to make the telephone more useful.

Coach Fetzer Verifies Carolina Entries In Meet Here Tomorrow

Tar Heels Put Thirty-Nine Men In Twelve Southern Conference Varsity Events.

EIGHTEEN FROSH ENTER

Coach Bob Fetzer last night verified the Carolina entrants in the fourth annual Southern conference indoor games tomorrow. Thirty-nine men have been entered in the twelve Southern conference varsity events, while eighteen freshmen will perform in the all-college first year events.

The maximum number of four men has been entered in the 60-yard dash all running for the first time in this event. Childers, Gunter, and Alexander are sophomores, while Hubbard, the fourth man, although a veteran letterman, is running for the first time in the dash.

Hurdlers Are Green

Most of the hurdle men are inexperienced also, Glenn a junior who was not in school last winter, being the only past performer running. Stafford, letter hurdler, is definitely out as a result of an ankle injury. Hawthorne and Abernethy, sophomores, will run in both the 70-yard high and low hurdles along with Glenn. Moore and Trubnick, both second year men, are other entrants in the high and low hurdles respectively.

Four out of six running in the middle distance are also sophomores while only one is a letterman. Higby and Turbee are the only 440-yard runners, the former being a letterman. Kimrey, a last year's reserve, Williamson, Bost, and Goldman are entered in the 880-yard run.

Distance Runners Strong

Carolina's best hopes seem to lie in their distant runners, with their most experienced men entered here. In the mile run, both Cordle and Donnell are veterans, while Waldrop and Curlee, sophomores, have been showing up well in practice. All three of the men running in the two-mile event are tried men with two of them being lettermen. Jensen, conference holder in the mile run, and Louis Sullivan are both lettermen, while Henry Sullivan is a reserve from last year.

There is at least one experienced man in each of the field events. Reid, Hamlet, and Phipps, entered in the high jump, are all veterans. Higby, Hubbard, and Phipps, veterans, and Childers, sophomore, will perform in the broad jump. Smith, a letterman and Jackson, a sophomore, will pole vault while Hodges, a senior, is the only shot put man entered.

In the last event of the night for varsity Southern conference men, the mile relay, at least three sophomores will perform. Maraden, Gunter, and Pruden are sure entries, while the fourth will come from Higby, Bost, or Goldman.

Among the freshmen events are entered for Carolina: Tucker, Moore, Kemry, Walls in the 60-yard dash; Shipman and Glenn in the 70-yard high hurdles; Conte, Yardell, Thompson, Mark, Neel, and McPhail in the 1/4-mile run; Montgomery, Keeney, DiBarklehen, Roper, and Coffield in the mile run; and Rankin in the high jump.

The games committee announced yesterday that the division of the non-conference events would be cancelled this year as a result of the lack of competition. Several freshman teams not in the conference will, however, perform as they enter with the conference yearlings. Davidson and William and Mary have already entered freshman teams. A final check of the entry list showed thirty-nine teams and 363 individuals.

FINAL MATCHES IN TWO SPORTS CLOSE TOURNEY

D. R. Barbano Wins Pool Tourney; Chi Phi Defeats Sigma Phi Sigma For Crown in Bowling.

The final matches in the pool and bowling tourneys, which were parts of the indoor sports carnival at Graham Memorial, were played yesterday afternoon, with D. R. Barbano being announced as winner in the first division, and with Chi Phi coming out on top in the bowling.

The final pool match found brothers pitted together. The tilt, which was the closest of the entire pool tourney, was won by D. R. Barbano over J. F. Barbano, the final score being 50-47.

Chi Phi took the finals in the bowling tourney in a match with Sigma Phi Sigma. The final score was Chi Phi, 1112, and Sigma Phi Sigma, 1004.

cluded in the files of the institution. Previously appropriations to the library have allowed the building up of a strong collection source material, but present appropriations make it necessary that the continuance of this work be done independently.

The Friends of the Library have already obtained several collections which scholars have found of great value. Included in these are: the Stonewall Jackson collection loaned last month, additions to the Kenan collection, and a valuable collection of newspaper clippings and bound volumes of newspapers.

Foreign Educator Visits University

Dr. Georg Kartzke, member of the staff of the Prussian Ministry of Education and associate director of the institute of foreign students at the University of Berlin, was a visitor on the campus yesterday.

Dr. Kartzke, who, working in connection with the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation and Oberleander Trust, is visiting the colleges of the south in a national survey of American colleges.

GORHAM WILL ATTEND ENGINEER CONVENTION

The local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers met Wednesday night for the purpose of selecting a representative to attend the convention of the student branches of the A. S. M. E. scheduled for March 31-April 1 in Birmingham, Alabama. George Gorham was selected to represent the local society and to present his paper "Influence of Ground Effect on Aerodynamic Drag in Wind Tunnel Tests" at the convention.

SALE, KENTUCKY FORWARD, BREAKS FORMER RECORDS

Two Mates of Star Player Placed on All-Tournament Selections Picked By Sports Editors.

Forest Sale, Kentucky center and perhaps one of the best players ever to have played in an Atlanta basketball tournament, set a new tourney record for the Southeastern conference Tuesday night. He tallied seventy-one points in the four games that the Kentucky Wildcats played, and continued his stellar playing by being a big factor in his team's win over Mississippi State in the final round.

The elongated Blue Grass cage star, who was readily distinguished by a light sprig of hair in an otherwise coal black head, was chosen number one man on the all-tournament selection and was also named captain by the United Press sports editors.

Sale was one of a trio of Kentucky Colonels gaining recognition. The complete team included: Sale, center; Johnny Demoisey, Kentucky, and Frank Waits, Mississippi State, forwards; Sparky Wade, Louisiana State, and Ellis Johnson, Kentucky, guards.

State sports fans will recall that Ellis Johnson was one of the Kentucky backfield aces in the Duke-Kentucky game last fall.

Freshman Electives

Dean A. W. Hobbs of the school of liberal arts announced yesterday the following electives available to freshmen who have passed mathematics 1 and 2, and fulfilled all other requirements for the first two quarters: botany 1, chemistry 1, geology 11, mathematics 13, and history 12.

TENNIS TEAM TO TACKLE STATE IN SEASON'S OPENER

Tar Heels, National Intercollegiate Champions in 1932, Card Heavy Schedule.

Carolina's varsity tennis team, national collegiate champions of last season, will open this spring's schedule with a dual meet against N. C. State here April 5. The next match will be against Wake Forest at Wake Forest April 7, and then the Tar Heels move on to Pinehurst, where they will compete in the united north and south championship which takes place April 10-15.

Returning here April 16, Coach Kenfield's boys will participate in the state intercollegiate tourney, which will be run off here April 17-19. This event will be followed by dual meets with Davidson here April 20, Duke there the next day, Duke here April 25, and Wake Forest here April 26.

Following these meets the national champs will make their annual northern tour, which begins on April 29 with Navy and ends against Brown May 7. The Tar Heels take on Navy at Annapolis to start the trip off. Then on May 1 they encounter Maryland at College Park. From there they move on to New York where they will match shots with N. Y. U. May 2 and Army at West Point the next day. The Tar Heels face Yale the next day at New Haven in a feature match. Following this on successive days the squad will meet Harvard at Cambridge, and Brown at Providence.

The Tar Heels will return to Chapel Hill just in time to face

Co-ed Cagers To Meet Campbell Here Tomorrow

The first co-ed basketball game with an out-of-town team in the history of the University will be staged tomorrow evening when the freshman co-eds meet the representatives of Campbell College in Bynum gym at 7:00 o'clock. The game is being sponsored by the two sororities, Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega.

Basketball has always been an important item among the girls on the campus and active competition has grown up between the two sororities. The Pi Phis defeated the Chi Omegas in their annual game the first part of this quarter; and both teams have played the Chapel Hill high girl's team. Now, under guiding hand of Coach Mrs. J. G. Beard, director of co-ed physical education, the members of both teams plus several freshman non-Greeks have been combined into a freshman team.

The starting line-up, as announced by Mrs. Beard, will be as follows: Cowles, A., and Grisette, who is captain of the Chi Omega team, forwards; Pridgen, center; Rawlings, Smoot, and Helms, guards. The substitutes are: Coffield, Pike, Jacobson and Cummings.

There will be a general admission of ten cents.

TRACK STARS TO BE ENTERTAINED BY SPORTS CLUB

Monogram Club to Distribute Lapel Badges to Three Hundred Visiting Athletes.

With more than 300 visiting athletes here for the mammoth Southern conference indoor meet Saturday, the University Monogram club announced yesterday through its president, John Phipps, that a definite plan had been adopted by the club for the entertainment of the athletes.

President Phipps stated that blue lapel badges with white ribbons attached had been obtained. On the ribbons appear the following inscription, "Guests of the U. N. C. Monogram club." These badges are to be distributed to every member of the visiting teams to wear during their stay here.

Groups Asked To Aid

The athletes will be allowed the privileges of the game room in Graham Memorial and other forms of entertainment are being arranged. The Monogram club appeals to individual students and to the various campus organizations to do what they can for any of these athletes so that their visit might be made as pleasant as possible.

is never extreme. If you look around at the people who dress in good taste, you'll see that there's never anything "flashy" about what they wear.

Come to think of it...

it's very much the same with cigarettes.

No cigarette should ever be "strong." That means that they should never be too rich or over-seasoned—not harsh or "bitey."

The taste of a Chesterfield is just as near right as we know how to make it.

Not tasteless or flat, not too highly flavored for steady smoking, but with just the right kinds of tobaccos blended the one right way to satisfy.

Chesterfields are mild. They taste better.

Senator Walsh Dies

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, speeding to Washington with his Cuban bride of a week to become attorney-general in the Roosevelt cabinet, died of a heart attack at 7:10 o'clock yesterday morning while aboard an Atlantic Coast line train near Wilson. The body was removed from the train at Rocky Mount where it was prepared for burial, and then sent on to Washington. President-elect Roosevelt, in New York, spoke of the death of Senator Walsh yesterday as a grievous loss to the whole country.

Highway and Prison Bill

Devoting more than an hour of yesterday's session to discussion of House amendments to the bill to consolidate the prison and highway departments of the state, the Senate refused to concur in the changes and the measure was referred to a conference committee to iron out the differences.

Major General Kawahara, commanding the sixteenth Japanese infantry, swept through the city of Lingyuan yesterday morning on the heels of the retreating Chinese, and marched on toward Jehol.

South Carolina May 9. Then for the next three days they will compete in the Southern conference meet which will be run off here. This event will close the season for Carolina's varsity tennis forces, unless Coach Kenfield books other meets after that date.

At present the prospects for this spring's squad look bright, with all of last year's players, with the exception of Bryan Grant, back in fold again this year. Several members of last year's freshman team should bolster the varsity's chances of winning another national title this season. Some of those with a good chance of earning a berth on the team are: Lenoir Wright, Dave Morgan, Wilmer Hines, Harley Shuford, Bill Minor, Harvey Harris, John Dillard, Richard Willis, and Walter Levitan.

Courses Of Six Science Departments Surveyed

from engineering practice. Work well taught by Dr. Winsor who gives stiff quizzes.

Mathematics 3E and 13. The fundamentals of analytical geometry. Requires an exceptional amount of studying. An inspiring course under Dr. Hill. Mathematics 24-25. A course in calculus offering the first taste of higher mathematics to the student. Professor Hoyle knows too much to teach this course to the average student. A new principle which is difficult to comprehend.

Mathematics 56-57. Good courses in advanced geometry and algebra. Winsor is much too cynical to teach these. Beneficial for those who plan to teach mathematics.

Mathematics 121. A fine survey of the principles of mechanics from the mathematical viewpoint. Dr. Linker does all the work.

Mathematics 131. An excellent course, prerequisite for higher mathematics, taught capably by Dr. Hill. A detailed study of equations of higher degree and allied principles.

Mathematics 141. Stiff. Mainly for students of engineering and those intending to major in mathematics. Dry under Dr. Henderson.

Mathematics 151-152. Hard but excellent courses in projective geometry under Dr. Lasley. The beginning of higher mathematics.

Mathematics 161. Dr. Browne makes this hard course in analytical geometry of space understandable. The course applies elementary analytical geometry to three dimensional space. Interesting.

Mathematics 171. Difficult, advanced course in calculus. Completes work given in mathematics 25. Good under Dr. Mackie.

PHYSICS DEPARTMENT

Dr. Otto Stuhlman of the physics department states that service rendered by his department can be divided into three major groups:

1. "To provide courses which survey the general field of science, giving the student who does not desire a 'tool use' of the subject an opportunity to understand and cultivate an appreciation of his twentieth century technical environment.

2. "As a service to other major scientific University groups. Here the attempt is made to teach the fundamental facts and laws of physics, so that the student may be left in a position to extend his knowledge with reasonable confidence and success by his own efforts as his future interests develop.

3. "To introduce the student to a specialized field of knowledge in which he may find an outlet for his innate inclination for experimenting, thus making it possible for him to exercise his natural powers of observation, imagination, initiative and ingenuity."

Physics 21. General physics survey. Made fairly interesting by Dr. Plyler who makes the student work out difficulties. Requires a lot of textbook study to get a decent grade. Over-emphasis on problems at expense of discussion of theory.

Physics 22. A continuation of the above course under Dr. Stuhlman. Delivers lectures in spectacular and popular style with interesting demonstrations. Considerable application is required to get even a moderately high grade.

Physics 41. This course in astronomy under Dr. Fussler made doubly interesting by his ability to put things across and through his interest in the subject as a "hobby." Designed to be cultural and descriptive rather than mathematical. Includes actual study of the sky by telescope on the roof of Phillips hall.

CHEMISTRY DEPARTMENT
Dr. J. M. Bell gave the purposes of the chemistry department in an interview last year as being an endeavor to give the student something of cultural value as well as to prepare him for various professions.

"There are many students who take only the elementary courses. Such students do not go deep into the subject but are able to gain much in a cultural way by learning the relation of chemistry to the world around us. The student learns to appreciate the many changes which are taking place around us.

"The department of chemistry also serves as a service department by preparing the students for the many professions such as medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, etc. Those who go deeper into the subject may become professional chemists, teachers of the subject, or research chemists."

Chemistry 1-2. Survey course in general inorganic chemistry which covers a broad field. Good lecture course; crisp lab. Interesting for those who like science; otherwise better left alone. Dr. Bell lectures in an interesting manner; Dr. Cameron is a good chemist but expatiates on himself too much; Dr. Wheeler won't succeed in keeping class awake.

Chemistry 31. This analytical course involves good laboratory technique, a modicum of luck and some knowledge of chemistry. Dobbins is very thorough and likable in his slow and painstaking way. If nothing else, student will learn from him that "there's a right way and a wrong way."

Chemistry 41-42. Laboratory course in elementary quantitative analysis. More math than chemistry. In these Dr. Dobbins is rather dull but just.

Chemistry 61-62. These courses in organic chemistry are essentially for chemists or pre-med students. Boring under Wheeler; interesting under Bost. Not as hard as they look but require work.

Chemistry 71. A technical course on the chemistry of foods. One of the most interesting courses in the department due to Dr. Bost. Good course to follow 61. Has more practical value than any other course in department.

ZOOLOGY DEPARTMENT

The aims of the zoology department acquired in a similar interview with Dr. H. V. Wilson are:

"The interest in living things is universal. In simpler states of society the interests are elementary and practical, largely concerned in learning what plants and animals are useful and harmful. The decorative habit and desire for amusement also tend to increase human interest in other creatures. With the progress of civilization we learn that these things have tissues and organs much alike in all organisms. We thus begin to make experimental use of any suitable animal or plant in order to ascertain the laws to which the behavior of living matter conforms.

"Thus natural history passes into biology. Zoology and botany conceived in the broad sense are the two halves of biology, separated only because of the immense number of facts. Their ultimate aims are the same. Like other sciences, zoology has its applications. In our courses we endeavor to point this out, since many people find the greatest interest not in learning the fundamental processes of nature but in learning facts that are of direct economic or hygienic use."

Zoology 41a-41b. Lecture and laboratory course in the elements of anatomy. The lab is interesting and practical but the lectures are dry.

Zoology 42a. Lecture and lab course on invertebrate zoology heredity, environment and evolution. Taught by Dr. Wilson who handles it in an uninteresting manner and gives more dictation than actual instruction. Difficult to make a good grade.

Zoology 42b. Wealth of material on invertebrate zoology presented in a detailed manner. Has practical value to students in a classification of animals.

BOTANY DEPARTMENT

According to Dr. W. C. Coker, "the main objective of the botany department is of course to teach botany. Botany is a fundamental science in biology and is best adapted as an introduction to all the sciences of life. Fundamental activities of living creatures are most easily realized and demonstrated in plants and a study of plants is the best approach to the problems of medicine and pharmacy. As a cultural subject, it leads to a clear understanding of many of the problems of social life today as agriculture, horticulture, plant breeding, hygiene and sanitary engineering."

Botany 1. Course in general botany. Includes lab and field work. An attempt is made to cover entirely too much work and Coker is inclined to emphasize unimportant details too much and make the student dig it out for himself. Totten lectures in a vague sort of way.

Botany 41-43. More advanced course in the structure and classification of plants. Totten requires more work than Coker or Couch. Practical course with a good lab. Helps to give an appreciation of nature.

GEOLOGY DEPARTMENT
According to Dr. Collier Cobb who was head of the geology department for a number of years, the object of the department since 1891 has been "to get our students trained in such a way as to give them a broader view of life, and to aid them in developing our natural resources, and incidentally to get a living while doing so."

Geology 5. An elementary course for the students in the commerce school. Too much outside work.

Geology 11. A comprehensive course about nature in general. Gives a deeper apprecia-

R. A. PALMER ADDRESSES ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS

The feature of the Wednesday night meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was a lecture and demonstration of modern and future lighting effects presented by Roy A. Palmer, illuminating engineer of the Southern Public Utilities company of Charlotte.

Before his illustrated lecture, Palmer gave a brief history of the development of theories of light, and their application to the needs of man. He then showed the more familiar applications of white light, followed by a demonstration with color effects. Palmer concluded his lecture by demonstrating advance methods of artistic illumination which have just been developed in the laboratories.

tion of nature. Under MacCarthy is one of the most lively science courses given. The lectures are dry unless the student already has an interest in the subject. Poor lab instruction.

Geology 12. Little duller than Geology 11. Lab work harder in proportion to the lecture. Entirely too much memory work which is soon forgotten. Requires drudgery.

Geology 41. A "crip" with Dr. Cobb who doesn't require exhaustive work. Goes into the history of geological science and is mainly a lot of vague information.

Geology 43-44. Profitable courses in mineralogy under Dr. MacCarthy. Gives a good background for the study of the source and use of minerals. Well presented. Of special importance to geologists.

Geology 51-52. Good general course in industrial and commercial geography. More memory work than thought required. Good course for summer school.

of our splendid institution should be let on the boxing team. I am getting tired of writing letters on this subject, but I am going to keep it up until they are let on the team, by gum, if I have to stay in school until I am old, and tottering in intellect.

—Z. K. COMIKLE.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Well, I guess you have heard the news about how that woman's association met and passed a resolution condemning "the writer of certain letters intended to hold up the women students to ridicule." I guess you must know how unjust this accusation is and how deeply I must have been shocking on hearing of it.

It just goes to show that the forerunners of a modern era are just about always martyrs.

I certainly hate to stop my series of letters before I have convinced the authorities that the co-eds should be allowed to be on the boxing team, but I guess it is just as well, for now I can return to my subject of last term: "Should Negroes be admitted to the University?"

I will send you a letter on this subject, continuing my arguments of last term, in a few days.—Z. K. COMIKLE.

COUNCIL REPORTS STUDENT CONDUCT ABOVE REPROACH

Administration, Police Force, Townspeople, and Others Join In Commending Students.

Student conduct in general during the present year has been on a very high plane and far above reproach, according to a statement made yesterday by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, in reporting a summary of work done by the present student council.

This opinion, Weeks said, has been corroborated by statements from members of the University administration, faculty, faculty executive committee, local merchants, and local public officials. A member of the local police force professed that he had never observed better student conduct in general during his thirty years here.

Observe Honor System

"The observance of the honor system has also been better than in past years," Weeks asserted yesterday. "The faculty executive committee and the student council both have handled fewer cases than formerly."

Thirty-five cases have been handled by the student council during its term. Persons placed on conduct and on drinking and conduct probation during the remainder of their stay in the University headed the list with five offenders each, while drinking probation during the remainder of the offenders' stay was next with four offenders.

Other decisions include: two

GEOLOGISTS WILL INSPECT METEOR SCARS IN STATE

Faculty to Start Work During Holidays; Funds Donated by Rockefeller Foundation.

During the spring holidays, members of the geological staff of the University expect to test by geophysical instruments and surface inspection the probable meteoric origin of the numerous and huge symmetrical depressions which occur over a considerable area of the coastal plain country in North and South Carolina.

The geology department has recently received a grant from the Rockefeller foundation to be used in the investigation of these so-called meteor craters.

Scientific World Startled

These depressions have been recognized for many years, but not until the recent making of aerial photographs have they been revealed in their true value. The scientific world has been startled lately by the possibility of their being of meteoric origin. Airplane photographs recently published in the New York Times show that a large percentage of the depressions have their axis trending in the same direction, and that they are, in general, more highly rimmed on the south-east side by sand deposits.

The work, which is to be started by the geology department during the spring holidays, is to be continued during the early part of the summer. The results of the investigation are awaited with much scientific interest.

BANKING HOLIDAY IS DECLARED FOR BANKS IN STATE

General Assembly Authorizes Banks To Limit Withdrawals; Not All Banks Take Advantage.

The North Carolina general assembly yesterday enacted into law a measure giving the commissioner of banks dictatorial powers to authorize banks to limit withdrawals of deposits or to suspend business. This legislation does not apply to new deposits.

Almost immediately several banks took advantage of this ruling. The North Carolina Bank and Trust company, whose headquarters are in Greensboro, announced a limitation of five percent on all withdrawals from all its branches. The First National Bank of Asheville did likewise. The majority of the banks in North Carolina, however, announced that they would not take advantage of this bill.

SCOUT SEMINAR TO CLOSE TODAY

Last Day's Program to Include Speeches by Faculty Members on Many Subjects.

The scout executive seminar of region six which has been in session here since Thursday will be concluded today. The executives enjoyed an interesting program yesterday with talks by several members of the University faculty.

Professor K. C. Frazer of the history department began the session with an interesting discussion of "International Relations." Following this was an address by Russell M. Grumman of the University extension division on "Adult Education."

Brooks Speaks on Heredity

Lee M. Brooks of the sociology department chose as his subject "Heredity and Environment." "A World Language" was the subject of an address by Professor E. C. Metzenthin of the German department. F. K. Cameron of the chemistry department closed the afternoon session with an address on "Cellulose." Last night the group were guests of the Alpha Phi Omega scouting fraternity at a banquet held in Graham Memorial.

Today the executives will hear a talk by Dean Dudley D. Carroll on "Isms" and a "Book Review" by C. C. Crittenden of the history department. As a conclusion to their conference they will be the guests of the University at the Southern Conference indoor track meet.

Writing Class Social

Turning aside from class-work for a night of fun, the University's creative writing class, directed by Phillips Russell, will meet in Graham Memorial Monday night for a program of social entertainment.

Student Convocation

A general convocation of University students has been scheduled by the University administration for assembly period, next Monday in Memorial hall. President Frank P. Graham will be the speaker and will discuss matters of great importance. All members of the student body have been urged to attend.

Freshman and sophomore attendance will be checked as usual.

Two Student Publications And Town Weekly Begun In March

Daily Tar Heel, Buccaneer, and Chapel Hill Weekly All Celebrate Their Birthdays This Month; Period Was Also One of Town And University Growth and Expansion.

March seems to be a month for general inter-publication felicitation. The DAILY TAR HEEL having recently congratulated itself on its fortieth birthday recognizes the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Chapel Hill Weekly. March 1, 1923 saw the first issue of Louis Graves' weekly sheet which in a decade has achieved remarkable nation-wide renown as one of the most distinctive representatives of its particular type of journalism.

At about the same time that editor Graves was beginning to dispense weekly news to the citizens of Chapel Hill, a group of campus humorists erupted violently in ink, paper, and drawing to produce the first issue of the Buccaneer. Although the present staff is much too pre-occupied with the fascinating business of reputation-cracking for the next issue to be aware of the fact, March represents the tenth birthday of the humor publication.

Town Was Developing

Such large scale development in the journalistic field ten years ago was accompanied by similar enterprise in the University and Chapel Hill. News files of the period indicate that the town was in the midst of a boom period that included such items as the building of a new Baptist church and numerous private residences, an appreciable increase in the sale of automobiles, and soaring real estate prices.

Optimism was quite evidently the keynote of the period. L. R. Wilson, former University librarian, had just announced a campaign to raise $100,000 for a new Methodist church, the total cost of which would be not less than $200,000. Moreover the Episcopal church and the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity both showed themselves eager to erect new edifices.

University Expanded

The University itself was the leader in the extensive building program. Having been granted $1,650,000 as a building fund by the state legislature, the trustees' building committee was deliberating as to how the money should be disposed of. The Chapel Hill Weekly of March 15, 1923 speculated as to the disposal of the sum. "Will there be a woman's building? A geology building? A chemistry building?" Moreover, the legislature had also yielded to the University $650,000 for maintenance. The present budget recommendation includes not a penny for improvements.

The bulk of the $1,650,000 was eventually used in the construction of the lower quadrangle dormitories and most of the buildings between South and the new library.

The enrollment of the University for the year 1922-1923 was set at 1954 students, while the current number of resident students is 2745. This, however, is almost 250 less students than were enrolled last year.

Tar Heel Reviews Courses In German And Journalism

Dr. Toy States Aim of Department Is to Acquaint Students With German Thoughts and Ideals; Journalism Aims to Give Fundamentals of Newspaper Writing and Reporting.

Dr. Walter D. Toy, head of the German department, outlined the purpose of that academic division in the following statement to THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

"The German department of the University feels that its contribution to the life of the state should be the strengthening of its culture. This aim is sought by acquainting our students at first hand with the thoughts and ideals of great German thinkers."

"The first approach to such a sympathetic understanding must come through a mastery of the language itself. Since our schools do not at present send many students already able to read German accurately, we are compelled to supply this deficiency here in our elementary courses. We hope that in time the center of gravity will be shifted from the elementary to the advanced courses of study."

"The study of the language itself is valuable in stimulating clearness of thinking, not to mention the practical use of the language in research work in biology, chemistry, medicine, and other sciences."

SUMMER SCHOOL TO BE CONTINUED DESPITE FINANCES

University Officials Deny Rumor That Summer Work Will Be Abandoned.

Officials of the University yesterday denied the current rumor on the campus that summer school for the coming summer would be discontinued. It has been definitely decided that the institution will be continued but no plans regarding it have been worked out.

The rumor of discontinuance was circulated during the past week. From information available at the present, it is expected summer school will be conducted on a greatly reduced scale according to action of the General Assembly on appropriations to the University. The report of the advisory budget commission made recommendations for summer work at the University.

LITTLE SYMPHONY TO PLAY TONIGHT

Lamar Stringfield to Direct Group of Musicians in Concert at Southern Pines.

The little symphony of the North Carolina Symphony society, with Lamar Stringfield as director, will appear tonight in the high school auditorium of Southern Pines at 8:30 o'clock under the auspices of the music club of Southern Pines.

This is the second concert of the little symphony which was formed in January and appeared at the Playmakers' theatre January 20. The concert will feature a composition by Nathaniel Burt, Prelude Aubade.

Play Hazelman's Work

Burt, a resident of Southern Pines and now a student at Princeton University, was first discovered as a composer by Stringfield who presented the premier performance of the Prelude Aubade here January 20. Also included on the program will be Herbert Hazelman's well-known Danse Moronique. Hazelman and Burt are of the same age and shared honors as youthful composers on the January concert of the little symphony when Hazelman's Logy March was also given a first performance.

Other selections on tonight's program include the overture to Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, Andante from Beethoven's fifth symphony, La Media Noche by Albert Stoessel, and Cripple Creek Suite from the Southern Mountain Suite of Lamar Stringfield.

Lent Services Conducted

Services during the period of Lent, which began Wednesday, will be conducted every afternoon at 5:15 o'clock in the Episcopal church, except on Friday and Saturday, when the service will be at 3:30 o'clock.

Following a policy of several years' standing, the DAILY TAR HEEL will discontinue publication for the examination and subsequent vacation periods with tomorrow's issue.

This policy allows members of the staff sufficient time to prepare for examinations.

Publication will be resumed with the issue of Tuesday, March 21.

NORMAN THOMAS SAYS CAPITALISM DOOMED TO FAIL

Speech in Assembly Points Out Weak Spots in Economic System of Business.

A large group of students, faculty members, and townsfolk, yesterday gathered in Memorial hall during assembly period and heard Norman Thomas, ex-candidate for President from the Socialist party, deliver a short talk which as he inferred, was a preface to his scheduled speech last night.

The main point in Thomas' talk was that the era of capitalistic nationalism is drawing to a close. The power of capitalism is gone forever, asserted Thomas, because it and its attendant machinery was accepted and now the consequence of that rule which is collectivism must be accepted. "It is more reasonable to expect a social system to die than to continue," Thomas said, "but we must look forward to what shall be next."

Lack of Leadership Blamed

One of the surest signs that point to the end of capitalism, according to Thomas, is the psychological sign. The breakdown of any leaders it ever had, and the lack of genuine leadership at any time contribute most to the downfall of capitalism. He cited as an example the case of Ivar Krueger, the American-trained Swedish capitalist, as giving away to the depression even though he was one of the capitalistic leaders. Samuel In-

STUDENT UNION'S DIRECTORS FAVOR BUILDING WALKS

Board Seeks Student Opinion On Plan to Pay for Half of Construction Expenses.

The Union Forum at a brief meeting Thursday night recommended that the Graham Memorial board of directors offer to pay as much as one-half of the cost of the proposed walk from the union building to Battle-Vance-Pettigrew dormitories.

Plans for this walk, calling for a circle and the relaying of present walks in the court between Graham Memorial and the dormitories, have been approved by the grounds committee. No provision for it can be made in the University's appropriation, and for the construction to be undertaken within the next year some organization on the campus must finance it.

Seek Student Opinion

The board of directors for the building, in meeting Wednesday, discussed the question and decided to get views of representative students before proceeding with the matter. One dissenting vote was cast in the Union Forum.

Should the board of directors accept the recommendation and offer to pay for one-half the cost of the walk, other campus organizations will be approached to aid in financing the project.

Other action taken by the group Thursday was the consideration of informal entertainments similar to those last fall.

L. L. Hutchison was elected to fill the vacancy on the board of directors of Graham Memorial as representative of the Union Forum.

Now I Lay Me Down—

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Shortly after noon today Franklin Delano Roosevelt will repeat these words at the insistence of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. As the echo of the final word in this solemn oath dies away, a new president of the United States comes into office. Thousands gathered from every section of the country and diplomatic potentates of scores of lands beyond the seas will stand with heads bared in reverence to a ceremony sublime in the customs of the American people. Washington will revel afterward, as Washington does so nobly every four years.

But the shoulders of America's first citizen bear no light burdens. Roosevelt's election in the face of the greatest social catastrophe America has ever known is both unique and significant in the history of the nation. He is the first candidate ever placed into office in the midst of conflict, when the people rejected present leadership for a "new deal."

Problems of so gigantic proportions that for their seriousness, they would seem to be tales from the fables of Paul Bunyan, confront the gentleman from New York who today becomes the first citizen of the land. When F.D.R. lays his weary head on the pillow in the great Lincoln bed in the mansion of presidents tonight, we doubt his thoughts will be filled with the pageantry of an inauguration.—D.C.S.

Joe College Still Lives

The legislature may cut the University's appropriations; the football team may have the worst season in years; the basketball team may be defeated in the semi-finals of the Southern Conference meet, but the students will excel in some form of sport.

Thursday night at the presentation of Robinhood they proved their true worth as Carolina gentlemen. They showed that though lack of funds lower the scholastic standing and the athletic teams go down in disgrace they could still hold up their heads in pride and make the best paper airplanes that ever sailed through the healthful atmosphere of Chapel Hill. Showing that as college students they were superior in mind and artistry to any high school freshman, they deftly folded these tiny bits of paper with the minimum of effort and launched them forth into space, thereby proving the superiority of mind over matter.

It mattered little that numerous people were hindered in their enjoyment of the performance, for these aeronautical engineers triumphed over the raging elements of Memorial Hall. It made no difference that the equilibrium of staid professors was upset by having one of these cunning little marvels of mental ingenuity tap them lightly upon the outer covering of massive cerebellums; these plagiarizing investors were carrying the University of North Carolina to the heights of glory.

The spirit of Joe College is not dead; it is only entombed in the minds of these infant prodigies who have come off to school before they have been entirely desiccated behind their auditory organs. Let us give three rousing cheers for the craftsmanship displayed in the making of these puny machines and for the minute mentality of their makers who have no realization that the majority of the audience at Robinhood was in attendance for the purpose of being entertained from the stage and not from within its own ranks.—F.P.G.

Something to Sober

The "Punchdrunks"

The recent death of the prizefighter Schaaf at the hands of Primo Carnera has caused a discussion of head injuries in boxing that college authorities would do well to consider. Death as a result of college boxing is almost unknown and serious injuries to health or body are offset by the rigorous and thorough training required.

Nevertheless there is a grave and undeniable danger to the brain of the boxer that manifests itself in the condition known as "punchdrunk." While college boxing rarely causes this condition in its more aggravated forms, it does produce it in degrees perfectly apparent to the layman. Many college boxers have earned the name "punchdrunk" called in fun but nevertheless a recognition that he is acting in a way peculiar enough to draw the attention of his fellows.

According to the noted sports authority Grantland Rice "head punching has left in its wake a long line of shambling, goofy, punchdrunk fighters who walk about on their heels in the paper doll ward with badly scrambled brains." Rice has had experience enough to know what he is talking about. The college boxer, to be sure, fights only three or four rounds, but where the professional fights several fights a year the college athlete crowds from eight to ten into the short boxing season of a few months. That young men preparing for the ever more difficult battle of life should be sent forth with a handicap such as this condition does not seem within the true purpose of college athletics to foster.

College boxing is a fine sport and draws a huge number of ardent fans. It has qualities that make it desirable and beneficial to boxer and to school. However, if it is permitted to so "scramble" the brains of young men as to handicap them in other activities no benefits in the world can justify its existence. It would be foolish and in vain to demand the abolition of college boxing. It is too firmly entrenched in the hearts of sport loving men everywhere. It would be practicable and wise, however, to take more pains than have been taken in the past to insure the athlete against this danger. Perhaps some means of protection might be devised or the number of competitions be limited. At any rate it is the duty of colleges everywhere to prevent, despite the indignation of fans and athletes, young men from permanently injuring their mental equipment for a few short years of empty glory or the plaudits of enthusiasts who are as quick to forget their names as they are to overlook their suffering.—J.F.A.

With Contemporaries

Education A La Mode

At Texarkana Junior College in Texas, a 21-year-old honor student, member of the student council and football player, has recently offered five years of his services in after-college life for the $3,000 he needs to pay his expenses through the University of Texas. The student, M.J.B., believes that he cannot work his way through college and still get full value out of his studies and for this reason has placed himself on the auction block.

Among the many ways of evaluating a college education, a five year bondage looms high. It is first class barter. It is an attempt to put into practice an ideal. An ambitious student attempts to create a scholarship for himself. Many are the embryo students who have dreamed of such a plan. Now a student who will stand back of his convictions arises from among us. It is surprising that more plans of this nature have not been brought to light before this date.

This attempt at a method for obtaining an education should be noted as an ideal incentive for those fortunate enough not to be compelled to exercise their ingenuity along these lines. The best years of a person's life are spent in college. What shall determine the price that he should pay? Lucky is the individual who can determine his own price. Statisticians tend to measure education in terms of monetary units, scientists in knowledge gained. At unmeasured intervals there pops up an ingenious individual who fixes a price. Is it worth it?—Syracuse Daily Orange.

"American education has failed to produce outstanding leaders. Because so much time has been consumed in lifting masses of average students to a somewhat higher level of culture, it has been impossible to supply the foundations necessary to build character for leadership," Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, told his faculty recently.—The Notre Dame Scholastic.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Patriotic

The best depression joke of the year is pulled on this department, which seldom lays itself open to practical punsters and fourth-rate wits. This, we feel sure, is irony, for in a letter from home proclaiming that "there will be no more money for a time because the bank has failed," we found a nice little silk handkerchief with a border of red, white, and blue.

President

Franklin D. Roosevelt, who, shortly before noon today, will be the government's biggest shot-at, has shown unusual tact in picking his cabinet, this department is inclined to believe. There are, for instance, two Episcopalians, one Congregationalist, two Catholics, two Methodists, and three Presbyterians, listed in the final choice. We will have a two-step writer, a mining executive (we haven't learned our lesson yet), a sociologist, a lawyer, and three misguided independent Republicans who See The Light.

Phrenologists

Mr. Charles DeLancey Allen can feel your head, or maybe just look at it, and make you blush. Lecturer on the Practical Psychology of Simplexes for the American Institute of Phrenology, 10 Riverside Drive West New York City (whew), Mr. Allen travels about the country stopping off here and there to speak to college students, Rotary clubs, Lions clubs, Kiwanis clubs, etc., on "Heads, Faces and Occupations."

In Chapel Hill a few days ago, Mr. Allen called around at several fraternity houses and dormitories, where, for the price of one thin dime per member, he would read the head of any member of the group. This scientifically skeptic department (which does not believe that the earth is round) carefully avoided Mr. Allen, but we collected a little data on that gentleman which we pass on to the public.

Phrenology, the hypothesis that mental faculties and traits of character are shown by the conformation of the skull, has many opponents. From what we understand, it's the ability to tell from the formation of the cranium just how thrifty, moral, crafty, willful, factual, reasoning, and—ah—loving the subject is. We understand that you really haven't much sense if more than one-third of you head is in back of your ears.

By the bumps or sectors on the skull, Mr. Allen can tell to what extent you are possessed of certain mental and spiritual qualities. If your head juts out over your eyebrows it means that there are plenty of facts stored up in your brain. A bump on the top of the head indicates a total lack of morals (Mr. Allen once felt the head of a Princeton sophomore and found three large bumps on the top of his skull, proving him an atheist, which he was).

Allen has examined scores of famous men. He told Justice White of the U. S. Supreme court that he had a highly developed sense of justice. T. R., he said, had a receding head and couldn't think originally. He was a driver, though. While Wilson was president of Princeton, Allen told him to go in for politics, probably phrenologizing the wild look in his eye.

Hoover, Mr. Allen found, had the wide head of a dynamic business man but not much push, which is by the way of being an anti-climax.

The Musical University

By Vermont C. Royster

Presenting a most delightful way to spend what might otherwise have been a dull evening, the Boston Light Opera company appeared in Memorial hall Thursday night in a slightly revised version of DeKoven's famous comic opera, Robinhood. The performance given by the Bostonians scarcely deserves to be called first-rate, yet viewed as second-rate it was thoroughly enjoyable.

It was a bit unfortunate that the two leading characters should each have been lacking in some quality essential to a convincing portrayal of their roles. This put themselves and the rest of the company at a distinct disadvantage which it was difficult to overcome.

Mr. Simonds, an old stand-by of the company, was, because of a slight excess avoirdupois, a bit un-romantic in the title role of the dashing hero of Sherwood forest. The influence of the cinema on the American theatre-going public has developed a taste for tall, slender heroes, flavored with a dash of Byronic fire. Mr. Simonds possessed none of these qualities, and his voice, though pleasant enough, was not of sufficient excellence to offset such striking defects.

Miss Erdman, the buxom lady who held the leading feminine role, was even more disappointing than Mr. Simonds. Her fault, however, lay not with her appearance but with her voice. She possessed a good range and sang with apparent ease, yet her voice was too nasal and was lacking in fullness and depth of tone for her to create the illusion of her part.

In Thursday night's performance, as so frequently happens in the theatre, two secondary characters carried the show and dragged it up from the dangers of boredom. In this instance it was Hudson Carmody as the Sheriff and Miss Desrosiers as Annabelle who provided the most entertaining moments of the evening. Mr. Carmody, though by no means an excellent bass, presented an amusing picture as a nineteenth century villain and gave personality to his character. From the moment he appeared on the scene in the first act he held the audience completely, and his interpretation of a drunk when in the guise of a tinker rivalled the antics of the once famous Leon Errol.

Robinhood itself is considered America's finest comic opera. It is a humorous, romantic bit, but its real charm lies in the wealth of its score. DeKoven, the composer, is known almost entirely for his operas and from them have come many popular melodies. The strength of the minor characters lies largely in the fact that DeKoven gives to them some of his most powerful songs.

The most famous songs of Thursday's opera occur in the second act. Littlejohn is given an opportunity to display himself in the rollicking drinking song with which it opens. Melville Crowell, who carried the role, had possibly the best voice in the troupe, and his rendition of "Brown October Ale" with the chorus was excellent. A few moments later the Sheriff and his men enter and sing the "Tinker's Chorus," a number which has recently seen a revival by the New York Male Chorus.

It is also in this same act that Allan-a-Dale sings "Oh Promise Me," the best known of all DeKoven's songs. Although Miss Aubens was far from convincing in the role as a whole, she delivered herself creditably on this solo and was called back for an encore. Yet it lacked much of the feeling with which it impressed those of our grandmothers who heard it sung by Marie Stone or Louise Homer.

Miss Desrosiers, as Annabelle, gave her best rendition of the evening in her lament at the opening of the third act, which she sang accompanied by the curfew bell. The third act, incidentally, underwent a slight change under the Bostonians. In the original version it is Robinhood himself who brings the message from the king, but in Thursday night's performance it was altered, apparently to shorten the act.

The choral work, especially in the opening chorus and finale, was excellent despite the fact that the performers were at a distinct disadvantage through their lack of numbers and the absence of an orchestra. Mr. Boardman, who assisted at the piano, acquitted himself admirably, but it was impossible to create the desired effect with piano alone.

On the whole the company was entertaining, though not up to the standard to be expected from the Boston Light Opera company.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor

DAILY TAR HEEL:

In justice to the English department, I should like to say a word about the course in History of the English Language (English 170), as evaluated in Sunday's TAR HEEL:

The criticism, "difficult for those who have not had Old and Middle English," may to a certain extent be justified. I have myself wished at times that two different courses might be given in successive years: one for undergraduates, in which the material would be presented on broad historic lines; and another for graduate students, where the material would be studied intensively.

I think your reviewer and others as well will recognize that this course when offered as a "bracket" course presents more than the usual difficulties of such courses. A junior with a few elementary language courses may find himself sitting alongside a graduate student in English philology.

The department has done its best to meet this situation. Naturally we are anxious to avoid the impression of offering a "pipe" course. But the Old and Middle English extracts studied are presented with translation attached. The selections themselves have charm to any one with an antiquarian sense, the series representing the whole chronological development of the language from Caedmon to Menckin. In the examination the intensified questions for graduate students are not required of undergraduates.

I have, of course, some misgivings as to the propriety of thus defending one of my courses, but I am willing to risk this to keep prospective students from getting the wrong impression. The enrollment in the course has always been sufficiently large, so that this is no bid for students. But I should regret that any student should miss the opportunity of seeing for himself the romance and glamour of our linguistic development because of a mistaken feeling that the material is beyond his capacity.

Everything In Readiness For Indoor Games Today

Tin Can Will Become Panorama Of Best Competitors in Track Events in Conference.

CLEMSON WILL NOT ENTER

Nine Teams Remain in Field With Virginia and Duke Favored to Win Title.

Carolina's Tin Can will be the scene of the fourth annual Southern Conference indoor games this afternoon and night starting at 2:30 o'clock and finishing sometime after 10:30. Everything is in readiness for the meet, accommodations have been made for all visiting athletes, the Tin Can is in the best condition for all the track and field events, and arrangements have been made to take care of a big crowd.

The latest announcement is that Clemson has withdrawn from the meet which will eliminate Lynn, crack Clemson sprinter. This leaves nine Southern Conference teams entered, North Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State, South Carolina, Virginia, V. M. I., V. P. I., Washington and Lee, and Maryland. The freshman meet will include teams from the same schools along with several first year teams from non-conference schools. As announced yesterday the non-conference varsity meet has been called off.

Virginia and Duke Favored

Virginia and Duke are the favorites to take the title as both have strong experienced teams. Duke took second place in the outdoor meet last spring with a five man team and four of these men will be in the meet today. Fulmer, Brownlee, Bradsher, and Lewis, besides the strength of the rest of the team which will compete. Virginia is sending a big team of about fifteen good performers, headed by Captain Lauck, Cary, Dudley, Everett, Coles, and Johnson, and has an excellent chance to take first honors.

Carolina's Tar Heels, defending champions in the meet, have an inexperienced sophomore team for the most part. A whole lot depends on how these second year men come through in their first varsity meet. Hawthorne, in the hurdles, Higby in the 440-run and broad jump, Williamson in the 880-run, Jensen and Louis Sullivan, in the two mile run, and Hodges in the shot put are favorites to come through for the Tar Heels.

List of Entrants

Due to errors in yesterday's list of Carolina entrants, a complete list is printed below of both varsity and freshman performers:

- 60-yard dash—Childers, Gunter, Alexander, and Hubbard.
- 70-yard high hurdles—Hawthorne, Abernethy, Moore, and Glenn.
- 70-yard low hurdles—Hawthorne, Abernethy, Glenn, and Trubnick.
- 440-yard run—Bost, Higby, Pruden, and Turpie.
- 880-yard run—Bost, Donnell, Kimrey, and Williamson.
- One mile run—Cordle, Curlee, Donnell, Waldrop, and Williamson.
- Two mile run—Jensen, H. Sullivan, and L. Sullivan.
- One mile relay—Marsden, Pruden, Gunter, and Goldman.
- Shot put—Hodges.
- High jump—Reid, Hamlet, and Phipps.
- Broad jump—Higby, Childers, Hubbard, and Phipps.

Scholastic Meet

The prep and high school events which includes more entrants than any other meet will include teams from nearly all parts of eastern United States. Neward Prep and Boy's High of Atlanta, defending champions, are favorites to take off honors but little can be told of the strength of the various high and prep school teams.

The games committee asked yesterday that as many students as possible obtain tickets for the meet this morning rather than at the Tin Can tonight, as only two booths will be open and a big rush is expected. Tickets can be obtained at Alfred Williams, Stetson D, and the Book Exchange.

LANDIS ELECTED CAPTAIN FOR 1934 BY BOXING TEAM

Southern Conference Champ Honored By Teammates at Dinner Given by Smoke Shop.

Following a dinner tendered the varsity boxing team last night by Marion Hamm, owner of the Carolina Smoke Shop, Platt Landis, heavyweight and recently crowned champion of the Southern Conference, was elected captain of the team for the 1934 season.

Cliff Glover, Pete Ivey, Marty Levinson, Norm Quarles, Nat Lumpkin, Sam Giddins, Frank McIntosh, Peyton Brown, and Furches Raymer, were the fighters present. Coach Rowe, Manager Ed Kerr, Phil Alston, former manager, and Jimmie McGurk, DAILY TAR HEEL boxing reporter, were also guests. Tom Parsons, light-heavyweight, and the captain-elect, Platt Landis, were absent.

Wheeler and Woolsey Play At Theatre Today

The famous comedians, Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, go deep into the animal infested jungles of the darkest of the dark belts in Africa, in their latest film comedy, "So This Is Africa!" showing today at the Carolina theatre.

Raquel Torres, who won fame in "White Shadows of the South Seas" and "The Sea Bat," and Esther Muir, who came to Hollywood from many Broadway musical hits like "My Girl Friday" and "Queen High," are personally charged with pursuing Wheeler and Woolsey through the jungle and making their life miserable by making constant love to the comedians.

Norman Krasna, scenario writer, and author of the stage success, "Louder, Please," wrote the story for this film.

For the benefit of track fans, Manager E. Carrington Smith has announced that there will be special showings of "So This Is Africa!" both at 10:00 o'clock this morning and at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

NORMAN THOMAS SAYS CAPITALISM DOOMED TO FAIL

(Continued from first page) sull was formerly an outstanding citizen of the United States, a leader in business, now, he is in Athens, Greece, for his health, as Thomas put it. Thomas stated that with all the big thieves running around loose, Al Capone should be freed from prison immediately with apologies.

Thomas stated that leaders of capitalism don't even have the sportsmanship that characterizes a well-run gambling house. The supposed leaders are interested only in getting something for nothing. Under the system of capitalism which is rapidly dying, the rewards go to those who can manipulate things around to their best advantage, and not to successful management, he declared.

In his letters, written to his father, Henry C. Gibbs of Washington, and to the university official, W. Chittin Wetherill, young Gibbs threatened suicide and stated that his body would never be found.

Co-eds Set For Campbell Tilt In Gym Tonight

The freshman co-ed team, after a week of strenuous practice, is ready and waiting to show the Campbell College basketballers that co-ed basketball at the University, in spite of its brief life, is really a strong institution. Mrs. J. G. Beard, director of co-ed physical education here, who is coaching the team, announced the starting line-up as follows: forwards, Grisette and Cowles; guards, Rawlings, Smoot, and Helms; center, Pridgen. Coffield, Pike, Jacobson, and Cummings are listed as substitutes.

DUNAWAY NAMED BOXING CAPTAIN

Southern Conference 155-Pound Champion Will Lead N. C. State Mittmen Next Year.

Bill Dunaway, North Carolina's most sensational kayo artist, has been elected captain of the N. C. State ring outfit.

Dunaway, who has never been defeated and holds most of his victories via the kayo route, is just a sophomore, and he will have the distinction of captaining a varsity outfit in his second year of competition. Besides his colorful record in dual meets, he clinched the 155-pound championship of Dixie in the recent tourney at Charlottesville.

Down in Wake county there has grown up a regular Dunaway legend. Besides Bill, there are two other mighty good scrappers in the family—Jack and Al, who, with Bill, make up the "Fighting Dunaways," as they have been known ever since five years ago when they commenced fighting for Raleigh high school.

THRIFT SOCIETY TO OFFER PLAN TO LEGISLATURE

Purpose of Bill Is to Teach School Children the Value of Saving.

The North Carolina Thrift Society is presenting within the next week before several members of the state legislature a bill to provide for instruction in thrift and savings in the public schools of the state. At the same time a bill for the incorporation of the society is being presented.

This proposed legislation has been formulated by Dean Bradshaw, F. A. Grisette, H. F. Comer, M. S. Breckenridge, and L. B. Rogerson, all of the University. These men have been working on the plan for six months during which they have discussed the idea with various prominent bankers and business men.

The main purpose of the plan is to teach the school children of the state the value of thrift, and to provide a means whereby they can start savings accounts. According to the proposed bill, the money deposited by the school children will be accepted by the state treasurer, and deposited by him in banks upon like terms and secured in the same manner as other state deposits. Interest will be paid the depositors on their money. The society, for the purpose of aiding deserving students to obtain advanced education, shall have the power to loan its funds and those which it has received on deposit to students registered in any institution of higher learning in the state. These loans are to be secured in an even stronger measure than the present University loans are secured. The funds received by the society from depositors may also be invested in either United States government bonds or North Carolina state bonds, when these funds are not needed for student loans.

The society is making no request to the legislature for an appropriation to carry on its work as it is believed that funds can be secured from other sources to start the plan, and that, after it has been operating for a while, it will be self-supporting.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, will leave tomorrow to conduct the performance of The Holy City, a sacred cantata by Harvey Gaul, to be presented by the Chaminade club of Fayetteville tomorrow evening.

The chorus numbers seventy-five voices and is a combined group of several vocal organizations of Fayetteville and singers selected from various parts of the state. W. G. Barnett, student in the department of music here, was chosen as tenor soloist. Dr. Robert T. Clark of the Duke University medical school, Mrs. Hugh Williamson of Flora MacDonald College, and Miss Ethel Rowland, head of the department of vocal instruction at Meredith College, will also appear as soloists.

chair, and monotonous literal translation.

German 31-32. Excellent study of romanticism and naturalism under Brown and Spann. Wide reading and interesting discussion provide full view of period. Fairly light under Spann, but more German and background derived from Brown. Under latter no course for idlers, while something of a "crip" under former.

German 101-102. A study of Goethe with stress upon the thought and life of the poet as revealed in his works. Conducted by Dr. Brown, an interesting and widely-read professor, who expects pupils to show interest and read intensively.

German 103-104. A study of Faust under Dr. Toy, who, while a gentleman of the old school, has preserved a surprisingly youthful outlook. Fine philosophic and literary possibilities but student must obtain a good deal on his own.

German 111. Intensive course in development of nineteenth century German drama under Dr. Brown. Despite the mass of material and heavy assignments, course is worth-while for the light it sheds on a relatively unexplored field. Dr. Brown adopts critical attitude and emphasizes social significance of plays. Should be given as comparative literature course.

JOURNALISM

The aim of the journalism department as seen by Professor Oscar J. Coffin, head of that department, is as follows:

"The purpose of the journalism department, as I understand it, is to permit the undergraduate who wishes to earn a living by writing to begin his apprenticeship in a sympathetic environment. It is realized that writing is not in the usual sense a profession; that talent, information, and painstaking application are all required; and that the collegiate period is all too brief to produce even a journeyman journalist.

"It is possible for campus residents—and it is not even suggested that these must or should be candidates for a journalism degree—to make such use of the facilities afforded as to be able upon graduation to earn day's wages as newspaper reporters and headliners; but no part of the department's aim is a chief editorial writer, publisher, dramatic or musical critic, column-

CARROLL ELECTED TO REPRESENT NEW COMMERCE GROUP

Dean to Attend Meetings in Lexington, Ky., One for Fraternity and Other for School.

At a recent meeting of the newly installed local chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, Dean D. D. Carroll of the school of commerce was elected official delegate from the chapter to the triennial national convention of the fraternity. The convention will meet this year in Lexington, Ky., March 27-29.

The annual meeting of the American Association of collegiate schools of business will be in session in that city at the same time, and Dean Carroll, as the representative of the school of commerce of the University, will attend the meeting of this group also.

The local chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, Alpha of North Carolina, was installed only a few weeks ago and is the baby chapter of the organization. The fraternity and the commerce schools' association are very closely allied since the A. A. C. S. B. does not recognize any honorary commerce organization other than Beta Gamma Sigma and the fraternity has established chapters in almost all of the schools which are members of the association.

Van Hecke to Speak

The Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women will conduct its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, March 7, at 8:00 o'clock, in the parish house of the Episcopal church. Dean M. T. Van Hecke will speak to the group on the proposed new constitution for North Carolina.

ist, or professional humorist." The consensus of opinion on courses offered by this department is as follows:

Journalism 53. News writing for the inexperienced. Gives the student confidence in that it overcomes natural timidity at writing for general reading public.

Journalism 54. Continuation of 53, with handling of longer stories. Valuable emphasis on accuracy, clarity, and brevity. Building up of student's confidence is profitably continued.

Journalism 55. The nearest thing to actual newspaper reporting that is given by this department. Interesting and stimulating assignments. Courses are liberal education in themselves due to the personality of Coffin.

Journalism 57. A course in headline writing which gives the student an excellent opportunity to see good news writing as it is done by the reporters for national press chains. Study of copy from critical angle as well as intensive headlining.

Journalism 56ab. Fine course in feature writing, perhaps best in department. In addition to good "bull-sessions" considerable benefit is obtained from Coffin's minute knowledge of personalities and places of interest throughout the state. Well-placed stress on character writing. Recommended to all future writers.

Journalism 58. Good training for incipient editorial writers. More "bull-session" and extensive analysis and comparison of editorial style and policy. Coffin's experience brightens this one up a good deal.

Journalism 59. Course surveys better weekly newspapers opportunity for good conversation of the state and offers excellent. Well-designed to meet needs and solve problems which future weekly journalists will meet.

STUDENTS WORK TO EASE BURDEN OF BUDGET CUTS

Begin Move to Clear Up Situation at University of Wisconsin With Appointment of Committee.

A movement headed by two student groups at the University of Wisconsin to clear up the budget situation at that institution has been begun, according to a recent article in the Daily Cardinal, student newspaper.

The two groups leading the way in the move are the Women's Self-Government association and the Men's Union board. The first step was taken with the appointment of a committee of nine students to "promote ways and means of saving the university from the drastic budget cuts proposed."

The committee will meet to investigate methods for uniting student and state interest in the matter, and to study ways of distributing necessary cuts so as to limit the university as little as possible. It is expected that the group will also study the curriculum so as to report on what courses are least necessary.

DEBATERS PLAN HOLIDAY JAUNTS

Three University Teams to Make Trips Will Try Out at Meeting
Of Squad Tomorrow.

Three trips are being planned for the University debate teams, to New Orleans, Chicago, and Boston during the holidays. Thomas Affirms That There Is Definite Trend Toward Socialism

Socialist Candidate for President in Past Campaign Points to Changing Attitude in Colleges; Explains Fewness of Socialist Votes to Defeatism.

"Yes, there is a definite trend in the minds of American students toward socialism," stated Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for president during the past two campaigns, after his talk Friday evening in Memorial Hall on "Where Do We Go from Here and How." Mr. Thomas then cited instances of two of the largest American colleges, Princeton and the University of Michigan, whose students have already begun an active and concerted movement in favor of his program of reform.

The number of students surrounding Mr. Thomas after his talk bears witness to his popularity on the University of North Carolina campus. Well over six feet in height, the white-haired American socialist presented a commanding figure on the stage of Memorial Hall as he towered above a group of those who had gathered to hear his after-remarks and to obtain his autograph.

When asked whether the collegiate proponents of socialism were mainly confined to the so-called "intellectuals," the former candidate for president replied that while this was to a certain extent true, it is rapidly being accepted not as an impractical Utopia, but as a matter-of-fact scheme for economic reform. Mr. Thomas' speech in Memorial Hall, in fact, was almost wholly directed toward explaining how his program could be translated into action. "I doubt that Mr. Roosevelt in his inauguration speech," he remarked, "will explain as full a program of action as I have tonight."

On the subject of political parties, he was asked about the comparatively few number of votes cast in favor of the Socialist party during the last election. "Yes," declared the presidential candidate, "I admit that prior to Hoover's campaign speeches we did expect more votes that we actually got." However, he explains this disappointment by calling it "a kind of defeatism, as it were," on the part of the American people. Mr. Thomas declares that the California engineer's campaign tour drove a great number of voters to lend their support to Roosevelt in their anxiety lest the Republican administration should once more go into office. With his characteristic humor he remarked, "I received a large number of letters from citizens all over the country who wrote that they voted for me in the straw vote but voted for Roosevelt in the last minute of the presidential election." Mr. Thomas expressed no unsportsmanlike regret over this disappointing turn of affairs.

NOTED SOCIALIST DELIVERS FINAL FORUM LECTURE

Norman Thomas Outlines Course
For Action to Large Audience
Friday.

"The Federal reserve banking system should be socialized, subjected completely to governmental control," Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the Presidency in 1928 and 1932 said here Friday in an address, the culminating lecture of the open forum series which has been sponsored by the Council for Student Expression.

"The present banking system," Mr. Thomas asserted, "gives neither protection in adversity nor good service in prosperity." He pointed out the revelations which have come about as result of the Insull crash.

New Bank System
"All commercial banks should be compelled to join the Federal Reserve System and a pool should be set up to guarantee the depositors money," Mr. Thomas said.

He advocated, too, that a credit board, allied on the one hand with the national economy planning board and on the other with the Federal Reserve System, be established.

Mr. Thomas urged a federal bond issue of six billions for public works and the socialization of industries.

The first step to be taken toward getting out of the present predicament, the Socialist chief affirmed, is to give the masses buying power. He suggested that the federal government give every unemployed family $10 per week for six months.

He suggested that the socialization of industries, operated collectively for the benefit of the masses and not for profit, might well begin with the federal government harnessing idle men to idle factories. The factories could be purchased at present at small cost and paid for by sweeping inheritance taxes and other assessments on capital.

LESLIE SPELMAN TO GIVE PROGRAM OF ORGAN MUSIC

Meredith College Professor to Present
Selections From Three Periods of French Development.

Professor Leslie P. Spelman, head of music at Meredith College, will present a vespers recital of French organ music this afternoon in Hill Music hall at 4:00 o'clock. This recital has been arranged as an exchange appearance with Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, University organ instructor, who played at Meredith in January.

Professor Spelman was formerly organist at the American Church of Paris. He is now instructor in organ and music theory at Meredith. He recently appeared in concert in Pinehurst at the mid-winter meet of the North Carolina guild of organists.

This afternoon's program will represent three periods of the development of French organ music. The first group consists of music of the old French composers, the second of a work by Cesar Frank, the founder of the modern school of composition, and the third of selections by a contemporary organist and composer.

Classics And Philosophy Estimated In Last Survey

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE DAILY TAR HEEL continues today its series of departmental surveys with the intention of presenting student opinion on courses listed in the University catalogue, as an aid to students about to register for the spring quarter. Opinions offered are not necessarily those of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.)

The main purpose of the University classics department as outlined to THE DAILY TAR HEEL in its survey last year is the dissemination of culture. Professor W. S. Bernard called attention to the fact that from the classics has come the highest type of thinking that the world has known, that Greek and Latin have a practical value in the studies of medicine, law, and pharmacy, and that the study of the languages serves as mental discipline to a greater extent than modern languages.

"Therefore," said Bernard, "the departments of classics place first emphasis on the study of the languages, considering from experience that about five courses such as offered in a quarter will attain this end. Opportunity for further study is offered by the departments in many elective courses that cover practically their whole literatures. In the second place, stress is laid on a knowledge of their civilizations, arts, especially the Greek, whose architecture today dominates the western world; their philosophy, which saturates all modern thinking; their manners and customs; and their governments and institutions. Therefore, to meet this end, the departments offer courses which will accomplish this purpose, particularly in the field of archaeology."

The following is the consensus of student opinion on courses offered in these departments:

Latin 1. Review of preparatory school Latin, stressing grammar and selections from Cicero's orations. Instruction tends to be mechanical.

Latin 2. Study of the Aeneid and further training in forms. Greater emphasis laid on translation and background than in Latin 1.

Latin 11. Excellent course in Horace and Terrence. In addition to getting a firm grasp of the Latin, the student receives valuable information in stage and poetic technique of the period. Difficult but worth-while under Elliott. More enjoyable with Sanders who pays more attention to culture of time than rote translation.

Latin 12. Splendid course in the prose works of the Empire under Drs. Harrer and Howe. Less difficult than 11 but material less interesting. Personalities and scholarship of professors offset some dull subject-matter.

Latin 22. Interesting course in Roman law under Dr. Harrer. Is closely linked with the development of English law and should prove generally valuable. Judicious blend of translation and legal discussion.

Latin 51. Active course in Roman satire which provides clear insight into Latin thought and wit. Dr. Sanders develops keen interest and genuine regard for his subject.

Latin 104. Comprehensive study of personality and career of Cicero under Dr. Harrer, a thorough-going scholar whose knowledge of the period augments the stimulation derived from reading Cicero's letters and orations in a scholarly fashion.

Greek 1-2. An elementary course in Greek grammar. Entirely the memorization of the text. Uninteresting.

Greek 13. "Crip" course in Homer. An evidence of the knowledge of one or two new principles suffices to pass the course. Good under Bernard.

Greek 14. A continuation of Greek grammar. Dr. Harland pays too little attention to the study of prose.

Greek 21. Mostly a study of comparative philosophy with a great deal of outside reading. Little translation done but much "bull sessioning" with Professor Bernard.

Greek 53. Professor Bernard delves into the psychology of the Greek drama. Some outside reading. Presents the Greek drama as the basis for all drama.

Greek 58. A study of the Greek new testament. The entire course is a discussion of morals.

Greek 71. The history of Greek civilization, dealing with home-life, athletics, the army, etc. If good notes are taken in class, virtually no outside reading is necessary. Papers are deeply scrutinized.

Greek 91-92. Two courses in general archaeology that have earned reputations as "crips." Nevertheless, Dr. Harland gives a thorough analysis of ancient art and architecture that makes the courses among the most cultural in the University. Attractive slides accompanied by wide-awake lecturing add to the interest.

Greek 93. Specifically Greek archaeology. Architecture, painting, and sculpture of the Greeks made compelling by Dr. Harland. From all these courses the student will emerge with a true appreciation of Hellenic art. None, however, entail too much work.

PHILOSOPHY
Professor Horace Williams made the following statement concerning the aims of the philosophy department:

"Philosophy has passed through the series of forms that belong to life. Childhood; youth; maturity are the steps. Today philosophy is passing into the mature stage. In logic the student sees the process of knowledge. He sees what the mathematizing act is. He sees what the synthesizing act is. He sees the synthesis of these. Also logic exhibits the values of knowledge. Knowing the mathematizing act, one may see its value. So of the others. One may say that philosophy as exhibited in logic brings clearness as to human aims. It brings knowledge of values, value of theology, value of mathematics, value of science. That is, logic offers the student a kit of tools. The business man goes equipped with a yard stick, quart pot, and balance. He does business intelligently. So logic furnishes a kit of tools for the human process as it translates itself into knowledge."

The following is the consensus of student opinion of some of the courses in the philosophy department:

Philosophy 41. A survey

A Medium for

Technical Expression

The appearance of The Carolina Engineer, the professional journal of the school of engineering, is a significant forward step in campus journalism. Edited and directed by the students of the engineering school themselves and devoted exclusively to presenting the news and activities of this technical division of the University, the Engineer fills an important place in campus journalism.

Says Editor G. W. Gorham in the lead editorial in the March number of his publication "... Engineers must of necessity be men who can express their ideas in a logical and concise manner both in writing and in speech. . . The engineer who can prepare his ideas for the technical press has an advantage over other men in his field, which can be measured directly in terms of dollars, as well as in terms of personal satisfaction."

Thus does the Engineer explain that it, as other campus publications, is a journalistic laboratory, utilized in this case to express the ideas and opinions of a technical group. But unlike other of the campus publications, the Carolina Engineer is able to furnish members of the school backing it with news and information limited strictly to engineering activities. No other journal, no matter how comprehensive, could perform such a duty on the University campus. No other journal could, for reasons of scarcity of space, devote its columns to learned discussions of technical matters or the activities of technical societies.

But the Engineer will find its chief service to the campus in performing as a medium for expression of the engineers of tomorrow. Few college campuses are able to offer their technical students ample opportunity for literary expression in the field of their chosen work. This advantage thus places the University engineering student head and shoulders above his competitor who has been trained in another institution. The successful man, regardless of his chosen line of endeavor, must be able to express himself both in speech and writing. In this the Carolina Engineer fills a long looked for position.—D.C.S.

Some Quick Tricks

For the New Deal

Yesterday at noon Franklin D. Roosevelt became president of the United States. He enters upon his duties with as unanimous a support of the country as any president since the days of Washington. Four years ago Herbert Hoover entered upon the same duties elected by the largest electoral vote in history. Both men at their inauguration had the confidence of the nation.

The prosperity of the Republican party was deflated under the administration of Mr. Hoover. The success of the Roosevelt administration will determine not only the strength and soundness of the Democratic party but also the success or failure of the present economic system. The problems faced by President Roosevelt are even more serious than those which have confronted Mr. Hoover.

Real leadership is required and courage to face public opinion with a view not to individual or partisan popularity but rather to the welfare of the nation. By the almost universal consent of economists the fundamental problem for today and for the future is the problem of distribution.

The satisfactory settlement of this problem will require intelligent and courageous leadership.

The question of war debts must be dealt with. International relations occupy a prominent position. Should Russia be recognized? But far more important at present is the position which the United States will take in regard to the Sino-Japanese trouble. Some satisfactory arrangement must be made for the Philippines.

The far-heralded issues of tariff and commercial treaties require solution and the banking problem must be faced. Agriculture and balancing the budget are not least among the problems for the present administration.—W.R.E.

Speaking The Campus Mind

To the Editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

"Of all the causes which conspire to blind man's erring judgment and misguide the mind, What the weak head with strongest bias rules, is Ignorance."

After looking over the morning TAR HEEL I was a bit amused, though, I must say, at the same time disgusted, upon reading the article, "Something to sober the 'Punchdrunks'." In the first place the title to the article is not an appropriate one. Rather than give any means of sobering the "Punchdrunk" he says that there are "Punchdrunks." However I wish that the writer of that article had been an authority on such a subject, so that a punch drunk boxer, like myself, could have received some benefit from it. I have earned the name "Punchdrunk" whether in fun or due to the peculiar way in which I have acted. I must admit that I wear out the heels of my shoes and have often enjoyed playing paper dolls.

Mr. J. F. A., you can compose words fairly well, you can arrange them so as to be easily read, they certainly fill up the space and attract attention, but outside of that what have you accomplished? You have not done what you set out to do. You have not given even a fair, as well as a correct treatment of the subject. How many fighters in college do you know that are punch drunk from College boxing? Perhaps if you had received a little information from the right sources you would have realized your own errors. In case you still have your original and narrow views on the subject, but are not so determined along these lines as not to be able to be convinced otherwise, I might be able to furnish a little information that would help. Yet, you must not let one individual's views change you so easily. All I ask is, that you look around in more than one direction before wandering around on the subject again.

Mr. J. F. A., I realize that I am not a writer by any means, but I do feel that my ignorance in writing is more than offset by your ignorance of your subject.

The barbers have criticized the football coaches; the 10 & 15c bet-makers have always criticized the participants; and, why, after all, should a "punch drunk" fighter get excited over a little article which is really in itself cheap and falsely labeled?

You are a good writer Mr. J. F. A., but I have always been taught that we write best about that which we know about.

Come around sometime and play paper dolls with me.—N.L.

To the Editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

May I use your columns for a tribute to the University's versatile band, which last Wednesday evening gave to an appreciative audience a delightful program of the finest music? The audience would doubtless have been larger, were the week not already crammed with musical, dramatic, and forensic events; larger still, were the local community fully awake to the band's position of pre-eminence.

Within the last eight years, under the competent direction of Professor McCorkle, this organization has won distinction in two widely different fields. It appears, eighty strong, to add pep and glamour to our football spectacles. Then, from the larger body has emerged the Symphonic Band of about sixty students with the ability and interest to present programs of the calibre shown in the recent concert after only eight weeks of rehearsal, two hours a week. (Only six of the sixty men are specializing in the Department of Music.) Among the university bands of the whole country ours has hardly a rival in the excellence of its programs; it has no rival among those which, like ours, are supported by no musical scholarships or course credit.

All honor to our tuba- and trombone-toters! Refusing to retire from the gridiron into a long hibernation, they rise from rah-rah songs to the majesty of Bach and Tchaikowsky.

Thomas Says There Is Socialism Trend

principles of the Socialist party, Mr. Thomas made it clear that no industry was to be subjected to government ownership and control by way of confiscation, in the usual sense of the word. He believes that it would "pay to pay" the present owners of industries for their property, just as it would have paid during the emancipation of the negro to have paid southern slave-owners for their slaves. Under socialism, the first steps toward governmental ownership of industries and their use—not for private gain, but for public welfare—would be the taking over of public utilities, such as railroads, and of natural resources, such as coal mines and oil fields.

The Socialist candidate for president was asked about his ideas on educating the people to socialism. He frankly admitted that it was often necessary to use a negative means of approach—that is, to point out the short-comings of capitalism, as he did in his talk in assembly Friday morning, which, he said was only intended as a preface to his discussion on Friday evening. Mr. Thomas intimated, however, that he speaks in this vein merely to stir people from their "pessimistic apathy" over the depression to a consideration of positive means to remedy once and for all our economic system.

More Banking Control

As a present measure, he proposed that the government be given more extensive control over our banking system, this power emanating from the Federal Reserve. On being questioned as to the constitutionality of such a proceeding, Mr. Thomas declared that he could give no absolute answer to the question. "It cannot be answered positively," he declared. "What is constitutional to you and me does not matter; it's the Supreme Court that decides the issue. He declared that in the event of power being placed in the hands of the Socialist party, no such quibble over constitutionality would delay a much-needed reform. He smiled and added, "We'll call a convention and draw up a new constitution first."

Administrative Board Meets

The first meeting of President Graham's new administrative board of the division of student welfare will take place tomorrow at a luncheon in Graham Memorial at 1:00 o'clock. Preparatory matters of importance regarding student activities will be introduced. Dean F. F. Bradshaw, the chairman, will preside.

GERMAN WAR PICTURE WILL BE SHOWN TODAY

"The Western Front: 1918," a German talkie, will be featured at 9:15 tonight at the Carolina theatre.

"The Western Front" has been as popular in Germany as "All Quiet on the Western Front" was in this country and is considered the most outstanding German war picture produced to date.

For the benefit of those who do not understand the German lines, Professor Meno Spann of the German department will give short explanations during the picture.

N. C. Club to Meet

Dean Justin Miller of the Duke University law school will be the speaker at the meeting of the North Carolina club at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the library room of the department of rural-social economics.

Eight Records Broken As Duke Annexes Indoor Title

Captain Lauck Leads Virginia Team to Second Place; Carolina Third.

A crowd of about two thousand watched Duke and Virginia fight it out for the Southern Conference indoor championship last night in the Tin Can. The Blue Devils, by virtue of their win in the one-mile relay, cinched the meet 42-34.

Eight conference records were smashed during the meet, four by Duke and one each by Washington and Lee, Virginia, Maryland, and V. P. I. Only the pole vault, broad jump, shot put, and the two-mile records stood up under the heavy fire.

Carolina, defending champions of two years standing, tallied one lone first and finished a weak third with 22 3/4 points. Wick Smith, by placing first in the pole vault with a glide of 12 ft. 4 1/4 in., was Carolina's high scorer. Frank Abernethy tied Smith for team scoring honors, garnering a second and third place in the low and high hurdles, respectively.

Captain Lauck of Virginia was high individual scorer for the meet with ten points, tallying firsts in both the mile and two-mile races. In winning the mile race the sturdy Cavalier runner lowered the conference record to 4:26.4 from 4:29.8. John Brownlee, Duke ace, was next with seven through a first in the low hurdles and a third in the dash. Brownlee lowered the record for the low hurdles to 7.8 from 8.0, formerly held by Speer, W. & L.

Washington and Lee, with Finklestein's record-smashing performance in the high hurdles was fourth in the meet with 10 1/4 points. His time of 8.9 lowered the former record.

Turner's jump of 6 feet in the high jump accounted for another record and helped tie his team, V. P. I., with V. M. I. for fifth place with seven points.

Probably the most dazzling performance of the night was that turned in by Widmyer, Maryland's crack sprinter, who lowered the 60-yard dash record to 6.3 from 6.4. Widmyer's five points were all that the Old Bradsher and Reichman of Duke were the other individual record breakers, lowering the 880-yard and 440-yard marks respectively. The Duke relay team for the mile finished the record smashing meet by lowering the relay mark.

Freshman Meet

William and Mary, non-conference team, took the freshman meet with twenty-two points and was followed by Virginia with twelve, Davidson with six, and Duke and V. P. I., with four each.

CAMPBELL CO-EDS RUSH TO VICTORY OVER LOCAL GIRLS

Displaying a far superior brand of basketball, the Campbell College co-eds defeated an inexperienced Carolina freshman girl's team 36 to 12. The Campbell team, in defeating the freshman co-eds, added one more win to their already impressive season record, making it ten victories, one tie, and one loss.

The game, played in Bynum gym, was an easy victory for Campbell College who scored almost at will. Byrd, Campbell center, was the outstanding player in the game, scoring twenty-two points in all. Captain Crumpler and Mayard were responsible for obtaining the other fourteen markers.

The Carolina co-eds were held to four field goals; and converted only four of their many free throws into counters. Grisette, who was acting captain, was the high-scorer for Carolina, making six points; Pridgen and Cowles each added three.

ting nine points as a result of first, second, and third places. The winners also got victories in the 70-yard high hurdles and relay runs. Boys' High made all its points as a result of firsts in the 60-yard dash and high jump. Horter of Newark was the outstanding man of the meet, getting first in the hurdles and fourth in the 60-yard dash.

Norman Quarles and Platt Landis Have Been Invited to Compete In Intercollegiate.

Coach Rowe said yesterday that permission had not yet been granted for Norm Quarles and Platt Landis to enter the National Intercollegiate Boxing Tournament which will be held at Penn State on the 17th and 18th of March.

Quarles, recently crowned featherweight champion of the Southern Conference, and Landis, new heavyweight champ and captain-elect of next year's Tar Heel team, are still in training, as is Sam Giddins, 155 pounder, who, if the first two are entered, will also compete on the strength of his fine showing in the Southern Conference tourney.

ILLUSION:

In India, the fakirs present a spectacle to tourists. Two lovely performers break bottles and lamp chimneys before the eyes of the audience, and throw the jagged pieces into a box already filled with broken glass. They step barefooted into the box and do an Oriental dance in the glass without injury.

EXPLANATION:

The performers toughen their feet in a strong solution of alum water and thoroughly rub them with pulverized resin before they appear. They throw the freshly broken glass around the edges of the platform. The glass on which they actually do dance is very thick, heavy, and filed or ground so that the sharp edges are rounded off. The girls just pretend to dance on the sharp glass.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED

...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

One of the tricks of cigarette advertising is to pretend that "Heat Treatment" is an exclusive process, making one cigarette better than any other.

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use heat treatment. It is a routine process of manufacture. The first Camel cigarette ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment.

Harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos, which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat. Heat treatment never can make cheap, inferior tobacco good.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is the most important statement ever made in a cigarette advertisement. Weigh its words. Consider what it means. Then try Camels. Camels are fresh...in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack.

IDEA OF SCRIP DROPPED

Resolution Passed by Credit Association Places Responsibility Of Accepting Checks Upon Individual Merchants.

Emergency measures to stabilize the credit of University students with the merchants of Chapel Hill during the present banking crisis were enacted last night by members of the Chapel Hill Credit Association in a special meeting in the town hall.

The group met earlier in the afternoon but no agreement could be reached. A committee composed of P. S. Randolph, president of the Chapel Hill Merchants Association, Dr. F. F. Bradshaw, representing the University, Clyde Eubanks, Charlie Gooch, of the Merchants Association, Bill Medford, and Haywood Weeks, representing the student body, and Dr. C. T. Murchison, acting in an advisory capacity, presented the following resolution:

"The members of the student body may make arrangements to meet their individual requirements with the merchants and tradespeople of Chapel Hill with whom they have been doing business in the past. Those stu-

GRAHAM SOUNDS CONFIDENT NOTE BEFORE SENIORS

President Compliments Class on Cooperative Way It Has Joined in Work.

Speaking before a large gathering of the senior class last night in Gerrard hall, President Frank Graham complimented the class on the way in which it had played its part in making decisions of the day vital to the University and assured its members of the final improvement in the present situation, urging them to have confidence.

In beginning President Graham stated that his mind went back to the old days when seniors gathered in Gerrard hall to make decisions concerning welfare of the University. Continuing President Graham declared that the need for action was evident yesterday and that it was evident any decision made should be to the interest of the student body at large. Accordingly, he then sounded his praises of the senior class for the way in which it had done its part in stabilizing the confidence of the class, declaring that its action left no doubt as to the comparable ability of the senior class of today to make vital decisions as to the classes in the old days of the University.

Alumnus To Refuse Revenue Position

Former Governor Angus W. McLean, and an alumnus of the University last week refused a consideration of the office of United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which would have been tendered him by President Roosevelt.

He stated that it was impossible for him to accept it because he had endorsed C. L. Shuping for the post and that he was fully occupied with his business.

FESTIVAL BILLED FOR CHAPEL HILL IN NEXT QUARTER

Native Games, Music, and Handiwork Will Feature All-Day Celebration April 29.

Folk lore, dancing, handiwork, games, and music germane to the people of North Carolina will feature the program of the first Dogwood Festival here Saturday, April 29, according to announcement of the festival committee. The committee is composed of citizens of Chapel Hill and representatives of state organizations interested in North Carolina folk lore. Russell M. Grumman, head of the University extension division, is chairman.

The purpose of the festival, as expressed by Phillips Russell, chairman of the program committee, is "to give expression to the life of the people of the state by means of music (instrumental, symphonic, vocal, and choral), dancing, games, exhibitions and other activities that may be considered germane to a people's festival."

Folk Music on Program
The program will include the presentation of a collection of folk music and ballads, arranged by Lamar Stringfield, folk dances, and an exhibit of North Carolina handiwork.

Tentative plans for a game of Indian ball between two teams from the Cherokee Indian reservation are also being made, but whether or not the Indians are included in the program rests with the ability of the committee to secure sufficient financial backing to pay the players' expenses.

The program will include a series of English folk dances by groups of dancers from neighboring towns, followed by a square dance accompanied by old-time fiddlers.

Gym To Be Resumed

Freshman gymnasium classes which ended for the winter quarter last Friday will begin again next Monday with the spring quarter. The same schedules will be used.

President's Official Statement

In view of the bank holidays declared by the President of the United States and the Governors of forty-eight states, and in view of the difficulties of large numbers of students of the University getting home and returning to the University, President Frank P. Graham, with the unanimous recommendations of the University Student Council and the Faculty Advisory Committee, announces the postponement of the regular spring holidays until the financial situation has become more stabilized. The first classes of the spring quarter will meet Monday, March 13.

Anton Cermak Dies In Miami Hospital

Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, the victim of a bullet Giuseppe Zangara fired February 15 in an attempt to assassinate President Roosevelt, died in Jackson Memorial hospital in Miami yesterday morning at 6:57 o'clock. Death followed a series of complications from which the Chicago executive had rallied valiantly time after time.

The physicians were still optimistic Saturday, but that night gangrene appeared in the right lung, the one grazed by the bullet, and he grew steadily weaker. A third blood transfusion was performed Sunday in an effort to save his life and an attempt was made to check the gangrene but the mayor did not respond. He lapsed into a coma Sunday night and shortly after midnight the physicians said death was a matter of hours.

Student Organist Presents Recital

Thomas W. Teer, student organist here, presented his graduation recital last night in Hill Music hall.

Teer has made several appearances on the campus as piano soloist with the Carolina salon ensemble and in student recitals. Last evening's recital was presented in accordance with the ruling of the music department that each student must make a public appearance before graduation to substitute for the comprehensive examination required in other departments.

The program last night included a number of compositions of German and French composers. Works of Johann Sebastian Bach and Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy and Jagged Peaks, an impressionistic piece by Joseph L. Clokey, American composer, were played.

Business Office Announcement

The business office of the University has made arrangements for credit extensions for those students whose funds are tied up by the banking holiday. According to a statement received last night from Charles T. Woollen, business manager of the University, students who are in arrears for winter quarter fees and whose funds have been tied up by the present banking situation will be permitted to register and to stand examinations on presentation to the treasurer of request for extension on such grounds. Forms for this request can be obtained at the business office.

More elaborate preparations have been made to extend credit to those students enrolling for the spring quarter which will begin next Monday. Another statement from Mr. Woollen brings out the news that "for those students whose funds are tied up by the present banking situation, but who wish to go ahead with their work during the spring quarter, the University is arranging credit extension for fees, board, and dormitory rooms. Swain hall and Spencer hall will continue to accept checks, and in cases where the patron has no bank account, will, when necessary, accept notes for one month's board to tide over until finances can be straightened out. The University will also accept notes for room rent for the balance of the year from those students who are unable to secure cash. Student loans will be augmented as far as possible for the spring quarter.

A Proclamation

The student council, in an effort to maintain student credit and to provide a means for the continuance of exchange between the students of the University and the merchants of the town, has provided for a representative of the council who will sit in the office of Phipps and Ranson (over W. C. Lyon Co.) and who may approve upon investigation of personal credit student checks to be cashed (for merchandise) by local merchants. The payment of these checks will be enforced as in the past under the penalty of suspension from the University for failure to make good any check.

The student council especially urges the students of the University during this banking crisis to cooperate with the merchants of the town, to be considerate and appreciative of their cramped financial facilities, and above all to maintain the honor and credit by giving only checks which can be redeemed immediately after re-opening of the banks or the issuance of state or federal script.

The chief feature of the annual Drama Festival at the University March 30, 31, and April 1, according to Professor F. H. Koch, will be the production of original plays written and staged in competition by high school, college, and community authors.

According to Mrs. Irene Fessler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic association which is co-operating with the University extension division in sponsoring the festival, twenty-six original plays written for this year's tournament by North Carolinians have been submitted to and judged by the committee in Chapel Hill. Eleven of these have been awarded decisions of merit and will be produced here during the festival in competition for the original production prizes.

ANALYZES WORLD FLIGHT

President Places Financial Crisis In Context of World View And Stresses Opportunity for Social Mastery.

In view of the complications which may arise from the presidential and state-wide declaration of a national banking holiday, President Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina, with the unanimous recommendation of the University student council and the faculty advisory committee, yesterday in an emergency convocation which packed Memorial hall to the doors declared postponement of the usual spring recess of one week which was scheduled to begin next Saturday at noon. Instead of the spring quarter beginning March 20, it will begin March 13, and new students will register March 13. Registration will continue this week as previously announced.

President Graham announced that business manager Charles T. Woollen of the University, in view of the banking situation, upon application by debtor students could postpone the payment of student fees and allow taking of examinations and

STUDENT UNION TO SPONSOR 'MOTHER AND FATHER' DAY

Board Also Endorses Move to Build New Walks on Campus in Front of Union.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon, the financing of new walks in front of the building was discussed, and plans for a "Mother and Father Day" were proposed.

The board voted unanimously to accept the recommendation of the Union Forum that the Student Union expend for new walks between the union building and Battle, Vance, and Pettigrew dormitories a sum not to exceed one half of the total cost of the walks. This money is to be furnished from the reserve of the union funds, and the remainder is to be solicited from other organizations on the campus.

Dean Proposes Parents' Day

Dean F. F. Bradshaw, ex-officio member of the board, brought up the second proposal. The dean of students suggested that the union plan and sponsor a "Mother and Father Day" to take place in the early part of the spring quarter.

In discussing the matter, it was suggested by those present that the union take the initiative

A Personal Sacrifice

For a University Good

In giving up their right to the regular spring holidays at this time, the members of the student body are rendering to the University a service which will certainly help the institution to tide over this present banking crisis in a manner otherwise impossible. For once in their college life the students are surrendering their own personal pleasures for the good of a worthy institution.

Undoubtedly the postponement of the holidays will be of considerable inconvenience to a great many of the students. But when they realize that they are having a part in the salvation of an institution so essential to the advancement and development of the state as the University, their personal desires will lose all their predominance.

A postponement of the holidays and a continuation of the classes will actually result in even more of a concession on the part of the administration than on the part of the students themselves. For because of the present financial crisis, the business office of the University has signified its willingness to accept students' checks as payment of tuition until the banking situation is once more normal.

A most logical step has been taken. It will mean a sacrifice from the students, but, more important, the salvation of the University from what might have been certain disaster. The quicker the members of the student body realize this fact and adjust themselves accordingly, the greater will be the success of the postponement action.

A Vision in Leadership

In the midst of these troubled times the University of North Carolina has suffered severely from the nation's condition and from the deprivations made upon our budget by a desperate state. Amid the attending gloom we have one cause for gratitude.

In President Graham we have a man who, as far as learning and ability are concerned, is all that might be desired. This is true of many college presidents; it is not upon these virtues that reposes the major burden of our hope.

We rejoice in the possession of a man at our head whose loyalty and interest are firmly imbedded not in universities but in this University. We have a guiding spirit that does not flit about the country lured by a larger salary or the presidency of a larger school, but who stays with us in woe as in weal.

Frank Graham is a North Carolinian and an alumnus of this school. His family has been of influence here before him. By education, sentiment, and patriotism he is firmly bound to us. In fair weather he may direct our growth to greater heights, in the storm he remains steadfast at the helm sacrificing himself so that we may live. He has rendered every service that his position demands, but he has not stopped at that. In the hour of trial he has gone far beyond exerting all his energy and effort to help the University and the student body to see it through.

Were we to lose him now it would be the direst calamity that might befall. But we know that our head stands a man beyond the power of prestige or money to purchase, a man who is here because his heart is in the University of North Carolina. Gathered behind him we can survive and overcome the buffets of the angry times. Where there is no vision the people perish. In Frank Graham we have that vision.—J.F.A.

Rally 'Round The Flag

The crisis has been reached. American business is at a standstill. The day of reckoning is at hand. Forced by unsettled conditions and unpredictable contingencies, the states one after another closed their banks, until the panic had reached every corner of the nation. Then, Sunday night, President Roosevelt, scarcely having warmed the seat of his White House chair, declared a four-day national bank holiday and placed an embargo upon the hoarding of money, in any form. American business stops to regain its balance, to evaluate its position.

There is comparatively little money in circulation. Bank credit cannot be had. What is to be done? David Lawrence, referring to the experience of 1907, says that temporary credit must be supplied with a system of clearing house certificates, a form of script, to allow local business to go forward. Banks must combine in associations, pool what liquid assets they have and issue credit certificates on those assets. Through modern means of communication and business transaction, says Mr. Lawrence, this will soon be accomplished. Meanwhile, all people, as friends and neighbors, should work together to open up channels of trade and to devise credit systems. There is enough food, clothing and housing for everybody; means must be devised to make possible exchange in these things. After such emergency measures have served their temporary purpose, it is hoped that laws will have been passed to strengthen and unify our forty-nine banking systems so that no debacle of the present kind can occur in the future.

University students have a part to play in this emergency situation. There are hundreds who cannot get the money to go home and almost as many who could not come back to the University while the banks were closed or were issuing only credit certificates. So, the University administration is erecting credit machinery that will provide for students to remain in Chapel Hill until the national situation is cleared up. If their plans work out, students will be given room, board and University fees until their funds are released and payments can be made. It is a unprecedented situation. Credit must be established. It is only through courage, faith and complete co-operation that this can be done. The University expects those things from its students.—E.C.D.

Now Is the Time

For All

In keeping with the policy of action advocated in his inaugural speech Saturday, President Roosevelt has taken the initiative in forestalling the national crisis which was imminent in banking circles.

The country awaits the action which is to follow with breathless anxiety. Never before has the country been faced with such immediate danger. All the institutions which have been built up in nearly two centuries in this country are on the edge of the precipice, and only a strong arm, given free play, can preserve them from the fall.

Whatever the president may be able to accomplish depends on the backing he receives from the American people, especially those who have been vested with authority. This is no time to play politics; this is no time for quibbling. The president must have the backing of the whole people if he is to avert the catastrophe which has already enveloped many of the other nations of the world. Now is the test time. Our response will determine the destiny of the nation.—W.A.S.

Seeing March Out

Like a Lamb

President Roosevelt has declared a bank holiday, in effect, a suspension of all banking activities throughout the country until Friday. For the incoming president, March is raging in like a lion. The financial situation of today is unprecedented in history in its perplexing magnitude. We have spent enough time in conjecture and dismal wailing. Now is the moment for action, that action for which the country has been asking, praying,—voting. Our new president has on his second day in office shown himself a leader. Instead of appointing committees to appoint sub-committees to investigate our banking situation, he has declared without an instant's hesitation for a drastic promulgation. The financial structure of the country has become clogged with the dust of outworn functions. Roosevelt wants a housecleaning.

As every housewife knows, the spring of the year brings with it something besides robins and apple blossoms. It brings an unpleasant duty, one whose performance will considerably inconvenience the inhabitants of the household. Father's slippers will be lost in a pile of chairs, grandfather will find his bookcase an unsightly foreign land, and the children's toys will be completely submerged in mops and rugs. This familiar annual pestilence must be taken philosophically. And that philosophy must not be a dismal cursing of fate, a disconsolate and reluctant acceptance; it had better be a cheerful willingness to suffer discomfort until the floors and furniture shine once again. And so with President Roosevelt. He has answered the insistent challenge demanding action. Now let us do our share. Let us yield neither to self-pity nor, worse, to panic. Let us be cheerful in what is at worst an embarrassing situation, for there is no reason why March should not bow to tradition and go out like a lamb.—B.B.P.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

On the Sidelines

A keen observer of political economy, this department is now on the spot night and day with news notes of the moribund (Winchell) and our usual variety of saccharine comment.

Although we must confess that we don't know what it's all about, since our philosophy is one of faith in Am.Tel.&Tel., the News and Observer, and the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, our ear is to the ground and our palsied hands still clutch the battered keys of our L. C. Smith (four bank keyboard, reversible ribbon, tabular, etc.)

The Bull's Head was the first institution to suffer a run yesterday morning. It seems that you pay a dollar on deposit to cover the cost of replacing rental books and this is paid back when the spirit moves. A timid lady appeared at the proprietor's desk and asked for her dollar back thirty seconds after the shop opened. But that was the only withdrawal, we are glad to report. The rest of the book shop money is in the bank on a separate account where it is absolutely safe. Faith has been restored in the Bull's Head.

An observer reports that Ashby Penn was reduced to borrowing a Camel. He hid behind a building to smoke it also.

Those folks who made a bet that all the banks in the country would be closed four months to the day after Roosevelt took office (viz. Fourth of July, nat'l. hol.) are getting a good laugh already.

The only happy man we saw on Franklin street this morning was a gentleman who had overdrawn his account Saturday morning.

It was called to our attention that Harley Shufford was seen writing English notes in a check book.

The inauguration ceremonies in Washington Saturday bothered us no end. We clung beside the radio until the Chief Justice had administered the oath of office to Roosevelt, being afraid all the time that he might call

To The Editor.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL: To one raised in the John Philip Sousa word in band music, gram of the University phonic Band last night was like a challenge. proprieties—Bach, Mendelssohn, Tchaikovsky! Think diet for a band—a brass. The execution was as ordinary as the daring of program, and, with String Quartet, creation of artistic composition out of the folk life of our development of composition out of its soil, the formation of a State Symphony Orchestra and a Little Symphony Orchestra, contributes to making recent past memorable in musical life. Why, when I came here in 1909, I never expected to live to hear a symphony orchestra in this state; now, two orchestras and a symphony band.

As I listened to classical music elegantly rendered on brasses by a competent person clad in tuxedos, I could not help wondering if this could possibly be the band that, several years ago, we were begging money to buy breeches for. It sure has grown up, and Mr. McCorkle deserves the highest praise for raising it.

TRACK STARS SET EIGHT RECORDS IN CONFERENCE RUN

Northern Teams in Old Southern Conference Seem Superior to Southerners.

Smashing all but four of the twelve Southern conference records, which were hung high by the old Southern conference group, and breaking down the old fallacy that the southeastern clubs were superior to their northern neighbors, Carolina played the role of a gracious hostess to nine entries in the Southern conference indoor games Saturday.

In the three previously staged indoor track carnivals, Carolina had established four records, but with the conclusion of Saturday's pyrotechnics the Tar Heels had no records to their credit. The former conference embraced such strong aggregations of Georgia, Ole Mississippi, Tulane, and L. S. U. affording a keen bit of competition for all teams in the conference. Many sports followers then contended that the southeastern clubs were far superior in calibre to their northern neighbors, but this fallacy was smashed Saturday along with eight records; proving conclusively that the Southern conference always will find plenty of competition in track among the members of the family.

Chapel Hill Merchants To Recognize Checks

Merchants who do not find the arrangement adequate may call at the office of the chairman of the student check committee in the law offices of Phipps and Ranson (over W. C. Lyon Co.) where checks may be authorized after an investigation of credit.

Resolution Adopted

The resolution was unanimously adopted by the some thirty-five merchants gathered at the meeting. The resolution, as is stated, will lay the responsibility of credit upon the individual merchant, who may accept checks drawn by his regular patrons or by persons whose credit he has ascertained. If he is unaware of the credit of any student, he may require him to present his check to the student check committee office where a member of the student council will determine the amount of credit of the student.

This applies also to those undergraduates who have not established credit in Chapel Hill and whose transactions have been carried on in the past with cash. Upon presentation of their checks and reasonable assurance of validity, the student councilman in charge will affix his approval and the check will be cleared for the student.

Council's Responsibility

However, the student council will not take any responsibility for checks passed by merchants not properly countersigned by an official of the student government. The student council will, to the best of its ability, endeavor to enforce payment of the check when the banks are opened. In all cases such as

Plans for Scrip Dropped

At an early meeting of the Credit Association in the Methodist church Sunday school building yesterday afternoon, tentative plans were made for the issuance of scrip. It was later decided, upon the acquaintance of a federal government request that no scrip be issued by states or cities, that this procedure would be abandoned.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL learned last night that neither the state of North Carolina nor any of its city governments contemplate issuing scrip money until sanction Measures were taken yesterday to grant greater power to the bank commissioner and to the governor to deal with the situation when the federal government acts.

Rumors were also partially verified that a possible continuance of the bank holiday is not improbable. Meanwhile, every effort is being exerted both in Raleigh and in Washington to stabilize the banking system within a few days.

Marty Levinson Sacrificed Chance At Featherweight Title For Team

Tar Heel Captain Took Chance of Winning Over Goldstein Instead Of Sure Victory in Lower Division; Put Up Game Battle Against Scott With Broken Arm.

For two years Marty Levinson had tried in vain to annex the Southern conference featherweight title and each year had been forced to stand by and see his bitter rival, Bobby Goldstein of Virginia accept the coveted award. This year Marty was a strong favorite to win. But Norm Quarles, who had been fighting lightweight all year with great success despite his having to spot several pounds in weight every time had a badly injured right hand, and it was suggested that the two boys trade places.

Marty thought of the two years he had fought in vain for the featherweight title, of the ease with which he could probably win the crown this year, and said no. Quarles had fought lightweights successfully all season, why should he be forced to throw away his chances for glory in order to favor his teammate's injury?

There was reason and justice behind Marty's thinking, for a college fighter gets only the glory of winning for his troubles, and Marty was still due his just share of glory.

The argument was apparently ended, but Coach Crayton Rowe was serious about shifting his line-up.

"It's this way Marty," he said, "either of you boys can come through in the featherweight all right. If you get in the lightweight you are practically sure of going to the finals, and you have a good enough chance of beating Goldstein. If Quarles fights as a lightweight, he may go along all right, but if he hurts that hand again, we're sunk. We may not get any points out of that division that way."

Marty was still not convinced. "It's the only way we've got a chance to win the title Marty," Rowe told him.

A smile broke out on his face, he grinned.

"Oh yeah? Then I'm a lightweight. Never mind the featherweight title. I'll get you three points in the lightweight and maybe beat Goldstein."

So it was settled. Quarles breezed through the featherweights with two knock-outs and a forfeit. But the Levinson side of the affair turned out a tragedy.

Graham ended with the reassuring idea that as the seniors of the nineteenth century achieved the heights of technology that the seniors of the twentieth century with their knowledge of social sciences would lead the country to greater ultimate happiness for all mankind. Previous to the address by President Graham, R. B. House made a short address expressing his sensing of the undercurrent of mobilization in the student body against the depression, comparing it with the feeling in 1917 when the students of the University mobilized in the interest of a different service.

After the speeches by President Graham and House, Charlie Rose motioned that the senior class go on record as favoring the decision of the student council in declaring postponement of the holidays and that the class work toward the influence of confidence among all University students. His motion was accepted by a unanimous chorus of ayes from the assembled class.

In the first bracket of the tournament Marty faced Scott of Duke, a big tall boy, with strength and punch, and Marty weighed 126 pounds, almost twelve pounds less than Scott. In the first round he piled up a tremendous margin in points and was on his way to an easy victory.

Breaks Wrist in Second Round

Marty backed away, clutched the ropes with his left, used his right often, and continued to hold an edge throughout the second round.

Collapses After Bout

When Levinson was announced the victor, he stood up and started to crawl through the ropes. Instead he collapsed. His left arm was broken in three places. He was so weak with pain that he was unable to walk, yet he had fought almost two rounds with his arm in that condition and had kept it a secret.

Ringside observers termed it the greatest exhibition ever produced at the tournament, but Levinson spent the night in a Charlottesville hospital and stood by again to see Goldstein win the title.

Marty received hearty applause when he was carried from the ringside, but it was nothing to the ovation rendered him next day when it was announced that due to his injury he would have to forfeit his semi-final bout to Burns of Maryland. The audience stood for several moments to cheer him.

And fight fans everywhere are paying due respect to a boy who sacrificed his chance at a championship for the sake of his team, who refused to quit merely because he wasn't made that way.

Captains Boxers

Platt Landis, Southern Conference title-holder in the heavy-weight class, will lead the Tar Heel mittmen next year. Landis is one of the most outstanding heavyweights to be developed here, winning all his fights this year, most of them via the knock-out route. He will be one of Carolina's entries in the National Intercollegiate tournament provided permission is granted by University authorities.

Mural Entries Called For

Herman Schnell, University intramural director, announced yesterday afternoon that all intramural baseball and tennis managers must give him their entries this week in order that the schedules could be completed by the middle of next week.

STUDENT UNION TO SPONSOR 'MOTHER AND FATHER' DAY

In sponsoring the event and that other organizations on the campus be asked to co-operate and to help entertain the visiting parents and friends with their facilities and activities. It was the prevalent opinion of the group that an event of this sort would bring about a closer relationship between the students, parents, and faculty and that it would bring into closer contact with the University those parents who otherwise would not get an inclusive view of the campus and activities.

The board was unanimous in its endorsement of this proposal, and President Haywood Weeks appointed a committee from the group to investigate possibilities and make plans for the occasion. The committee appointed is composed of Mayne Albright, director of the union building, chairman, Dean Bradshaw, and Mary Frances Parker, president of the Woman's association.

BASEBALL SQUAD BEGINS PRACTICE

Coach Hearn Will Conduct Practices Every Afternoon Until Season Begins.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Bunn Hearn called his first outdoor baseball practice for the Carolina 1933 baseball team on Emerson field. A fair-sized squad was out, but Coach Hearn expects to see a much bigger one report today.

Daily practices will take place from now on starting at 3:00 o'clock each afternoon. Coach Hearn said it was not necessary for baseball candidates to report the rest of this quarter, as a result of the exams, but practices will go on as usual. As the first game is March 28, there is little time left for work, which will make long afternoon sessions necessary regardless of the weather. Coach Hearn was pleased that there would be no spring vacation to interfere with baseball.

Yesterday Coach Hearn ran his squad through a long hitting drill finishing up with a short fielding session. Both LeGore and Tatum, out for pitcher and catcher respectively and not out last year, looked good, poling out some long hits. McKeithan and Glasgow, a couple of freshman pitchers, showed lots of stuff in throwing to the batters and will make some good varsity material in future years.

Captain Willie Powell, who has been sick for the last few days, was not out yesterday but expects to be in uniform today. It is not yet certain whether Bill Dixon, first baseman, will report next quarter or not. Among the varsity men and last year's reserves out yesterday were Parker, catcher, Crouch, pitcher; Weathers and McCaskill, infielders; and Croom, Brandt, and Peacock, outfielders.

DUKE PLAYERS OFFER SUTTON VANE DRAMA

Sutton Vane's play, Outward Bound, will be presented by the Duke Players at Page auditorium at Duke University Friday, March 10, at 8:30 o'clock. Outward Bound is a serious drama concerning a ship of the dead. The play was read last year at Chapel Hill by Harry Davis, who has also produced it. A New York success two years ago, the play has provided the plot for an outstanding movie. Ann Harding played the leading feminine role in the screen version.

KOCH ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR STATE TOUR UNDER WAY

Bill of Three Original Plays Will Be Presented to North Carolina Audiences.

The Playmakers will continue with their plans for one of the annual tours as originally scheduled, Professor Koch announced yesterday. Three plays will again be presented for the benefit of North Carolina audiences. They are: Davy Crockett, a folk drama of the Tennessee frontier by John Philip Milhous, Four On A Heath, a grotesque by Foster Fitz-Simons, and Stumbling In Dreams, a folk comedy of Tin Pan Alley by George Brown. All of these plays have been presented with considerable success, both at the University and on the previous Playmaker tour. The original casts will be retained.

The evening of March 20 Stumbling In Dreams, a comedy concerning New York theatrical producers, will be presented for the benefit of the North Carolina Association of Jewish Women at Temple Emanuel in Greensboro. After the presentation of this play the Playmakers will return to the University. March 22 the three one-act dramas, written by students in the classes in playmaking at the University, will be enacted at Elon College, Elon, North Carolina.

March 23 the program will again be given at Queens College in Charlotte, and the following night at the Consolidated School at Ellerbe. The final performance on tour will be presented at Campbell College, at Buies Creek.

These three one-act plays were chosen from a number at the experimental productions November 12. Another series of experimental plays were produced Wednesday and Friday of last week.

Theatre Takes Checks For Tickets In Crisis

The distress call of stranded exam period movie-goers was answered yesterday when E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre announced that checks for the admission price of one or more shows would be accepted from identified students. The plan was put in effect yesterday afternoon with some students purchasing as many as five tickets by check. Other checks were written for as small a sum as thirty cents, the price of one admission.

The checks will be turned in at the local bank at 11:00 o'clock the first day banks re-open for business. Students may take these checks up before this hour, Smith stated. The student council, as usual, will enforce the bad check rules.

Library Remains Open

Acting librarian R. B. Downs has announced that the library will be open for the regular hours, 8:15 o'clock until 10:00 o'clock. The library will also remain open as usual over the week-end.

Mailing Requested

At the suggestion of University authorities, the Daily Tar Heel urges that undergraduates mail home their copies of today's issue of the Daily Tar Heel to acquaint friends and parents as to the reasons for the holiday moratorium as established yesterday morning by University and student government authorities.

Dr. Graham Announces Vacation Postponement

spring registration. Students Might Drop Out "If we quit work with the holidays now students will be unable to return," President Graham asserted. "Let us stay here and work it out now with co-operation on all sides in this community. We will stay in this training camp and fight our common enemy, the depression, together. There is no cause for hysteria but rather every cause for clear thinking, faith and action."

Speaking of financial conditions of the Chapel Hill bank, President Graham said, "The Bank of Chapel Hill did not go on script in 1907, has had no run, and is in solid condition this morning but joins with North Carolina in the national holiday for a thinking period of united aggressive attack on the depression."

President Graham expressed faith in the president of the United States, the cabinet and the wisest financial statesmen "to work out a program of action to conquer fear and hysteria and lift the cruel shadow of a wide despair that falls across millions of homes where children are born."

Graham Gives Causes

Dr. Graham placed this present emergency in the context of both a long-run view of history, with its eventual rejection of panacea and magic formulae, and a wide view of the world in whose present depression this state is necessarily involved. He summarized as fundamental causes: the failure to build up corresponding social control of the great power machines and economic forces haphazardly let loose upon the world with their potentialities to destroy or rebuild the modern world; technological overproduction because of social maldistribution and underconsumption; the destruction and dislocations of the World War; the international economic war; American isolation, tariff barriers coupled with a debt policy which clogged with gold the world's arteries of trade; the speculative orgy; and a deflation policy which had accumulated the momentum of a vicious economic spiral downward cutting more and more unintelligently into the thin purchasing power of the people.

Dr. Graham asserted that "the present banking crisis, though precipitated by the financial situations in Detroit, New Orleans, Baltimore, and Akron and by the exposures in New York City, is a phase of the depression and we must all join with faith to support the president in a resolute program of action for a larger control of banking in the interests of the people, in a public works program on a wide scale and in reduction of working hours so that more people can work and buy the things they need and which the factories have need to sell."

Wide View Needed

He affirmed "the pecuniary interests of the few must become secondary to agricultural and industrial needs of the country, and the industrial organizations must more and more minister to the social and spiritual needs of all the people. "The people of North Carolina are going to keep their heads against this hour of dread. The students in our colleges and universities have the responsibility to study, work and prepare themselves to help to think and create our way out toward the great society and the Kingdom of God. We must learn more fairly to adjust the social balance of the machines that produce, the banks that control, and the people who consume."

"This is a day of a great depression and a great hope, a great catastrophe and a great opportunity. The American pioneers who stood along the fringe of the unconquered wilderness never faced an opportunity and an adventure more thrilling than that which calls to the youth of this generation as you stand with inquiring minds and courageous faith along the frontiers of the vast social possibilities of yet unmastered civilization."

NEW COMMITTEES ON STUDENT BODY ACTIVITIES MEET

Faculty and Student Groups Hold First Meetings to Organize and Plan Programs.

Two recently appointed committees, one composed of fifteen University faculty officials and the other of nine outstanding students, met in Graham Memorial yesterday to organize for the co-ordination and promotion of the work of all University agencies affecting student life. The faculty group, the Administrative Board, first accepted the responsibility placed in it, and then discussed its task. The banking crisis' effect on the University was also discussed.

Following this meeting, the advisory board composed of students gathered and organized. The committee voted unanimously to have the present personnel serve through June, and recommended that all subsequent committees end their terms in April with a hold-over member. The committees will gather for a luncheon every two weeks.

The tentative program of work for the groups was outlined at both gatherings.

Ability to study, work and prepare themselves to help to think and create our way out toward the great society and the Kingdom of God. We must learn more fairly to adjust the social balance of the machines that produce, the banks that control, and the people who consume."

"This is a day of a great depression and a great hope, a great catastrophe and a great opportunity. The American pioneers who stood along the fringe of the unconquered wilderness never faced an opportunity and an adventure more thrilling than that which calls to the youth of this generation as you stand with inquiring minds and courageous faith along the frontiers of the vast social possibilities of yet unmastered civilization."

Move On Intelligently

"We cannot hack our way out by tearing down our schools. We cannot back our way out into the simpler society of the pre-power engine era. By scientific intelligence we have physically conquered the earth and its resources. By social intelligence we must master our financial, agricultural, industrial processes for the development and happiness of all people and their children."

"The children of this depression are not, by our neglect, to be the lost generation, but are by our faith to be the generation who will rebuild a fairer world. The word on the Chapel Hill front is Forward."

President Weeks' Statement

The student council, official representative and administrative organ of the student body, yesterday recommended to the administration of the University that the usual spring vacation be postponed until Easter, in the following letter to President Graham.

"In view of the present economic crisis and banking emergency, the student council, meeting in a special session, has expressed the following opinion: That if the student body adjourns within the next few days for the spring vacation, many students will not be able to return to school for the next quarter; whereas if they remain here and continue to pursue their academic work, with the assistance of the business office of the University, they will be able to continue their enrollment during the remainder of this financial crisis."

COMER AND MCKEE ATTEND MEETINGS ON MISSION WORK

Delegates From Local Y. M. C. A. Present at Greensboro Conference Over Week-end.

The annual North Carolina conference on missions ended Sunday morning in Greensboro at the First Presbyterian church with an address by Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman on the Far-Eastern situation. Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., and President Bill McKee were registered delegates from the local association.

Leaders of the conference were Jesse Wilson, executive secretary of the student volunteer movement in America, Mrs. J. E. K. Aggrey, widow of one of the most famous characters in the history of Africa, and Miss Elizabeth Manget, southern field secretary for student volunteer movement, as well as Dr. Brockman who for thirty-five years was head of Y. M. C. A. work in Japan, China, and Korea. Two native African students of British education assisted in the general exposition of the central theme, "Rethinking Missions."

All meetings were conducted in the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro. Registered delegates from twenty-four North Carolina colleges numbered 127.

ENSEMBLE WILL OFFER CONCERTS

Orchestra Directed by Johnson Will Play Several Engagements During Quarter.

Thor Johnson, director of the Carolina salon ensemble, has announced that the ensemble will immediately begin preparations for its series of spring concerts which will include a program before the freshman and sophomore assembly late this month and appearances in Winston-Salem in April.

The ensemble made eight concert appearances during the past quarter, playing with the Playmakers and the annual meeting of the North Carolina press association here. The group also inaugurated a new plan of student entertainment devised by the director of Graham Memorial by presenting the first of a series of Sunday concerts in the main lounge of the student union.

The coming series of concerts by the ensemble will feature Harry Lee Knox as piano soloist. Among the selections he will play with the group are several compositions by Percy Grainger who appeared here in December as soloist with the State Symphony. Knox will also appear in the premier presentation of Herbert Hazelman's newest composition Grainger in the Mountains written for piano and chamber orchestra. This piece is a fantasy in the style of Grainger, modeled on his well-known Handel in the Strand. Native folk themes of the southern mountains are employed in the composition. Hazelman's selection will be featured in the Winston-Salem concerts.

World News Bulletins

Treasury Promises Money

Immediate steps to lighten hardships caused by a nationwide bank shut-down was promised yesterday. Secretary Woodin, of the treasury, asserted that the banks would be re-opened if necessary to permit payment of payrolls. He explained that where possible the payrolls would be met with clearing house certificates or script issued by the local banks, but where no such exchange means were available he would authorize the issuance of cash to meet the emergency.

What Is Scrip?

Clearing house script, now being prepared by the New York clearing house association, consists of paper certificates based on bank deposits. They are issued by a group of banks, rather than by one banking institution. A depositor appearing at a bank to cash a check would be given the full amount of the check. It would also be the money in which the pay checks were cashed, and it would be accepted by all merchants, etc., instead of the old currency. Bankers said that since the script would be accepted for deposit at par by all clearing house members, it would serve as a satisfactory medium of exchange.

Congress to Meet

A new congress, the seventy-third, will assemble Thursday at noon charged with the weighty responsibility of crushing one of the most serious crises in this nation's proud history, that of enacting legislation that will permit an orderly re-opening of banks.

TRACK STARS SET EIGHT RECORDS IN CONFERENCE RUN

rivaling Sir Malcolm Campbell and his mystery car, was Earl Widmyer, sophomore sprint sensation from Maryland. The Terps' representative ran one of his poorest races of the current season and still cut fractions from the old conference record in running the 60-yard dash in 6.3 seconds.

In the 440 and the 880, the Duke Blue Devils presented a brace of stars who not only monopolized these events but smashed records. Reichman ran the 440 in 54.1 minutes while Bradsher clipped off the 880 in 2:01.8.

Captain Billy Lauck of Virginia looked mighty good in cutting three and a fraction seconds off the old mile record. His time was 4:26.4.

Relay Record Set

Duke's relay team set another mile record, 3:36.2. The following men carried the baton for the Devils: Crist, Reichman, Brownlee, and Fulmer. Incidentally, this quartet along with Byrd and Lewis formed the nucleus of the Duke championship team.

The final record which was broken in the brilliant fete of record-smashing was in the high jump. Turner, V. P. I., cleared the bar at six feet even.

The only Carolina first was won by Wick Smith when he turned in his best exhibition of the year in vaulting 12 feet 4 1/4 inches. The Tar Heels coaching staff was favorably impressed by the showing of Childers, Caudle, Abernathy, Moore, and Williamson in their respective events.

The entire work-outs this week will be optional with hard work promised to begin next week.

DEMILLE PICTURE HEADS THEATRE'S SHOWS FOR WEEK

Wednesday's Picture Will Bring Eight Nations' Authentic Shots of World War.

Fredric March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert and Charles Laughton head the cast of Cecil B. DeMille's spectacle of pagan Rome, "The Sign of the Cross," showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Wednesday's feature, "The Big Drive," includes much film taken from official war department archives of eight nations which participated in the great war. The production shows startling and informative bits, such as actual hand to hand bayonet fighting, the spot where the first American soldier, Private Gresham was killed, and leaves a panoramic impression of terror and desolation that will not soon be forgotten.

Comedy to Play Thursday

Alison Skipworth, Roland Young, and Sari Maritza have the leading roles in the comedy, "A Lady's Profession," coming Thursday. The story has to do with a couple of titled Britons, short on money but long on ancestors who decided to recoup the family fortune by opening a speak-easy in New York.

The age-old belief in the vampire, the undead blood-sucker, is the background of "The Vampire Bat," the new Majestic picture which is Friday's attraction. Lionel Atwill and Fay Wray head the cast and are supported by Melvin Douglas, George E. Stone, Maude Eburne, Dwight Frye, Robert Fraser, and others.

John Wayne, with Shelia Terry as his leading woman, stars in "Haunted Gold," showing Saturday. Erville Alderson, Otto Hoffman, Blue Washington, Martha Mattox, Sheldon Lewis, John Prince and Harry Woods are in the supporting cast.

Contest information regarding the seventh annual competition for the Thomas Hume cup for excellence in North Carolina high school journalism was sent out yesterday by E. R. Rankin, of the University extension department. A complete file of the issues of the newspapers must be received by the judging committees before June 1.

It is stipulated by the competitive rules that the editorial and reportorial work on the newspapers which are submitted shall be done by the students, with the understanding that there will be some degree of faculty supervision. Newspapers to be eligible for competition must be published at least eight times yearly by a state public high school and must contain a short sketch in one issue about the late Dr. Thomas Hume, who was head of the University English department for several years and for whom the contest was named.

JUNIOR CLASS PLANS TO HELP FINANCE NEW WALK

The junior class' executive committee made tentative plans yesterday afternoon to pay one-half the cost for the outlay of proposed walks in front of Graham Memorial. The board of directors of the union building earlier in the afternoon decided to offer to pay one-half the cost and to find other organizations willing to contribute the remainder.

A Personal Sacrifice For a University Good

In giving up their right to the regular spring holidays at this time, the members of the student body are rendering to the University a service which will certainly help the institution to tide over this present banking crisis in a manner otherwise impossible. For once in their college life the students are surrendering their own personal pleasures for the good of a worthy institution.

Undoubtedly the postponement of the holidays will be of considerable inconvenience to a great many of the students. But when they realize that they are having a part in the salvation of an institution so essential to the advancement and development of the state as the University, their personal desires will lose all their predominance.

A postponement of the holidays and a continuation of the classes will actually result in even more of a concession on the part of the administration than on the part of the students themselves. For because of the present financial crisis, the business office of the University has signified its willingness to accept students' checks as payment of tuition until the banking situation is once more normal.

A most logical step has been taken. It will mean a sacrifice from the students, but, more important, the salvation of the University from what might have been certain disaster. The quicker the members of the student body realize this fact and adjust themselves accordingly, the greater will be the success of the postponement action.

A Vision in Leadership

In the midst of these troubled times the University of North Carolina has suffered severely from the nation's condition and from the deprivations made upon our budget by a desperate state. Amid the attending gloom we have one cause for gratitude.

In President Graham we have a man who, as far as learning and ability are concerned, is all that might be desired. This is true of many college presidents; it is not upon these virtues that reposes the major burden of our hope.

We rejoice in the possession of a man at our head whose loyalty and interest are firmly imbedded not in universities but in this University. We have a guiding spirit that does not flit about the country lured by a larger salary or the presidency of a larger school, but who stays with us in woe as in weal.

Frank Graham is a North Carolinian and an alumnus of this school. His family has been of influence here before him. By education, sentiment, and patriotism he is firmly bound to us. In fair weather he may direct our growth to greater heights, in the storm he remains steadfast at the helm sacrificing himself so that we may live. He has rendered every service that his position demands, but he has not stopped at that. In the hour of trial he has gone far beyond exerting all his energy and effort to help the University and the student body to see it through.

Were we to lose him now it would be the direst calamity that might befall. But we know that our head stands a man beyond the power of prestige or money to purchase, a man who is here because his heart is in the University of North Carolina. Gathered behind him we can survive and overcome the buffets of the angry times. Where there is no vision the people perish. In Frank Graham we have that vision.—J.F.A.

Rally 'Round The Flag

The crisis has been reached. American business is at a standstill. The day of reckoning is at hand. Forced by unsettled conditions and unpredictable contingencies, the states one after another closed their banks, until the panic had reached every corner of the nation. Then, Sunday night, President Roosevelt, scarcely having warmed the seat of his White House chair, declared a four-day national bank holiday and placed an embargo upon the hoarding of money, in any form. American business stops to regain its balance, to evaluate its position.

There is comparatively little money in circulation. Bank credit cannot be had. What is to be done? David Lawrence, referring to the experience of 1907, says that temporary credit must be supplied with a system of clearing house certificates, a form of script, to allow local business to go forward. Banks must combine in associations, pool what liquid assets they have and issue credit certificates on those assets. Through modern means of communication and business transaction, says Mr. Lawrence, this will soon be accomplished. Meanwhile, all people, as friends and neighbors, should work together to open up channels of trade and to devise credit systems. There is enough food, clothing and housing for everybody; means must be devised to make possible exchange in these things. After such emergency measures have served their temporary purpose, it is hoped that laws will have been passed to strengthen and unify our forty-nine banking systems so that no debacle of the present kind can occur in the future.

University students have a part to play in this emergency situation. There are hundreds who cannot get the money to go home and almost as many who could not come back to the University while the banks were closed or were issuing only credit certificates. So, the University administration is erecting credit machinery that will provide for students to remain in Chapel Hill until the national situation is cleared up. If their plans work out, students will be given room, board and University fees until their funds are released and payments can be made. It is a unprecedented situation. Credit must be established. It is only through courage, faith and complete co-operation that this can be done. The University expects those things from its students.—E.C.D.

Now Is the Time

For All

In keeping with the policy of action advocated in his inaugural speech Saturday, President Roosevelt has taken the initiative in forestalling the national crisis which was imminent in banking circles.

The country awaits the action which is to follow with breathless anxiety. Never before has the country been faced with such immediate danger. All the institutions which have been built up in nearly two centuries in this country are on the edge of the precipice, and only a strong arm, given free play, can preserve them from the fall.

Whatever the president may be able to accomplish depends on the backing he receives from the American people, especially those who have been vested with authority. This is no time to play politics; this is no time for quibbling. The president must have the backing of the whole people if he is to avert the catastrophe which has already enveloped many of the other nations of the world. Now is the test time. Our response will determine the destiny of the nation.—W.A.S.

Seeing March Out

Like a Lamb

President Roosevelt has declared a bank holiday, in effect, a suspension of all banking activities throughout the country until Friday. For the incoming president, March is raging in like a lion. The financial situation of today is unprecedented in history in its perplexing magnitude. We have spent enough time in conjecture and dismal wailing. Now is the moment for action, that action for which the country has been asking, praying,—voting. Our new president has on his second day in office shown himself a leader. Instead of appointing committees to appoint sub-committees to investigate our banking situation, he has declared without an instant's hesitation for a drastic promulgation. The financial structure of the country has become clogged with the dust of outworn functions. Roosevelt wants a housecleaning.

As every housewife knows, the spring of the year brings with it something besides robins and apple blossoms. It brings an unpleasant duty, one whose performance will considerably inconvenience the inhabitants of the household. Father's slippers will be lost in a pile of chairs, grandfather will find his bookcase an unsightly foreign land, and the children's toys will be completely submerged in mops and rugs. This familiar annual pestilence must be taken philosophically. And that philosophy must not be a dismal cursing of fate, a disconsolate and reluctant acceptance; it had better be a cheerful willingness to suffer discomfort until the floors and furniture shine once again. And so with President Roosevelt. He has answered the insistent challenge demanding action. Now let us do our share. Let us yield neither to self-pity nor, worse, to panic. Let us be cheerful in what is at worst an embarrassing situation, for there is no reason why March should not bow to tradition and go out like a lamb.—D.D.T.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

On the Sidelines

A keen observer of political economy, this department is now on the spot night and day with news notes of the moribund (Winchell) and our usual variety of saccharine comment. Although we must confess that we don't know what it's all about, since our philosophy is one of faith in Am.Tel.&Tel., the News and Observer, and the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, our ear is to the ground and our palsied hands still clutch the battered keys of our L. C. Smith (four bank keyboard, reversible ribbon, tabular, etc.)

The Bull's Head was the first institution to suffer a run yesterday morning. It seems that you pay a dollar on deposit to cover the cost of replacing rental books and this is paid back when the spirit moves. A timid lady appeared at the proprietor's desk and asked for her dollar back thirty seconds after the shop opened. But that was the only withdrawal, we are glad to report. The rest of the book shop money is in the bank on a separate account where it is absolutely safe. Faith has been restored in the Bull's Head.

An observer reports that Ashby Penn was reduced to borrowing a Camel. He hid behind a building to smoke it also.

Those folks who made a bet that all the banks in the country would be closed four months to the day after Roosevelt took office (viz. Fourth of July, nat'l. hol.) are getting a good laugh already.

The only happy man we saw on Franklin street this morning was a gentleman who had overdrawn his account Saturday morning.

It was called to our attention that Harley Shufford was seen writing English notes in a check book.

President

The inauguration ceremonies in Washington Saturday bothered us no end. We clung beside the radio until the Chief Justice had administered the oath of office to Roosevelt, being afraid all the time that he might call Hoover to the stand by himself. Then we would have had more years of Hoover, any way out of it.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To The Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

To one raised in the faith of John Philip Sousa was the word in band music, the program of the University Symphonic Band last Wednesday night was like a challenge to proprieties—Bach, Mendelssohn, Tchaikowsky! Think of the diet for a band—a brass band. The execution was as extraordinary as the daring of the program, and, with Stringfield's creation of artistic composition out of the folk life of our state, his development of composition out of its soil, the formation of a State Symphony Orchestra and a Little Symphony Orchestra, contributes to making the recent past memorable in our musical life. Why, when I came here in 1909, I never expected to live to hear a symphony orchestra in this state; now, two orchestras and a symphonic band.

As I listened to classical music elegantly rendered on brasses by a competent personnel clad in tuxedos, I could not help wondering if this could possibly be the band that, several years ago, we were begging money to buy breeches for. It sure has grown up, and Mr. McCorkle deserves the highest praise for raising it.

CAROLINA

TRACK STARS SET EIGHT RECORDS IN CONFERENCE RUN

Northern Teams in Old Southern Conference Seem Superior to Southerners.

Smashing all but four of the twelve Southern conference records, which were hung high by the old Southern conference group, and breaking down the old fallacy that the southeastern clubs were superior to their northern neighbors, Carolina played the role of a gracious hostess to nine entries in the Southern conference indoor games Saturday.

In the three previously staged indoor track carnivals, Carolina had established four records, but with the conclusion of Saturday's pyrotechnics the Tar Heels had no records to their credit. The former conference embraced such strong aggregations of Georgia, Ole Mississippi, Tulane, and L. S. U. affording a keen bit of competition for all teams in the conference. Many sports followers then contended that the southeastern clubs were far superior in calibre to their northern neighbors, but this fallacy was smashed Saturday along with eight records; proving conclusively that the Southern conference always will find plenty of competition in track among the members of the family.

World Record Set

Among the record-breaking events run off in the Tin Can was the sensational exhibition that Brownlee, Duke, put on in the 70-yard low hurdles. He set a world's record of 7.8 seconds for the event. Eli Finklestein, great rival of Brownlee, captured high honors when he broke a conference record in the 70-yard high hurdles; running the event in the fine time of 8.9 seconds.

dents who do not find the arrangement adequate may call at the office of the chairman of the student check committee in the law offices of Phipps and Ranson (over W. C. Lyon Co.) where checks may be authorized after an investigation of credit."

Resolution Adopted

The resolution was unanimously adopted by the some thirty-five merchants gathered at the meeting. The resolution, as is stated, will lay the responsibility of credit upon the individual merchant, who may accept checks drawn by his regular patrons or by persons whose credit he has ascertained. If he is unaware of the credit of any student, he may require him to present his check to the student check committee office where a member of the student council will determine the amount of credit of the student.

This applies also to those undergraduates who have not established credit in Chapel Hill and whose transactions have been carried on in the past with cash. Upon presentation of their checks and reasonable assurance of validity, the student councilman in charge will affix his approval and the check will be cleared for the student.

Council's Responsibility

However, the student council will not take any responsibility for checks passed by merchants not properly countersigned by an official of the student government. The student council will, to the best of its ability, endeavor to enforce payment of the check when the banks are opened. In all cases such as

Plans for Scrip Dropped

At an early meeting of the Credit Association in the Methodist church Sunday school building yesterday afternoon, tentative plans were made for the issuance of scrip. It was later decided, upon the acquaintance of a federal government request that no scrip be issued by states or cities, that this procedure would be abandoned.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL learned last night that neither the state of North Carolina nor any of its city governments contemplate issuing script money until sanction Measures were taken yesterday to grant greater power to the bank commissioner and to the governor to deal with the situation when the federal government acts.

Rumors were also partially verified that a possible continuance of the bank holiday is not improbable. Meanwhile, every effort is being exerted both in Raleigh and in Washington to stabilize the banking system within a few days.

Marty Levinson Sacrificed Chance At Featherweight Title For Team

Tar Heel Captain Took Chance of Winning Over Goldstein Instead Of Sure Victory in Lower Division; Put Up Game Battle Against Scott With Broken Arm.

For two years Marty Levinson had tried in vain to annex the Southern conference featherweight title and each year had been forced to stand by and see his bitter rival, Bobby Goldstein of Virginia accept the coveted award. This year Marty was a strong favorite to win. But Norm Quarles, who had been fighting lightweight all year with great success despite his having to spot several pounds in weight every time had a badly injured right hand, and it was suggested that the two boys trade places.

Marty thought of the two years he had fought in vain for the featherweight title, of the ease with which he could probably win the crown this year, and said no. Quarles had fought lightweights successfully all season, why should he be forced to throw away his chances for glory in order to favor his teammate's injury?

There was reason and justice behind Marty's thinking, for a college fighter gets only the glory of winning for his troubles, and Marty was still due his just share of glory.

The argument was apparently ended, but Coach Crayton Rowe was serious about shifting his line-up.

"It's this way Marty," he said, "either of you boys can come through in the featherweight all right. If you get in the lightweight you are practically sure of going to the finals, and you have a good enough chance of beating Goldstein. If Quarles fights as a lightweight, he may go along all right, but if he hurts that hand again, we're sunk. We may not get any points out of that division that way."

Marty was still not convinced. "It's the only way we've got a chance to win the title Marty," Rowe told him.

A smile broke out on his face, he grinned.

"Oh yeah? Then I'm a lightweight. Never mind the featherweight title. I'll get you three points in the lightweight and maybe beat Goldstein."

So it was settled. Quarles breezed through the featherweights with two knock-outs and a forfeit. But the Levinson side of the affair turned out a tragedy.

Graham ended with the reassuring idea that as the seniors of the nineteenth century achieved the heights of technology that the seniors of the twentieth century with their knowledge of social sciences would lead the country to greater ultimate happiness for all mankind. Previous to the address by President Graham, R. B. House made a short address expressing his sensing of the undercurrent of mobilization in the student body against the depression, comparing it with the feeling in 1917 when the students of the University mobilized in the interest of a different service.

After the speeches by President Graham and House, Charlie Rose motioned that the senior class go on record as favoring the decision of the student council in declaring postponement of the holidays and that the class work toward the influence of confidence among all University students. His motion was accepted by a unanimous chorus of ayes from the assembled class.

In the first bracket of the tournament Marty faced Scott of Duke, a big tall boy, with strength and punch, and Marty weighed 126 pounds, almost twelve pounds less than Scott. In the first round he piled up a tremendous margin in points and was on his way to an easy victory.

Breaks Wrist in Second Round

Marty backed away, clutched the ropes with his left, used his right often, and continued to hold an edge throughout the second round.

He went back in the third round, grabbed the ropes with his left hand, banged Scott with his right whenever possible and was still leading at the end of the round, during which he had spent almost the entire time holding the rope with that left hand.

Collapses After Bout

When Levinson was announced the victor, he stood up and started to crawl through the ropes. Instead he collapsed. His left arm was broken in three places. He was so weak with pain that he was unable to walk, yet he had fought almost two rounds with his arm in that condition and had kept it a secret.

Ringside observers termed it the gamest exhibition ever produced at the tournament, but Levinson spent the night in a Charlottesville hospital and stood by again to see Goldstein win the title.

Marty received hearty applause when he was carried from the ringside, but it was nothing to the ovation rendered him next day when it was announced that due to his injury he would have to forfeit his semi-final bout to Burns of Maryland. The audience stood for several moments to cheer him.

And fight fans everywhere are paying due respect to a boy who sacrificed his chance at a championship for the sake of his team, who refused to quit merely because he wasn't made that way.

Captains Boxers

Platt Landis, Southern Conference title-holder in the heavy-weight class, will lead the Tar Heel mittmen next year. in sponsoring the event and that other organizations on the campus be asked to co-operate and to help entertain the visiting parents and friends with their facilities and activities. It was the prevalent opinion of the group that an event of this sort would bring about a closer relationship between the students, parents, and faculty and that it would bring into closer contact with the University those parents who otherwise would not get an inclusive view of the campus and activities.

The board was unanimous in its endorsement of this proposal, and President Haywood Weeks appointed a committee from the group to investigate possibilities and make plans for the occasion. The committee appointed is composed of Mayne Albright, director of the union building, chairman, Dean Bradshaw, and Mary Frances Parker, president of the Woman's association.

BASEBALL SQUAD BEGINS PRACTICE

Coach Hearn Will Conduct Practices Every Afternoon Until Season Begins.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Bunn Hearn called his first outdoor baseball practice for the Carolina 1933 baseball team on Emerson field. A fair-sized squad was out, but Coach Hearn expects to see a much bigger one report today.

Daily practices will take place from now on starting at 3:00 o'clock each afternoon. Coach Hearn said it was not necessary for baseball candidates to report the rest of this quarter, as a result of the exams, but practices will go on as usual. As the first game is March 28, there is little time left for work, which will make long afternoon sessions necessary regardless of the weather. Coach Hearn was pleased that there would be no spring vacation to interfere with baseball.

Yesterday Coach Hearn ran his squad through a long hitting drill finishing up with a short fielding session. Both LeGore and Tatum, out for pitcher and catcher respectively and not out last year, looked good, poling out some long hits. McKeithan and Glasgow, a couple of freshman pitchers, showed lots of stuff in throwing to the batters and will make some good varsity material in future years.

Captain Willie Powell, who has been sick for the last few days, was not out yesterday but expects to be in uniform today. It is not yet certain whether Bill Dixon, first baseman, will report next quarter or not. Among the varsity men and last year's reserves out yesterday were Parker, catcher, Crouch, pitcher; Weathers and McCaskill, infielders; and Croom, Brandt, and Peacock, outfielders.

DUKE PLAYERS OFFER SUTTON VANE DRAMA

Sutton Vane's play, Outward Bound, will be presented by the Duke Players at Page auditorium at Duke University Friday, March 10, at 8:30 o'clock. Outward Bound is a serious drama concerning a ship of the dead. The play was read last year at Chapel Hill by Harry Davis, who has also produced it. A New York success two years ago, the play has provided the plot for an outstanding movie. Ann Harding played the leading feminine role in the screen version.

KOCH ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR STATE TOUR UNDER WAY

Bill of Three Original Plays Will Be Presented to North Carolina Audiences.

The Playmakers will continue with their plans for one of the annual tours as originally scheduled. Professor Koch announced yesterday. Three plays will again be presented for the benefit of North Carolina audiences. They are: Davy Crockett, a folk drama of the Tennessee frontier by John Philip Milhous, Four On A Heath, a grotesque by Foster Fitz-Simons, and Stumbling In Dreams, a folk comedy of Tin Pan Alley by George Brown. All of these plays have been presented with considerable success, both at the University and on the previous Playmaker tour. The original casts will be retained.

The evening of March 20 Stumbling In Dreams, a comedy concerning New York theatrical producers, will be presented for the benefit of the North Carolina Association of Jewish Women at Temple Emanuel in Greensboro. After the presentation of this play the Playmakers will return to the University. March 22 the three one-act dramas, written by students in the classes in playmaking at the University, will be enacted at Elon College, Elon, North Carolina.

March 23 the program will again be given at Queens College in Charlotte, and the following night at the Consolidated School at Ellerbe. The final performance on tour will be presented at Campbell College, at Buies Creek.

These three one-act plays were chosen from a number at the experimental productions November 12. Another series of experimental plays were produced Wednesday and Friday of last week.

Theatre Takes Checks For Tickets In Crisis

The distress call of stranded exam period movie-goers was answered yesterday when E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre announced that checks for the admission price of one or more shows would be accepted from identified students. The plan was put in affect yesterday afternoon with some students purchasing as many as five tickets by check. Other checks were written for as small a sum as thirty cents, the price of one admission.

The checks will be turned in at the local bank at 11:00 o'clock the first day banks re-open for business. Students may take these checks up before this hour, Smith stated. The student council, as usual, will enforce the bad check rules.

Library Remains Open

Acting librarian R. B. Downs has announced that the library will be open for the regular hours, 8:15 o'clock until 10:00 o'clock. The library will also remain open as usual over the week-end.

Mailing Requested

At the suggestion of University authorities, the Daily Tar Heel urges that undergraduates mail home their copies of today's issue of the Daily Tar Heel to acquaint friends and parents as to the reasons for the holiday moratorium as established yesterday morning by University and student government authorities.

Dr. Graham Announces Vacation Postponement

Students Might Drop Out
"If we quit work with the holidays now students will be unable to return," President Graham asserted. "Let us stay here and work it out now with co-operation on all sides in this community. We will stay in this training camp and fight our common enemy, the depression, together. There is no cause for hysteria but rather every cause for clear thinking, faith and action."

Speaking of financial conditions of the Chapel Hill bank, President Graham said, "The Bank of Chapel Hill did not go on script in 1907, has had no run, and is in solid condition this morning but joins with North Carolina in the national holiday for a thinking period of united aggressive attack on the depression."

President Graham expressed faith in the president of the United States, the cabinet and the wisest financial statesmen "to work out a program of action to conquer fear and hysteria and lift the cruel shadow of a wide despair that falls across millions of homes where children are born."

Graham Gives Causes

Dr. Graham placed this present emergency in the context of both a long-run view of history, with its eventual rejection of panacea and magic formulae, and a wide view of the world in whose present depression this state is necessarily involved. He summarized as fundamental causes: the failure to build up corresponding social control of the great power machines and economic forces haphazardly let loose upon the world with their potentialities to destroy or rebuild the modern world; technological overproduction because of social maldistribution and underconsumption; the destruction and dislocations of the World War; the international economic war; American isolation, tariff barriers coupled with a debt policy which clogged with gold the world's arteries of trade; the speculative orgy; and a deflation policy which had accumulated the momentum of a vicious economic spiral downward cutting more and more unintelligently into the thin purchasing power of the people.

Dr. Graham asserted that "the present banking crisis, though precipitated by the financial situations in Detroit, New Orleans, Baltimore, and Akron and by the exposures in New York City, is a phase of the depression and we must all join with faith to support the president in a resolute program of action for a larger control of banking in the interests of the people, in a public works program on a wide scale and in reduction of working hours so that more people can work and buy the things they need and which the factories have need to sell."

Wide View Needed

He affirmed "the pecuniary interests of the few must become secondary to agricultural and industrial needs of the country, and the industrial organizations must more and more minister to the social and spiritual needs of all the people."

"The people of North Carolina are going to keep their heads against this hour of dread. The students in our colleges and universities have the responsibility to study, work and prepare themselves to help to think and create our way out toward the great society and the Kingdom of God. We must learn more fairly to adjust the social balance of the machines that produce, the banks that control, and the people who consume."

NEW COMMITTEES ON STUDENT BODY ACTIVITIES MEET

Faculty and Student Groups Hold First Meetings to Organize and Plan Programs.

Two recently appointed committees, one composed of fifteen University faculty officials and the other of nine outstanding students, met in Graham Memorial yesterday to organize for the co-ordination and promotion of the work of all University agencies affecting student life. The faculty group, the Administrative Board, first accepted the responsibility placed in it, and then discussed its task. The banking crisis' effect on the University was also discussed.

Following this meeting, the advisory board composed of students gathered and organized. The committee voted unanimously to have the present personnel serve through June, and recommended that all subsequent committees end their terms in April with a hold-over member. The committees will gather for a luncheon every two weeks.

The tentative program of work for the groups was outlined at both gatherings.

bility to study, work and prepare themselves to help to think and create our way out toward the great society and the Kingdom of God. We must learn more fairly to adjust the social balance of the machines that produce, the banks that control, and the people who consume."

"This is a day of a great depression and a great hope, a great catastrophe and a great opportunity. The American pioneers who stood along the fringe of the unconquered wilderness never faced an opportunity and an adventure more thrilling than that which calls to the youth of this generation as you stand with inquiring minds and courageous faith along the frontiers of the vast social possibilities of yet unmastered civilization."

Move On Intelligently

"We cannot hack our way out by tearing down our schools. We cannot back our way out into the simpler society of the pre-power engine era. By scientific intelligence we have physically conquered the earth and its resources. By social intelligence we must master our financial, agricultural, industrial processes for the development and happiness of all people and their children."

"The children of this depression are not, by our neglect, to be the lost generation, but are by our faith to be the generation who will rebuild a fairer world. The word on the Chapel Hill front is Forward."

President Weeks' Statement

The student council, official representative and administrative organ of the student body, yesterday recommended to the administration of the University that the usual spring vacation be postponed until Easter, in the following letter to President Graham.

"In view of the present economic crisis and banking emergency, the student council, meeting in a special session, has expressed the following opinion: That if the student body adjourns within the next few days for the spring vacation, many students will not be able to return to school for the next quarter; whereas if they remain here and continue to pursue their academic work, with the assistance of the business office of the University, they will be able to continue their enrollment during the remainder of this financial crisis."

COMER AND MCKEE ATTEND MEETINGS ON MISSION WORK

Delegates From Local Y. M. C. A. Present at Greensboro Conference Over Week-end.

The annual North Carolina conference on missions ended Sunday morning in Greensboro at the First Presbyterian church with an address by Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman on the Far-Eastern situation. Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., and President Bill McKee were registered delegates from the local association.

Leaders of the conference were Jesse Wilson, executive secretary of the student volunteer movement in America, Mrs. J. E. K. Aggrey, widow of one of the most famous characters in the history of Africa, and Miss Elizabeth Manget, southern field secretary for student volunteer movement, as well as Dr. Brockman who for thirty-five years was head of Y. M. C. A. work in Japan, China, and Korea. Two native African students of British education assisted in the general exposition of the central theme, "Rethinking Missions."

All meetings were conducted in the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro. Registered delegates from twenty-four North Carolina colleges numbered 127.

ENSEMBLE WILL OFFER CONCERTS

Orchestra Directed by Johnson Will Play Several Engagements During Quarter.

Thor Johnson, director of the Carolina salon ensemble, has announced that the ensemble will immediately begin preparations for its series of spring concerts which will include a program before the freshman and sophomore assembly late this month and appearances in Winston-Salem in April.

The ensemble made eight concert appearances during the past quarter, playing with the Playmakers and the annual meeting of the North Carolina press association here. The group also inaugurated a new plan of student entertainment devised by the director of Graham Memorial by presenting the first of a series of Sunday concerts in the main lounge of the student union.

The coming series of concerts by the ensemble will feature Harry Lee Knox as piano soloist. Among the selections he will play with the group are several compositions by Percy Grainger who appeared here in December as soloist with the State Symphony. Knox will also appear in the premier presentation of Herbert Hazelman's newest composition Grainger in the Mountains written for piano and chamber orchestra. This piece is a fantasy in the style of Grainger, modeled on his well-known Handel in the Strand. Native folk themes of the southern mountains are employed in the composition. Hazelman's selection will be featured in the Winston-Salem concerts.

World News Bulletins

Treasury Promises Money

Immediate steps to lighten hardships caused by a nationwide bank shut-down was promised yesterday. Secretary Woodin, of the treasury, asserted that the banks would be re-opened if necessary to permit payment of payrolls. He explained that where possible the payrolls would be met with clearing house certificates or script issued by the local banks, but where no such exchange means were available he would authorize the issuance of cash to meet the emergency.

What Is Scrip?

Clearing house script, now being prepared by the New York clearing house association, consists of paper certificates based on bank deposits. They are issued by a group of banks, rather than by one banking institution. A depositor appearing at a bank to cash a check would be given the full amount of the check. It would also be the money in which the pay checks were cashed, and it would be accepted by all merchants, etc., instead of the old currency. Bankers said that since the script would be accepted for deposit at par by all clearing house members, it would serve as a satisfactory medium of exchange.

Congress to Meet

A new congress, the seventy-third, will assemble Thursday at noon charged with the weighty responsibility of crushing one of the most serious crises in this nation's proud history, that of enacting legislation that will permit an orderly re-opening of banks.

TRACK STARS SET EIGHT RECORDS IN CONFERENCE RUN

rivaling Sir Malcolm Campbell and his mystery car, was Earl Widmyer, sophomore sprint sensation from Maryland. The Terps' representative ran one of his poorest races of the current season and still cut fractions from the old conference record in running the 60-yard dash in 6.3 seconds.

In the 440 and the 880, the Duke Blue Devils presented a brace of stars who not only monopolized these events but smashed records. Reichman ran the 440 in 54.1 minutes while Bradsher clipped off the 880 in 2:01.8.

Captain Billy Lauck of Virginia looked mighty good in cutting three and a fraction seconds off the old mile record. His time was 4:26.4.

Relay Record Set

Duke's relay team set another mile record, 3:36.2. The following men carried the baton for the Devils: Crist, Reichman, Brownlee, and Fulmer. Incidentally, this quartet along with Byrd and Lewis formed the nucleus of the Duke championship team.

The final record which was broken in the brilliant fete of record-smashing was in the high jump. Turner, V. P. I., cleared the bar at six feet even.

The only Carolina first was won by Wick Smith when he turned in his best exhibition of the year in vaulting 12 feet 4 1/4 inches. The Tar Heels coaching staff was favorably impressed by the showing of Childers, Caudle, Abernathy, Moore, and Williamson in their respective events.

The entire work-outs this week will be optional with hard work promised to begin next week.

DEMILLE PICTURE HEADS THEATRE'S SHOWS FOR WEEK

Wednesday's Picture Will Bring Eight Nations' Authentic Shots of World War.

Fredric March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert and Charles Laughton head the cast of Cecil B. DeMille's spectacle of pagan Rome, "The Sign of the Cross," showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Wednesday's feature, "The Big Drive," includes much film taken from official war department archives of eight nations which participated in the great war. The production shows startling and informative bits, such as actual hand to hand bayonet fighting, the spot where the first American soldier, Private Gresham was killed, and leaves a panoramic impression of terror and desolation that will not soon be forgotten.

Comedy to Play Thursday

Alison Skipworth, Roland Young, and Sari Maritza have the leading roles in the comedy, "A Lady's Profession," coming Thursday. The story has to do with a couple of titled Britons, short on money but long on ancestors who decided to recoup the family fortune by opening a speak-easy in New York.

The age-old belief in the vampire, the undead blood-sucker, is the background of "The Vampire Bat," the new Majestic picture which is Friday's attraction. Lionel Atwill and Fay Wray head the cast and are supported by Melvin Douglas, George E. Stone, Maude Eburne, Dwight Frye, Robert Fraser, and others.

John Wayne, with Shelia Terry as his leading woman, stars in "Haunted Gold," showing Saturday. Erville Alderson, Otto Hoffman, Blue Washington, Martha Mattox, Sheldon Lewis, John Prince and Harry Woods are in the supporting cast.

INFORMATION ON JOURNALISM CUP SENT TO SCHOOLS

University Extension Division Mails Data to High Schools About Thomas Hume Cup.

Contest information regarding the seventh annual competition for the Thomas Hume cup for excellence in North Carolina high school journalism was sent out yesterday by E. R. Rankin, of the University extension department. A complete file of the issues of the newspapers must be received by the judging committees before June 1.

It is stipulated by the competitive rules that the editorial and reportorial work on the newspapers which are submitted shall be done by the students, with the understanding that there will be some degree of faculty supervision. Newspapers to be eligible for competition must be published at least eight times yearly by a state public high school and must contain a short sketch in one issue about the late Dr. Thomas Hume, who was head of the University English department for several years and for whom the contest was named.

JUNIOR CLASS PLANS TO HELP FINANCE NEW WALK

The junior class' executive committee made tentative plans yesterday afternoon to pay one-half the cost for the outlay of proposed walks in front of Graham Memorial. The board of directors of the union building earlier in the afternoon decided to offer to pay one-half the cost and to find other organizations willing to contribute the remainder.

FACULTY MAKES NEW REGULATIONS FOR RE-ADMISSION

Students Enrolled Last Quarter
Eligible for Re-admission
Under Either Rules.

A new system of regulations pertaining to re-admission to the University was adopted at a meeting of faculty members last week. Students enrolled in the University during the winter quarter are now eligible for re-admission under either the old or new rules.

The new rules stipulate that upperclassmen who have passed two courses during the preceding quarter are eligible for re-admission. Under the old rule, however, upperclassmen are now eligible providing they have passed a total of four courses during the last two quarters and a total of seven during the last three quarters. This rule holds true even though an upperclassman may have passed only one course during the winter quarter, providing he has fulfilled the other requirements during the past fall and spring quarters.

Comparison of Rules

Whereas the quarter requirements under the new rule are stricter than those of the old rule, the new rule is more lenient in the yearly requirements. Under the old rule an upperclassman was required to pass at least one course by the end of the first quarter, four by the end of the second, and a total of seven by the end of the third. Under the new rule he is required to pass at least two courses a quarter, a total of six for the year.

In regard to freshmen the new rules require that they pass at least one subject every quarter and a total of five for the

ATLANTA TO HEAR STUDENT'S WORK

All-Southern High School Orchestra Will Play Hazelman's "Danse Moronique."

Herbert Hazelman, undergraduate music student, will appear in Atlanta next week at the performance of his Danse Moronique by the all-Southern high school orchestra under the direction of Dr. J. E. Maddy, head of music at the University of Michigan.

Hazelman's Danse Moronique was first performed by the Carolina Salon ensemble, conducted by Thor Johnson, and the North Carolina State symphony, under Lamar Stringfield, here last spring. It was performed by the National Symphony orchestra of Washington, D. C., last November where it was acclaimed by the press as an outstanding example of musicianship among young American composers.

The selection of Hazelman's composition for the Atlanta concert came as a result of the performance of several of Hazelman's smaller works at the summer music camp at Interlochen, Michigan, where Dr. Maddy is director. Hazelman has also been requested to prepare a composition for the young American composer's program at the World's Fair in Chicago which will be presented by the National high school orchestra in August.

DEBATERS TO MEET THREE SCHOOLS IN FORENSIC CONTESTS

Local Men Will Engage Teams of Georgetown, Pittsburgh, and New York University.

Carolina's varsity debating team, composed of D. R. Seawell and F. A. Rankin, left on a northern tour Saturday. They are to debate three northern schools, Georgetown, Pittsburgh, and New York University.

In Washington, the Carolina debaters argued the affirmative side of the query, Resolved: That the U. S. should adopt the British radio system of control. This debate was broadcast over the Washington radio station.

They are next scheduled to meet the Pittsburgh debating team arguing on the war debt cancellation. Their final meet is with the N. Y. U. debating club; their subject for debate will be concerning the emergence of women from the home.

Two proposed trips were called off due to the recent financial troubles. A team composed of Bill Eddleman and McBryde Fleming-Jones was scheduled to go to Tulane while still another team composed of A. J. Kaplan and Phillip Russell was scheduled for another trip north.

ROOSEVELT PICKS TWO ALUMNI FOR AMBASSADORSHIPS

Josephus Daniels and Robert W. Bingham Among Appointees Named by President.

Among the appointments made by President Roosevelt yesterday and sent to the senate for consideration were those of two alumni of the University, Josephus Daniels of Raleigh and Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, Kentucky, as ambassadors to Mexico and Great Britain respectively.

Daniels was a law student at the University during 1884 and 1885. In 1914 he was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of law. Since his student days Daniels has been constantly in the service of the public, having served as editor of the News and Observer and secretary of navy under Woodrow Wilson. He served his party as national committeeman from 1897 to 1920. Since 1901 appointee Daniels has been a member of the University board of trustees.

In order for the petition to be sent on to the district committee it is necessary that the Presbytery pass the proposal.

Uncertain Student Body Forgets Cares For "Depression Week-End"

From "42nd Street" Through Baseball Game, Dance and Program, "Prosperity," Sunday Tea, and Reading, All of Student Body Attending Enjoys Care-Free Days.

Slightly uncertain as to what it was celebrating, the student body discarded academic, financial, and social cares last week-end to indulge itself undividedly in the skillfully planned and executed "depression week-end." In addition to being a splendid antidote for mourning the lost vacation, the week-end festivities revealed an unusual cooperative spirit in the town and University. This is best attested by the fact that practically every item on the full and varied program was absolutely free, all entertainment having been contributed.

To contradict that statement came the first number of the celebration, "42nd Street," the sparkling musical comedy that packed the Carolina all day Saturday. Although Manager Carington Smith couldn't give free shows, he did accept checks from those without cash.

Whistling the strongly reminiscent tunes from the picture, a large number of students sat in Emerson stadium that afternoon to watch Coach Hearn's two first string teams open the Chapel Hill baseball season to the accompaniment of innumerable "dopes" and embryonic sun-tans. The high-water mark of the jollification was reached Saturday evening when the student body participated en masse in the depression dance at the Tin Can to the dulcet strains of Archie Davis' orchestra. One of the largest dances ever staged at the University, the estimated attendance being 2,800, it also had the distinction of being one of the first to offer a program of entertainment.

Albright Officials

Punster Mayne Albright, who just never will learn, officiated in brisk fashion. His first introduction was a sword swallower who astounded the audience with his ability to start a meal with a fine Damascus blade and top it off with a choice electric bulb. During the course of his public banquet, he also consumed such delicacies as tacks, fish hooks, and safety pins. It is rumored that he strongly recommends razor blades with Worcestershire sauce as an excellent diet.

The great of the nation did their part in making it an enjoyable week-end. Signed telegrams were read from such luminaries as Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Groucho Marx, Josephus Daniels, Blanche Calloway, and Rudy Vallee, all of whom expressed typical personal sentiments on conditions in Chapel Hill and the world outside. Of course when Albright read Roosevelt's wire "I have instructed your cashier to let you boys have all the money you want," general pandemonium reigned for a moment.

Then the skeptical collegians realized that the telegrams were merely the result of some clever heads bent on adding good-natured hoaxes to the entertainment. Good clean fun, they thought, secretly hoping against

Head Of Woman's College Holds High Place In Educational Ranks

Dr. Julius I. Foust, Second President of N. C. C. W. and Vice-President of University, Has Been Instrumental in Rise of Education in North Carolina.

By virtue of his leadership of the North Carolina College for Women during its formative period, Dr. Julius I. Foust, vice-president of that institution since the act of consolidation, has been instrumental in the rise of education to its present commanding status throughout the state. The Woman's College at Greensboro came into being as a direct result of the crusade made by Dr. Charles Duncan McIver in behalf of the education of women as a means of educating the whole people, and since the latter's death in 1906, Dr. Foust has been carrying out the broad outlines of work laid down by his predecessor.

In the course of his ascendancy to his present rank, Foust has been connected intimately with the state educational system. Following his graduation from the University in 1895 with a Ph. B. degree, Dr. Foust was successively principal of the Goldsboro schools and later superintendent of the Wilson schools.

As a student at the University Foust was active in a number of extra-curricular activities. During his senior year he was president of the Dialectic Society, and also was one of the commencement marshals. He was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. Foust became first connected with Woman's College, then known as the State Normal and Industrial College, when he assumed the chair of professor of pedagogy in 1902. Following the death of President McIver, Foust took over the office and became the second president of that institution.

As part of the growth of education throughout the state during that period, the school at Greensboro grew rapidly. When Foust came there the average graduation class numbered about thirty. The graduating classes of the present have had approximately three hundred candidates for degrees. In 1912 the first summer school session was inaugurated with 416 in attendance. More than a thousand students attended the last summer session. The extension division, which strives to render service especially to the State Parent-Teachers Association, has reached out a helping hand to many who cannot attend.

Dr. Foust has been the author of a number of books dealing with academic subjects. He has written a geography of North Carolina in collaboration with Nettie M. Allen for the elementary schools and has also compiled some spelling books.

In August 1932 he married Miss Clara McNeill who had been his secretary for the past fifteen years.

UNIVERSITY WILL BE HOSTS TO HIGH SCHOOL DEBATERS

High School Tennis Tournament and Track Meet to Take Place During Week-end of Visit.

Preparations are being made by the University extension division for the annual high school week to be sponsored by the University in Chapel Hill, April 13 and 14, according to E. R. Rankin, secretary. The interscholastic tennis tournament, track meet, and finals in the debate competition for the Aycock memorial cup are features of the week.

Entries for the two athletic meets must be received by Rankin before April 1. The debate competition will begin March 31, and only the finals will take place here.

Winners in the various competitive exercises last year were as follows: state tennis championships; doubles, Washington high school; singles, High Point high school; interscholastic track winners, High Point high school; state debating championships, Curry high school in Greensboro represented by Katherine Keister and Nash Herndon.

McCORKLE SPEAKS AT MEREDITH ON INSTRUMENTATION

First of a Series of Lectures Includes Actual Student Demonstration Work.

Professor T. Smith McCorkle, instructor in the school of music, spoke before the class of public school music at Meredith College yesterday afternoon in a lecture on instrumentation and the instruments of the orchestra. This is the first of a series of lectures which Professor McCorkle has been invited to give at Meredith by Leslie P. Spelman, head of the department of music there.

Assisting Professor McCorkle in the demonstration of musical instruments yesterday afternoon were David Bennett, flutist, Herbert Hazelman, oboist, Claude Sawyer, clarinetist, and Walter King, bassoonist.

McCorkle is director of the University band and instructor in music theory and appreciation here. His course in music appreciation has attracted attention in a nation-wide survey of music courses and is reported comparable to similar courses given in the larger conservatories of music.

Y. M. C. A. TO CONTINUE MORNING DEVOTIONALS

Beginning this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall, voluntary devotional services will be conducted each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday mornings at the same time during the spring quarter.

The programs will be the same as those offered last quarter, consisting of two meditative selections on the organ by Walter Patterson, a short scripture reading, and a brief prayer. Members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets will continue to conduct these services.

Returns to Office

Dean D. D. Carroll is expected to return to his office today or tomorrow after being confined to his home since last Wednesday with a severe cold.

ENROLLMENT FOR SPRING QUARTER SUFFERS LITTLE

University Opens New Term Under Favorable Circumstances With Few Leaving School.

Due to the fact that President Frank Graham and his faculty and student advisers acted quickly and wisely when the bank holidays were first announced, the University was able to open the spring quarter yesterday under favorable circumstances.

Registration for the spring quarter yesterday was barely a hundred short of the figures for the winter quarter, and since registration for credit will be permitted all this week it is estimated that this difference will be practically wiped out by next Monday.

When the banking crisis arose Dr. Graham, after consulting the advisory committee of the faculty and student leaders, reached the conclusion that many students would be unable to return for the spring quarter if the University took the regular annual spring recess of one week which was scheduled to begin yesterday.

Leniency in Fees

Dr. Graham at the same time announced a policy of leniency in the collection of student fees, both old and new, the idea being that no student should be forced to leave college on account of the bank holidays.

Had the University not made these timely moves, according to opinions expressed yesterday, the spring quarter probably would have opened with an enrollment several hundred less than that for the winter and fall quarters.

DEBATE CONTEST DATE ANNOUNCED

Sales Tax as State Revenue Measure Is Query for Twentieth Annual Discussion.

The twenty-first annual debating contest conducted by the high school debating union and sponsored by the University extension division will begin March 31. The query for the state-wide competition is: Resolved: That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue.

All secondary schools in North Carolina are eligible to join. Each school that enters will be grouped with two others for a triangular debate, with two teams, one on the affirmative and one on the negative. The school winning both debates will be entitled to send their teams to the University, April 13 and 14, to compete for the state championship and the Aycock memorial cup. The final competition will be one of the features of the annual high school week in Chapel Hill.

The high school debating union was inaugurated twenty years ago by the Di and Phi societies and the University extension division. Twenty state-wide debates on questions of importance have taken place.

N. W. Walker, of the school of education, is chairman of the committee in charge of the competition, and E. R. Rankin, of the extension division, is secretary and supervisor.

Spotlight on the Forgotten Man

Speaking plainly and simply, President Roosevelt explained his plans for relieving the banking crisis to the people of the United States Sunday night, delivering his message over both the nation's broadcasting systems. He asked for the cooperation, confidence, and help of all the people. In some measure, the methods which our new president is employing are unprecedented in our history; he has taken the citizenry of the nation into his confidence at every step in his week-old career as chief executive. It is for a good reason that he has done so: For once, at least, in the history of the United States, the man in the street is all-important. The economic fate of the nation depends upon what he will do. If he becomes fear-stricken and panicky, the whole financial structure of the country, founded on his resources, will be undermined.

President Roosevelt's message emphasized this responsibility of the common man. He urged him to retain his faith in the ability of the government to solve the problems of the banks. According to the president's schedule, sound banks are to be opened in the following order: Monday, Federal Reserve member banks; Tuesday, banks which are members of clearing house associations in 250 American cities; Wednesday, state banks in isolated areas. Federal examiners will determine the soundness of national banks and state examiners will perform the same functions for state banks. Where reorganization and consolidation of banks is found necessary, government experts will assist both state and national banks. In order that the supply of currency may be increased to meet withdrawal demands, new notes are to be issued on the basis of sound, but for the present uncashable, securities and commercial paper.

In his Sunday night message, President Roosevelt emphasized his plea for national sanity and faith, saying that banks would be opened as fast as the machinery for doing so could be put into operation, that no one should be alarmed if his bank did not open immediately. It will take many days, perhaps weeks and months, to open some banks and there is a possibility that others will never open. But the situation can be only aggravated if depositors become frantic and too insistent upon receiving their money at once. The situation is bad but it can be made worse if a national panic impedes the work of the competent hands in which the situation now rests. The rapidity or slowness of the nation's recovery depends largely upon whether or not the people or the United States keep cool heads during the next few weeks, whether or not they meet President Roosevelt's confidence with confidence.—E.C.D.

London Bridge Is Falling Down

Probably the most striking feature of Norman Thomas's Open Forum lecture was his repeated insistence on the downfall of capitalism. The Socialist candidate for President especially stressed this prophetic tenet in his talk in assembly, though it must be admitted in all fairness to him that the time was too limited then to permit any constructive presentation of his ideas.

Nevertheless, such a prediction seems strikingly antiquated and out-of-place in so modern a type of socialism as Mr. Thomas advocates.

It recalls the turbulent days of '48 when Marxian socialism, with its dire prophecy of "increasing misery," sprang into pre-eminence in the world of political economy. But in this respect Marxian doctrines have been generally discredited; the prediction of capitalism's final overthrow has been looked upon as unsound in the light of critical economic thought, if for no other reason than that it is merely a prediction. Science may attempt to forecast future phenomena on the basis of past fact; but economics, we must remember, is a social science, and predictions in this field are at best hazardous, for they cannot take into consideration the unforeseeable turns of a dynamic society.

Perhaps it is entirely plausible to suppose that Mr. Thomas has adopted this method of approach for the purpose of stirring the American people from their apathy of indifference with regard to economic questions. But so negative a means, even if effective to this desirable end, may work to both advantage and disadvantage. It may gain an audience; it may prejudice one.—A.T.D.

An Old Proverb

A mere bank holiday can not terrify the town of Chapel Hill, nor those who compose the University of North Carolina. The truth of this assertion has just been demonstrated during the past week. When other places and other institutions were thrown into chaos and disorder by the closing of banks and the accompanying disruption of credit, the merchants of the town and officials of the University kept their heads, and, in a cool, deliberative manner, set themselves to the task of providing a temporary remedy for the situation.

As a result of cooperation and team work, credit has been maintained, hunger and violence have been averted, and business has gone on in much the usual manner. Not for a long time has there been so much credit and leniency granted the student. A spirit of good will not usually found, even on this campus, has been evident among both students and faculty; both have seen themselves brought to a common level, economically speaking, for a time at least, without having to suffer from lack of the ordinary comforts of life.

It would not be reasonable to say that there has been no suffering in this town as a result of strained financial conditions, but certainly conditions here have not reached the sad state reported elsewhere. The infinitely more satisfactory solution of its financial worries than its sister towns, reached by Chapel Hill, are perhaps not due alone to her lack of industrialization, but more to the fact that she has learned the lesson of intelligent cooperation. She recognized the truth in the old proverb: "united we stand; divided we fall."—W.A.S.

Will the Worm Turn?

If Japan penetrates south of the Great Wall in her non-declared war with China, will she meet a different and far stiffer resistance? Owen Lattimore, in his Manchuria, Cradle of Conflict, thinks this would be the case, and explains the peculiar Chinese psychology which stamps a military campaign in the North as being doomed to defeat, but takes an entirely different attitude towards one in the South. Because of this (if Lattimore is correct) China would not have been able to send her best troops to Manchuria, but could use them to advantage in China proper.

The events of the next few days will prove interesting. Japan has announced that if the Chinese attempt to recapture Jehol, "it means war on a national scale, in which event there is no reason that Japanese operations should be restricted by the great wall." Will Nipon's expansion continue further south? Will the worm turn, and China's resistance become stiffer? Will the American soldiers and civilians near the war area become involved? Will Japan step on Russia's toes and cause a general flare-up? Manchuria is still a tremendous danger zone for the dove of world peace, and at the same time the horizon in Europe grows darker. The atmosphere is not a healthy one.—D.B.

College to Accept Script

Illinois Wesleyan College has taken another step in its effort to help students go through college without cash. It has agreed to accept from students coming from families of Chicago teachers, payment of tuition in script and tax anticipation warrants issued by the schools of Chicago.

Last fall the college took the lead in helping sons and daughters of farmers to attend college by agreeing to accept farm produce in exchange for tuition, room, and board.—Purdue Exponent.

Results of tests conducted by the medical school at Creighton University showed that smokers drew better grades than non-smokers. Fourteen per cent, classed as moderate smokers, averaged 85.4 per cent grades, and those who did not smoke had grades averaging 82.4 per cent.—Crimson and White.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Human Goat

Because he is unemployed and hungry most of the time "Prince Omega" will eat most anything. The Prince, you will remember, was one of the headlines of the Depression Party floor show in the Tin Can Saturday night.

The Prince eats light bulbs, razor blades, carpet tacks, tin and everything. Says he hails from India, and speaks with a French-Spanish-Italian accent, which sometimes reverts to good old Harlem when he's in a hurry.

Omega has been around town for about a week. He goes through the dormitories and fraternity houses and eats things for the boys. Sometimes he puts on his fire swallowing act, which is pretty exciting. Can inhale a flame a foot long and then blow it out like a story book dragon, lighting a cigarette. He had several more tricks the other night but there wasn't enough time.

Likes wrist watches, too, though this new chromium plate stuff isn't particularly tasty. Gold watches are more easily digested. He has an X-Ray photo of himself with somebody's seventeen-jeweled Gruen stowed away midst an assortment of pictures wire, thumb tacks and dope bottle caps. The Prince ate a victrola record over at the Deke house several days ago. Said he doesn't care for records—too waxy.

Aria

For the information of our reader (note to printer: spell in singular), we have a report on Come Fill the Cup, a new University song to be printed soon. The words were written by Block Bryson, once a Winchellistic columnist of this newspaper back in the days when we were hammering out sports stuff. The music is by Wex Malone and is mighty pretty. In the spring of '31 a number of songs were turned in to THE DAILY TAR HEEL for publication. Dear Mother Carolina by Bert S. Drane sang about freedom, our fathers, old oaks, spirits, etc., and another, We The Sons of Carolina by W. M. Hayes, ran "Carolina, Carolina, we will be true etc.," if our memory doesn't fail us.

Come Fill the Cup fills the bill, particularly if the administration gives us beer with pretzels and dispatch. The lyric indicates eight "drinks" in two verses, which is a pretty good average these days.

Quake

The earthquake out in California, which can't exactly be blamed on Hoover, though we entertain private suspicions on that count, gave the New York Giants a good scare, so a correspondent to a New York newspaper writes. The Giants were right in the front line tremors, and when the quake came along, the first team rushed out of the hotel and huddled in a sort of phalanx in the street. They wouldn't budge all night.

The trainer, Willie Schafer, was in the middle of the whole business. He had remained at the ball park after afternoon practice to take a shower. Well lathered and singing away, he felt the shock come and then promptly drew a blank. A few minutes later he came out on the diamond sitting on the second base bag in the nude. The grandstands were empty so everything was all right.

There are just as many men making their mark today as ever—but they're using red ink.—Daily O'Collegian.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

The book most in demand from the rental library of the Bulls Head right now is Ann Vickers. There are three copies in circulation, and still we have a waiting list. It deals with the whole of a woman's life, and because Ann was actively engaged in public affairs this novel offers much the same kind of appeal to the memory as do similar books of a non-fiction character such as Only Yesterday and the four volumes of Mark Sullivan's Our Times, and volume two of The March of Democracy.

Incidentally Henry Adams by James Truslow Adams is an excellent biography. It supplies additional information and completely fills out the man self-described in The Education. The Adams Family, to whom James Truslow Adams is only distantly related, may now be had in a reprint edition.

Other Women by Katherine Brush is a collection of twelve stories. Here the author of Red Headed Woman concerns herself with brief glimpses into the lives of the other characters mentioned in that novel. Each one of the sketches is a skillful comment on some aspect of American life in which women play a part. Some of the characters are so clearly drawn that a complete novel suggests itself.

Of the series, "Doctor's Wife" is the most adroitly handled from point of construction. One of them at least, the first, is as penetratingly done, and is as pungent with unexpressed social comment as Night Club. Louise comes from the urban center of Pittsburgh to Renwood as Johnny Bartlett's bride. She proceeds with the skill of a diplomat, and ardour of a crusader to "missionize" this small Ohio town. She remakes a carefully selected portion of its inhabitants according to her notions of "smart sophistication." As one catches at the undertones beneath the glittering surface of this talent, one asks again, with Mr. Beard, "Recovery? To What?"

We extend a cordial invitation to visit the Bulls Head Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. At that time Sam Selden will read Dinner at Eight. This successful play is still enjoying a sell-out run on Broadway—and if you can't go to Broadway—well, the Bulls Head is located in the Y building to the left of "The Book Ex," right on the campus.

Unjustified Materialism

The American system of higher education, despite the pronouncements of critics such as Dr. Flexner, is fundamentally sound, since it is an expression of the American temperament. Such at least is the thesis presented by Ben Belitt, undergraduate of the University of Virginia, in an article entitled "Machine Age Education" appearing in the current issue of the New Outlook.

Mr. Belitt's philosophy is apparently based on principles of complete democracy and materialistic pragmatism. He asserts, in the first place, that any institution is "primarily the servant of the many, and many must be given preference over the exceptional or the few"; hence any university reform must conform to the opinion of the majority of its students. Secondly, the writer contends that an institution is sound insofar as it reflects the character of the majority of the people it serves. The American mind, in his estimation, is "concerned less with theory than with application, less with causes . . . and values than with results." The average undergraduate, he feels, has no use for cultural pursuits, but because of the exigencies of modern life, is interested solely in deriving from college what will insure immediate and tangible results; "his lodestar is bread and butter."

Since the university should reflect this attitude and cater to it, the fact that American colleges tend to give practical training rather than a more theoretical, cultural education is not, as many critics claim, a basis for condemnation but rather a justification and pragmatic validation. In short, Mr. Belitt's theory is that "so long as the American heart is after the ideal of the full purse, there shall his mind be also, and there, in fine, his university shall, and should follow."

This defense of practical training as against cultural education, which Mr. Belitt attempts to make persuasive by his apparent bravado in cleaving to what he considers realities no matter how bitter and selfish, is almost too obviously false and shallow to merit remark. The trend of thought is, however, typical of a certain element of undergraduates, and for that reason is worthy of appraisal.

In the first place, it is not at all self-evident that the university policy should be directed by the majority of its students, for the democratic dogma that the majority is always right is hardly defensible. It is at least a questionable matter of fact, in the second place, that the American temperament is such that the majority of students have no interests in any studies except those which will directly aid them to fill their pocketbooks. And third, and most important, is the fact that even if one hypothetically admits the writer's premises, admits that the American ideal is pure materialistic selfishness, and that the American university does reflect

Coach Sends Players Through Stiff Drills For Coming Game

Varsity Baseball Squad for 1933 Has Good Prospects For Season.

NORTHERN TRIPS PLANNED

Twenty-Two Games Have Been Scheduled for Newest Tar Heel Nine.

With the first game only a little more than a week off, Coach Bunn Hearn is running his 1933 varsity baseball squad through long daily workouts in an effort to get a winning team for the coming campaign. Coach Hearn said yesterday that he was pleased with the extra week of practice as a result of the postponed holidays.

Although the material does not look as good as last year's, Coach Hearn believes he will put out as good or a better team. Competition is keen for nearly every position and the whole squad is working hard.

The entire freshman diamond squad will be called out for workouts today. The yearling batterymen have been working with the varsity squad for the past few weeks.

Squad Looks Good

The first practice game took place Saturday afternoon and the squad looked fairly good, although a few of the regulars were taking a holiday. McCaskill, Strayhorn, Parker, and Farrell all looked good behind the plate, however, Mathewson, reserve catcher last year was not out. Griffith, only letter pitcher back, didn't look so good on the mound, but he has been held out of regular practice as a result of a bad ankle. Whitley, a reserve hurler last year, held the varsity to no score in three innings that he worked. Several freshman slabsmen showed up well. Captain Willie Powell held down third base in his usual fine style while Vick, a sophomore, looks like an excellent understudy to the captain.

Other infielders showing up well were Leonard, shortstop; McKinnin, second base; and Temple and Fox, first base. Dixon, letterman, who was out for his first time this season, played a short while at first base. Weathers, regular second basemen was absent. In the outfield those looking best were Croom and Brandt, lettermen, and Zaizer, LeGore, and Phipps. Peacock was not out.

Schedule Announced

A tough schedule calling for twenty-two games was announced. Nine games are carded for Emerson Field. Several games with professional clubs may be added. Fifteen of the contests will be played against Southern Conference teams.

The schedule to date follows:

- March 22—Game pending.
- March 28—Washington and Lee, here.
- April 1—Elon, there.

The Can Opener

by CLAIRBORN M. CARR

THE INTRAMURAL program for this year enters the home stretch this quarter and if the average number of contestants in mural activities holds up this quarter, more than sixty per cent of the student body will have competed in these contests. At present, Best House leads the total point score by a large margin, followed by A. T. O. with about two hundred points less. Best House seems headed for another campus championship. Lewis, Chi Psi, Aycock, and S. A. E. follow the leaders in that order, though Herman Schnell would not swear by these figures on such short notice.

ALAN SMITH, THE TEE-TINY wonder, is leading the race for the individual high scoring honors. Smitty won the cup last year and his ninety-one points scored to date leave him nine points ahead of Clarence Stimson, a teammate, who is second. Jones Pollard, another A. T. O., is in third place with seventy-seven points. Unger and Willis, both of Lewis, are tied for the dormitory individual lead with sixty points each. Due to Schnell's limited knowledge of Dr. Henry's version of the Einstein theory in regard to the computation of fraternity scholarship averages, these averages are not included in the grand total offered in the opening paragraph.

COACH BUNN HEARN IS shaking 'em up on Emerson field every afternoon now. His baseball squad is getting down to serious business with the opening game not far off. Nathan Andrews, a right-hand chunker, came up last week from the Presbyterian Junior College where he had made quite a name for himself on the mound. Nat was engineered into a government course by our sly captain, Willie Powell, who was detailed as Nat's guardian immediately. The new pitcher should go places if he gets any kind of support from an unknown Carolina team.

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION met last night in its regular meeting and voted in favor of a plan offered for their consideration concerning the rearrangement of the football coaching staff. The new plan names Coach Bob Fetzner and Coach Bill Cerney as head mentors of the freshman squad. Fetzner will handle frosh linemen and Cerney the infant backs. Odel Sapp and Al Howard, frosh coaches, are to be moved up to work under Coach Chuck Collins on the varsity linemen and backs respectively. In view of the fact that both Coach Fetzner and Coach Cerney are qualified, through years of experience, for a head coach's position, and because they also coach other teams and cannot be available for spring practices, this seems to be a very wise move.

THE CAROLINA FRESHMAN football teams need as much coaching as they can possibly get if they are to develop any sort of varsity material. With Coach Bob and Coach Bill working with the Tar Babies daily they will be drilled thoroughly in the Collins system. This plan should help to produce winning teams in the future, by schooling our football players under veteran coaches. This does not mean to hint that Sapp and Howard don't know their football, because they do; they developed some sweet looking material this past fall. Speaking of Al Howard, his engagement to a sweet young thing

May Earn Infield And Outfield Berths

Dutch Leonard and Lefty Hornaday are prospective candidates for shortstop and left field respectively. Hornaday is a letterman from last year, while Leonard injured his leg early in the season and was forced out. Hornaday showed possibilities at times last year of turning out to be a powerful hitter and he may produce this year. Leonard is a dependable fielder and if he improves in his hitting he should fill Smoky Ferebee's shortstop berth for Coach Bunn.

COLLINS TO CALL FOOTBALL SQUAD OUT THIS MONDAY

Winter Practice, Halted by Inclement Weather, Will Be Resumed March 20.

Coach Chuck Collins announced yesterday that winter football practice is to be continued beginning next Monday, March 20, and run for three weeks. The session is scheduled to be concluded April 8 with the annual monogram-rookie game.

The call for the practices beginning Monday will be issued to individuals and not to just anybody interested as was the case earlier this winter. Coach Collins stated that more than 125 men answered the blanket call but that only sixty-five stayed out.

With this situation in mind the coaching staff has decided to issue the call to about sixty-five individuals who will form the varsity squad.

Weekly Squad Games

Intra-squad games will be played each Saturday during the practice and the monogram-rookie affair will end the winter session.

Winter practice usually begins around the middle of January and lasts until the afternoon of the Southern Conference Indoor meet which has been run off the first Saturday in March for the last three years. This year the session was postponed due to consistently bad weather earlier in the winter, to be resumed sometime during the early part of the spring quarter.

this spirit in its character, there is not the slightest justification for assuming, as Mr. Belitt does, that it should reflect such a spirit. In fine, the author is arguing that because something is so therefore it should be so, which is utterly false. And so his whole theory fails in its purpose of justifying mass-production practical training in colleges as what ought to constitute an education.

DORM AND FRAT TEAMS REGISTER IN INTRAMURALS

Other Teams in Tennis and Baseball Tournament Have Last Chance to Enter Today.

Entries will close today for the spring intramural program in baseball and tennis. Twenty-seven teams, representing eighteen fraternities and nine dormitories, have already signified intentions of competing in the diamond race while sixteen fraternities and ten dormitories are already listed in the tennis campaign.

Competition in these two sports will probably start this Thursday afternoon. The entries in each sport will be divided into two leagues with each team in each league playing eight games over a period of six weeks. At the end of the regular seasons the winners in the two leagues will meet for the campus championship in each sport.

Playground baseball, which proved a decided success here last year, will be used again with each team using ten men. Intramural authorities favor this form of the national pastime because it requires no expense to the players for equipment. Each game will last seven innings, and no players may use spikes.

Each tennis team will be composed of two singles entries and a doubles team. The singles men may play the doubles if they wish.

Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics, requests that teams having preferences as to the day of the week on which their games are scheduled communicate these preferences with him immediately.

Call for Freshman Managers

Joe Zaglin, varsity track manager, has sent out a call for all freshmen wishing to try out for positions as freshman track managers. All boys who wish to come out must report at Emerson field at 3:30 o'clock.

Freshman Baseball Practice

All freshmen who wish to try out for the yearling baseball team are asked to report to freshman field this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Baseball Squad to Meet

There will be a meeting of the varsity baseball squad tonight at 7:30 in Emerson stadium. Coach Hearn requests that all men be there on time.

Quarles Awaits Word As To New York Trip

Norm Quarles, Carolina's conference featherweight champ, although still awaiting a verdict on whether or not he will be entered in the National Intercollegiate Boxing Tournament in Madison Square Garden, New York, has been training daily at the Tin Can since the Conference tournament and is in excellent shape.

The athletic association met last night to decide if the blonde mauler would be sent to the capitol of Fisticana for the outstanding college boxing event of the year which will take place the latter part of this month.

It had been rumored that Platt Landis, heavyweight champion, and Sam Giddins, 155 pounder, would also be sent; but at the last analysis, it finally was boiled down to the question of Quarles alone.

HARD WORK-OUTS START FOR SPRING SEASON THIS WEEK

Meet With United States Naval Academy Is Only Five Weeks Away.

With the dual track meet with the Naval Academy only five weeks off, the Carolina track mentors have started their proteges into the regular hard work-outs for the current outdoor track season. Carolina's tracksters pulled the most sensational surprise of last year's track season when they bested the Navy track men at Annapolis, 65-61.

Prior to the regular scheduled meets with sectional and conference foes, the Carolina track coaches have planned a series of intrasquad meets, April 2, and April 9. These meets will be open to all freshmen and varsity competitors who should provide a real line for the coaches on their potential material.

Freshman and Varsity Call

All freshmen, whether experienced or not, and who are interested in going out for track, are requested to report for track this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at Emerson Field. This will be a short meeting in which Coach Dale Ranson will outline his plans of training for the freshman candidates. All varsity men are also asked to report for daily work-outs now that the examinations are over.

It is very important that all men anxious for berths on either the varsity or freshman squads comply with the wishes of the Tar Heel coaching staff and report regularly for daily work, according to the coaches.

Many Students Active In Intramural Events

Nearly fifty-four per cent of the undergraduate student body participated in the intramural athletics program conducted by the University during the fall and winter quarters, it was revealed yesterday in the report of Director G. E. Shepard and Manager H. W. Schnell.

The program embraced eight sports and drew a total participation of 1,908, including 1,259 different individuals out of an average undergraduate student body of 2,150. It is regarded as one of the best intramural programs the University has staged in years, although staged at a very low cost.

A total of 832 boys took part last fall in the hectic tag football race alone. There were forty-three teams entered in the fraternity and dormitory leagues and 157 contests were played.

Another 500 boys participated in the basketball campaign this winter. There were two leagues, forty-four teams, and

GRANT DEFINITELY NOT TO RE-ENTER SCHOOL IN SPRING

Loss of Captain Lowers Stock But Experienced Tennis Squad Still Remains.

Receipt of definite word from Atlanta that Captain Bitsy Grant would not return to school this quarter threw cold water on Carolina's tennis aspirations yesterday.

Coach Kenfield said that he had received a letter from Grant's father stating definitely that Bitsy would not return to Carolina for the spring quarter.

This discouraging news did not leave Coach Kenfield in tears all afternoon, however, as he watched his entire varsity squad and many of the frosh cavort around the courts. Captain Grant's return would have made everything rosy but the Tar Heels, with Hines, Wright, Shuford, Morgan, Harris, Minor, Willis, Levitan, and several others are still as strong as any team in the east. The matches with the northern clubs may be more closely contested this year, but Carolina should finish another undefeated season.

Golfers Look Good

Coach Kenfield spoke very encouragingly about the golf team when asked what their chances for a successful season were. Captain Billy O'Brien leads a squad of steady golfers, numbering Alan Smith, Carl Cramer, Erwin Laxton, Will Sadler, Fred Laxton, and others. Joe Adams, last year's captain, is in the law school this year, and it is not certain yet whether or not he will have time to go out for the team.

The golf squad has six membership tickets to the Hope Valley Club and candidates alternate in using these tickets daily. An ambitious schedule of eight dual meets, the state tournament, and the annual conference championship, have been lined up for the golfers. Dual meets have been arranged with such teams as Richmond University, William and Mary, and Washington and Lee, along with Duke, State, and Davidson.

VIRGINIA TO PLAY TEN MATCHES IN TENNIS THIS YEAR

Cavaliers to Be Without Coach Due To Necessity of Reducing Athletic Budget.

Virginia's tentative tennis schedule for the coming spring includes ten matches in addition to the four day tournament of the Southern Conference in May. James G. Driver, graduate manager, may add one or two more contests.

All but three of the matches will be played at home. The only trip of the season begins on April 13 when Maryland, Johns Hopkins, and the Navy are played in order.

For reasons of economy the Cavalier tennis players will be forced to do without a coach this spring. Allan K. Wyllie, of Chicago, who has tutored the netters for several seasons, has not been re-engaged for 1933 because of the need for reductions in the athletic budget.

John C. Hedges of Plainsfield, N. J., is captain of this season's team which includes several veterans from the squad that did not lose a match to a state rival last spring.

179 games in this competition. The program also included a cake race, boxing and wrestling tournaments, a free throwing contest, and bowling and ping-pong tournaments, which drew other large entries and which provided a form of sport for every student wishing to compete.

STRUDWICK WINS ROLE IN THEATRE GUILD PRODUCTION

Former Carolina Playmaker Will Perform in Play, "Both Your Houses," by Anderson.

Shepherd Strudwick, Carolina alumnus and former prominent Playmaker, is playing a leading part in the Theatre Guild production, Both Your Houses, by Maxwell Anderson.

The play deals with the two houses of Congress and is based upon the supposition that all except one Congressman are crooked. The one honest member is Allan McClean, played by Shepherd Strudwick, and is characterized as a young school-teacher from Nevada. McClean almost succeeds in preventing the passage of a "pork-barrel" appropriation bill, proposed by a Chairman Gray, when he falls in love with Gray's daughter. To stop the bill McClean will make Gray liable to arrest, and so he drops the case.

Throughout the play members of Congress calmly practise their graft, saying that reform will not come within their lifetime. The point of the play is Maxwell Anderson's belief to the contrary.

Strudwick, originally of Hillsboro, was a leading Playmaker while at Carolina and since his graduation has appeared in a number of New York productions. He has also spent three summers with the Surrey Repertory Playhouse in Maine and a season with the Palm Beach Playhouse in Florida. Last season he was a member of the Boston Repertory Theatre.

Maxwell Anderson, the author of Both Your Houses and one of the foremost contemporary playwrights, was a charter member of the University of North Dakota Playmakers, organized by Professor F. H. Koch.

PRESENT CREDIT SYSTEM WILL CONTINUE AWHILE

The present system of credit extended by the Chapel Hill Credit Association will be continued until the financial situation clears up, W. C. Medford, student council representative, announced yesterday.

Students upon signing a card stating their financial condition are allowed credit checks of $90 up to $10, which may be used at any store belonging to the association. If the checks are not made good by a date which will be announced in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, they will be treated as bad and the customary action taken.

The above procedure need be followed only in case students are unable to secure credit through inability to establish their identity. Most of the merchants will accept checks which have not been approved by the University check committee, but the committee assumes no responsibility in cases of this nature.

Poets Will Meet Tonight

Students interested in poetry composition have been called to meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the offices of the Carolina Magazine, Robert Barnett, editor of the Magazine announced last night. Five poems are to be submitted by each student in competition for publication in an anthology of college poetry. The volume will be published this summer at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago.

PRESS RELEASES NEW VOLUME BY WEIL LECTURER

Dr. Harold J. Laski, Speaker Here in 1931, Is Author of Newly Published Work.

The University Press has recently released Democracy in Crisis, by Dr. Harold J. Laski, professor of Political Science in the University of London. The book is an expanded version of the Weil lectures, which Dr. Laski delivered here in 1931, and discusses problems of discontent in a democracy.

With a forewarning of the coming crisis in the democracy of government, Dr. Laski points out the possibility of the destruction and chaos which a break in democracy might bring. He answers the present day questions of whether democracy can reform and purge itself without revolution, and whether an outbreak could be stopped without bloodshed. The author states that he arrives at his conclusions only with regret and after long and careful thought.

Uncertain Student Body Forgets Cares

House Blows

Bob House scored one of the decisive hits of the evening, rivaling the punch and the sword swallower, with his harmonica performance. The appreciative audience summoned the erstwhile executive secretary back to the platform time and again for encores. He did not, however, fare quite so well with the square dance which started out bravely enough but somewhere in the process suffered a case of cross-signalling and ended up with considerably less dignity than at the outset. Nevertheless, the harmonica and Bob House will be inseparably associated from now on.

Sunday's program, naturally somewhat of an anti-climax after Saturday's, proved eminently satisfactory to the student body. They sauntered down from Marie Dressler's "Prosperity" (canny choice, Mr. Smith) to Graham Memorial to partake of refreshments and meet various members of the faculty in the lounge while Thor Johnson's orchestra furnished appropriate music.

Walter Patterson's organ recital and Professor Koch's readings from A Midsummer Night's Dream were well attended in Memorial hall Sunday night. Quiet but interesting numbers, they proved especially well suited to form a restful close to one of the most hectic and most successful week-ends Chapel Hill has known.

National Group Defends Position Of Education In Economy Drives

Education Association, Meeting in Minneapolis, Hears Charges That Attempt Is Being Made to Cripple Public School System in America in Campaign for Retrenchment.

By College News Service
Minneapolis, March 13.—Members of the National Education Association this week have started a war on interests which are alleged to be fostering an attempt to make education the "scapegoat" in the campaign for governmental retrenchment.

Charges that there appears to be "an organized attempt by those who control great wealth to cripple the public school system of America" were contained in a report of the special lay committee which is maintained by the N. E. A. The committee recommended that educators offer organized resistance to inconsiderate budget slashes, salary cuts, and other drastic economies.

Called Unjust Attack

Charles S. Meek of Toledo, O., chairman of the group, declared that the unjust attack on educational expenditures "is the more insidious because by its subtle propaganda it enlists thousands of harassed taxpayers in leagues militantly organized and committed to the task of betraying the best interests of their own children."

In an address before the members of the association, President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin warned against the indiscriminate use of "the sword of imperative retrenchment, forged in the fires of an irrational depression."

He said, however, that "no one will question that drastic economy is imperative," but added:

year in order to be eligible for re-admission. Under the old rule it was possible for a first year student to re-enter the University for his second quarter without having passed a single course in his first quarter.

The new rules apply only to those students enrolled in the University during the preceding quarter and will replace the old set of requirements entirely by next fall. All those students who have dropped out for a quarter and are now seeking re-admission must be eligible under the old rule in order to enroll.

NEW BERN DEPUTATION TRIP NOW ARRANGED

One Y. M. C. A. deputation trip to New Bern April 6-9 has been arranged and tentative plans for others to Wilmington and Rocky Mount are being made.

Other events on the Y. M. C. A. program for the spring quarter include joint programs to be given here by deputation teams from the Woman's College, Davidson College, and the local Y. M. C. A.

Engineering Societies Will Gather for Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of the four engineering societies is scheduled for Thursday night at 7:45 in the physics lecture room in Phillips hall. Dr. W. F. Prouty will speak to the meeting on the topic "Geological Mechanics of Earthquakes," with a brief general history of earthquakes and specifically with recent California earthquakes. Professor T. F. Hickerson will also speak to the group on the general subject "Design of Buildings to Resist Earthquakes."

"We cannot put educational opportunity in cold storage for the duration of the depression and catch up on it later on."

"For children who are denied adequate educational opportunity now, it is lost forever. And we shall stand convicted of having balanced our budgets with the starved lives of our sons and daughters."

He then launched into an attack on those who would make education suffer the brunt of the demands for governmental economy.

Recommends Action

He also warned against balancing the budget by "producing a social deficit for which our children and grandchildren will damn us," and concluded his address with a recommended course of action:

"I suggest three lines along which I think educators are obliged to move if they are to discharge their responsibility to the future of the community, state, and nation:

"1. Educators should see that the teaching profession and the public are put in possession of all pertinent facts about any short-sighted and anti-social forces that may be operating in an uncritical drive against educational expenditures.

"2. Educators should meet unfair propagandizing of the public with a wise education of the public in the actual facts of the situation.

"3. Educators should meet the situation with offensive rather than merely defensive tactics."

Quartet Sings in Assembly

A quartet of Negro singers from Hampton Institute of Virginia sang on the first assembly period program of the spring quarter yesterday. Their program consisted of six Negro spirituals including the popular Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.

R. B. Pope, a graduate of the business school of Hampton Institute, gave a short talk preceding the musical program, in which he emphasized the need of inter-racial cooperation.

The Di Senate will meet tonight in New West at 7:00 o'clock. Howard Lyon, president for the spring quarter, will deliver his inaugural address, and one bill will be discussed: Resolved: That Negroes should be allowed to enter the University law school.

Students who have not yet received their laundry for the final week of the winter quarter may have it delivered by calling the University laundry department and giving their address and registration number for the spring quarter, Dean G. H. Paulsen announced yesterday.

Most of the bundles were distributed last week in the Y. M. C. A., but those that were not called for have been taken back to the laundry. Students may either pay cash or have the amount put on their bill for the spring quarter.

Dean Paulsen also said that no refunds would be made until the local bank had adjusted its affairs and opened for regular business.

BOND'S BOOK ON ENGLISH POETRY HIGHLY PRAISED

Critical Work of University English Professor Receives Favorable Comment.

English Burlesque Poetry 1700-1750, by Dr. Richmond P. Bond of the English faculty, is receiving much favorable criticism both in this country and abroad.

The London Times Literary Supplement of February 9 says of Dr. Bond's book: "He has a clear mind, and knows how to make it up... Mr. Bond has hit on a method of arrangement which has much merit. Only half the book is given up to his essay, in eight chapters, on his subject. The other half is filled with a register of the burlesque poems of his period, chronologically arranged, and each briefly described with short extracts."

The New York Bookman for February states that "his book will be called of course a scholar's book, and it is magnificently that. The critical apparatus is extensive and orderly. The Register of Burlesque Poems really does describe... Indeed Mr. Bond has made us realize once more the value which these poems still possess in their own right."

The Detroit Free Press asserts that "the author has really done what so many academicians attempt with such dubious results: that is, he has made in truth a contribution to knowledge."

And the Hartford Daily Courant says: "Lavishly annotated, and most agreeably written, Mr. Bond's study has definite literary value and genuine interest, beside its actual importance as a work of reference."

McCorkle Presents Violin Solos at Southern Pines

Professor T. Smith McCorkle presented a program of violin solos at the Church of the Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines Sunday evening, March 12, in connection with an address by Dr. M. T. VanHecke, dean of the law school.

During the past eight years Professor McCorkle has appeared in eight solo recitals in Southern Pines and has directed four band concerts there. In April he will play at Flora MacDonald College and in a recital at Washington, D. C. Mrs. McCorkle is accompanist for his recitals.

UNIVERSITY WILL DEBATE GEORGIA TECH AND BOSTON

Debaters Travel to Washington,
Boston, Pittsburgh, and New York.

The debate council is now sponsoring a trip to Boston and has arranged debates here with Georgia Tech and Boston University early in April.

Red Rankin and Don Seawell, representing the University, met George Washington University in Washington Wednesday night in a radio debate on the subject, Resolved: That the United States should adopt the British system of radio control. Last night they met Pittsburgh before the Advertising club in a debate on the cancellation of interallied war debts. Tonight they will meet New York University debating on the "emergence of women from the home," and tomorrow they will debate Boston University on the radio question. In all debates they will uphold the affirmative.

Trips Postponed

It was originally planned that University debaters should make three trips: north to Boston, west to Chicago, and south to New Orleans. The complications created by the bank-holiday made impossible the trips as planned and two of the trips were pieced together to make the trip which Rankin and Seawell are now taking.

The trip to New Orleans has been postponed indefinitely, although tentative plans are that it will take place later. Bill

The meeting of deskmen and city editors is scheduled for 3:00 o'clock this afternoon.

NO WORD RECEIVED ON RE-OPENING OF BANK

No word could be obtained here last night in regard to the possibility of the Bank of Chapel Hill re-opening for normal business today. Officials of the local institution conferred with state banking authorities last night but could not be reached to find what decision has been made.

The local bank has filed its application for re-opening.

The bank has been carrying on during the past week special functions allowed by President Roosevelt's declaration of a bank holiday March 5.

Holiday Data

Plan for Eliminating Spring Holidays
This Year Considered.

According to available information, no definite plan has as yet been reached in regard to the vacation period which was postponed from the usual period between quarters to some future time.

As yet, no change has been made in the original plan to hold the holidays during Easter time, but suggestions have been received by the president to the effect that school be continued throughout the spring quarter, and closed a week earlier than usual. The student council is studying the situation and is expected to make some recommendations to the president.

DR. E. C. BRANSON DIES IN DURHAM HOSPITAL MONDAY

Pioneer Rural Economist Is Mourned by Town, Students,
And Faculty Colleagues.

Funeral services for Dr. Eugene Cunningham Branson, head of the department of rural-social economics in the University, who died in Duke hospital, Durham, Monday night, will take place at the Branson home at 11:00 o'clock, with Reverend Mr. Ronald Tamblin, of the Presbyterian church, officiating. There will be no church service. Interment will take place at the Chapel Hill cemetery.

Foremost Rural Economist

A pioneer in his field and one of the nation's foremost rural economists, Dr. Branson had long been recognized as one of the ablest members of the University faculty and his passing will be mourned as an irreparable loss not only to the University community but to the state and nation.

Dr. Branson is survived by Mrs. Branson, who was Miss Lottie Lanier, of West Point, Ga., and two sons and two daughters, Mrs. Youth B. Smith, of New York City, whose husband is a member of the law faculty of Columbia University; Miss Elizabeth Lanier Branson, of Chapel Hill; Frank L. Branson, of the Graniteville Manufacturing company, of Aiken, S. C.; and Phil L. Branson, head of the Branson company, cotton brokers of Atlanta. All had been at the bedside during the illness.

Brought back to his native state from Georgia in 1914 by the late President Edward Kidder Graham, Dr. Branson, with the aid of enlarged facilities, carried to consummation here a

Nine Carolina Alumni Included In Present National Congress

Sons of University. Several of Whom Are on Important Committees, Have Wonderful Opportunity in Helping to Shape Legislation on Measures During Present Crisis.

Included in the 73rd Congress of the United States are nine alumni of the University. This congress, recently called into special session by President Roosevelt, has already enacted history-making legislation in the present banking crisis and bids fair to be remembered as one of the most important congresses in the history of the nation.

Dean of the North Carolina delegation, which is taking singular advantage of this opportunity to serve its country during the current economic strain, is Congressman Edward W. Pou, '84, of Smithfield, who is also dean of the House of Representatives, having served in that chamber consistently since 1901. Pou is chairman of the powerful committee on rules in the House and, as a member of the inaugural committee, rode with President Roosevelt to the inaugural ceremony on March 4.

Defend President's Measures

He shares with Robert L. Doughton the honor of heading two of the House's most influential committees. Doughton, who is not an alumnus of the University, will be chairman of the committee on ways and means under the new regime. In the recent discussion over President Roosevelt's emergency economy measures, both Pou and Doughton played active roles in defending bills proposed to alleviate present critical conditions.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds,

'06, of Asheville, has the distinction of being the first alumnus of the University to sit in the upper house since 1901. Elected on a wet platform last summer over Cameron Morrison, Reynolds has proved a militant wet in the Senate, having been instrumental in the passage of several bills which administered the death blow to national prohibition.

On House Committee

Still another chairman of a House committee is an alumnus of the University. Lindsay Warren, '10, of Washington, is head of the committee on House accounts. Warren, who has served as a trustee of the University, is well known throughout the state as an able lawyer and an active figure in the state legislature prior to his emergence on the national political scene.

Charles L. Abernethy is claimed as an alumnus by virtue of his having attended the University law school 1894-1895. After a varied career as a teacher, editor, and lawyer, he was elected to 67th congress and secured re-election for the following session.

Bulwinkle Law Alumnus

Similar is the career of Alfred L. Bulwinkle, another alumnus in the House. He was a law student here 1903-1904 and also served in the 67th and 68th congresses. Abernethy is from New Bern, while Bulwinkle

WORK BEGINS ON NEW WALK TODAY

Contributions Have Not Yet Reached Estimated Cost, But Construction
Will Commence Regardless.

Although a portion of the construction costs remain yet to be donated, work on the new walk between Graham Memorial and Battle dormitory will begin today, Dr. W. C. Coker, head of the grounds' committee, stated yesterday.

Graham Memorial building has been the only organization as yet to contribute anything towards making up the estimated cost of $500, but others are being canvassed in an effort to raise the amount necessary to complete the work. The walk is being constructed under the supervision of the grounds' committee and is to be of the usual type with gutters on each side. It should be of much benefit to patrons of Graham Memorial as the present path becomes entirely unuseable in rainy weather.

The buildings department made further surveys and marked the courses of walk yesterday.

Students Asked To Aid Education

The Daily Tar Heel urges that all students in the University write home to their parents to enlist their aid in support of public schools and institutions of higher learning in North Carolina according to the suggestion made yesterday by the University administration.

President Graham has suggested to University alumni that they can defend the position of education, suffering a 42.8 per cent reduction while other divisions of the state are cut fifteen per cent, by enlisting support of other citizens and making their wishes known to members of the General Assembly. The University feels that students may materially aid this cause which will save the school system and higher education in North Carolina.

Character Interpreter

Cornelia Otis Skinner, famous American actress, who will perform in Memorial hall, April 12.

CORNELIA SKINNER WILL APPEAR HERE IN CREATIVE WORK

Daughter of Famous Actor Will Present "The Wives of Henry VIII" April 12.

Cornelia Otis Skinner, famous American actress, will appear in Memorial hall, Wednesday evening, April 12, in her own creative work, The Wives of Henry VIII, as the seventh in the series of entertainments presented yearly by the Student Entertainment Committee. Miss Skinner's performance will be the only presentation of the committee for the spring quarter.

The Wives of Henry VIII is a series of character sketches in which Miss Skinner interprets in turn Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn, Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleve, Kathryn Howard, and Katherine Parr, the six wives of the Tudor ruler. The performance has been widely acclaimed since its first presentation a year ago, and comes to Chapel Hill after an extraordinary engagement in New York, where the single-handed performer appeared for eight consecutive weeks at the Avon theatre.

Cornelia Otis Skinner is the daughter of Otis Skinner, dean of the American theatre. She refused to fall into the footsteps of her famous father, however, and rose to prominence through her own ability. Her aptitude for single-handed performances was first revealed when she was a school-girl. She made a stage debut in a small part in Blood and Sand, in the company of her father, and after appearing in several well-known plays, she wrote one herself which was produced with Otis Skinner in the leading role.

Her interpretations of the six queens were the result of a long study of the personalities and the modes of that day. She performs her roles in costumes copied from paintings by the famous Holbein.

Duke Professor Will Preach At Local Methodist Church

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, professor of Christian doctrine at Duke University, will conduct services at the Chapel Hill Methodist church next Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock. He is a former editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, published in Greensboro. He was at one time pastor for the Central church of Asheville, and has been prominently mentioned for bishop.

STUDENTS URGED TO HELP DEFEND STATE EDUCATION

Students Asked to Write Home
About Situation of Public Schools in State.

In a movement paralleling the drive to enlist the support of University alumni in a more active support of education in North Carolina, the University administration is now urging all students to write home to their parents to defend public schools and institutions of higher learning against the proposed drastic cuts in appropriations.

The administration believes that students can be of much help by writing to their parents to enlist themselves and other citizens in the support of this movement.

The object is to save the schools and to prevent any further cuts of the University and sister institutions below the present state allotment. The amount received by the University in 1932-33 is $504,700, a cut of thirty per cent from the appropriation granted for the year, and a 43.6 per cent reduction from the $894,000 received from the state in 1929. Other state institutions have suffered in a like manner.

Reduction Disproportionate

Educational forces in the state have been pointing to this reduction as disproportionate as the general average of budget cuts in North Carolina for all divisions and agencies since 1929 is approximately fifteen per cent while appropriations for education

The Call To Mexico

Two prominent graduates of the University of North Carolina, Josephus Daniels and Robert W. Bingham are slated for important posts in the diplomatic corps, if the nominations of President Roosevelt are accepted by the United States Senate. Singularly enough, both are newspaper editors. Bingham edits the famed Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and Daniels is the venerated editor of Raleigh's News and Observer, a pillar of journalistic Democracy in the South.

Mr. Bingham, though a Kentucky publisher, is a native of our own Orange county. Born not far from Chapel Hill in 1871, Bingham was educated in his native state, matriculating at the University in 1888 and entering the law school in 1896. As first citizen of Louisville, he has served a term on the bench as judge of chancery court and as mayor of the city. Lawyer, editor, publisher, Mr. Bingham now becomes a statesman. A frequent British visitor, his appointment has been well received at the Court of St. James where his friends are many.

At a time when relations with Mexico are grave, the choice of a man of Mr. Daniels' feeling and understanding is most provident. Mr. Daniels has that rare faculty for political insight and human sympathy combining to make him eminently qualified at this post. His career in the service of his country has been brilliant. He has served under every Democratic president since his birth and in the Wilson administration as Secretary of Navy.

But North Carolina journalism will be the loser by Mexico's gain. The News and Observer feels its loss deeply: "If any newspaper in the United States ought to oppose the appointment it is the News and Observer. Twice before this the News and Observer has been looted of Mr. Daniels by Democratic presidents. Now comes a third. From paste pot to Mergenthaler the News and Observer is both delighted and dejected. But being Democratic in every line of its type the News and Observer is happy to have its Josephus Daniels in service again as an officer of the nation under the Democratic party, to which Mr. Daniels and the News and Observer have given their lives.

"For that reason and that reason only this paper will not press its objection to the appointment. Still and finally, there's no use pretending that this office isn't going to miss the galleys of copy that Mr. Daniels could feed to a linotype while chatting with a caller, reading one newspaper and clipping another all at the same time.

"The News and Observer lends him to Mr. Roosevelt and Mexico, but until he comes back the place will not be the same without his voice ringing over the partition:

"Oh, Haywood!"

"Oh, Fleet!"

"Oh, Frank!"

"Mexico City, by all reports, is a delightful city, but while Mr. Daniels is there the office of the News and Observer will never, never be the same."

On a recent visit to Chapel Hill, Mr. Daniels stopped by the DAILY TAR HEEL editorial offices. Upon examining a copy of the product of this institution, he remarked, "You boys put out the best newspaper in North Carolina—except the News and Observer." The "best newspaper in North Carolina—except the News and Observer" congratulates Mr. Daniels on his good fortune, but we will miss him, too.—D.C.S.

The Limit

The re-opening of banks closed by the national holiday seems to be going ahead satisfactorily. There is evidence of much-needed public confidence and sanity. Today the final test of President Roosevelt's plan and schedule for the resumption of banking activity begins. Sound local banks in areas isolated from the clearing house associations in 250 American cities are scheduled to re-open sometime this morning. It is in these banks that the majority of small depositors have their funds. The small depositors are more immediately concerned with whether or not these banks re-open than they are with the fate of larger national and state banks. Much of national confidence or fear has its origin in the ranks of these many men and women of modest means.

There is evidence that some of the small banks will not open. Congressmen in Washington are clamoring for a federal guarantee of all bank deposits, declaring that the people of their districts will be financially prostrate if their banks fail. Senator Carter Glass, who is now working on banking reform, says that a guarantee would undermine federal credit, since losses by such a policy could not be withstood by the flimsy purse of the national treasury. For the same reason, President Roosevelt leans away from a federal guarantee. The big banking interests also oppose such a policy; they wish to speed consolidation and centralization of banking control by allowing small weak banks to die a natural death, no matter how many dependents they may leave.

With leaders like Glass and Roosevelt anxious to maintain federal credit, it is not likely that a federal guarantee of deposits will be forthcoming. President Roosevelt's message to Congress on banking reform has not been drafted. But further centralization of banking control seems inevitable. Such measures as that of Senator Robinson to allow national banks to lend money to state banks for a period of a year and efforts to extend R. F. C. aid to state banks would give the national government a hold on smaller banks. Without a guarantee of deposits, failures among the small banks are certain. Their places will be taken more than likely by branches of larger banks, perhaps national banks, if Senator Glass puts his reform bill through Congress. With this positive trend towards centralization why does not Congress go the limit and bring all banks under one national system, thereby eliminating the fraud and graft inherent in forty-nine different systems, and guaranteeing the country once and for all against wholesale bank failures and financial collapse?—E.C.D.

For the Preservation Of Stratford

Frequently it is difficult for intelligent persons to have much sympathy for all the ballyhoo over erecting shrines for this person and that person, and even less sympathy when appeals are made to the public for the funds. Yet there are certain men whose names stand for the ideals and traditions of an era, men whose lives have enriched their countrymen by their examples. Such men should be perpetuated not only in history but in legend as well; they stood for something in their time, they should be made to stand for all time.

Historical research of the modern school has too often tended to tear down these men, to try to impress upon us their human frailties, and often there have been too many frailties for the preserving of a healthy illusion. The South, in the past, has been full of romantic figures which has made it a land rich in legend and folk lore, but also rich in history. Of all our heroes there has been one who stood out over all the others, a man whose fame has grown with the passing of the years, Robert E. Lee. With the lapse of time he has more surely emerged from the bitterness of the past as a great American, a man who in defeat won a victory.

Now a movement has been made to restore Stratford, the Lee family home on the shores of the Potomac, and it is a movement which deserves the heartfelt appreciation and cooperation of the South. Lee has been enshrined with the passionate loyalties of the South, yet he is not easily seen as a living personality, as a man.

Lee possessed possibly the greatest military mind our nation has produced, yet it was not led astray into martial channels. Had there been no war or had he been on the other side of the fence, he might now be listed as one of our foremost and most capable presidents. Arlington, Lee's home which stands above the national capital, has been seized by the enemy. Stratford is our last stronghold. We must not shirk our duty to our great.—V.C.R.

Farewell To Arms

Loyal Britons and people the world over were shocked a few weeks ago when the Oxford Union, long a training school for English statesmen, passed the resolution: "Under no circumstances will we fight for King and Country." Outside influence and threats of violence were brought to bear, but to no avail.

Oxford has long been a firm stronghold of British patriotism; it stands for the highest of England's ideal. There is no underestimating the importance of a step such as this at such a university. It is a sign that youth is coming to resent the stupidity and greed of leaders who plunge nations into long and bloody wars. It is a sign that young men today have better use for their lives than to yield them up to agonizing deaths in muddy trenches. The men who passed these resolutions are not cowards, it took courage to take their stand.

They realize, however, that it is wicked and wrong that ten million lives be sacrificed to achieve nothing. They know that it is folly for millions to go through life crippled and maimed when their suffering accomplishes nothing. England saw plenty of the war, too many broken hearts, broken homes, and broken lives bear testimony to its horror, the condition of the world today proves its futility.

The day is not far distant when man must know that he does not face the bayonet, the gas, and the bullet for "king and country" or to "make the world safe for democracy." War today is an economic phenomena and men will not go on indefinitely giving their lives to safeguard the property or trade of the predatory interests. When the truth dawns upon us the uniform and the blare of martial music will not only lose their glamor but will come to be regarded as puerile and ridiculous. Someday the world will know that war is savage, cruel, and stupid. Someday bravery will consist not of the willingness to blindly die but fearlessly to live and strive for a fairer, saner, and a better civilization.—J.F.A.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

According to the DAILY TAR HEEL, the departmental survey of courses has been made for the purpose of aiding the student in his registration for the spring quarter. This is a laudable purpose and I hope that the survey will be for the best, but speaking from the standpoint of the survey made of the courses in the department of geology, I am convinced that the survey has been a source of confusion rather than help, for the following reasons:

1. Two only of the ten courses to be offered in the spring quarter were surveyed—Geology 11 and Geology 12. Four of the remaining eight courses to be given in the spring are general scientific and cultural courses and should have been included in the survey.

2. Five of the eight courses surveyed have never been given in the spring quarter.

3. Two of the courses surveyed have been discontinued—Geology 5 and Geology 41 and one of these, Geology 41, has not been given since 1922 and at that time under number Geology 27.

I am impressed with the hurried and inaccurate character of the survey and feel that in the future it should either be more carefully thought out or abandoned.

—W. F. Prouty.

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

Inasmuch as I have been tapped caressingly on the back by exponents of the two big political frame-ups during the past week, I believe it none too soon to give vent to what I consider a new political idea, namely: that we cease to be governed by frame-ups, backslappers, etc., and in their stead substitute an intelligent system headed by an intelligent man.

The system: choosing men according to their ability and merit, and not according to their status in any organization, clique, or what have you.

The man: Four years a youth knocked at the gates of this great institution who was obscure, friendless, and who had only fifty dollars in his pocket. Of only one thing did this youth have an abundance—guts. Since then he has assumed his part in the great wheel of college life and has endeared himself in the hearts of the greater part of the student body. True it is that my friend is short in stature, but the day has passed when we elected the monarch of the gridiron to be monarch of our student government. But whatever my man lacks in stature is more than offset by his intelligence and industriousness.

As I have indicated this person can "give it," but first of all he can "take it." Of course the fifty spot I mentioned was not enough to pay board for a quarter in '29, so my boy began a career as a self-help student that has hardly a parallel. He has filled successfully some thirty jobs in his four years here. I don't mean to say that being a self-help student is a prerequisite to office-holding, but you can see that there is a man for you. Cooking, washing dishes, balancing a diet and budget for a dozen boys, and at the same time making the honor roll; this is an example of the stuff he is made of.

He stands on his own feet; neither his friends, the faculty, nor the fraternities are leading him by the nose in action or thought. It was his long voice that objected to the high-handed appropriation of student money to the loan fund to be re-loaned to the students at six per cent. With all his outside work, he has found time to prevent the honor system from being made into a farce twice, to be instrumental in straightening out a certain student poll, and to carry on a battle for student freedom. Regardless of the ridicule, mockery, and jokes, he still pursues his course unaltered. As for his diplomacy, I leave it to you. He has the worst cussed job on the campus—bad check man—and yet the fellows know him as a jolly good egg.

So I should like for the students to consider a man of principle, leadership, and intelligence for president of the student body: B. C. Proctor—"Rare Ben" to those who know him.

Sincerely,
F. T. Dupree, Jr.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL GIVES AWARDS TO SIXTY-THREE MEN

Twenty-Seven Varsity Monograms and Thirty-Six Freshman Numerals Awarded.

Twenty-seven varsity monograms and thirty-six freshman numerals were awarded to outstanding members of the various Carolina winter sports teams at the regular meeting of the athletic council Monday night. Captain Percy Idol of the wrestling team was voted a special award of a major sport monogram for winning the unlimited title of the Southern Conference and for his excellent three-year record.

Captain Marty Levinson of boxing and Captain Wilmer Hines of basketball were the only other two men winning their third and last monogram awards.

Three New Winners

There were three new monogram winners on the basketball team, namely: Snooks Aitken, Earle Beale, and Jason Glace. Brandt, Chandler, Stud Henry, Captain-elect McCachren, and Weathers won their second court monograms.

Cliff Glover, Norment Quarles, Sam Giddins, Frank McIntosh, and Tom Parsons were the boxers to win their first letters. Lumpkins, Brown, and Landis won their second sweaters.

Paul Davis was the only wrestler to win his initial monogram while Hussey, Mathewson, Hiller, Spell, and Auman earned their second letters.

Managers Appointed

Tom Spencer was appointed next year's manager for the basketball team, while Ed Kerr and James Barnard were named to serve another year as manager of the boxing and wrestling teams, respectively.

Besides Kerr and Barnard who won managers' awards for boxing and wrestling, Arlindo Cate was granted a manager's sweater for varsity basketball. Patterson also got one as manager of the freshman basketball.

John Leak was appointed manager for the frosh basketball team next year, while McKee and Blanton were picked as Spencer's assistants.

Frosh Numeral Winners

The eleven freshman basketball numerals were voted to Raymond Glasgow, R. P. Guarino, J. R. McCachren, E. H. McKeithan, W. J. Moore, Melvin Nelson, F. H. Orr, W. H. Rankin, Gayle Rogers, C. S. Tilley, and B. S. Willis.

Fourteen numerals were given the following members of the freshman boxing team: E. E. Eutsler, M. D. Frucht, J. R. Edwards, F. T. Glenn, J. T. Flaherty, Nat Gennette, C. W. Sutton, Baxter Brown, A. M. Dean, Mortimer Ellisberg, J. D. Hornaday, R. L. Henson, Wm. Owlick, and Murray Kanner.

The eleven freshman wrestling awards were to H. N. Blacklock, DuPont Snowden, R. E. Holman, M. Winstead, Jesse Miller, N. R. Holland, W. H. Sumner, W. G. Shipman, E. B. Connell, D. J. Ranson, and J. B. Leonard.

University Library Gets Valuable Medical Works

Acting Librarian Downs announced yesterday that the University library had just received a valuable collection of medical books of the late Dr. Joseph Dixon of Greenville.

This collection, which numbers 225 volumes, includes many standard medical works that had not been owned by the library. Dr. Dixon, an alumnus of the University, had gathered these books throughout his life as a practitioner in Greenville.

Three Carolina Captains Who Have Closed Their Careers

Here are Percy Idol, Marty Levinson, and Wilmer Hines, captains of the Tar Heel wrestling, boxing, and basketball teams respectively, who have finished their three-year careers. Idol may be sent to the national collegiate wrestling meet, while Hines still has a season of tennis duty. Last year Wilmer was placed on several all-southern selections and this year will be Number 1 in tennis.

CAROLINA WORKS FOR TENNIS MEET

Morgan and Shufford Pair for One Doubles Team; Hines, Wright for Another.

With the mammoth meet with Duke not far off, the Carolina tennis team worked long and hard yesterday. This match with Duke is open to as many students in the University, graduate or undergraduate, as care to participate.

Members of the varsity and freshman squads of both schools are also eligible and Coach Kenfield feels certain that Carolina's team should number over 200 men. He is urging as many as care to play in this huge meet to come out and practice every afternoon. The interest at Duke is high and word comes that they are confident of trouncing Carolina in the long run although our varsity and frosh players may pile up an early lead.

Coach Kenfield had a doubles combination of Harley Shufford and Dave Morgan put in a strenuous workout yesterday against Bernie Friedman and Walter Levitan. There is a possibility that Shufford and Morgan may form one of the doubles teams on the varsity. Shufford teamed with Hines last year and may work with him this season if his pairing with Morgan proves unsuccessful. Lenoir Wright will probably team with Hines as the other doubles team.

Minor, Willis, and Dillard were other varsity men working out yesterday on the windy courts. The powerful wind made good tennis almost an impossibility as it swept across the courts.

makes his home in Gastonia. Other alumni who represent North Carolina as congressmen include: Frank W. Hancock, Jr., '16, of Oxford, realtor and a member of the United States department of justice corps at Cheyenne, Wyoming, in 1916; William B. Umstead, '16, of Durham, who was a Golden Fleece man while at the University and served with distinction in the A. E. F.; J. Bayard Clark, student here 1905-1906; and Zebulon Weaver of Asheville, law student of the class of 1895, who has served in the House since 1917.

FROSH DIAMOND MEN ENGAGE IN FIRST PRACTICE

Coach Cerney Puts Candidates Through Light Work as Regular Drill Starts.

Carolina's freshman baseball squad held its first work-out of the 1933 season yesterday afternoon on the freshman field. Practice will take place at 3:30 o'clock every afternoon from now on.

Forty-one candidates reported for the various positions, and more are expected out during the next few days. Coach Cerney is directing the Tar Babies without the aid of any of the other coaches, as they are busy with spring football practice. The first game on the schedule at present is March 27, though an earlier contest may be added.

A strong wind prevented any kind of playing yesterday afternoon. Coach Cerney will, however, only put the candidates through easy limbering up drills for the first few days, as a strain early in the season may hinder ones play throughout the year. As there is a limited number, uniforms will not be issued until a later date.

Pitchers in Shape

Most of the freshman pitchers are in excellent shape, having worked with the varsity for the past few weeks. Among those looking best to date are McKeithan, Glasgow, Mills, and Spiers. Another fine prospect reporting is Tommy Irwin, a shortstop. Irwin has also been working with the varsity and in last Saturday's practice game cracked out a four-bagger against the veteran Griffith's pitching. Irwin covers a great deal of territory around shortstop and has a strong throwing arm.

Several of the freshman football and basketball stars reported for the diamond squad during the afternoon, among them being Joyce, Montgomery, Snyder, Nelson, Moore, Kanner, Yeager, Barwick, Webb, Denti, Orr, McKeithan, and Glasgow.

Loans Available

Students considering borrowing from the student loan fund are requested by F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, to make applications as soon as possible. It is expected that there is a sufficiency of available money to meet the student demand, the dean stated.

WEATHER SLOWS WORK OF VARSITY

Hurling Prospects Look Better But Infield Fails to Live Up To Expectations.

Threatening weather again kept the Tar Heel baseball squad down to a limited drill as Coach Bunn Hearn was unwilling to risk a heavy work-out in the cold which might have caused a lot of sore arms and shoulders. However, practice games will be started today or Thursday, weather permitting.

Saturday will see the second game of the Soearm-Alibi series. Judging from last week's turn-out at Emerson field, these contests will prove very popular. Yesterday's drill was limited to a warm-up session, followed by a brisk fielding and batting work-out.

Hurlers Look Better

Bunn Hearn's search for more pitchers to support Joe Griffith this season may soon be ended as the hurling corps is taking on more form daily. Andrews, former Presbyterian Junior College star, has been showing plenty of stuff the past two days and may be counted on to see action during the campaign. Webster, a sophomore, has also been looking good as have been Whitley and Crouch.

On the other hand, the infield has failed to round into shape as has been expected. Perhaps it is the poor weather or the fact that it still is too early to work hard. Shortstop in particular will be a source of worry to Hearn. The two leading candidates for the position are Johnny Phipps and Dutch Leonard, both of whom are reserves from last year.

Koch Releases New Issue Of 'Play-Book'

The March issue of The Carolina Play-Book, a booklet of drama and criticism, edited four times a year by Professor F. H. Koch, has just been released.

The new Play-Book contains John Philip Milhous' pioneer play "Davy Crockett," which was presented this winter in the Playmaker theatre and on the last Playmaker tour. The play is accompanied by a short appreciation by Professor F. H. Koch and is illustrated by a scene from the December production.

Among other articles in the Play-Book is an account of the Shaw-Henderson festival which was conducted here by the Playmakers.

CROOK STAFFORD MAY ENGAGE IN MEET WITH NAVY

Track Squad Goes Through Stiff Work-out in Preparation for Future Contests.

Crook Stafford, star letterman in the hurdles and high jump, who has been out with a pulled ligament in his leg since the indoor track carnival, reported for practice yesterday afternoon. Encouraging reports are being given out by the coaching staff to the effect that Stafford may be in shape for the Navy dual meet only five weeks off.

Although the academic conditions of all the lettermen have not been investigated by the Carolina coaches, the following monogram men are expected to be out daily for work-outs: Higby, Stafford, McRae, L. Sullivan, Jensen, Hubbard, Smith, Mullis, Hodges, Phipps, Chandler, and LeGore.

The entire squad was put through its paces yesterday afternoon although a driving wind seemed to be blowing every cinder off the track. Prior to the regular work by each individual candidate, the team was sent through some limbering-up calisthenic drills. A large number of field men reported for work yesterday and still more candidates for every event will be expected as soon as the school gets acclimated following the recent siege of examinations and new class schedules.

Purdue Studies New Proposal On Cribbing

(Big Ten News Service)
Lafayette, Indiana, March 14.—Purdue University, which does not operate examinations on the "honor system" basis, is considering a proposal made recently by the student members on the student dishonesty committee which, if accepted, will represent the most radical change which has taken place in the procedures and penalties of the dishonesty court since its creation twenty years ago.

The proposal advises abolition of all penalties of additional work or of suspension from the University as penalties for dishonesty convictions and advises the substitution of a dishonesty ticket to be given any man convicted of "cribbing," this ticket to be presented to the instructor in charge at every hour test or final examination during the period of punishment, before he is eligible to take the examination. He will then be given the test under strict surveillance of the instructor. Failure to present the ticket will constitute a second offense.

The advantages cited for the methods are:

1. Punishment for dishonest practice will be exercised before the students who will have opportunity to observe its effects, and contemplate possibility of its application to themselves.
2. Each time a convicted student presents his dishonesty ticket he will be subjected to ridicule and humiliation, a sure cure for this type of offense.
3. The student can continue his regular course of work under the burden of a temporarily severe penalty, but with none of the permanently ruinous possibilities.

TWO TAR HEELS MAY BE SENT TO NATIONAL MEETS

Athletic Council Investigates Possibility of Sending Idol And Quarles to Tourneys.

The athletic council appointed a committee Monday night to investigate the question of finances involved in sending Norment Quarles and Percy Idol to the eastern collegiate boxing and national collegiate wrestling tournaments to be conducted this month at Penn State and Lehigh University respectively.

Quarles and Idol are Carolina's conference champions in boxing and wrestling respectively and some question has surrounded their entrance in the national meets for a long time.

The wrestling tournament at Lehigh University, March 24, 25, and 26, is an open affair, and the question of finances is the only thing to be considered in Idol's case. The tournament officials do not guarantee entrants any part of their expenses though a certain per cent of the gate receipts are refunded to the participants if the attendance allows such action.

Doubt About Quarles

There is a big question mark surrounding Quarles' chances of entering the tourney. It is not definitely known whether the tournament at Penn State is one for members of the eastern collegiate association only, or whether it is a national tourney open to all comers. Some word has been received here announcing the national boxing collegiate tournament for Madison Square Garden. Coach Bob Fetzner wired the athletic director at Penn State yesterday in an effort to ascertain whether or not Quarles could enter Quarles in the meet to be held there. This competition is scheduled to begin this Friday.

Finances are an important factor in Quarles' trip also and after the committee finds out definitely which tournament is what, the question of whether the University can afford to send two men north must be considered. Some feel that in case only one can be sent, Captain Idol should get the call, since it is his last year at Carolina and since Quarles may have two other chances in the future.

Coach Quinlan stated that Idol would enter in the 175-pound class so that he would not have to give too much weight advantage to his opponents. Quarles will fight in the featherweight class as he did at the conference meet if entered.

Vance's Book Gets Favorable Comment

Human Geography of the South, a volume by Rupert B. Vance, research associate in sociology in the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University, has received a considerable amount of praise from reviewers of the state papers. Many leading reviewers have named it the outstanding book on the south in many years.

The volume which attempts a careful analysis of the natural, economic, and human factors of the south, concludes with an appeal for a new reconstruction in this section through regional planning. "Every student of Dixie," writes a critic, "will not only want, but need a copy of Human Geography of the South."

MANY GROUPS IN STATE DRAMATIC MEET THIS YEAR

Tenth Annual Festival Expected To Bring Out Productions Of High Standard.

More entries and a higher standard of plays than ever before will characterize the tenth dramatic festival and state tournament which is to be conducted here, March 30 through April 1.

A special feature of the coming festival is to be a special presentation of a Florida folk-play by the Rollins College players as guest artists. The play was written by Charles Mills of Charlotte, the author of Her Rose-Covered Coffin, a Carolina folk-play.

Other Features

Another outstanding event on the program is the production of Ridgely Torrence's negro play, Granny Maumee, by players of St. Augustine's College for negroes in Raleigh.

Other features are to be a demonstration by Samuel Selden of his newly designed "suggestive scenery," an illustrated discussion of "Composition and Color in State Scenery" by James A. McLean, and a demonstration of "Dancing and the Actor" by Phoebe Barr and a group of her students.

There will also be the customary exhibit of costumes, stage models, posters, programs, and scrap-books in the Playmaker scene shop and an exhibit of North Carolina studies by Bayard Wootten in the Green room of the Playmaker theatre.

Entrants in the state dramatic tournament include nine colleges, among which are the Woman's College at Greensboro and Duke University, and twenty-two high schools, and five little theatre groups from Lenoir, Durham, Rocky Mount, Goldsboro, and Wilmington.

Twenty-six original plays have been submitted for the festival. Ten of the plays were from colleges, six from high schools, four from little theatres, and six from individual members.

MAGAZINE TO BE RELEASED SOON

Students of Phillips Russell's Class Will Issue Collection of Articles In Creative Writing.

Bud, a magazine containing representative work done by members of Phillips Russell's class in creative writing last quarter, will be released this week.

The purpose of the publication is to stimulate interest in creative writing at the University. Due to a scarcity of finances, the magazine was mimeographed, and only forty copies have been printed.

The idea for such a magazine at the University was inspired by two southwestern publications, Clay and Folk-Say, which carry work of college students. It is hoped that other editions of the magazine will be released here every quarter.

Material for the first number of Bud was judged by an editorial committee composed of Professor Russell, ex officio member, and the following members of the class: Claiborn Carr, chairman, Elizabeth Johnson, Caroline Ward, Bobbie Mason, and Jack Riley.

HEER CHOSEN BY COMMISSION TO STUDY TAXATION

Author of Tax Article in Hoover Social Trends Report to Do Research for Legislation.

As an authority in the field of taxation, Dr. Clarence Heer, associate professor of public finance in the University, has been tentatively selected by a commission of the inter-state legislators association to do research work for that body on inter-state taxation. Dr. Heer is at the present time doing temporary research work for the commission and will go to Chicago March 24, at which time the commission holds a meeting, in order to make a preliminary report.

Dr. Heer, it may be remembered, attracted a great deal of favorable comment in the press of the nation as the author of the chapter on taxation in the recent report of President Hoover's commission for research in social trends. He is nationally recognized as an authority on problems and methods of taxation.

The purpose of the work of this commission of the inter-state legislators association, which is sponsored by the American legislative association, as set forth in a pamphlet issued by them "will be to formulate a recommendation as to the proper plan of action for the states and federal government" on these problems. The commission seeks to prevent the over-lapping of state and federal schemes of taxation.

Its object will be to find by research the best method of meeting this situation, and of securing governmental action on it. It will require the services of two experts to conduct the research. It is expected that legislators and public officials in every state in the union will desire to consult the findings of these experts.

tional institutions have been cut 42.8 per cent.

Representatives of education propose to defend, as a matter of fairness, sheer economy, and state needs, the position of educational institutions against deeper and more potentially wasteful cuts into the necessary life of the institutions.

Alumni Enlisted

President Frank Graham has put the same idea before the alumni in letters written this week, it was learned last night. He has also urged them to come out strongly for an adequately supported public school system with a state appropriation of not under $18,000,000 for the eight-months term. He has assumed the right of local autonomy in the matter of supplements in extended terms.

In his letter to alumni, President Graham states the situation of education on which decisions of great scope will have to be made soon. "On one side," he says, "are those who would balance the budget by crippling the schools and institutions of the people. On the other side are those who would raise new and replacement revenues as emergency measures to preserve the credit of the state and save the schools and institutions of the state...."

He has suggested to the alumni that they enlist other citizens and make their wishes clearly and positively known to members of the general assembly. He suggests to the students that they may materially aid in the movement by making known their wishes in the present situation.

dream that he first dared contemplate as a school teacher in this state. It was, simple enough, the vision of a backward state that would take rank with the foremost, once its people were awakened to a realization of its potentialities.

Used Three Methods

To produce this awakening, with the encouragement and backing of the youthful Graham, Dr. Branson used three methods, the rural-social economics department, which he was brought here to head up; the North Carolina club, which he immediately organized to make a study of North Carolina, and the University News Letter, also set up immediately, through which he made available to the press and the public the results of facts dug up by his department and the North Carolina club.

Through these three agencies, Dr. Branson dedicated himself to the task of selling North Carolina to North Carolinians, a task similar to the one he had begun on a smaller scale while president of the Georgia Normal and Industrial School, at Athens. And how well he had accomplished this task in North Carolina is well illustrated by the progress the state made from 1914 until the time it, along with the other states, was hit by the depression.

Here in Chapel Hill and throughout the state Dr. Branson was loved not only for his qualities of scholarship but for his qualities of kindness and friendliness as well. A neighborly man, he exemplified the democratic spirit at its best. He was quick to offer friendly advice and encouragement and slow to censure.

Saw Faults in Tax System

Dr. Branson may well be regarded as a prophet of the first order. Back in 1926, in an address before the North Carolina club, he served warning that "the tax situation is more vital to North Carolina than any other today."

He expressed the opinion at that time that unless some workable solution for the problem could be found in the near future, the state would be headed toward something approaching bankruptcy.

What was needed, he thought at the time, was an amendment to the constitution to revise the basis of taxation from the ad valorem property tax to a tax calling for classification, segregation, and graduation of taxables. This was the broad solution he proposed.

General interest in affairs of common concern, competent acquaintance with public affairs, home and farm ownership and civic courage were the four things which Dr. Branson considered the most important essentials of a good citizen.

He lamented the fact that the greater portion of the people of the state took so little interest in and were so poorly acquainted with public affairs. According to his estimate at the time, 70 per cent of the people are indifferent to public affairs.

Faith in Middle Class

Dr. Branson felt that the most worthwhile thing about North Carolina is her middle class, her home and farm owners. It is these people, he said, who promote a stable, a responsible citizenship, and demand and get able and responsible government.

That Dr. Branson's work was as thoroughly appreciated by President Harry W. Chase as by Dr. Edward K. Graham, who brought Branson back to the state, is indicated by a statement Dr. Chase made in his annual report in 1923. Said Dr. Chase then:

"Such work as Dr. Branson's has not only greatly advanced the knowledge of the people of North Carolina about themselves but it has unquestionably contributed largely to the creation of the forward looking attitude which so characterizes the state today."

Pioneer

At the time Dr. Branson came here, there was no department in any other university in the country doing the pioneer work he had started here. Since then a number of other states have adopted his program in one form or another. Two of his former pupils are doing similar work in South Carolina and Virginia. Dr. Branson's influence has been nation-wide. By special invitation he had conducted seminars in California, Utah, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, and in other states. His courses have drawn students from all sections of the country.

Dr. Branson is regarded as the father of a number of important reforms that have been made in county government on North Carolina in the last ten years. As a member of the advisory commission on county government, appointed by Governor McLean during his administration, Dr. Branson made available to those concerned the vast amount of information contained in his seminar library, information consisting of surveys of most of the counties of the state. And the North Carolina club had devoted one whole year to the study of county government.

Dr. Branson was born in Morehead City on August 6, 1861, the son of Levi and Edith (Cunningham) Branson. He did his college work at Trinity College and Peabody Normal College for Teachers and won A. B. and M. A. degrees at both institutions.

Taught in Public Schools

Following his graduation, he served as principal of the high school of Raleigh and later as superintendent of the public schools in Wilson and in Athens, Ga. It was in Athens that he attracted the attention of the trustees of the Georgia Normal who appointed him to the faculty for one year and then in 1900 elected him president, a position he held for twelve years. During most of this

Following the flood of favorable criticism given English Burlesque Poetry 1700-1750, by Dr. Richmond P. Bond, of the English faculty, Dr. Bond has been invited to talk at Harvard, Monday afternoon, March 20.

Several talks on poetry are made each year in the Harvard library by poets. The talks are made under an endowed fund and are open to an invited group of students. Dr. Bond is the first prose writer to receive this invitation. Predecessors in this series include Robert Frost and Robert Hillyer.

While at Harvard, Dr. Bond will be the guest of Robert Gale Noyes, who visited here a year ago.

Favorable Reviews

The book contains a collection of English burlesque poetry during its best period, generously annotated, with Dr. Bond's thorough discussion of the subject.

Abernethy Successor Unchosen

No definite action has yet been taken on the naming of a successor to Dr. E. A. Abernethy, former head of the infirmary. Dr. Foy Roberson, who has been in charge for the past two months, will remain until July, when a committee composed of Doctors I. H. Manning, W. deB. MacNider, and C. S. Mangum of the medical school will choose a permanent head.

time he also served as editor of Farm and Homestead, a magazine he founded.

Before leaving North Carolina Dr. Branson had been the youngest member of the famous Watauga Club, a Tar Heel group to which also belonged Walter Clark, Walter Hines Page and Clarence Poe. The purpose of the club was to find out and make known information on practical subjects that would be of public use.

Dr. Branson has written a number of college textbooks bearing on his own and other subjects and several popular volumes. Farm Life Abroad, written during a year abroad on leave of absence, which is chiefly concerned with agriculture in Denmark, has been widely read.

DR. M. C. S. NOBLE CELEBRATES HIS 78TH MILESTONE

Dean of Education School Has Spent Thirty-Five Years in Service of University.

Dr. M. C. S. Noble, dean of the University school of education and North Carolina's grand old man of education, yesterday celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday. He is serving his thirty-fifth year of service for the University, having been called here in 1898 from Wilmington where he was superintendent of public schools.

Dr. Noble has been dean of the school of education here for twenty years and president of the Bank of Chapel Hill since 1905. He appears to be in excellent health, and his long years of service to the educational institutions of this state seem to rest lightly upon his shoulders.

Won Mayflower Cup

Several years ago, at his own request, his administrative duties as dean of the school of education were turned over to Acting Dean N. W. Walker in order that he might devote more of his time to the writing of his book A History of Public Schools in North Carolina. In recognition of this volume, the Mayflower Society cup was awarded to him in 1931.

Dr. Noble was educated at Davidson College and at the University. His first teaching experience was received at Birmingham school in Asheville.

Nominations to Be Made in Assembly Period Preceding Monday.

The election of the officers for the scholastic year 1933-1934 will be conducted in Graham Memorial April 5, from 9:00 until 5:00 o'clock, it was announced yesterday.

The time for the elections, as set by the student council, has always been the third Wednesday in the spring quarter, with the installation of officers two weeks following which would make it April 19. This date is not the third Wednesday of the spring quarter but it would have been had the University program assumed its natural course.

The nominations will be made in the regular chapel period Monday morning, April 3. The nominations for class officers will be made at special meetings called by the presidents of each respective class.

The elections will be conducted in the usual form with the Australian ballot, and the student council is planning to make this election even more efficient and accurate than any election in the past.

Check Redemption Set For Saturday

All students who have given out checks to be held during the bank holiday are expected to make arrangements to meet their checks by Saturday, William C. Medford, chairman of the student council check committee, announced yesterday.

The checks given during the bank holiday will be turned into the local bank by Monday.

This announcement came with the re-opening of the local bank yesterday. Checks given by students payable upon the re-opening of banks throughout the country were a part of the credit system established by local merchants to serve students needs during the bank holiday declared last week.

Should students fail to make arrangements for payment of these checks by the time designated, they will be subject to the student council's regulations on bad checks.

Chapel Hill Business Hit Heavily During National Banking Holiday

Drastic Changes in Credit Structure Have Taken Place in Community and University; Yet Business Shows Marked Decrease Since Beginning of Holiday March 6.

If baggy pants, unshorn locks, and fewer new ties were seen on the campus this past week, the falling off in sartorial elegance may be correctly attributed to the national bank holiday that has had the commerce of the nation in its restraining grip since March 6. The closing of the banks did not catch Chapel Hill unaware, but certain drastic changes in the credit structure here have been consummated.

In interviews with merchants, a number of interesting facts were disclosed concerning the credit situation, volume of business, and relative declines in types of merchandise. Nearly all of the merchants report a falling off in volume of business, but the greatest change has occurred in the matter of cash. The Book Exchange, which has been giving credit to all who desire it, reports a business only forty per cent of normal. Everything—text books, note paper, stationery, dopes—has suffered a relative decline.

Few Old Books Sold

At the beginning of every quarter, the sale of second hand books is carried on briskly in the lobby of the Y. But this quarter B.C. (bank closing) has witnessed a falling off in sales here, attributed, the salesmen claim in part, to the fact that some students prefer to buy new books on credit than to buy second hand books for cash.

The business of the Bull's Head has proceeded normally, except for the fact that the item of cash does not play a prominent part in the negotiations, giving way to the universal credit. The campus is cognizant of the problems of the present, for books dealing with economic subject and those purporting to deal with present conditions, like Gilbert Seldes' Years of the Locust, have increased in circulation.

Theatre Attendance Declines

The Carolina theatre, rendezvous unique of all true gentlemen and scholars, has also been affected by the bank debacle. Despite the evidence of a pile of checks of unbelievable proportions, Mr. Smith reckoned that only fifty per cent of his former patrons attended the cinema at present. The peanut stand next door to the theatre has consequently been required to stand mutely by for a large part of the day, thinking of former hurried demands for its products.

No new Ford V-8's have appeared on Chapel Hill streets since March 6, reports the Strowd Motor Company. But the volume of gasoline sold remains up around former figures, although much of it is sold on a credit basis.

A. and P. Suffers Slightly

The A. & P. reports a volume of business that has only fallen off twenty-five per cent in the past week or so. Credit has been issued to old customers with little reservations. The manager reports that people are

BANK OF CHAPEL HILL REOPENS ITS NORMAL BUSINESS

Local Banking Institution Has More Deposits Than Withdrawals On First Day.

Along with scores of other banking institutions throughout the state and nation, the Bank of Chapel Hill resumed normal operations yesterday upon the permission of Gurney P. Hood, state commissioner of banks. The only restriction on the bank in re-opening is the federal ruling against hoarding.

According to estimates made last night, the local institution received a greater amount in deposits than total withdrawals. The deposits totaled over $50,000 while withdrawals were appreciably smaller.

An interesting fact brought out was that a larger amount of currency was received in deposits than checks. The checks were presented, as a rule, by local merchants while deposits of currency was made by various individuals.

Officials of the institution yesterday expressed appreciation for the confidence and co-operation shown by the community during the banking crisis.

Seventeen in Infirmary

Seventeen students were under the University physician's care yesterday. They were: R. W. Baker, Jimmy Craig, G. L. Tillery, C. C. Hartman, Jr., G. C. Kyker, L. A. Dalton, Jisaku Fukusato, M. D. Taylor, D. J. Brawley, L. L. White, H. A. Ginsberg, C. C. Glover, P. W. Markley, Mary Waldo, M. S. Campbell, and J. C. Parker.

PLAY TO BE READ BY MRS. HOLMES

"Another Language," Comedy of Contemporary Life, Will Be Presented Sunday Night.

A reading of Another Language, a new American comedy success, will be given by Mrs. Urban Holmes at 8:30 o'clock Sunday night in the Playmakers theatre. This is the March number of the series of monthly readings presented by Playmakers.

Another Language, by Rose Franken, enjoyed an unusually successful run last season on Broadway and later in London. The play is a realistic comedy of divided family loyalties, fashioned out of contemporary life. It is a remarkable study of the interactions of the members of the Hallam family, a typical middle-class family, and abounds in the subtle comedy of everyday middle-class life.

Mrs. Holmes is an excellent actress, and has read a number of plays here in former years, always well received.

CLASS HEADS TO DECIDE ON DANCE

Junior Executive Committee to Meet Tonight to Plan Finances For Annual Dances.

Red Boyles, president of the junior class, yesterday announced that there would be a very important meeting of the class executive committee tonight in Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock.

Boyles urged that every member of the committee be present, since matters of vital importance must be handled by that body immediately. Under the present arrangement of collecting University fees, he said that the class would meet serious difficulties in fulfilling contracts made in connection with the junior-senior dances.

The committee will decide tonight whether or not the dance will be given, and if so, how the funds will be collected. If original plans for the dance are to be continued, the committee must also set a date for a class meeting to elect dance leaders and commencement marshals.

Sophs Excused From Chapel Attendance

Members of the sophomore class have been excused from further required attendance at assembly exercises this year Dean F. F. Bradshaw announced yesterday. Freshmen will be required to attend once a week during the present quarter instead of twice under the present ruling.

Sophomores are, however, especially invited to attend but no check will be made on them.

According to the re-arrangement of the assembly program, chapel is now regularly set for Monday unless special announcement is made. Each freshman will be allowed only two absences during the quarter, and students coming in late or leaving before the end of the program will be considered absences. Excessive absences will result in probation. Violation of probation will result in appearance before the assembly committee and possible expulsion from the University.

DATE FOR SPRING HOLIDAYS NOT YET SET, SAYS WEEKS

President of Student Body Announces That Holidays Practically Sure at Easter.

Because of the uncertainty of the present financial conditions, no decision has been reached on arrangements for spring holidays at the University. However, it is fairly certain that the University will close for a several days' vacation around Easter time, it was announced by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, yesterday.

This announcement was made to quiet a multitude of rumors on the campus during the past week about the usual spring holidays which were postponed Monday, March 6, immediately after the banking holiday was declared by President Roosevelt.

The student council is working on a recommendation to President Graham about the holidays but it is waiting before making definite decision until the bank situation clears up. The majority of banks have re-opened for business, but the council feels that the same factors influencing the postponement of holidays would cause at present the same amount of uncertainty as before.

Weeks expressed confidence, however, that a holiday will be granted and the date for the vacation will be near Easter which falls on April 16.

FACULTY ACTION ON HOLIDAYS IS FAVORED BY PHI

Di Discusses the Entrance of Negro Students in Law School But No Vote Is Taken.

At the first meeting of the Phi assembly for the spring quarter Tuesday night, the new officers were installed. Don Seawell, speaker, was unable to be present to give his inaugural address as he is now on a debating tour to Boston. Sergeant-at-Arms Shuford acted as speaker in the absence of speaker pro-tem Farlow.

The bill, "Resolved: That the action of the faculty and student council in cancelling the vacation last week be favored provided a holiday will be granted at Easter or at some other convenient time," was passed with a large majority.

The second bill read, "Resolved: That the action of President Roosevelt and the state governors in closing all the nation's banks be commended." The bill was passed.

Di on Negro Students
Active discussion on the bill regarding the society's favoring the admittance of negroes to the University law school featured Tuesday's meeting of the Di Senate. No vote, however, was taken on the question.

Howard Lyon delivered his inaugural address as president for the spring quarter.

Grades Obtainable Today

Final grades for the winter quarter will be issued today, according to an announcement made yesterday at the registrar's office. These grades may be obtained by calling for them at the registrar's office in South building.

For a Carolina Folies

With the success of the University Depression Party still a topic of comment, it is increasingly apparent that the mass participation of the student body in an all-University venture is highly conducive to a spirit of unity within the undergraduate ranks. Saturday night's performance was the first manifestation of what may be righteously and unblushingly termed "school spirit" since the decline of the Cheerios under the famed Kay Kyser.

These expressions have evoked the suggestion that the Student Entertainment Committee sponsor some sort of entertainment written and acted by members of the student body. It has been pointed out that a very small portion of the fee paid by every student could be diverged into a fund for some such venture as a University musical show, with scenery, music, costume, and directorial costs to be met by the fund. It would take little effort to write and cast a burlesque show or a musical comedy, and obtain the services of seventy-five students to design scenery, assist with the direction and music, and carry the principal roles.

Such a program could only be undertaken with the whole-hearted cooperation of undergraduate body. It would, of course, parallel the programs of the now defunct Wigwag and Masque Club which met with such success in a similar venture. With a large sum of money that might be utilized for this purpose at hand subject to the approval of the Student Entertainment Committee, and excellent musical and dramatic resources available, an All-University Show might be a worth-while venture.—D.C.S.

"Earmarked For Education"

With the General Assembly at an impasse, Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus came forward Monday night with a program to solve the state's financial problems. His plan placed particular emphasis on the passage of a sales tax and the establishment of a state-supported eight months school. Opposition to a sales tax has come principally from the merchants, says the Governor. His plan is to put the sales tax in such form that it may be easily passed on by the merchants. He wishes to relieve the local tax burden by having the state take over, in an economical fashion, the support of the eight months school term.

To the University, the significant statement in Governor Ehringhaus's statement was his proposal to "earmark for education" the funds brought in by the proposed sales tax. He pointed out the danger of an irreparable impairment of the functions of state departments and institutions if appropriations were too severely slashed. It is his intention that if new taxation is levied the state's public schools and higher educational institutions shall receive their just share.

It is not yet known how the Legislature will receive the Governor's proposals. As it has been previously stated in these columns, however, there exists in the state no ready source of revenue other than a tax on sales. If the Legislature intends to secure additional revenue, it can, all things being considered, do no other than pass a sales tax. And as it has also been previously predicted here, the University will receive its portion of the new revenues. We have now something to bolster that hope that we have not had before: the Governor's statement that the income from new taxes should "be earmarked for education."—E.C.D.

"I Ain't Goin' to College To Be a Soldier!"

College men, who will constitute one of the first consignments of cannon fodder in another war, must be keenly interested in President Roosevelt's belief that the cause of disarmament has come to a crisis, and that the United States should do all in her power to save the present Geneva Conference from failure, and what is most important, save the world from the arms race that would result from the Conference's failure, which could have but one ending—millions of dead and wounded, crushing burdens of debt and taxation, disease, crime, depression—the whole revolting aftermath of the last war in still more horrible proportions.

Roosevelt will follow a policy very beneficial for his country if he does all he can for the cause of world peace in the present crisis. A general war in Europe would be almost sure to involve this country just as it did in 1917. America didn't want the war then, but got it just the same. In 1914 and 1917 it was too late to prevent the conflict. Soon it will be too late to prevent the future one that must come if we cannot do something now.

Prevention of war must come by sublimating the national interests of national states, in a world of international anarchy, to the interest of a United States of the World that is conceived in a spirit of mutual benefit and cooperation. Fantastic as it may seem today, it is the only alternative to continuous war and continuous degeneration of the human race. Before the American constitution was ratified in 1789, what is now a great and peaceful nation consisted of thirteen nations suffering from the same international anarchy that afflicts the world today.

It is easy to argue that to unite all the nations will be infinitely harder than to unite thirteen American states. True, but the answer is that the task must be consummated. It is not a question of what is the easiest solution. There is only one solution, and it is not easy. But when world public opinion clearly sees that only in a world government will it find refuge from the terrible spectre of war, then world public opinion will find ways to transcend the obstacles.

In world public opinion, of which college opinion is an important part, the salvation is to be found. A public that is determined not to go to war, a public that can understand the underlying causes of war and can see their pettiness and selfishness, will not go to war. And a public that will interest itself in foreign relations will not allow vested interests to thrust a war upon it. For what Walter Lippman said in 1915 is still true today:

"... People take almost no interest in foreign affairs, with the result that their management goes by default to a small coalition of aristocratic, military, bureaucratic, and exploiting interests."—D.B.

With Contemporaries

The New Pedagogy

H. L. Mencken, in his chosen role of fiery iconoclast, sears the opening pages of the latest Mercury with an attack on the American public school. The reason for his diatribe, needless to say, is the depression. The public schools, it appears, are spending now about $100 per child each year, where in 1880 they spent $5. Obviously, such an increase as this offers a loophole to one in search of reductions, if only it can be shown to be unjustified. This task Mr. Mencken assumes, asking the natural question: "Has the increase in intelligence among the products of the schools been at all comparable to the increase in the cost of education?"

This first question he answers, as the majority would, in the negative, claiming that the high-school graduate of today is, if anything, more stereotyped and dull than his predecessor. If this is true, or even partly true, the search for the leak must be elsewhere. Mr. Mencken finds this cause of waste in the growth of special classes for the backward and in the large number of various sorts of experts which infest every modern school. Actually, there is another and even worse cause for growing expenditures: this is the movement toward a large number of courses in every conceivable subject. This innovation has had two evil effects: it has raised the cost of an education, and it has led the present generations too far from the benefits of a classical training.

Mr. Mencken's arguments are a bit high-strung; they savor of viciousness. But it is evident that he has struck a blow in the right place, though he may have struck too hard. From a purely intellectual point of view, the schools need revision. And from the standpoint of financial expediency, they are more than wasteful. For this hard-spent money, the citizens are given, as Mr. Mencken says, the sight of a myriad palatial buildings, "out of each vomited the standard product of the new Pedagogy... an endless procession of adolescents who have been taught everything save that which is true, and outfitted with every trick save those which are socially useful."—Harvard Crimson.

Radio Sadists

One of the minor forms of torture inflicted upon innocent people today is the barrage of prize contest announcements that accompany the majority of programs broadcast over the radio. Depression-hit families which settle down before their radio to try to forget their monetary difficulties and their other troubles that financial freedom would ameliorate, find their intentions defeated by the glowing tales of "hundreds of dollars in money—cash money—for you and your children" that fruitily-voiced announcers hurl at their defenseless ears at 200 words a minute. Hopes for distraction through an evening of radio music and entertainment are permanently dispelled by the visions conjured by the cheery speakers who make it obvious that a child's mind and a couple hours' easy work thinking up three-letter words or writing a 50-word essay will win several hundred dollars.

An even stronger builder of false hopes is the heartless radio sponsor who bedevils the listeners to his program with the idea that they can become rich if they will only break down and write the two last lines of a limerick that is exasperatingly tempting in its juvenile senselessness.

The listeners whose only fault is that he bought a radio and wants to use it in order to justify his purchase, can do nothing about the programs that are so eager to give away money. No matter how many of his kind write indignantly and pleadingly to the sponsor to stop being so generous with his money, they will be far outnumbered by thousands of their moron-minded fellowmen who cannot resist entering every contest they hear, although they never win and although they have been shown time and again that many of the contests are won by fictitious individuals. The sponsor sees the heaps of entries and the empty cartons that accompany them and represent so many purchases, he smiles satisfiedly, and announces a new contest, "richer" in prizes than ever before. He considers himself a philanthropist distributing largess to the improvident, and would be deeply hurt and irate if he were called a racketeer.

Evidently the only remedy lies with the radio employees who pass on the announcements through the unfeeling microphone. We wish more radio hirelings had the self-respect and the thought for their listeners that Ben Bernie displayed when he refused to give any longer the first lines to a limerick that his malt sponsor wanted Bernie-listeners to complete.—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Lamp or Door-Mat?

One of the obvious and unavoidable drawbacks of an all pervading spirit of Democracy is the vast, solid and spinx-like tyranny of the mediocre. Bobbie Burns delighted in singing the praise of the worth and goodness of the common man and if there was one thing that Burns did not possess it was mediocrity.

The university aims at turning out for the service of mankind as large a number as possible of people who are quite distinctly above the herd-average, and so the university, that dares to profess this aim, is severely criticised by the crowd, which stops in its monotonous rut-like existence long enough to mutter

By Edith Harbour

Banks are what people put money in and can't get it out again. Which sounds like the first sentence of little Mary's theme on the subject of the stronger sex—"Men are what women marry." Or vice versa. Or vice without the Latin verses. Which sounds decidedly buccaneerish. And probably is.

To return to banks. Yes, by all means return whatever portion of the world's supply of gold you may happen to have to the banks else you run the risk of becoming what F. D. R. terms "unfashionable." "Metropolitan Movies," featured in The World-Telegram, depicts a lady well past middle age returning to a reopened bank a small gold coin. "It's a five dollar gold piece I received on my fifth birthday," she said sadly. She was afraid of being arrested for hoarding.

The nation, yearning for a man of action, discovered that the new president could give a fair imitation of Mussolini (see rotogravure section of Sunday's New York Times for pictures which reveal the upturned chin and iron jaw). And the students of this University, temporarily denied their spring vacation, discovered that a banking holiday could easily be turned into a Roman holiday in the form of a depression week-end.

Flourishing in these trying times are the punsters. Before the presidential proclamation suspending bank operations for an indefinite period they had referred to Woodin nickels in honor of the new Secretary of the Treasury, but now they are suggesting that perhaps the strongest banks in this western hemisphere are the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. In like vein I suppose the best safety deposit vault in existence is Davy Jones' locker. And it may be the Scotch in me, but I have an uncanny suspicion that the tightest financial institutions across the seas are yon bonny banks of auld Scotland. News flash from Ohio: Prospective depositors are hereby warned that the banks of the Wabash are unsafe.

Hysteria generally reigns when a bank fails. Crowds mill around the closed doors. Threats are made, innuendoes noised abroad. And those who wait the loudest have lost the least. The surprising feature of the recent crisis is that it was taken so genially. "I'm banking on you," said one college boy to another as he deliberately stole his friend's last dollar and went his merry way.

A plumber in a small town received an emergency call and, grabbing his kit of tools, rushed to the address given. There was nothing wrong with the plumbing, but a disgruntled father and an anxious mother could not get the baby's bank open. Were they robbing Peter to pay Paul?

There were Negroes who, having heard the phrase "money changers in the temple" from Roosevelt's inaugural address thought that money could be procured at the churches now that the banks were closed.

And if money is the root of all evil as it is reputed to be I know lots of people who would like to be positively wicked for a change. Oh, don't bother. Keep the change.

A questionnaire for the identification of fifty famous Americans was recently given to a class in government at the University of Oklahoma; Al Capone's name was the only one correctly identified by all students.—Lehigh Brown and White (NSFA)

Idea of March

Yesterday, we note with some pride in our meager knowledge of Roman history, was the Idea of March. And like that Idea of March of old, when Julius Caesar went down in history as Rome's most stuck up emperor, thunder and lightning rolled across the skies. It also rained early in the morning.

The bank holiday was still more or less on and there was only four dollars in cash in the University treasury. Two ant-trees in front of Graham Memorial building were cut down to make room for a walk. The earthquake in Southern California still rumbled slightly and a corporal in the Chinese army named Ching-Wang-Hang fell off the Great Wall and broke his neck when a peal of thunder rolled down from Jehol.

Trees

Mr. J. F. A., one of our old line editorial writers reflects on the tree-cutting in front of Graham Memorial:

"Paths are made by fools like me,
But only God should cut a tree."

The item that next commands your attention has already been well cared for by Messrs. Albright and Daniel, but we feel that some sort of public notice should be taken.

From The New Yorker of March 11 comes the statement in connection with an article "Profiles" on George Gordon Battle, New York—alumnus of this University: "Young Gordon Battle, educated first by a governess, and later at Hanover Academy in Virginia and at the University of Virginia, artistic seat of learning where legions of Battles had preceded him..."

The aforementioned Mr. Daniel and Mr. Albright wrote a letter several days ago to the proprietors of the magazine pointing out that George Gordon Battle, though he graduated at the University of Virginia, was educated at the University of

Michigan State Nine Added To Tar Heel Ball Schedule

Middle-West Team Is One of Strongest Clubs of That Section of Country.

DAILY GAMES COMMENCE

Regulars Tie With Yannigans, 6-6, in Nine Innings of First Game.

Two games were added to Carolina's baseball schedule last night as agreements were reached with the Michigan State College of Lansing, Michigan. The middle-west aggregation will play a two-game series with the Tar Heels on Emerson field starting March 30. The Staters have one of the finest clubs in the middle-west and should display a fast brand of ball when they come to Chapel Hill.

Yesterday Coach Bunn Hearn started his daily ball games, dividing his club into the Yannigans and Regulars. After nine innings the score was deadlocked at six all, but Hearn called the festivities to an end and sent his athletes around the track to end the day's session.

The Regulars quickly reached Whitley in the first inning, scoring three runs on four hits. Peacock's triple to center, Leonard's double to left, and safe bingles by Captain Powell and Hornaday were responsible for the three runs scored. In their half of the inning, the Yannigans reduced the lead, scoring once on an infield error.

The rookies forged ahead in the third and fourth frames and increased their margin still further by a two-run flurry in the seventh session. Going into their last half of the ninth three runs behind, the Regulars rallied to tie the score, but with the bases full and two out, Dixon ground-out to end the game.

Brown, hurling for the Yannigans held the varsity hitless and scoreless for his three innings although his wildness put him into bad spots frequently. Crouch, the Regular's starting chunker, also pitched good ball as did Andrews and Joyner.

Phipps, Peacock, and Dixon led the slugging brigade with triples, while Zaiser's work in the Yannigan outfit, and Powell's fielding featured the game.

Harvard Has Society For Junior Fellows

(By College News Service) Cambridge, Mass., March 15.—Accepting a plan long advocated by its retiring president, A. Lawrence Lowell, Harvard University this week prepared to establish a veritable scholars' paradise.

Following a joint meeting of the Harvard corporation and the board of overseers of the university, it was announced that President Lowell's plan for a society of fellows, composed of college graduates who would work for no degrees or other academic honors, would be placed in operation this year.

Twenty-four young men, picked for their promise of contribution to knowledge and thought, will be appointed for three year terms to carry on independent creative work and study. They will be known as "junior prize fellows," will receive a yearly salary of from $1250 to $1500 each, free board and room and free use of university facilities.

Selection of the twenty-four will be left to a special board, and the scholars will be chosen without regard for a distribution of academic subjects. They will devote "their whole time to productive scholarship, and preparation therefor, free from academic regulations or degrees." They will receive no credit for courses and will not be candidates for any degree.

Tompkins And Wolf To Lead Gamecocks

Bennie Tompkins and Grayson Wolf were elected co-captains of University of South Carolina's basketball team for next year at a meeting of the squad Monday night.

Wolf, a forward from Charleston and Tompkins, a guard from Athens, Texas, were prominent members of South Carolina's championship combination, that copped the Southern conference crown this winter. Tompkins will be a junior next year.

Dana Henderson, lucky center also from Athens, was named alternate captain. He is also a sophomore this year. Buck Smith of Columbia is the retiring captain.

CAROLINA TENNIS ENTHUSIASTS TO PLAY DUKE TEAM

All Registered Students Eligible To Enter Mammoth Meet With Duke Students.

Duke and Carolina rivalry will feature in another, yet untied athletic event, a huge tennis carnival, the week of April 3 to 8 inclusive. The match is open to as many students registered in school, graduate or undergraduate, as either school can amass. As far as it is known, this is the only meet of its kind ever attempted by any university.

It is the hope of Coach Kenfield that many students in the University will enter. Duke has promised to enter about 200, but Carolina's entries should exceed this number by many more.

Everyone Invited

A notice will be posted on the bulletin board at the tennis courts this afternoon as to instructions where entries will be accepted. Everyone is invited and urged to enter. Carolina will endeavor to match Duke man for man, and more. As many matches will be played as the lowest number of entries from either school. Hence, everyone entered has equal chance of competing. The entry list will be open for a week.

Both the varsity and freshman squads will participate in the event. Wilmer Hines, varsity captain, will probably play No. 1 for Carolina. Merrimon Cunningham, a graduate student at Duke and a recent winner of the Rhoades Scholarship, will probably play in the first position for the Blue Devils. Cunningham formerly played at Vanderbilt University. He hails from Nashville, Tennessee.

Higgins, who filled the No. 1 position on the freshman squad at the Durham school last season, will probably be pitted against Lenoir Wright. Harvey Harris of Carolina will see action against Welsch, No. 1 man of the varsity last season.

One half of the meet will be played at Duke, and the other half will be played here. The book exchanges of both schools will share the expenses in supplying a rotating trophy, to be in the possession of that school which wins it in any particular year.

Kenfield Calls Golf Squad Meeting for Friday Morning

Coach Kenfield has called a meeting of the golf squad for 10:30 in Emerson stadium Friday morning. This meeting is open to candidates for this year's varsity. Spring practice results have been favorable, and if the team continues to turn in such scores, competition for positions on the squad will be keen.

TENNIS TEAM TO PLAY FOR RANK

Kenfield to Juggle Line-up in Team Tournament Starting Monday.

Wet courts prevented the Carolina netmen from practicing yesterday afternoon, but, weather permitting, they will be out strong today. Coach Kenfield is going to start a general shake-up in the fall line-ups, varsity and freshman, when he opens a team tournament Monday.

Harley Shuford, who returned to school this quarter, will have to fill Bob Lovill's position of ninth in the varsity line-up, and work his way up. It is expected that he will give Harvey Harris a good fight for third place on the squad. Bob Lovill is definitely out this season with an injured knee.

The fall line-up for the varsity reads: Wilmer Hines, Lenoir Wright, Harvey Harris, Ricky Willis, Dave Morgan, John Dillard, Walter Levitan, Ike Minor, and John McGlinn. These men will be able to challenge any man two ahead of him in the ranking list. If the lower ranked player wins, he will go to the position of the loser and the entire ranking will be moved down.

Inasmuch as only three doubles matches are played in dual competition, four teams are working. Hines is teamed with Wright, Harris with Levitan, Dillard with Willis, and Shuford with Morgan. There is nothing definite about these combinations, or how they will play.

The freshman ranking as it remains from the fall is Friedman, Lott, Johnston, Lynch, Sobol, Baukney, Margulis, Primrose, Trainer, and Kalb. The freshmen are scheduled to meet the Durham high school team on March 27 at Durham. The freshman rankings will also be altered by the tournament to be held Monday.

Coaches Think Too Many Fouls Called

(By College News Service) Boulder, Colo., March 15.—Too many fouls are called by officials in the average basketball game, in the opinion of numerous coaches and players who have expressed their opinions in a nation-wide poll conducted by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, it was announced this week by Howard C. Beresford of the University of Colorado.

Beresford, as secretary-treasurer of the association, announced that 700 players and coaches who answered the questionnaire were generally of the opinion that present basketball rules should stand, but that officials should "call them the same way everywhere."

Replies, Beresford said, indicated a dissatisfaction with too much "whistle blowing" by officials.

Students Study Beer Making

Approximately thirty students registered for a course in beer making at the Siebel Institute of Technology.

Using a small model brewery, the students will learn all the intricacies of the art of manufacturing beer, according to Dr. Fred P. Siebel, founder of the school. The course has been started in anticipation of a change in the national prohibition laws.

Additional Lettermen

In the list of lettermen announced in Wednesday's TAR HEEL, Morrie Long and Furches Raymer were overlooked. Long won his first monogram as a member of the basketball team this winter, and Raymer earned his second boxing sweater.

PERCY IDOL GETS TRIP TO NATIONAL WRESTLING MEET

Normont Quarles Denied Entrance Into Eastern Collegiate Tourney at Penn State.

Percy Idol, Carolina's conference heavyweight wrestling champion and captain of the wrestling team for the past year, has been entered in the national collegiate wrestling tournament at Lehigh University April 24, and 25.

The committee appointed by the athletic council to look into this matter announced yesterday that Idol had been entered in the meet and that the conditions surrounding his participation in the meet were very favorable.

Coach Bob Fetzer said that Idol could get excursion rates on the railroads for a part of the way and that due to this saving he felt sure the committee would sanction Idol's going to the tourney.

The other Carolina conference champ, Normont Quarles, who has been awaiting word from Penn State as to whether his entry in the eastern collegiate boxing tourney there this weekend would be accepted, received word yesterday that he would not go to the meet. Coach Fetzer got an answer to his wire of Tuesday in which he asked if the meet was an open one or whether only members of the eastern collegiate association could enter. The wire stated that the meet was open only to members of the eastern conference.

Idol will have to make the trip alone due to finances and he is scheduled to leave Chapel Hill next Wednesday in time for the competition which runs Friday and Saturday. All contestants are required to weigh in Thursday afternoon.

Captain Idol has been working out regularly since the conference wrestling championships in Lexington, and he is in excellent shape. Coach Quinlan is confident that Percy will give a good account of himself in the 175-pound class and feels that it would be no surprise if the Carolina leader annexed the national title.

Cooperative Living Planned At Oregon

(By College News Service) Eugene, Ore., March 15.—Adoption of a co-operative plan of living was proposed this week for students of the University of Oregon by the Oregon Daily Emerald, student newspaper, which contended that individual expenses could be cut as low as from $10 to $15 per month.

Under the plan outlined by the Emerald, two dormitories would be turned over to a selected group of students, who would divide the necessary kitchen and room clean-up work. The houses which would be used are owned by the university and could be rented at rates low enough to cover the bare cost of maintenance.

Meals cooked in the co-operative kitchens would cost each student twenty-five cents per day, according to a menu budget prepared by the home economics department. Students who otherwise must forego one or two meals per day because of high rates would be especially benefitted by the plan, since the usual cost of maintaining regular house employees would be saved.

HIGH SCHOOLS TO START RACE FOR TITLE NEXT WEEK

Class "A" Teams Will Begin Play Next Friday; General Competition Starts Tomorrow.

State high school class "A" baseball competition begins next Friday, March 24, when Rocky Mount high school's nine invades Wilmington in an eastern conference tilt. The western division will open hostilities with the Greensboro-High Point contest April 7.

Five clubs are entered in the league from each division. In the east, the schedule will be run on the percentage basis. In the west, the winner of Greensboro, High Point, and Winston-Salem competition on percentage will meet the winner of the Charlotte-Gastonia series which will be a best-two-out-of-three affair. The final championship game will be played in Chapel Hill.

Charlotte high school won the state title last year.

Competition in the general baseball contest of North Carolina that is open to all except the larger high schools in the class "A" league will start tomorrow with the Pollockville-Trenton encounter in Trenton. There are three divisions of schools in the western section and four in the eastern. All standings will be recorded by the percentage basis.

Roanoke Rapids won the general state contest championship in 1932.

FRESHMAN TEAM UNDERGOES LONG SECOND WORK-OUT

Coach Cerney Puts Entire Squad Through Batting Practice on Fresh Field Yesterday.

Carolina's freshman baseball players went through their second work-out of the 1933 season yesterday afternoon on Freshman field.

Coach Cerney sent his entire squad through a lengthy batting practice, which took up most of the afternoon. The pitchers that worked on the mound during the slugging session had a big advantage over the batters since they have been working out for the past few weeks. Most of the hitters hadn't gotten their eye on the ball as yet and not many safe blows were made.

A bigger squad than that of Tuesday reported for a chance at the first nine, bringing the total to more than fifty. Coach Cerney commented that he needed about three more fields before all the players could get a chance to practice.

The players will probably go through batting and fielding drills until sometime next week when the first practice game will take place. Uniforms will not be released until a few days before the opening game, March 27, as all equipment is limited. Practices will continue every afternoon beginning at 3:30 o'clock on Freshman field.

MAGICIAN SLAPPED IN HOOSEGOW IN DURHAM

Although Prince Omega J. C. Greenola, magician who appeared on the "Depression Week-End" program here Saturday night, was able to handle tacks, razor blades, and a couple of other tricks, he got into a little trouble in Durham Monday which he was unable to get out of; and he must take the rap.

In the Durham recorder's court Tuesday, the Prince was sentenced to sixty days in jail for indecent exposure. It was alleged that by such exposure, the Prince greatly annoyed several residents of Hayti, negro section of the Bull City.

NEW INTRAMURAL RACES SCHEDULED TO BEGIN MONDAY

Each Team To Play Eight Games During Six-Week Period of Spring Tournaments.

Opening games in the spring intramural schedules have been postponed until Monday to give the teams more time to prepare themselves for the campaigns. Both tennis and baseball programs will get under way Monday afternoon.

Intramural officials are now working out schedules under which each team will participate in eight games over a period of six weeks. This arrangement will apply to both leagues, dormitory and fraternity, in both sports.

Grimes Has Diamond Crown

Last year the campus baseball championship went to Grimes, which defeated Sigma Nu, 9-3, in the final game of the season. Sigma Nu had won the championship of the fraternity circuit by defeating S. A. E. while Grimes was capturing the dormitory title by virtue of a win over Aycock.

In the tennis campaign last year Everett, represented by Rosen and Blauman, gained the dormitory crown, but lost out to Reid and Draper, of Beta Theta Pi, who represented the fraternity league in the campus championship match.

41 Teams Enter Race

A total of forty-one teams have entered the baseball race this year, fifteen of them dormitories and twenty-six of them fraternities, while one more than this number has enrolled in the tennis campaign. The additional team which will seek net honors will compete in the fraternity circuit.

FRESHMAN MATH VOLUME PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION

New Book to Replace Mimeographed Text of Browne and Lasley Now Used Here.

Professors E. T. Browne and J. W. Lasley have completed arrangements to have their text book, Introductory Mathematics, printed in regulation book form to replace the cumbersome mimeographed copies which have been used in the freshmen mathematics courses for the past two years.

The new form will contain practically the same material, but will be revised so that certain passages will be clarified and other more difficult passages will be omitted.

Published by McGraw-Hill
It was announced that the McGraw-Hill Book Company, well known publishers of scientific books, is printing the new edition. The size of the book will be six by nine inches with a blue binding. A large clear type will be used for the text which will be illustrated with 119 cuts. Exclusive of the table of contents and the preface, the book will contain 434 pages. All necessary trigonometric and logarithmic tables are being included.

An announcement in the Science magazine gives the retail price of the book, as set by the publishers, as $2.75.

MOVE BEGUN TO OUST SPECTATOR FROM COLUMBIA

Proposition Made by Journalism Dean Greatly Opposed by Groups of Student Newspapers.

New York, March 15.—Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia school of journalism this week made the first move to oust the Daily Spectator, undergraduate student daily at Columbia, from its avowed position as student mouthpiece it has held for the past 56 years.

In a letter to the committee now investigating the Spectator to determine whether its policies are for the best interests of the university, the dean urged that a professional daily newspaper be issued under the sponsorship of the school of journalism.

He proposed to transfer control of Spectator from the students to the faculty of the school of journalism, and with the Spectator would be merged papers published by Barnard College and the Teachers College at the University.

"Bulletin" Comments
The Barnard Bulletin commented that such a plan "is tantamount to the abolition of the student press, a retrogressive and subversive move."

Word was received from New Orleans, where the National College Press Association held its annual convention, that a move to condemn "sensational" tactics of Reed Harris, ousted editor of Spectator, had been defeated.

Instead, the association adopted a resolution demanding "complete freedom of the college press" and requested "all student councils, faculties and other authoritative forces to refrain from interfering with editorial policies so long as these policies remain within the bounds of ordinary decency."

Construction Of New Walks To Union Building Gets Underway

Needed Walks Are Finally Being Built on Old Campus With Money Contributed by Graham Memorial While Federal Relief Funds Provide Labor for Project.

Cutting across the campus as they went down to lunch yesterday, many students picked their way over two fallen trees and a number of stakes. The trees have been felled to make way for a path leading from the main entrance of Graham Memorial to Pettigrew dormitory. This path will run directly across the intersection of two other walks, one leading from the lower end of Graham Memorial, directly opposite the Presbyterian church, to the Hill music hall, and the other running from the entrance to the campus at Battle dormitory in the general direction of the Alumni building.

At the intersection of what will thus be six paths a fifty-foot circle will be constructed. This circle will be directly in front of the Confederate soldier's monument. Some concern has been expressed over the destruction of the large tree immediately to one side of the present intersection. This tree will not be cut down, but will stand within the area of the circle.

When it became apparent some time ago that the lower end of the campus was being made turfless by students who wore paths on the green by taking short cuts, it was decided that a new path leading to Graham Memorial would be necessary.

Financed by Contributions
Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, learned from P. L. Burch that the construction of a new path would be possible, but that the University could not furnish the funds for the necessary improvement. Total cost of the project was estimated at $648.30. At a meeting of the Union Forum, it was decided that an amount up to but not exceeding one half of the necessary amount should be contributed from a surplus on hand at Graham Memorial, inasmuch as the new path provides an entrance to Graham Memorial. The remainder of the money is as yet unprovided, but work has been started on the project since labor provided for by the federal relief funds is available. A large amount of dirt necessary for proper grading of the ground is at the disposal of the buildings department.

It is hoped that the remainder of the amount will be contributed by various organizations of the campus. The junior and senior classes have found that their funds do not permit them to contribute toward this improvement. The freshmen and sophomore classes, the Order of the Grail, and the Interfraternity council are expected to contribute.

Plans for the new path were drawn up by H. D. Carter, of the firm of Atwood and Weeks, acting on the advice of the faculty committee on grounds, Dr. W. C. Coker is chairman of the committee.

Paths to Be Seeded
Since the new walks will not exactly follow the paths worn by the students, the old short cuts will be plowed up and seeded. The new path is being constructed on the principle that students are not particularly fond of walking on the grass and will follow a walk, provided that it is not too inconvenient. Heretofore there has been no entrance to Graham Memorial except from the promenade which runs directly parallel to the building.

It may seem that six hundred and fifty dollars is rather an exorbitant amount for the construction of a fifty-foot circle and a walk, but it was learned from reliable sources yesterday that if the funds provided by the federal government for the relief of unemployment could not be used for this purpose, the construction now under way would cost more than a thousand dollars. The masonry which must be placed at the sides of the path, and the filling of the low area to the northeast of the intersection are both expensive, yet necessary to the satisfactory construction of permanent walks.

With Contemporaries

something about "snobbishness" and "high-browism."

There should be a closer union we are told between "town and gown" which generally means that the wearer of the gown is expected to crawl down on his hands and knees to feed common-places to the town, whether or not they have the intelligence to assimilate any kind of knowledge. There should be a close relation between "town and gown," we agree; a university has no right to be built on an airy peak of indifference and aloofness but nevertheless it must be an institution built on "high ground" and not revel in the rut of mediocrity.

The "town" must come to the "gown" for guidance and not the "gown" to the "town." To be dependent on the town destroys forever the possibility of the "gown" rising above or making any headway against the foetid atmosphere of self-satisfaction and grossness that is making such a bid for the control of civilization. This is the tyranny of the mediocre.

On every hand we see its ever-increasing power. The "best-sellers" of the past year have been but glorified pictures of the tyrant. Schools of art, literature and music have arisen claiming to be daring and novel and have revealed themselves to be but more deeply engulfed in "muck

The letter, we are afraid, will not impress The New Yorker people. We poured through our files and dug up a missive from that magazine in reply to an irate patriotic reply in reference to a similar article several years ago. The answer was typewritten coldly on handsomely embossed stationery and was strictly to the point: "Sir: No doubt there is some truth in your statement. Sincerely yours..."

Chapel Hill Business Hit Heavily During National Holiday

merely content to secure food that will nourish the "inner man" and all frills and furbelows like pickles, fancy cakes, expensive desserts, and exotic drinks, are being passed up in favor of plain staples. The sale of flour has increased somewhat, intimating that some are hoping to save by making their own bread.

Regardless of conditions in the money centers of the nation, Chapel Hill must eat, and the restaurants, cafeterias, and cafes have reported no loss in trade. They have extended credit to their patrons who need it. Cash may be relatively scarce, but the fountain in Sutton's drug store has been doing a thriving business, which may be attributed in part to the bargain hours instituted there.

Clothing Stores Hurt

Clothing stores have witnessed a falling off in trade. New spring suits are still few in number. The clothes pressing concerns report a decline in their line. Their work for the dormitories, handled through the dormitory stores, has declined to an extremely large degree. Business from fraternity houses still approximates normalcy.

The bus station has not suffered much from the bank closings. Their only unfavorable impressions were experienced this past Saturday when their business fell off because of the decrease in the number of the usual shoppers who go to Durham on that day.

The Durham Dairy reports that business is as usual with them, except for the fact that collections are somewhat difficult. The dorm stores have suffered to some extent from present conditions, but they are continuing to issue credit and their volume of sales is still near normal.

Game Room Unaffected

The game room in Graham Memorial has not been affected to any appreciable extent. The barber shop there reports a decline in business which can be easily accounted for, but credit is being issued for those who desire it. The post office has also been affected by the monetary conditions. General business has declined, but money orders—both to and from Chapel Hill—have increased to nearly double former figures.

"Modern Monthly" Magazine Runs Student Essay Contest

The Modern Monthly magazine has announced the opening of a prize essay contest to be conducted before April 1. This contest is open to any undergraduate or graduate student in America and has as its purpose the development of new writers and to create student interest in writers.

The best essay of 3,000 words on "The American Student Awakes," will be awarded the prize of $25. This prize-winning essay will be published in the May issue of the Modern Monthly.

All manuscripts are to be sent to: The Modern Monthly Student Contest, Box 97, Station D, New York City.

STUDENTS DEVISE INGENIOUS MEANS OF SAVING MONEY

Students at Many Colleges Find Novel Schemes to Meet National Banking Moratorium.

New York, N. Y., March 15.—(NSFA) — Although the bank moratorium descended upon most college communities without warning, making even the customary three meals a day an unheard of luxury in many places, students have assumed responsibility and risen to the occasion in many interesting ways.

In an attempt to ease the stringent situation at Princeton, the Princetonian issued a total of $500 in scrip acceptable to most of the local business houses. Individuals were permitted to give their personal checks for amounts not exceeding five dollars, in return for which they received certificates in 25-cent denominations.

At many universities campus and town restaurants have allowed students to sign their meal checks until such time as cash may be obtained. The holiday has worked havoc with college social plans. At Butler University it was necessary to postpone the Junior Prom indefinitely, and in most college towns theatres which are not extending credit are finding audiences practically non-existent.

A number of amusing incidents have resulted from impecunious predicaments. Several unsuccessful attempts to persuade the Postal Department to redeem superfluous stamps have been reported. The debate team of West Virginia University, equipped for their spring tour with statistics on money, the gold standard, tariffs, credit, and inflation, found themselves last week in New Orleans, victimized along with less erudite travellers and quite unprepared to deal with the student financial paralysis.

Marshall College has returned to the primitive barter system, running a column in the college paper in which students may advertise articles for exchange. Eleven students used the column on its first appearance.

Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has accepted an invitation to speak on the occasion of the thirty-first tapping of the Order of Golden Fleece to take place in Memorial hall April 27.

Governor Ehringhaus is a graduate of the University, having received his liberal arts degree in 1901 and degree of bachelor of laws in 1903. SUBSTITUTE BILL CONTAINS SLASH FOR UNIVERSITY

Bowie-Cherry Proposal Would Reduce Appropriation Recommendations for Institution.

Carrying with it at least a $72,000 cut from the funds recommended for the Greater University, the Bowie-Cherry proposal to slash recommended appropriations during the next two years for state departments and institutions by approximately ten million dollars seemed well on its way toward adoption yesterday afternoon as the house recessed until 8:00 o'clock last night to continue debate on the substitute measure which has caused a heated two-days' battle in that body.

Results of the action taken in the session last night could not be obtained by the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Session Heated

The session, in which the Cherry-Bowie substitute measure for the appropriations bill introduced by the appropriations committee was debated, was featured by hot verbal battles yesterday. According to opinions expressed yesterday afternoon by adherents to the Cherry-Bowie proposal, the measure has sixty-five pledged supporters assuring a ten majority in the house.

Representative Cherry, speaking yesterday afternoon, proposed to cut appropriations to the Greater University for the next two years from $832,000 to $644,000 annually. Representative Bowie had previously raised his proposal for the consolidated university from $570,180 to $769,180 which the budget commission recommended.

Under the proposal, should it be based on an equal cut for all three divisions of the consolidated institution, the University here would receive approximately

DATE OF SPANISH CONTEST DECIDED

E. R. Rankin, Director of Project, Sets March 23 as Day For Competition.

The annual Spanish contest for state high schools will take place throughout North Carolina March 23. E. R. Rankin, of the extension division, is director of the project which is sponsored by the University.

Students who may take part in the competition are limited to sophomore, junior, and senior classes. The test will be of a practical nature, enabling the student to show what facility he has acquired in handling Spanish verbs, grammar, and reading.

The individual school will select the best three papers from the total of the papers submitted in the local contest, and these will be sent to Chapel Hill where they will be graded by faculty members of the department of Spanish of the University after which announcement will be made of the winners.

Results of the Latin contest, which took place February 24, and the French contest, sponsored March 10, have not yet been released. The Gastonia high school won the Spanish contest last year.

EIGHTEEN SCHOOL GROUPS PLAN TO ENTER PLAY FETE

Annual State Dramatic Competition Will Get Under Way Here March 30.

Eighteen high schools, six of them city high schools in the western part of the state, five of them from the eastern part, five of them county high schools, and two of them junior high schools, are competing in the state-wide dramatic tournament preliminaries this month, according to Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association which is co-operating with the University extension division in sponsoring the festival which is to be held here March 30, 31, and April 1.

These schools are Kings Mountain, Shelby, Morganton, Lenoir, R. J. Reynolds high school of Winston-Salem, Murphy, Spring Hope, Wilson, Southern Pines, Whiteville, Raleigh, Paw Creek, Oakhurst, Garner, Hallsboro, St. Pauls, South junior high of Winston-Salem, and North junior high of Winston-Salem.

In the elimination contests Kings Mountain meets Shelby, Morganton meets Lenoir, Spring Hope meets Wilson, Southern Pines meets Whiteville, Paw Creek meets Oakhurst, Hallsboro meets St. Paul.

Some Preliminaries Waived

Some of the schools not engaging in preliminary competition will come directly to the festival and prior to its regular opening will compete in the Playmakers theatre. R. J. Reynolds high school, Murphy high school, Raleigh, and Garner, belonging to different categories, are in this group.

The plays to be presented by these groups are by varied authors, among whom are Paul Green, Booth Tarkington, Zona Gale, George Kelly, and at least one former Carolina Playmaker and author.

DAVIS WILL READ PLAY FOR JUNIORS

Children Wishing to Try Out Must Be Present at 10:00 Tomorrow Morning.

Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, which is to be the major production of the Junior Playmakers for this season, will be read in the Playmakers theatre by Harry Davis at 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning. All children wishing to try for parts are urged to be present, since try-outs will be begun immediately.

The cast will require around thirty boys and girls between the ages of eight and sixteen. Those desiring to try out should be present tomorrow morning.

The Junior Playmakers were organized by Harry Davis last year and presented as their first public appearance an extremely successful production of "Cinderella." So popular was this show that after playing to three large audiences the Playmakers received numerous requests for repeat performances.

Colonel Pratt Lends Minerals For Exhibit

The geology museum has secured from Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt a loan exhibit of North Carolina minerals which will supplant the case of mineral calcite next week.

Chapel Hill Woman Considered For Post

According to an announcement appearing in the state papers Thursday morning, the name of Mrs. Lyman A. Cotten, of Chapel Hill, has been presented to Postmaster-General Farley by the North Carolina delegation in congress for civil service commissioner.

Mrs. Lyman's name was presented to Farley by Mr. Doughton, spokesman for the delegation, who asserted that she had the support of the North Carolina members of congress, the state legislature, and various Democratic organizations. Mr. Doughton said that he doubted if any candidate for office from the state had ever presented such a fine array of supporters, and he asserted that she would be a credit to the administration.

Farley said that he would take great pleasure in presenting her endorsement to President Roosevelt.

ALLOTMENTS FOR STATE AGENCIES SLICED FURTHER

University's Position Following Additional Slash Yesterday As Yet Undetermined.

Institutions, state departments, bureaus and commissions were notified yesterday by the state budget bureau that they must operate for April, May, and June on an allotment much smaller than expected and one "that will seem at first absurd and impossible."

Information on how this further reduction in the state allotments will affect the University could not be obtained last night but it will further cut the funds received from the state.

According to the memorandum of the budget commission, savings have heretofore been emphasized in all other expenses to maintain salaries and wages but with state revenue sources drying up, cuts now have to be made largely in salaries and wages.

Amounts Not Given

The amounts of the cuts in different departments receiving state support were not announced but it was reported that the allotments would fall below salary totals.

If the allotment to the University is reduced similarly to those of other state agencies, the reduction for the next three months will probably fall heavily on salaries of faculty members.

Former Playmaker Scores Triumph In Broadway Play

Shepperd Strudwick, in First Major Role, Is Acclaimed by New York Critics for His Portrayal of Congressman-Reformer In Anderson's New Play, "Both Your Houses."

From the Carolina Playmakers to the New York City Theatre Guild in less than five years, is the story of the rise of Shepperd Strudwick, erstwhile Carolina student. He has the part of the only honest congressman in the Broadway production Both Your Houses. The play, which was favorably reviewed in last Sunday's New York Times, is an attack on political corruption, with the Congress of the United States providing the setting. Strudwick plays the part of a young Nevada man on the House appropriations committee who fights the graft of the other four hundred and some congressmen.

His performance won him exceptional praise from many leading Metropolitan critics. "Shepperd Strudwick," says Brooks Atkinson in the New York Times of March 7, "who is here playing his first important role, is superb as the Nevada rebel—boyishly embarrassed in the beginning, cuttingly forthright when his blood is aroused." The New York Herald-Tribune says, "The Theatre Guild lifted its curtain on a new play . . . but on a new actor as well. In presenting Both Your Houses . . . it presented also Shepperd Strudwick, who scored a triumph all his own . . ." The paper says that Strudwick's position is securely established as a result of his opening night performance.

First Important Part

Strudwick has played on Broadway for several years, but he did not receive a chance to show his ability until he was given the role of Alan McClean in Both Your Houses.

When the play went into rehearsal, Strudwick was engaged as an understudy, and a chance at the leading part seemed remote. During the first week of rehearsals he was tried in the role and was successful.

Strudwick, described by Professor F. H. Koch as "a charming man," of about 33, was active in the Carolina Playmakers for all four years when he was in school and made Phi Beta Kappa at the same time. "He is one of three graduates in fifteen years," said Professor Koch, "who showed talents while a student here that would warrant their playing juvenile leads as professionals." A "juvenile lead" is similar in meaning to the less dignified term, "matinee idol."

Strudwick Was Versatile

Although he did little in the way of writing, Strudwick was a versatile actor when here, and participated in a multitude of plays and tours. His experience as an actor in the Carolina Playmakers ranged all the way from the role of Prospero in Shakespeare's Tempest to a part in The Marvelous Romance of Wen Chun-Chen, a play written by a Chinese student of Strudwick's day, Chang Chin Hsiung. Professor Koch believes that one of his first parts must have been that of Charles Marlowe in Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer.

Beauty Of Spring On Campus Decreased By Deforestation

Dying Condition of a Number of Trees Has But Little Effect on Poplar Which, With Its Grafted Offspring, Continues to Be in Excellent Condition and Good for Many More Years.

Although impending spring will once again provide Chapel Hill with one of the most beautiful horticultural displays in this section of the country, the yearly arrival of that season also indicates the rapid deforestation of the campus. In sharp contrast to the gorgeous bloom of the arboretum and the handsome flowering of campus shrubbery, many of the trees will remain as barren and gaunt as in deep winter.

A number of these trees have been pronounced dead and are rapidly being cut down to add further to the openness of spots which were once shady groves. Most of the trees between South building and the library have had to be removed, and it is expected that before long many others will follow them to the wood-pile. That area, which once had the aspect of a wild, handsome woods, is now a desolate shadow of itself, resembling a rolling plain in which the surviving trees appear intruders.

Davie Poplar Hardy

Despite the dying condition of many of its neighbors, Davie Poplar, whose gnarled Pisa-like growth, has been an object of admiration and reverence since the founding of the University, is in considerably better shape than many of its associates. The arrival of spring finds the tough old product almost "as good as ever." Notwithstanding the large hole which bores from roots to top, the only serious dangers that attack the tree are the frequent storms that strike the campus. Large limbs are often torn off by gales which generally impair the health of the tree.

The only blood descendant of the poplar is Davie Poplar, Jr., the stripling that stands a few feet from his illustrious father. Junior is a grafted shoot from the old tree, and, at present is reported to be enjoying the fullest benefits of youth.

Other Trees Cut Down

The north campus, home of the Davie family, has suffered a similar fate to that of the University grounds south of Cameron avenue. A few trees which were in hopeless condition were removed, and the new path leading to Graham Memorial necessitated doing away with two others, one of which was rotted and the other, so overshadowed by the large trees about it, as to be almost unnoticeable. Dr. W. C. Coker, chairman of the faculty grounds committee, stated that the reason for the decay of the old forest trees was the construction of work around them.

For a number of years the grounds committee, seriously hampered by lack of funds, has been planting new trees on various parts of the campus. This spring, in all probability, a few new trees will be planted in front of Graham Memorial to take the place of those that were necessarily cut down.

Planting This Spring

The most important reforestation work, however, will be the planting of two rows of white

Slavery In 1933

One of the most abominable and vicious consequences of the present depression is the tremendous increase in the so-called sweat shops where women and children slave day after day in poorly lighted, poorly ventilated rooms for wages far too small to live on. Workers in some small dress making and millinery establishments are today working at dull laborious tasks under most unfavorable and unhealthy conditions for sums as low as three dollars a week.

The results of conditions such as these are undernourished, overworked girls and women who have no hope, nothing for which to live but existence itself. The best that can befall them is that they will collapse at their work and be removed for a time to the free ward of a hospital to recover and return to the grind. This happens to many of them and the hospitals are increasingly taxed with their care. Many of them after buying food and clothing have no funds left to obtain a room and spend their nights on the park bench or in subways. In our advanced civilization this is indeed a hand-some way to treat our women and children.

In the slavery days when the north was constantly berating the south for the institution of slavery the negro was usually well treated. He was clothed and fed and when night came he was given some place warm to sleep. Today in the north which three quarters of a century ago decried the enslavement of the African, women and children are worked and starved to collapse and death because the citizen is unwilling or afraid to lift his voice against such conditions. As a result the human leeches prosper, legitimate business suffers, wages fall all around, and the morgue and Potters field are more populous than ever.

This may be true the college reader will say, but how are we concerned? It is the duty of every citizen of the country to be concerned. This condition is the result of sloppy social planning, of lax laws, and the apathy of public interest. We are the coming civilization, it is upon us that devolves the duty of eradicating this sort of inhumanity, of preventing human sharks from capitalizing on the blood and sweat of our women and children.

And perhaps it might not be amiss for the college man or woman as he or she breezes gaily across the campus to a square meal or a warm bed to think for a moment of the human drudges not so far away who are slaves without the comforts that were given slaves. Perhaps if more people did more thinking such disgraces would disappear from our superior "American civilization."—J.F.A.

Concentrated Genuflection—The Way Up

A new quarter has now started, and practically everyone on the campus knows his grades for the preceding quarter. All over the campus one hears remarks about how different people received higher grades than they deserved, principally, because they went to their professors a day or two before the examination and talked to them about class work. In vulgar language they resorted to a little "booting" to boost their class standing.

It is only natural that in a school where grade earning is so important a part of a quarter's work that some individuals prefer to work the professor rather than the course. The University requires that the student who holds a scholarship for his tuition maintain an average of at least C in order to retain this aid to continuing in his work. The College of Liberal Arts requires that the student have an average of at least C on half his courses in order to graduate. Also the posting of an honor roll and the pressure of Phi Beta Kappa are other rewards of a high scholastic standing. All these should be an added incentive for the student to study in order to get good grades, but it does not always mean that the student studies.

Too many students are prone to take the easiest way out by trying to talk the professors into grades which they do not deserve. This method is unnecessary and is also unfair to the student who studies for his marks. It means that many students keep scholarships that they do not deserve; many students graduate without really having the necessary knowledge, and many students are kept from attaining the honor roll because others have taken advantages of professors' weaknesses to further their own ends and in some degree lower the grades of others, for grading must almost always be done upon a comparative basis.

Nearly all of this underhanded custom can be traced to the grading system which is in use here at the University. If there were but two grades, pass and fail, there would be less booting on the campus, and the system of grading would be much fairer for the student and easier for the professors than it is at present. It would be much simpler if the University were to adopt two mark system of grading which would eliminate many of the evils attendant upon that system now in use.—F.P.G.

Tar Heelia To the Fore

It is always an occasion for music and rejoicings among the lowly Tar Heels when one of their fellow-moaners rises up to show the world that something may, after all, come from the "valley of humility between two mountains of conceit." Our two neighbors have admitted, though grudgingly to be sure, that we can perhaps produce something worth-while in the field of literature and arts, but North Carolinians in national or world affairs have too often been looked at askance.

One western paper, commenting on the appointments of Josephus Daniels and Robert W. Bingham to diplomatic posts, said: "It is indeed gratifying to see North Carolinians with their liberality stepping forth into the political arena." Although the italics are our own, we may easily gather the tone of this kindly pen which meant well but was unfortunately misguided.

North Carolina is not just stepping forth into the political arena. Besides having had a hand in the rearing and educating of three presidents, Andrew Johnson, James Polk, and Woodrow Wilson, many North Carolinians have taken an active part in national politics. Thomas J. Jarvis left the chair of the governor to become, under President Cleveland, the United States Minister to Brazil. Senator Ransom under the same administration held the post now offered to the Raleigh editor, and Daniel M. Barringer of Charlotte once represented the United States at the Spanish court.

One of the most prominent men of North Carolina's diplomatic sons, however, was Walter Hines Page, who gave his native state more reasons to boast of him than any other man of his time. It was he who was the Tar Heel fore-runner of Robert Bingham as ambassador to the court of St. James. At present John Motley Morehead presides over American interests at Sweden.

But the fields of international diplomacy are not the only ones in which North Carolinians have left their marks. Many instances might be cited where Tar Heels have wielded a great influence in national politics, not the least of whom was the former Senator Furnifold M. Simmons. Whatever people may say or however much Virginia tries to steal our Wilsons and our Battles, North Carolina is not just beginning to step forth into the political arena.—V.C.R.

Currency Inflation And Aspirin

In one respect, currency inflation and aspirin are strikingly similar—they both bring relief without effecting a permanent cure. Inflating the currency may bring relief from the crushing deflation of the past few years, but it gives no guarantee against repeated depressions.

To return to normal price levels and still have an unequal distribution of wealth is to take an aspirin just before the next attack of chills and fever. An economic set-up that concentrates so much wealth in the hands of a few that it cannot possibly be used as purchasing power, while at the same time millions cannot buy even the necessities of life, is not to be adjusted by currency inflation.

No doubt the inflation is a good thing at the present time. So is an aspirin a good thing, provided the root of the trouble is dug out before the results of the drug wear off. By the same token, economic reform must not stop until the root of the trouble is removed. And there is reason to believe that what Henry Pratt Fairchild calls "the fallacy of profits" is an important cause of the present chills and fever.—D.B.

With Contemporaries

What Do They Think They Are?

Flaunt the word "publicity" before a real newspaperman and he'll see red. There are very few of those really true journalists left these days, what with the advent of chain competition and the trend toward "canned" copy bought through syndicates. These advanced stages of the commercialized press have not yet hit the college campuses to any great extent. We are therefore still confronted with those budding young journalists who are imbued with the old time spirit of the old time newspapers.

At the same time the new fangled anachronism (call it publicity or what you will) has become just as popular on the college campus as it has elsewhere. And the opposition to it on the campus has been more bloody, more heated and more insistent. Various campus organizations appoint or elect their publicity chairmen, whose duties it is to see that the doings of the groups are given adequate and usually too much space in the columns of the campus daily and who make Herculean efforts to keep the undesirable off the front page.

Usually the very idea of these publicity chairmen enrages the alleged true journalist. He resents every forward move they make. They are nil, as far as he is concerned. For didn't the old time newspapers conduct their editorial policies on a fearless basis of impartiality, with malice toward none except those who engendered the wrath of the editor? Ah yes, 'twas a great day and long may its renown be the call to colors for future fearless editors and aspiring and courageous young reporters.

We thus have this trying condition prevalent on most college campuses and very apparent on the Syracuse campus. Brazen publicity chairmen are pitting their wits against the college journalists, who demand at least a part of the right to take whatever editorial policy they think is called for. Some young editors totally ignore the publicity hounds and send reporters around to personally handle the news. The indignant organizations, afraid lest their activities be painted too realistically, put a ban on reporters and conduct closed meetings, thereby hoping to force upon the papers the inevitable publicity chairmen.

This can and will go on only so far. If it comes down to a final test, the newspaper can deal the telling blow simply by refusing to include any of the doings of a "blacklisted" organization in its columns. The latter quickly comes around to terms. However, the editors should not totally ignore the assistance and the benefit to be derived from the help of publicity agents. First and foremost, these definitely should be an understanding that the publicity seekers are expected to handle only one thing—factual material. As to its form of presentation, that's none of their business and the sooner they learn that the better off they'll be.

For it too often occurs that some publicity chairman will get the idea that his or her organization should receive a six-column spread for a two-paragraph story. They even become nasty about it. They seem to think that they are running the paper and that what they say matters. This is the point at which they should take a tip, this is where they should be told where to get off. If they could only realize that, through their own brainless effrontery, their entire organizations were riding for a fall, they would do a little checking up on their attitude. Who do they think they are? Frankly, we don't know and don't care.—Syracuse Daily Orange.

men, and the formal initiation is administered secretly sometime later.

The order, established in 1903, was originally formed in order to assist in welding the student body of the University into a homogeneous, idealistic body. The advancement of efficiency, fair play, altruism, and loyalty has formed the basis of its program. Prospective members of the order are subjected to a rigorous scrutiny in all their campus relations. Since its establishment it has taken in approximately three hundred members. Next to Skul and Bones of Yale it is the oldest honorary college society of its type in the United States.

Last Year's Initiates

Men admitted to the order last year in recognition of their high character and unselfish devotion to the University were Archie Davis, Haywood Weeks, Stuart Chandler, Wilmer Hines, Charlie Rose, Lenoir Wright, D. C. (Spec) McClure, Tom Watkins, Bill McKee, Holmes Davis, and Tom Alexander. The 1932 selection was representative of all types on the campus, embracing self-help, fraternity, non-fraternity, social, literary, athletics, religion, and organization men.

Members of the society have in numbers of cases become prominently established in their fields. Among the faculty they include Charles T. Woollen, Frank P. Graham, Francis F. Bradshaw, R. B. House, J. B. Linker, E. L. Mackie, C. P. Spruill, H. G. Baity, Phillips Russell, J. Maryon Saunders, E. R. Rankin, Albert Coates, and Mayne Albright.

SUBSTITUTE BILL CONTAINS SLASH FOR UNIVERSITY

ly $330,000 or $186,000 less than it is receiving for the present year.

The Bowie-Cherry substitute bill reduces the measure introduced by the joint appropriation committee from approximately $83,000,000 to seventy-two odd millions for the biennium. It would cut state salaries thirty per cent below the present basis, reduce the $13,375,000 school recommendation to $12,500,000, make no retirement for the current $12,500,000 deficit, and abolish funds for charity in addition to cutting appropriations for institutions of higher learning.

It was reported in Raleigh yesterday that Chairman Harris Newman of the appropriations committee would offer a three million dollar slash in the committee bill. Whether this would stop the drastic slashes, carrying with them prospects that no sales tax would be necessary, was a matter of conjecture.

Harris Speaks

During the hot fight in the session yesterday, Speaker Harris left the chair and said the house should not arbitrarily accept any substitute bill that does not deal out justice to everybody. "I am not advocating passage of the committee bill nor any other bill, but we must preserve our good faith with our institutions and we must keep our contracts with our bondholders and with those poor afflicted people out at Dix Hill, at Goldsboro and at Morganton," he said.

"But," he added, "our obligations to the afflicted and the underprivileged are more sacred than to any banker in the world."

Cherry's Ideas

Cherry, in speaking for the substitute bill, said that the measure "will wreck no institutions, nor will it impair them. It contains drastic cuts to cut out the folderols and keep only the essentials."

He demanded the cut in Greater University appropriations so that the consolidation of the three divisions "may become a fact, with the duplications having to be eliminated." He added that the University at Chapel Hill, N. C. State College in Raleigh, and the Woman's College at Greensboro, though "merged," in 1931, still "each bid against the other for appropriations, for students and for favor."

Later, after paying his respects to the University, he said, "when there are three state institutions being fed out of the same spoon and bottle, they ought not to bid against each other."

oaks between South building and Graham Memorial. These will probably be placed about fifty feet in from the trees bordering the walks. This will leave a clear open space over 100 feet wide stretching down from the center of the south campus, offering an unobstructed view of the length of the campus.

Prior to the Civil War this section of University property was heavily laden with trees. However, when the carpet-bag administration came to Chapel Hill, it proceeded to practically denude this area by chopping the trees down for kindling wood. The few trees which now remain escaped only because lack of funds to maintain the University forced the vandals to leave Chapel Hill.

Regulars Rally In Ninth To Shade Yannigans In Fast Game

Matheson Scores Powell With Single in Final Inning to Give Regulars 6-5 Win.

GRIFFITH PITCHES WELL

Big Hurler Shows Improvement In Workout; Croom, Peacock And Phipps Hit Homers.

Carolina's regulars scored twice in the ninth inning to down the Yannigans 6 to 5 in a closely played practice baseball game held on Emerson field yesterday afternoon. The regulars collected fourteen hits to ten for the Yannigans.

Trailing two runs in the last of the ninth the regulars garnered two singles and a double to count twice and take the contest. Dixon led off with a single and was forced at second by Croom, the latter being safe. Captain Powell then came through, doubling to center field and bringing in the tying run. The Carolina captain scored a moment later with the winning marker on Matheson's one-timer.

Peacock and Croom, regular outfielders, and Phipps, shortstop for the Yannigans, tied for hitting honors, each getting a home run and a single out of five times up. Hornaday, Yannigan outfielder, connected for three singles out of four times up while Captain Powell, third baseman, and Crouch, pitcher for the Yannigans, each got a double and a single.

Griffith Fans Eight
Griffith, twirling six frames for the regulars looked in his best form. The big pitcher was touched for six hits but struck out eight men. Crouch, who pitched six innings for the Yannigans, although giving up ten hits, had lots of stuff and ought to win some games for Carolina this spring.

Both teams crossed the plate three times in the third inning. The rookies scored on two hits and a walk. Barham first up walked, and, after Temple fanned, Brandt doubled driving in Barham. Phipps then got his four-bagger to left-center bringing in Brandt before him. The first string made their runs on a single, an error, and Croom's home run. Weathers and Peacock got on base as results of an error and a hit respectively. Dixon forced Peacock at second, Weathers stopping on third. Croom then got his long homer over the left fielders' head and three runs crossed the plate.

Peacock's home run to deep centerfield in the fifth inning accounted for the other regular marker. The last two Yannigan runs came in the seventh frame. Vick walked, and both runners were safe at second and first on an attempted double play of Phipps' grounder. Singles by Hornaday and Harrell, and McCaskill's fly ball brought in the two runs.

Shortstop Position Uncertain
Coach Bunn Hearn seems to have found his right infield unless it is the shortstop position. Captain Powell, Vergil Weathers, and Bill Dixon look like fixtures at third, second, and first bases. All are good fielders and capable hitters. The shortstop job is still a toss-up between Dutch Leonard and Johnny Phipps and both are making a strong bid for the post. Bill Croom and Johnny Peacock are almost fixtures in left and centerfield, while the other fielder will probably be picked from Brandt, Hornaday, Vick, and Zaiser.

Call for Managers

All students wishing to try out for manager of the baseball team are requested to report at Emerson stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

I ONLY HEARD

By MORRIE LONG

Atonement for some of the defeats suffered at the hands of Duke's Blue Devils seems to be in the mind of all aspirants for spring athletics . . . and by the pre-season form shown by the majority of the Carolina squads, Duke is slated to be on the receiving end of several drubbings.

Though Bitsy Grant is not returning to aid Coach Kenfield's tennis team, the common consensus of opinion is that the Tar Heel racquet weilders are every bit as formidable as last year when they swept to their second consecutive national title. Undeclared in four years of competition, the Carolina court coterie holds the collegiate record for straight victories, having 58 to their credit. Harvard with 39 straight wins had the most impressive college mark . . . but Kenfield's team erased that two years ago . . . With Hines as number one, the rest of the team is to be chosen from Wright, Morgan, Shuford, Dillard, Harris, Willis, Levitan, and Minor.

From Emerson field come enthusiastic reports about Carolina's ball team . . . if the antics of the mound performers are any criterion on which to base championship hopes then Coach Bunn Hearn should be anything but optimistic. Smoky Joe Griffith of last year's club, Freddie Crouch, and Whitley, are all looking better every day . . . Captain Powell is still up to his throwing form while Weathers is hitting the old American rock as well as ever. Dixon at first, Phipps or Leonard at short, form a reliable infield while the catching assignments are to be dished out to McCaskill and Strayhorn. Zaiser in the outfield looks good as does Croom, Brandt, Hornaday, and old reliable Peacock.

Three of the four lettermen are back this year on Carolina's Southern conference golf champions. Captain Billy O'Brien, Joe Adams, and Alan Smith, who won a flock of golf tournaments during the summer, are the veterans, Erwin Laxton and Carl Cramer are exceptionally outstanding candidates while Gwyn Harper, Fred Laxton, Pete Tyreem, Will Sadler, and Ed Michales are also to be highly considered.

McQUAGE ELECTED HEAD OF STATE COLLEGE QUINT

Bob McQuage, three letter man, was elected captain of State's 1934 basketball team at a meeting of the squad Wednesday night.

McQuage, who is from Salisbury, has been a star for the past two years in football, basketball, and baseball. He plays quarterback on the grid team, guard on the quint team, and outfield and first base on the diamond team.

Gilbert Clark was captain of the season that just closed. The 1933 team followed the custom of electing a captain before each contest.

FETZER PLEASED WITH TRACKMEN

Willingness of Green Material to Work Bolsters Coach's Hopes For Good Season.

Coach Bob Fetzer, dean of southern track coaches and head track mentor at Carolina, is facing another track season with only a handful of last year's veterans on hand to bolster this year's willing but green material. The Tar Heels' mentor is not pessimistic concerning Carolina's showing in the indoor carnival; in fact, he is optimistic concerning the coming season.

Fetzer is optimistic because his proteges have shown a wonderful spirit for work and with this morale to build on, Carolina fans should not be disheartened concerning the coming season's results. It is true that this year's track team will have to live up to a great dual meet record of some eleven years. During this interim Carolina has lost only two dual meets. Both losses came at the hands of crack eastern clubs, first by Princeton and then Penn State.

The Tar Heels have lost three of the six record-holders of last year's good aggregation. The men who graduated were Brown, discuss; Marland, quarter mile; and Farmer, sprints. The greatest problem will be to fill their shoes, but the large contingent of fine looking sophomores should inflate the Carolina hopes some.

Some of the men who are sophomores and have been impressing coaches Fetzer and Ranson are: Abernethy, Childers, Williamson, Gunner, Pruden, Hawthorne, Marsden, Waldrop, Bost, and Jackson. It will be their job to help fill the gaps in the sprints and the 440.

Field Events Good
The best potentialities that the Tar Heels will have to place their money should come in the field events, notably the javelin and broad jump. Leading the javelin tossers are LeGore and Chandler while the broad jumpers have a trio of outstanding men, Higby, Childers, and Hubbard.

Although the Tar Heels will have to rebuild the team in several events in order to make an impressive showing against such big rivals as Navy and Duke, the Carolina tracksters should show improved form from that displayed in the Southern conference indoor games.

NEWS REEL ADDS TO MINNESOTA COURSES

(By College News Service)
Minneapolis, March 15.—A weekly talking news reel, minus bathing beauties, marathon dances, horse races and similar events, but featuring significant happenings in the day-to-day history of the world hereafter will supplement general information courses in the University of Minnesota junior college, it was announced this week.

Beginning a new experiment in education, the "news reel theatre" is planned primarily for junior college students in journalism, history, and political science; but all students of the university may attend, according to Robert A. Kissack, Jr., head of the department of visual education.

Three 45-minute programs will be presented each Friday throughout the college year, according to present plans.

"A professor recently told his class why dictionaries are not popular student reading. The same excuse might be advanced for non-use of text books; the plot is not very good.—Daily Bruin.

KENFIELD CALLS TEAM MEMBERS

Golf Squad Meeting in Emerson Stadium at 10:30 This Morning for Eligible Men Is Important.

Coach J. F. Kenfield has called a meeting of the varsity golf candidates for this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Emerson stadium. This meeting will be very important and all those eligible are urged to attend. Coach Kenfield will discuss the schedule, prospects, and the program for daily practice.

So far several men have reported for practice and if daily scores mean anything, this spring's team should be one of the best in Carolina's fairway history. At present the Tar Heels are Southern conference champions. This year's squad should be composed of such stars as Captain Billy O'Brien, Joe Adams, if he decides to play, Erwin Laxton, Will Sader, Carl Cramer, Alan Smith, Henry Bridges, Fred Laxton, and others.

Alpha Tau Omega Leads Way In Fraternity League With Chi Psi Second.

With this year's campaign coming into the home stretch this quarter, Best House and Alpha Tau Omega are far ahead in their respective leagues in the race for all-around campus leadership of intramural sports. Best House leads the dormitory outfits with 792 points, while A. T. O.'s 628.5 put it well ahead of all the Greek-letter organizations.

VIRGINIA AWARDS LETTER TO BOXER WHO NEVER BOXED

Seddon C. Nelson Commended for Sportsmanship in Continuing As Sparring Partner.

University, Va., March 16.—Seddon C. Nelson of Winchester, Va., has been awarded the Virginia major sport "V" in boxing although he has never competed in an intercollegiate bout during the four seasons he has been out for the team.

"We are recognizing Seddon Nelson as an ideal sportsman," reads the award of the athletic board signed by Fenton A. Gentry of Chattanooga, Tenn., president, and by Frank Sippley of Princeton, N. J., secretary. "While circumstances forbid entering him in competition, he continued to box for four years because of his love of the sport, benefiting not only himself but all his fellows. We should like to encourage such spirit as it is worthy of emulation."

LaRowe Intervenes

John S. LaRowe, coach of boxing, made a special plea to the athletic association board in recommending that the "V" be awarded to Nelson. He pointed out that in any other form of athletic competition it would have been possible to have used Nelson as a substitute enough for him to have earned a letter.

In boxing this was not possible. Nelson weighs about 150 pounds. He could have entered either as welterweight or as junior-middleweight. But he'd have had to replace either Tom Fishburne, who won the Southern Conference welterweight title, or Hal Stuart, who was runner-up in the junior-middleweight class.

Coach LaRowe did not think it wise to replace either of these veterans with a man of less actual experience. And Nelson continued uncomplainingly to act as sparring partner for both these men and for others, just as he had done in seasons past.

Records do not show that the major sport "V" has ever been given to any other man who did not engage in competition.

GENERAL REUNION PLANS CONSIDERED

Tentative Plans for 138th Commencement Will Follow Usual Program of Activities.

Plans are being considered by J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, and other alumni officials, for a general re-union of alumni in classes to take place during the 1933 commencement week. In addition to the mass gathering, there will be the regular class re-unions that will bring together three college generations besides the feature re-unions of the 50-year class, the 25-year class, and the class of 1932.

Classes scheduled for re-union here are, inclusively, 1883-86, 1902-05, 1908, 1921-24, and 1932. Although only tentative plans for commencement, which will be the University's 138th, are arranged it is considered likely that the usual program will be followed, which will include various campus entertainments, meetings, and social activities. The practice of performing the graduation exercises in Kenan stadium which was inaugurated last year, will probably be followed again this year.

SEVENTY RECEIVE CALL TO CONTINUE WINTER FOOTBALL

Three Weeks of Practice Will Begin Monday; Equipment Is Being Issued.

Seventy prospective football players received the call issued yesterday by Coach Chuck Collins for winter practice which will be continued Monday afternoon in Kenan stadium.

The majority of those receiving the call for practice have already received their equipment but the equipment office in Kenan field-house will be open this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon for those who have no equipment. Coach Collins urged all needing any regalia to obtain it before Monday.

Practice will be held for the next three weeks with intrasquad games set for each Saturday. The annual monogram-rookie battle will close the session, April 8.

Two New Men Called

Two new men appear on the list who have not been seen on the Carolina gridiron in a long while. Platt Landis, conference heavyweight boxing champion, who has not been out for football since his freshman days, has been called and Babe Daniels, hefty center who was out this year due to an injury, is back in school and ready to go. Landis was a fullback in his frosh days, but it is not known where he will be placed now.

The list of those receiving the call is as follows: Barclay, Collins, Kahn, Snyder, Jackson, Burnett, Tatum, Schaffer, W. Moore, Thompson, John Daniel, Martin, Woollen, Frankel, Gardner, McDonald, Manley, Caldwell, Kanner, Barwick, Barrett, Orr, Folger, Blythe, Bell, Beale, Evans, Landis, Joyce, Jones, Kenan, Ellisberg, Hobgood, Yeager, Montgomery, G. EXECUTIVES FOR JUNIORS DECIDE TO FAVOR DANCES

Class Will Meet Thursday Night In Gerrard Hall to Select Leaders for Affair.

The executive committee of the junior class last night went on record as favoring the joint junior-senior dance, providing that members of the senior class can bear their part of the expenses for the occasion.

The junior class has enough money in the treasury to finance its part of the costs, but there is uncertainty as to whether the senior class will be able to share the expense as collection of class fees during the winter and spring quarters has been slow.

The committee further decided to proceed with plans for the dance and elect leaders. For this purpose the members voted to call a meeting of the class next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Commencement marshals will also be elected at that time.

No Smoker to Be Given

It was decided that, for the purpose of using all the money for the dance, the gathering Thursday night should replace the smoker for this quarter.

The affair, given in conjunction by the two classes, has been scheduled for May 12 and 13, and tentative plans have been made for Bert Lown and his orchestra to furnish the music.

The senior class is expected to take action on the matter within the next week.

J. H. PRATT LENDS COLLECTION FOR LIBRARY DISPLAY

Exhibit Traces Development of Postage Stamps in United States Since Usage Began.

The valuable stamp collection of Colonel Joseph H. Pratt of Chapel Hill is now on exhibit in the lobby of the library. Colonel Pratt's collection is a varied one, and the stamps on display at the library show the development of postage stamps from the time when letters were sent without stamps.

Also in the display cases is a rare collection of confederate stamps and an authoritative book on these stamps, Postal History of Confederate Stamps.

Among the unusual features of the collection are two letters, one carried on the Graf Zeppelin during its first crossing of the Atlantic, and the other being carried by Lindbergh on his Atlantic crossing.

Colonel Pratt is an authority on stamp collecting and lent part of his collection to the library. He has also been organizing a stamp club in Chapel Hill. At the first meeting of the club several weeks ago, twenty-four members were present. Stamp collecting continues to be one of the most popular of hobbies; President Roosevelt is an ardent stamp collector. Colonel Pratt has one of the best stamp collections in this section of the country.

Science Journal Includes Graduate Student's Work

The February issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society carried a part of a thesis contributed by the University. The thesis, "The Debye-Hückel Ion Size Parameter in Terms of Individual Ionic Radii—The Activity Coefficient of Lead Chloride in Solution of Cadmium Nitrate," was prepared for the University faculty by Henry C. Thomas, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the master of science degree, and Dr. H. D. Crockford.

HONOR MEN HAVE LARGER FAMILIES THAN OTHER MEN

Phi Beta Kappas Are Better Able To Support More Children, Thesis States.

(By College News Service)

New York, March 16.—Marriage is shunned by the average Phi Beta Kappa student, but once the step is taken, he is inclined to have more children than the average graduate, according to a master's thesis in philosophy on file this week at Columbia University.

"This may be explained," according to Israel B. Polonsky, writer of the thesis, "by the fact that they earn larger salaries and are therefore better able to afford children."

The conclusions were derived from a study of Phi Beta Kappas at the College of the City of New York, as compared with other students at the same institution. Two groups of approximately 150 students each were selected to represent the honor men and the average scholars.

In college, the honor men are more interested in club activities, while their less industrious brethren turn to fraternities and class activities for diversion, according to the thesis. In general, however, both groups were said to be equally interested in extra-curricular activities.

Although not engaged in inter-collegiate athletic competition to as great an extent as some of the non-Phi Beta Kappas, the honor men were found to be in better physical condition at the time of their graduation.

"Thus we see," Polonsky wrote, "that Phi Beta Kappa members, although superior in scholastic achievements, are not superior in physical proficiency. However, they are not inferior in this respect either."

Once outside the university, Phi Beta Kappas take a little longer to get started in their life vocations, but once settled, they receive larger salaries and are more satisfied with their positions, Polonsky said.

LOCAL POST HAS EXCELLENT DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP

Resolutions Concerning Roosevelt Presidential Measures Will Be Considered Tonight.

The local post of the American Legion was successful in its membership drive, and now has the largest enrollment in its history, 165 members.

Since a large number of the post officers and members have already expressed their hearty support of Roosevelt's presidential measures concerning national economic troubles, a resolution bearing the sentiments of the legion will be up for consideration at tonight's meeting which is scheduled for Hillsboro.

All veterans are especially urged to attend tonight's meeting, since an unusually interesting program has been prepared; the public is extended a cordial invitation to attend. The meeting will take place in the Hillsboro high school auditorium, at 7:00 o'clock.

SENATE INCREASES ALCOHOL CONTENT TO 3.5 PER CENT

Three-Tenths of a Per Cent Alcohol Added to Beer and Wine for Approval of House.

The senate spent most of the session yesterday debating on the beer and wine bill. They finally decided that 3.2 per cent beer was not good enough for the citizens of these United States so they voted to make it 3.5 per cent. Then they took a vote on the bill and it was passed by a large majority. The bill placing both beer and wine at 3.5 now goes to the house for their approval of the additional three tenths per cent. The house had previously passed the bill when the alcoholic content was 3.2.

A statement from Jacob Rupert, New York brewer, said that 3.2 per cent would be fully as potent as the average pre-prohibition beer, and maybe better in quality because of advances in machine-making and chemistry.

Following is a survey made by the press officials: Brewery officials estimated that over 50,000 men would get permanent jobs in the brewery alone; a total of $100,000,000 will be spent for equipment, bottles, barrels, cases, caps, and grain, for immediate delivery it was estimated by another large brewer; extensive advertising will be carried out and one large New York brewer authorized a $100,000 outlay for newspaper advertising as soon as beer is legalized; some brewers are already taking orders, and the Anheuser-Busch company in St. Louis has 40,000 to 50,000 gallons of beer in its vats.

Hal Kemp Takes Over Program Leadership

Hal Kemp, Carolina graduate and nationally known orchestra leader, took over the leadership of the "Parade of Melodies" radio program, broadcast over the Columbia network, with the Sunday presentation of February 26.

Appearing on the program with Kemp's orchestra, originally composed of student musicians from Carolina, is a brilliant array of vocalists, including Josephine Haynes, the Neal sisters, the Four Horsemen quartet, and Bill Miller.

Kemp has raised his orchestra to international importance since his graduation in '26. The group was widely acclaimed on a recent trip to London and the continent.

Lost and Found Articles May Be Reclaimed at "Y"

Various and sundry articles turned in to the lost and found department since the beginning of the current school year have not yet been claimed. The list of ownerless articles include three pair of tortoise shell rim glasses, three fountain pens, eversharp pencils, odd keys, knives, key cases, beads, gloves, and numerous other odds and ends.

The owners may call for these articles at the Y. M. C. A. and will receive them upon describing them correctly. Miss Virginia Ballengee, office secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has charge of this department.

National Executive Will Address State Meetings

David R. Porter, national executive secretary of the student division of the Y. M. C. A., will be the chief speaker at the annual state Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. conference at Duke April 28-30. Dr. Frank Hickman, professor of psychology of religion in the Duke school of religion, will deliver the closing address for the meeting.

WINSLOW TO FILL VACATED POST AS SOPH CLASS HEAD

New President Elects Charlie Bond As Chairman of Second Year Executive Committee.

J. D. Winslow, chairman of the executive committee of the sophomore class, has been appointed by President Haywood Weeks to succeed President John Jacob Binder as head of the class.

This appointment was necessitated, according to Weeks, by the fact that Treasurer Frank McIntosh is the single remaining officer of the class in school, his duties as treasurer obviating his appointment. Winslow was appointed chairman of the committee under Stump Franklin and re-appointed at the assumption of the presidency by Binder.

The new president has selected Charlie Bond to succeed him as head of the executive committee. Membership of this committee is Charlie Bond, chairman, Garvin May, Will Sadler, Harold Bennett, Chapin Litten, C. R. Faucette, C. S. McIntosh, Richard Somers, Jim Lothian, Bob Blount, Henry Bridgers, Reed Devane, June Bateman, and Staley Pattishall.

A committee of Will Sadler, Reed Devane, Harold Bennett, and Frank McIntosh have been appointed to consider the advisability of the class's staging an informal dance this quarter.

Former Playmaker Scores Triumph In Broadway Drama

Although Strudwick took his acting seriously while in college, Miss Mary Dirnberger of the Bull's Head declared that he did not "inflict it on other people" by acting all over the campus.

Entered in 1925

Coming from Hillsboro, where his parents still live, Strudwick entered the University in 1925 and received his A. B. degree in summer school of 1928. He considers himself a member of the class of 1929. Although those who knew him when he was at Chapel Hill say Strudwick was a little reserved, he nevertheless seems to have been well liked by his fellow students. Strudwick is related by marriage to Dean F. F. Bradshaw.

Anderson Associate of Koch

Interestingly enough, it is another former associate of Professor Koch, who has written the play in which Strudwick is cast. Maxwell Anderson, author of Both Your Houses, was once a member of a dramatic organization founded by Koch when the latter was in the University of North Dakota. Besides the play the Theatre Guild is now presenting, Anderson has written, among others, Saturday's Children, Elizabeth the Queen, and What Price Glory? The latter was a motion picture success of a few years ago.

Although Atkinson has a favorable review of Both Your Houses in the Times, Robert Garland criticizes the play sharply in the New York World Telegram as being out of date. He thinks it is a belated attack on the congress just before the present one.

Library Wants Presses Used for Letter-Copying

The library has need of several old-fashioned presses, formerly used for copying letters. Many of them, discarded from use, are to be found in business houses.

Alumni or students who have such presses and who are willing to give them are requested to communicate to R. B. Downs, acting librarian.

World News Bulletins

New White House Record

The new record: Twelve days in office and President Roosevelt has received 14,000 telegrams praising his actions. And another record: 1,500 telegrams were said at Washington yesterday to have supported his veterans' and federal pay cut economy program, while only 39 disapproved. The peak of this business was reached after the President's address explaining what the banking situation was and why.

May Restore Old Postage Rate

The new postmaster-general, James A. Farley, may ask congress to restore the two-cent rate on first class postage, it was announced in Washington yesterday. He is having a survey made now, he told newspaper men, to see what can be done about the postal deficit. If that study shows the reduction would increase the volume sufficiently, he will request the legislators "to restore the two-cent stamp" in place of the present three-center.

Stocks Go Skyward

Stocks surged upward under an enormous volume of buying orders placed yesterday in the New York stock exchange, adding $1 to $3 a share to Wednesday's gains soon after the opening overwhelming the trading facilities. Twenty minutes after the market had opened the ticker had fallen six minutes behind actual transactions on the floor of the exchange.

Plans Completed For N. C. Commencement

Plans for commencement at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina have been completed with the choice of baccalaureate and literary speakers in the persons of the Reverend T. Guthrie Speers of Baltimore, Md., and United States Senator Alben Williams Barkley of Paducah, Ky.

Commencement exercises are scheduled to begin this year with Park night services the evening of Friday, June 2. Saturday will be given over to alumnae and members of the class of 1933. The baccalaureate sermon is to be preached in Aycock auditorium Sunday morning, June 4. The speaker is pastor of Brown Memorial church, Presbyterian, one of the important churches of Baltimore.

Senator Barkley is to speak at the final exercises Monday morning, June 5, when nearly 300 seniors receive their degrees.

SIX PHARMACISTS GIVEN LICENSES

Six new pharmacists were licensed to practice in this state yesterday following examinations held here the past two days by the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy.

The successful candidates, announced by F. W. Hancock of Oxford, secretary of the board, are:

K. W. Huss of Winston-Salem, W. S. Johnson of Rocky Mount, J. Weaver of Winston-Salem, all pharmacists. Assistant pharmacists are: G. A. Eatman of Wilson, P. W. Miller of Salisbury, and J. N. Porter of Charlotte.

Carroll Recuperated

Dean D. D. Carroll of the commerce school returned to work yesterday after having been confined at his home for the last few days with a severe cold.

REPORTERS MAKE GOOD SHOWING IN WINTER QUARTER

More Than 6,407 Column Inches Published During Shortest Quarter of Year.

During the winter quarter the combined reportorial staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL featured extensive writing as more than 6,407 column inches were turned in to credit of the reporters. This number of inches was the number that was posted on the reporters' bulletin board, but in addition hundreds of inches failed to be posted.

The race for the high number of inches was won by Phil Hammer, a first year man. Hammer's beat covers South building, and he turned in 1,136 inches about the doings around this all-important center of the campus. His nearest competitor was Robert Page, another freshman, who covered the "Y" and a part of South building. Page garnered 681 inches. Third place in the race was given to Bill Anderson, a freshman on the sport's staff; Anderson turned in 665 inches.

Six other reporters on the staff secured more than 200 inches. Jimmie McGurk, of the sport's staff, followed Anderson with 577 inches; Crampton Trainer secured 520; John Murphy had 518; Raymond Barron 296; James Keel 288; and J. H. Morris 247.

The work done by the reporters in the winter quarter was considerably better than the fall quarter, in spite of the fact that there were about twenty fewer issues. The number of inches the fall quarter was 6,429 column inches, with Lawrence Thompson grabbing the high number with 1,269. He was succeeded in the first position by Hammer, who was his nearest rival the fall quarter.

Many reporters were awarded passes by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, in recognition for their efficient work in the news coverage.

Greensboro College Will Present Play

The Patsy, Barry Connor's comedy, will be presented at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina Saturday evening by a cast of Play-like who have had considerable experience in amateur performances. The drama is being directed by Professor W. R. Taylor of the English department. The lead of Patsy is to be taken by Miss Susanne Ketchum of Greensboro whose father, Charles M. Ketchum, will play the role of father of Patsy. The leading male role, that of Tony Anderson, is taken by H. G. Mitchell, also of Greensboro.

Two Asheville girls, Misses Bernardene Johnson and Ruth Wolcott, have important parts in the presentations. Miss Johnson is cast as Patsy's older sister; Miss Wolcott, as her mother.

Laundry Refunds Monday

Beginning Monday morning at 9:00 o'clock, laundry refunds for the winter quarter will be issued in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. The refunds will be made in checks and may be cashed in the book exchange.

PATRONS DISCUSS CONTINUATION OF FORUM LECTURES

Second Meeting Called Tuesday Afternoon to Consider Program for Next Year.

Continuation of the Open Forum lecture series presented at the University this winter was discussed at a meeting of patrons yesterday afternoon in Gerrard hall. No plans were made for a possible program next winter but another meeting was called for 2:00 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon to consider the program.

The sponsors of the program presented here this year said yesterday that they have received a number of requests for the presentation of another program next winter. A series for 1934 has been arranged by the League for Industrial Democracy, which sent a part of speakers to the University.

Six Lectures on Program
The program of the league for next year includes six lecture discussions on the most pertinent national questions. The first lecture on the subject "The Deepening Crisis" will analyze the sweep of unemployment and the responsibility of local, state, and national government.

According to present tentative plans, the other discussion topics of the league will be as follows: "What Price Power," the trend toward public ownership of utilities; "Your Money's Worth," concerning the interdependence of producers and consumers; "Storm Over Asia," dealing with the economic conditions in Asiatic countries; "Fascism and Revolution in Europe," about European trends

CHURCH OFFERING SUNDAY CLASSES

Three Classes Are Planned by Methodist Church Especially For University Students.

For the spring quarter the local Methodist church is offering three Sunday classes especially for students. The student program of the church, conducted by the Wesley student association, has been arranged according to the requests of students.

During the quarter the following courses are offered for students each Sunday morning: "The International Sunday School Lesson," taught by Professor W. J. Miller of the electrical engineering department; "Student Forum Class," led by C. E. McIntosh, secretary of the school of education; and "Jesus, The Person," H. F. Comer, Y. M. C. A. secretary.

Evening meetings of the Wesley student association, at which topics of student interest, are discussed, are conducted every Sunday at 6:45 o'clock in the west parlor of the Methodist church. The program for the next Sunday meeting includes a feature talk by Harold D. Meyer of the sociology department and open discussion on the topic of "Social Trends and Their Possible Effect on Our Generation."

Bradshaw Reports On Congress Loan Fund

A report issued yesterday by Dean Bradshaw to Mrs. Lionel Weil of Greensboro, chairman of the Congress Loan Fund established last March by the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers, revealed that the entire original amount of $750 has been loaned. Twelve University students received financial aid in long-term secured notes through this source.

Figures in the report show that $11.52 was received in interest, $752 actually loaned, and that a balance of $9.52 is now on hand. The twelve students receiving the loans represented seven schools, three classes, maintained a C plus average, and ten were self-help students.

NEGRO WILL SUE FOR ADMITTANCE INTO UNIVERSITY

Thomas R. Hocutt of Durham
Files Petition for Mandamus
Commanding Admission.

Following the rumor that certain Negroes in the state were planning to apply for admission into the University law school, Thomas R. Hocutt, Durham Negro, filed a petition Thursday in the Durham County superior court asking that a writ of mandamus be issued commanding the University to admit him into the school of pharmacy or show cause to the contrary.

Officials of the University could not be reached yesterday to make statement on the action by the Durham Negro.

According to the petition, the Negro applied for admission last Tuesday and was refused.

Echo of Former Move
The petition filed is said to culminate a movement launched in Durham recently by several of the younger and more aggressive Durham Negroes who have declared their intentions to test the University's right to bar members of the race from study in the institution.

Rumors that a similar movement was underway in Raleigh were reported about a month ago, but the rumored attempts of members of the race to gain admission into the law school did not materialize. The identity of persons behind the movements cannot be learned, but it is said that agitation is being supported by Negroes throughout the

READING EXAMINATIONS PLANNED FOR STUDENTS

Graduate students desiring to take the reading knowledge examination in either German or French, or both, should register in the office of Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school before Tuesday. These tests are given candidates for higher degrees. The German examination will take place next Saturday and the French examination April 1.

Another announcement of importance to graduate students was issued yesterday; candidates for the master's degree at the August commencement of 1933 must submit applications before or on April 1.

Look Homeward, Angels!

— AN EDITORIAL —

The University of North Carolina, whose place in the southern educational firmament knows no peer, faces today virtual extinction should the "economy" bloc in the General Assembly culminate its crushing victory of yesterday in the follow-up of the Bowie-Cherry bill. Against the sound recommendations of authorities in the field and statesmanship, those interests who would "save North Carolina from a Sales Tax," yet relegate education in North Carolina to almost Reconstruction Era standing, moved resolutely and with heartless finality to cripple the State's proudest educational institution.

In 1929 the then unconsolidated University enjoyed a grant of $894,000, even then a figure considerably lower than that of previous years. Even in that period the University found its struggle for pre-eminence difficult, and with increasing remorse saw the further slashing of her bounty through the ensuing years.

Today, not the University alone, but N. C. C. W. and State College hover on the brink of a bleak chasm at the hands of those interests who apparently "fear the wrath of the folks back home." The appropriation for these three is $644,800, approximately two hundred thousand dollars lower than the figure for Carolina alone in 1929.

But the forces of education and sound statesmanship cannot accept defeat. There is still a fighting chance. With the figure remaining as it apparently shall, the economic existence of the University is assuredly doomed, if the report of President Graham to the alumni last December on the operating costs of the University and the figures presented to the appropriations committee several weeks ago are any criteria.

The institution which has fathered some thousands of North Carolina's foremost sons, has been put on the rack repeatedly. The straining point has passed—the breaking point has arrived. At this hour we stand with naught but courage on the crumbling pinnacle of a treacherous fall.—D.C.S.

Dr. Graham Reviews Fight Over Bill

Returning from Raleigh shortly after 9:00 o'clock last night after a hard day's fight in the behalf of education, Dr. Frank P. Graham, at the request of THE DAILY TAR HEEL for a statement in reference to the Bowie-Cherry appropriation bill, issued the following statement shortly after 10:30 o'clock:

"In the House of Representatives Thursday night a group of men, mainly young men, stood out against the hysteria of the hour and spoke their bit for all of North Carolina. In their deep concern for their alma mater they would not trade their state.

"They stood for the committee bill with all its items destructively low, but yet higher than the ruinous substitute bill. They spoke against the devastation of essential departments; they spoke for the public schools, health, and welfare, libraries, hospitals, and a fairer deal to the Negro institutions. They would not go over to the substitute bill on the better chance for a particular increase.

"They were standing for something bigger than any institution. They were standing literally against the destruction of the agencies of civilization built up through the generations and passed on as the social heritage of a great state and the social responsibility of a people too great to surrender to abject despair.

"Theirs was no prepared eloquence but the eloquence of faith and courage. They stood up for North Carolina when it was easier to indulge in fear and despair. In their stand they were simply trying through the night hours to hold a broken line for North Carolina in the hope that reason would come with another day. They lost. In their defeat there was something true and clean. With such a spirit the broken lines of the defeated become undefeatable. The longer lines of the public schools, reaching from every home in the towns and countryside will reform with the hopes of a million children.

"North Carolina with her face again to the morning of their hope will triumph over panic and hysteria for the better day that is to come."

WIRE HOME IMMEDIATELY

In view of the recent developments on the floors of the Legislature which may cause a set-back in North Carolina's education such that a decade of development will not cover up, the Daily Tar Heel urges that members of the student body wire their home folks immediately, requesting them to bring their influence to bear upon the Senators in the Legislature from their districts to solicit these Legislators' support in fighting the attack now being waged on education in the state.

If the proponents of the Bowie-Cherry are successful in their campaign, the University of North Carolina as well as the other educational institutions in the state will suffer tremendously. The last chance to stop this murderous onslaught will come when this bill comes before the Senate. If sufficient support is rallied to the educational cause, the bill might be defeated.

By wiring home and asking their parents' influence in this matter, the students here will be rendering the University an invaluable service.

Wire home immediately!

ALLEY TO SPEAK ON INTERNATIONAL PROBLEM MONDAY

World Traveler and Student Comes to University Under Auspices of Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Alden G. Alley, professor of history at Dana College in Newark, N. J., and a prominent teacher and student of international affairs for the past several years, will lecture on "International Relations" Monday morning in assembly and Monday night at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

A graduate of Harvard University, Dr. Alley traveled extensively in Europe before the World War, and in 1918-19 served as a lieutenant in the United States infantry in France. Every summer since 1922 he has gone abroad to study international problems at first hand, having attended nine different sessions of the League of Nations' Assembly. Dr. Alley has had an unusually close association with statesmen and with international organizations in various parts of the world. He has an intimate knowledge of many important problems confronting Europe today.

Makes Yearly Tours
Dr. Alley has been making a yearly tour of the various schools and colleges of the country and discussing such subjects as America's present position among the nation, happenings in Europe and what they mean to America, the disarmament conference, danger spots in Europe, and the League of Nations, and the World Court. His lectures here Monday are sponsored by the local Y. M. C. A.

TENNESSEE BOTANISTS CONDUCT STUDIES HERE

Three members of the University of Tennessee botany department, L. R. Hesler, H. M. Jenninson, and A. J. Sharp, are spending the week-end in botanic research work at the University. As a result of the recent acquisition of the Ashe collection, the University's herbarium aggregate is now recognized as the finest in the south.

Hesler, who is accompanied by his wife, is studying the toadstool type of mushroom, while Jenninson is investigating flowering plants. Sharp is studying the department's collection of mosses and liverworts.

Figure Set for All Three Divisions of Greater University Exceeds 1931 Grant to Chapel Hill Division Alone by Only $150,000.

By Don Shoemaker

The crushing, relentless, and merciless "economy" bloc in the North Carolina House of Representatives moved with unabated fury to obviate the necessity of a sales tax in slashing the appropriation for the Greater University to $644,800 in Raleigh yesterday. The Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University had requested a minimum of $691,000 to the budget commission, where the appropriation was slashed to $391,000.

Having adopted by a vote of 53 to 43 the Bowie-Cherry $73,000,000 substitute for the state-wide appropriations committee bill of $83,000,000 the House in committee of the whole late yesterday afternoon reached the figure recommended for the consolidated school.

Grant for Three Units

The figure of $644,800 was set to suffice for the three institutions comprising the Greater University. In 1929 the University of North Carolina alone received $894,000, then a bare minimum for operation. Since that time, the appropriation figure has been steadily decreased, until today it is probably that the University must elicit its scant share from the $644,800 granted so far by the General Assembly.

The leaders of the economy bloc, Tam Bowie and Gregg Cherry, were at slight odds over

MUSIC ENTRANTS TO GATHER TODAY

Contestants in State Junior Contest Will Compete in Preliminaries Today.

The junior division of the North Carolina federation of music clubs will assemble contestants in the preliminary elimination for its annual state contest for junior music students this morning at 9:30 o'clock in Hill music hall. Contests are scheduled for piano, violin, and voice students. This morning's contest is open to the public.

Contest Decides Entrants

This morning's contest will decide the entrants from the Capitol district of the federation for the state-wide contest here next Friday. Winners in the latter meet will compete in Salisbury March 25 for higher awards.

Mrs. A. W. Hunnecutt, director of junior division contests for this state, will have charge of today's contest. Mrs. Hunnecutt has conducted similar meets here during the past several years. She is in charge of the movement of the state federation of music clubs to promote advancement in musicianship among the younger students in the state. The federation will also sponsor a contest for advanced music students here late in April.

Lacking in the Present System

Claiming that they do not have "sufficient time," many professors are denying their students the innumerable benefits to be obtained from weekly, or bi-monthly conferences. In cases where the class enrollment is so large that such an arrangement would be impossible, the professors have an excuse for their neglect. But when the number of students in the class is small enough to allow these conferences without undue trouble to the instructors, there is no reason why they should not be encouraged.

As a matter of fact, as one philosophy professor has expressed it, the teachers owe it to their students to give them as much time in conferences as the pupils themselves desire. But so seldom are professors found who follow this policy, that when the students are fortunate enough to have such a teacher, they are at a loss to know how to make the best use of the faculty-student conference. The ideal plan, of course, would be one which approaches the one used at Oxford, i.e., where the students are in constant contact with tutors. These tutors even live in the houses, as they are called, with the students, being ever ready to confer with them on questions coming up in their study. Recently Harvard has installed a similar arrangement, and thus far it has proved most satisfactory.

It is entirely out of the question for the University of North Carolina to adopt such an arrangement. For to do so would require an increase in the number of faculty members as well as a considerable increase in the appropriation from the state. A move of this sort at the present time is entirely out of the question.

But at least the professors here can make enough sacrifice of their time so as to allow regular student conferences. It is true that the students are now at all times welcomed when they wish to confer with the instructors on various questions. There are numerous men in the student body, however, who do not take advantage of this opportunity, and it is the part of the faculty members themselves to encourage these personal sessions. This can only be done by required faculty-student conferences.

Actually there are three means by which students may develop their knowledge: one is by personal study, the second is from the class lecture, and the third is by means of the personal interviews between student and professor. To deny the students this last plan is to rob them of an essential phase of their educational development.

Spiking The Guns

Amid the clamor and hubbub arising from our national financial crisis, the installation of a new president, beer bills, and other occurrences of a less formidable nature, can be heard the faint rumblings of the major trends in the making of man's social history.

One of these trends has been the gradual atrophy of the democratic spirit since the war. This has been due usually, but not always, to the economic plight of the various nations. At the present time, the classic example is Germany. Beset by factionalism, stifled by the manifestly unfair treaty of Versailles, and plagued by economic evils, Germany has turned to the fantastic Adolf Hitler in a desperate attempt to achieve some sort of unified national policy. The highly romantic appeal and the strong flavor of "knighterrantry"—the losing of oneself in a cause—is characteristic of the Fascist movement.

(Incidentally, it is interesting to note here the connotation of the term Socialist in the mind of the average American and the average German. In this country there is a strong prejudice against the word; whereas in Germany the word smacks so much of constructive reform and progressive, judicious legislation that even the Fascists or Nazis—arch enemies of Marxian doctrines, the foundation of Socialism—have adopted the nom de politique of "National Socialists.")

With the rise of the Hitlerites to power, we witness one more slap at the now almost tragically farcical catch-phrase we used in our deluded war-time romancing: "Making the World Safe for Democracy." Junkerism, universal military service, re-armament, and Chauvinism are re-ascending to mock at the ideals of Woodrow Wilson. A prospect of rampant nationalism and saber-rattling from Germany now seems in the offing; persecution of Jews and Communists will be the order of the day.

It remains to be seen whether Hitler possesses the ability to organize and to integrate the forces of public opinion in his favor to compensate for the lamentable conditions which prevail in the country. Harry Elmer Barnes has predicted a Communist revolution following the Fascist regime. In that case, it seems likely that unless something radical is accomplished in the way of spiking the guns of German discontent, the future appears extremely dark for European peace.—V.J.L.

The Tocsin

President Frank Graham has sounded the tocsin in his appeal to the student body to enlist in the campaign against the proposed 42.8 per cent reduction in state appropriations laced on the University and public education. The problem of the University administration has become the personal problem of every student in Chapel Hill. In solving his own problem, the student will aid the cause of public education in the state, which in the present crisis threatens to reach a perilously low ebb unless immediate action is taken. All students should have a part in that action by writing, not to their parents alone, but to friends throughout the state, defending public education against the proposed drastic cut. The student on the campus now has an effective weapon with which he may do battle with the forces that endanger his very existence at the University.

Many parents of University students are not fully cognizant of the gravity of the situation which confronts the University administration. By enlightening and winning the interest of these people the student body will indirectly exert an influence upon the General Assembly which may prove efficacious in relieving the strain in the atmosphere around the business office. Interested persons in the state should be made to realize that whereas educational institutions may be sadly disparaged or even abolished in insufficient appropriation, a great liberal university is not a species of phoenix which may arise again over night from its own ashes.

The University has acquired prestige over a period of years in which inflations and depressions taken together have but given it a tradition of solidarity. These shall not perish now because a few near-sighted legislators have not vision enough to see that in their frantic though earnest struggle to balance the budget they are blindly attempting to undo in part all that has been achieved in the cause of literacy in the state and in the south. Time after time the students of the University have rallied to the call of their president and now, as in times past, they shall not fail him.—R.H.B.

Not the Usual Huey

The gentleman from Louisiana's newest propaganda in favor of his schemes for a reorganization of wealth distribution comes out under the name of "The Long Plan," which he explains briefly in a printed handbill distributed through the mail. Senator Huey's opening sentence is promising enough: "With the one law which I propose to submit the minute Congress meets, I think most of our difficulties will be brought to an almost immediate end."

In brief, the Kingfish proposes to tax away excess wealth. First, he wishes to levy a tax on fortunes above ten million dollars, graduated so that when a fortune of one hundred millions is reached, the levy will take all the balance above that sum. Secondly, there will be an inheritance tax, also graduated, which will prevent any person from inheriting a fortune over five million dollars. And thirdly, he proposes a more effective use of the income tax to the extent that no individual will be permitted to keep more than one million dollars from earnings of one year. Senator Huey estimates that "The Long Plan" will bring in to the Federal treasury approximately fifteen million dollars per year, which revenue he proposes to spend mainly for public works, thus creating jobs for the unemployed.

After the technocracy fiasco, the American public will undoubtedly be more wary of a proposal that declares itself so frankly to be a panacea, and it is extremely doubtful that "The Long Plan" could be engineered past Congress. But aside from the extravagant claims of his Plan, it may be safely stated that we have not yet realized the extent to which the income tax can be used as a federal measure. Andrew Carnegie, for instance, recognized this by his belief in a fifty per cent tax on income over one million dollars. Is Huey, as we are so prone to gather from his senatorial antics, all "hokey?"—A.T.D.

Out of the Kegs

By Christmas

Beer by April! That's what the boys in Washington have promised us. They first set it at 3.2 per cent, but the Senate thought that the folks back home could stand another cut of .15 per cent, the people being used to cuts. So beer will come back, a little weak from legislation and thirteen years stagnation.

What worries this department is the beer question in Chapel Hill. Will beer come to Chapel Hill in the balmy days of an April/Spring? Where will it be sold? Will chapel hour be done time or beer time? All these questions and many others will be answered on our next broadcast.

Literature

The four most popular volumes in the Bull's Head in pedagogical circles are The Student Fraternity Murder, The Kennel Murder Case, The Red Castle Mystery, and Dr. Priestley Lays a Trap. The above mentioned quartet sees pretty active circulation in faculty circles, although we understand that the young professors don't care for mystery stories much; read more weighty works that improve and stimulate the mind.

Dr. Bell's Scotty pup nearly wrecked one of the volumes, The Student Fraternity Murder, which might mean something or other. Drs. Van Hecke, Henderson, Caldwell, Pearson, Howell, and Paine are the best mystery story fans, however. They all like 'em slightly gory but involved in plot. That's why Egyptian Cross fell out of favor with the professors. It was so gory it kept most of them awake nights, which is a bad thing for anybody in the English department who teaches an eight-thirty class.

Poesy

The Poets' Corner got together the other evening in the Carolina Magazine office and discussed ways and means of penning prize-winning odes for Poesy, a college anthology which the Poets Guild will publish this summer at the World's Fair. A spy with a long red beard and a green hat, doing under cover work for this department, reports that there were about seven poets present (he couldn't be sure, 'cause his hair kept falling down over his eyes), including the folks who write about trees, old shoes, rain on the window-pane, etc. He also says that the headquarters of the Poets Guild is on Christadora street (New York), which is rather a poetic location.

But we wish the poets well, and send this little blessing: Success, success, to all you guys, Here's hoping you may win the prize

With odes inspiring and sonnets witty To satisfy the Guild committee. Now all can't write like Miss Millay, Or Bobby Frost and Steve Benet,

NEXT TO GODLINESS?

Several days ago, Joe Smith, University student, went to the Y. M. C. A. to get his laundry. His supply of clean shirts was almost gone, so he needed his last laundry bundle of the term.

Now, the laundry department is in the habit of refunding the balance of each student's laundry deposit in the lobby of the Y, and of distributing the last bundles by having each student call at another room in the Y and paying cash. Joe Smith had no cash money for the banks were closed, and, besides, he rarely had much cash money at any time, for he was a self-help student and lived from hand to mouth.

When he went to the desk where he was accustomed to receiving his refund check, he found it unoccupied. Instead, there was a huge ugly sign: REFUNDS WILL NOT BE MADE UNTIL CLOSE OF BANK HOLIDAY.

The laundry owed him approximately three dollars as a refund—he was a thrifty boy, and washed many of his clothes in his own room. He went to the window to receive his laundry bundle and found another sign, equally huge and equally ugly. It read: "Unless Spring term registration slip is produced, laundry packages will be held for cash."

Joe Smith, by the University schedule was not due to register for three days—but he needed a clean shirt now. He asked the price of his bundle. "Eighty-eight cents," he was told.

"You owe me about three dollars," Joe said to the stern and unbecoming woman with pencil stuck in her hair, the laundry's representative, "Couldn't you let me have my bundle and take the eighty-eight cents out of the three dollars which you have of mine?"

"No," said the unsmiling laundry sentinel.

So, Joe Smith, dejected at having to wear his not-so-clean shirt three days more, shuffled out of the Y's front door.

There were many Joe Smiths last week. It is doubtful that their plight will cause the least of pangs to the hearts of those who live from the laundry's bounty. Joe Smiths are an uncomplaining lot; they are philosophic—they could not be otherwise and yet remain in school as self-help students.

But if the laundry persists in its high-handed and unsympathetic attitude, assumed not only in this example of stupidity but in many other cases, some day, some one will rise to complain of it so vigorously that the laundry's back will be broken, and it can no longer act as high mogul of the required deposit of $8.50 per term of each student.

Let us pray that that "some day" and that "some one" come soon to relieve us.

NEGRO WILL SUE FOR ADMITTANCE INTO UNIVERSITY

C. A. McCoy and C. O. Pearson, attorneys, and S. C. Coleman, newspaper writer, were the first openly to announce themselves as sponsoring the movement. McCoy and Pearson drafted Hocutt's petition. They announced last month that they would make a formal application for the admittance of Negroes at the University and intimated that they would carry the fight to court if necessary.

In the petition filed Wednesday, Hocutt alleged that he formally demanded admission to the school of pharmacy and was denied on the grounds that he was a Negro. This action, the plaintiff maintains, was "wrongful and fraudulent violation and contravention of the constitutional rights of the plaintiff as guaranteed to him by Act I, sections 17 and 27, of the Constitution of North Carolina and Amendment XIV, section 1, of the constitution of the United States."

Hocutt qualifies himself as "a person of African descent, of good moral character, twenty-four years of age, and possessing the necessary scholastic prerequisites for registration and admission to the University of North Carolina."

An order requiring that Hocutt be admitted to the University or cause be shown why he should not be was placed in the hands of Judge M. V. Barnhill remained unsigned last night. The University and Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., registrar, were named defendants in the action.

Regulars Eke Out Second Win Over Yannigans In Fast Game

First Team Rallies Late to Take Second Practice Tilt by Count of 5-4.

HURLERS IMPROVE FORM

Brown and Whitley Stingy With Base-Hits; Game Scheduled For 3:30 Today.

Carolina's regulars scored in the last frame for the second day in succession to down the yannigans by one run in a baseball practice contest. The game played yesterday afternoon on Emerson field ended 5 to 4.

The whole Tar Heel squad, realizing the tough schedule before them, played fast, heads-up ball, the whole nine-inning game lasting less than one and a half hours. The hitting, however, is still weak on the first team, the regulars getting only seven safe blows, all singles. Ten hits for the yannigans was a little better.

Whitley, Brown Pitch Well

Whitley, hurling the first five frames for the yannigans, was the main reason the varsity didn't connect. He held the first team to four hits and two runs. Brown, a southpaw, working for the regulars during the opening five innings, showed up as well, giving up only four blows and one run. Vick, rightfield, Leonard, short, and Temple, first base, all of them yannigans, were the only batters to get more than one hit. Temple was the only player able to get an extra base hit, that a double in the second inning.

Barham, sophomore, who went in for Captain Powell in the ninth, drove in the winning marker with a one-timer to centerfield. Phipps scored the run after reaching first on an error and going to second on Croom's single. The rest of the varsity score came as results of errors. Weathers counted in the third on Dixon's hit, McCaskill scored in the fourth on Hornaday's safe blow, and two runs were marked down in the eighth on two walks, a fielder's choice, and an error.

The yannigans counted all their runs in the fifth, sixth, and seventh frames. Brown walked the first one in the fifth on three straight passes after Barham had hit safely. Leonard and Temple scored in the sixth after each had gotten singles. Both runs were on fielders' choices. Leonard drove Vick in for the last yannigan run in the seventh after the latter had reached base on an error.

Infield Still a Problem

Coach Hearn's infield is still uncertain. Dixon is looking better at first and has slight advantage over Temple, as a result of his height. Temple has shown a marked improvement in his hitting and may give the veteran Dixon a stiff fight for the post. Leonard and Phipps are still battling for the shortstop position and Coach Hearn's choice is still doubtful. Captain Powell, third, and Weathers, second, are almost sure starters. Probably the biggest battle on the squad is the backstop. Tatum, Matheson, McCaskill, and Strayhorn are all looking good.

Another practice game is scheduled for this afternoon, starting at 3:00 o'clock.

Checks Go to Bank Today

Students who have given out checks during the bank holiday are expected to meet payments today. Checks will be sent in to the local bank Monday. If arrangements are not made to make them good, the usual bad check rules will be enforced, according to a statement of William C. Medford, chairman of the student council check committee.

RANSON PLEASSED OVER PROSPECTS FOR TRACK TEAM

Schedule for 1933 Shows Six Meets Carded; Coach Expects Records to Be Broken.

Although a casual glance at the roster of this year's track team would not cause any degree of excitement concerning the possibilities of the Tar Heels smashing any records, Dale Ranson, assistant coach of track, believes that this year's team, if at all successful, will be capable of setting new school records.

In an official statement issued yesterday afternoon, Ranson said: "The 1933 track schedule shows six difficult meets (Navy, Virginia, Duke, Penn State, State Championship, and the Southern Conference meets). A number of new University records are likely to be created if the season is successful. There are a number of men on this year's squad capable of making records in their events."

Ranson went further in explaining the basis for his statement, saying that watching the varsity track squad which seems to have an abundance of enthusiasm and ambition spread among each individual, the team which triumphs over the Tar Heels this spring will have to go some. This fine spirit is a necessary essential for a fine morale that all track coaches seek from their proteges.

The school records as they now stand and the names of the individuals who set them are as follows:

100 yd. dash, 9.8 seconds, Gus McPherson, '26 and Charlie Farmer, '30.
220 yd. dash, 21 seconds, Charlie Farmer, '32.
440 yd. run, 49.4 seconds, Ken Marland, '32.
880 run, 1:56:5 minutes, Minor Barkley, '30.
2 mile run, 9:38.1 minutes, Johnny Henderson, '28.
120 high hurdles, 15.2 seconds, Holt Moore, '25.
220 low hurdles, 24.1, Holt Moore, '25.
Pole vault, 13 feet, Brodie Arnold, '30.
High jump, six feet and one-half inches, George Bagby, '30.
Broad jump, 22 feet 9 3-4 inches, Floyd Higby, '32.
Shot, 46 feet 8 1-4 inches, Oscar Mullis, '32.
Discus, 138 feet 1 1-2 inches, Theron Brown, '32.
Javelin, 208 feet 7 inches, Ralston LeGore.

One-half mile relay, 3:24.7 minutes, Lionel Weil, John Stafford, Ken Gay, and Captain Dave Nims, '30.

Four mile relay, 18:06 minutes, Captain Hoytt Pritchett, June Fisher, Minor Barkley, and Galen Elliott, '28.

Mile run, 4:21.2 minutes, Galen Elliott, '26.

All but two of the school records were set on the Emerson field track. Those two records which were not hung up at home were made at Penn State and Navy. Minor Barkley ran a great 880 in the Penn State dual meet in 1930, making the school record of 1:56.5 minutes. The other school mark was made by Ralston LeGore in the sensational Navy meet last year at Annapolis. The gigantic Tar Heel javelin tosser threw the spear 208 feet seven inches. One will also notice that six out of the seventeen events were records hung up by members of last year's 1932 track team. The oldest records are those in both the hurdle events. PLANS COMPLETE FOR TENNIS AND BASEBALL RACES

Copies of Rulings Being Mailed to Managers of Various Teams by Intramural Heads.

Arrangements for the intramural baseball and tennis campaigns have been completed, according to announcement made yesterday by intramural authorities. Copies of these regulations are being sent to the managers of the various teams along with the first schedule of the season.

Hereafter the policy adhered to during the winter quarter will be followed. Schedules will appear in THE DAILY TAR HEEL every day and a complete week's schedule will be run every Sunday. No schedules will be mailed out with the exception of the first one now in the mails.

Baseball Regulations

In the baseball campaign regulation playground rules will apply with certain exceptions. No spikes will be allowed in any games.

A batter will be out on a third strike whether it is caught or not, no base-runner may steal until the ball has passed the batter, and a pitched ball hitting the batter will be dead.

Only one step may be taken in delivering a pitch, and an illegal pitch will count as a ball. A balk will be treated in the usual way, advancing base-runner but not entitling the batter to first base.

Games will be seven innings unless one team scores twenty runs, in which case the game will be terminated at the end of the fifth inning. Ten men will constitute a team, but seven men will prevent a team's being forfeited.

Arrangements for Tennis

Six courts are to be used in intramural tennis again this year. An intramural official will be on hand every day to see that courts are cleared in time for matches.

Each match will consist of one doubles and two singles matches. Instead of the regular sets, however, sets will be the best five out of nine games. Each match will consist of the usual two out of three sets.

BOARD APPROVES GENERAL POLICY OF "SPECTATOR"

Reports Columbia Paper to Be "Courageous, Liberal, and Intelligent in Tendencies."

After an extensive investigation by a student board committee in regard to its policies and financial and general organization, the Columbia University Spectator was reported to be "courageous, liberal, and intelligent in its tendencies," though the paper was said to have been at times ill-informed.

The report of the student committee includes a recommendation that the Spectator staff should permit no member of the managing board to represent a downtown paper during his term in office. This recommendation was made following charges that news stories in the paper have been on several occasions colored with editorial comment.

Also certain editorials of the Spectator were criticized as fostering sensationalism and stooping to sarcastic insinuations. Policies of Arthur J. Lelyveld, editor of the Spectator, and the general organization of the paper were approved by the student board, however.

New York City bank, won laurels clearing the timber in record time in 1925. His records have withstood the inroads of time, and should last through this season.

VARSITY GOLFERS MEET TO DISCUSS QUARTER'S PLANS

Strong Heel Aggregation Will Have First Meet of Season With Richmond University.

At a meeting of the varsity golfers at Emerson stadium yesterday morning, Coach Kenfield discussed this spring's schedule, the squad prospects, and the practice times. This meeting was attended by several candidates: Captain Billy O'Brien, Will Sadler, Alan Smith, Carl Cramer, Erwin Laxton, Fred Laxton, Henry Bridges, Ed Michaels, Gwynn Harper, Pete Tyree, and Frank Sisson.

Coach Kenfield urged the men to get down to serious practice as the first match is less than a week off. The schedule opens Thursday at Hope Valley with Richmond University in what is expected to be a close affair. The following week at Hope Valley the Tar Heels take on W. and L., who will be represented by Billy Howell, national star and Walker Cup player. Captained by Howell, the Generals should make the going tough for Coach Kenfield's crew.

Defending Champions

The Tar Heels, present Southern Conference champions, will have the services of all of last year's squad with the exception of Al Brown, who graduated, and Joe Adams, who is now a law student. Joe was the individual Southern Conference title-holder in 1931. Despite the fact that these two men are lost to the team, the Tar Heels will have the strongest team they have had in years.

MANY WILL PLAY IN HUGE TOURNEY

Over Fifty Carolina Students Post Names for Play in Meet With Duke April 3-8.

More than fifty tennis players have posted their names for the mass tennis meet with the Duke University student body the week of April 3 to 8. Everyone is urged to enter this meet, regardless of the style or quality of his playing.

Coach Kenfield has posted a notice on the bulletin board at the tennis courts on which all interested in entering the meet are asked to list their names. The bulletin will remain posted all next week. Carolina would like to show more than 200 players before the meet.

Entry Fee Small

The only entry fee will be one new ball, which each contestant is requested to furnish. Transportation will probably be provided in student automobiles, for that half of the players which will play at Duke. One half of the meet will be played here.

Talent is not a requirement; and bashfulness should be tossed to the winds when considering entering the meet. There is no one on this campus who is not able to play in the meet, just so long as he can wield a racket.

Co-eds May Play

It was suggested that the co-eds of the two schools engage in a similar meet. This may be arranged by the women if they so desire. Carolina has a few good women players, but has never been represented by a tennis team.

Anyone registered in either the undergraduate or graduate school of either university is eligible to enter competition. The team winning the greatest number of matches will be declared the winner of the carnival.

With the sun shining, the courts in good shape, and rackets re-strung, Carolina ought to more than amass the desired number of contestants before next week.

NETMEN WORKING TO BETTER STYLE FOR HARD SEASON

Challenge Tournament to Rearrange Standings Is Scheduled to Start Monday.

If stiff bodies and creaking bones are the only obstacles in the Carolina tennis team's renewed campaign for the national championship, these will be overcome in the next few weeks. From yesterday's practice, only the ragged form of most of the players was outstanding.

The players have not as yet reached their usual form, but Hines, Levitan, Willis, Shuford, and Morgan worked into a better playing style yesterday. Harris, Dillard, and Wright did not attend the practice.

Hines and Levitan Teamed

Although Wilmer Hines and Walter Levitan worked together as a doubles team yesterday, it is most probable that Walter will play with Harvey Harris. Shuford was teamed with Dave Morgan against the Hines-Levitan combination. The latter team won the match by the scores of 6-3, 8-6.

Harley Shuford was extended to a 10-8 practice singles in defeating Dave Morgan. Shuford has not reached his top form, but the sturdy left-hander ought to show well a little later in the season.

The challenge tournament to rearrange the standings of the fall quarter will begin Monday afternoon. A player will be able to challenge any man two places above him. The freshman team, as well as the varsity, will be ranked in this tournament.

Connie Mack's Son Will Play At Duke

North Carolina collegiate baseball ranks will be graced with the name of Connie Mack this spring.

It's not the grand old man of the Athletics, but the youngest of the Mack clan, who goes by the name of Connie Mack, Jr. This youngest McGillicuddy, who is a freshman at Duke, will be put through his paces by Jack Coombs, Blue Devil mentor, who performed for the elder Mack on the American League mound back in the days of Chief Bender.

Mack, Jr., is a candidate for a slab position on the Imp outfit.

ENGINEERS HEAR TWO DISCUSSIONS OF EARTHQUAKES

W. F. Prouty and T. F. Hickerson Speak at Joint Meeting of Four Societies.

At a joint meeting of the four engineering societies Thursday, Dr. W. F. Prouty and Professor T. F. Hickerson gave talks on earthquakes. Dr. Prouty lectured on earthquakes from a geological standpoint while Professor Hickerson discussed them from an engineering viewpoint.

Dr. Prouty chose as his subject "Geological Mechanics of Earthquakes." He gave a description of an earthquake and the statistics of their velocity. He also stated the reasons why earthquakes were so infrequent in the eastern regions.

"Designing Buildings to Resist Earthquakes" was the subject of Dr. Hickerson's talk. He offered plans for building buildings to withstand the average shock of a quake and gave an explanation of why earthquakes destroy some buildings and left others standing. With this in mind he illustrated the construction of a building or an earth dam to remain erect under the shock of a quake.

The talks were accompanied by illustrations.

Greater University Grant Is Slashed

(Continued from first page) The question of an appropriation to higher education. In yesterday's session, Cherry proposed that the Greater University receive the grant ultimately reached, though Bowie had previously demanded a figure of $570,000. Backing the proposal of Governor Ehringhaus, whose recommendations were finally scrapped, Everett of Durham sent up an amendment to the substitute bill to set the University's grant at $832,000 annually. Cherry's proposal was the answer to the last stand for the Ehringhaus faction.

Second Reading Monday
The bill comes out for a second reading Monday. Following the third reading, it goes to the Senate. There the forces of education hope to carry the fight more successfully.

The substitute measure, which must go through the House section by section, also provides for cutting the salaries of State employees forty-four per cent under the sum they received in 1930. The reduction of school teachers' salaries is forty per cent under those of 1930.

Though now apparently beaten with the passage of the Bowie-Cherry measure, the Ehringhaus supporters and the proponents of better education facilities have not yet asked for quarter. The fight will be waged on the floor of the Senate and in every conceivable avenue of state government.

Bowie and Cherry were consistent in the assertion that their measure adequately provided for a six months school term and that it made a sales tax unnecessary. Though they claimed that the adoption of their bill would not destroy a single essential state function, their assertion is in contradiction to the sober theories held by high governmental agencies and individuals, who place the cause of education higher than the discomforts of a sales tax.

STRICTER RULES ADOPTED FOR USE OF CHORAL ROOM

Unusual Amount of Breakage And Careless Use of Facilities Reasons for Change.

Because of an unusual amount of breakage of records and careless use of radio and player-piano in the choral room of the music building during the past quarter, a new policy has been adopted by the department of music in connection with the use of this equipment by students, according to an announcement made yesterday by Professor H. S. Dyer, head of music.

An average of fifty students other than those majoring in music or those registered for courses in music appreciation use the facilities of the music building every week. A group of twenty or thirty usually gather to hear the programs broadcast from the Metropolitan opera company or by the New York and Philadelphia orchestras. The music department also owns a collection of several hundred victrola records, many of which are no longer on sale and can not be replaced.

Heavy Breakage Last Quarter
The quarterly inventory of the department has shown a loss or breakage of fifty-six records during the quarter as compared to a perfect check-up in June, 1932, and a loss of four records with only one unaccounted for in December. It has also been necessary to make extensive repairs and replacements of parts on the radio and player piano during the winter quarter because of carelessness of users in playing these instruments and in leaving them on after leaving the building.

The prohibitive cost of repairs and replacing records has made it necessary for the music department to take steps to stop abuse of its facilities. A new lock has been placed on the choral room door and all persons who now rent keys to the room will be expected to turn them in to the department office. New keys may be obtained on a revised plan of personal responsibility.

PATRONS DISCUSS CONTINUATION OF FORUM LECTURES

Speakers on each of the subjects will be sent here by the League for Industrial Democracy to offer one side of the facts. Members of the local faculty will uphold the other side of each discussion, and the meetings will also be thrown open to general discussion.

Russ Mickle Announces Cancellation of Dance

Due to the abolition of class fees for the spring quarter and the general financial conditions, the official freshman class dance scheduled for April 7 has been called off, Russell Mickle, chairman of the dance committee for the freshman executive committee, announced yesterday.

Student Mourns As Nine-Year-Old Garment Is Destroyed By Flames

Neighbor, Not in Sympathy With Feelings of Owner for Old Suit, Purchases Same and Proceeds to Make Funeral Pyre as Ex-Custodian Gives Vent to Unchecked Sorrow.

A funeral pyre of epic proportions has recently thrown consternation into the ranks of local used-clothing establishments. The doom of the second-hand clothes business appears imminent, and medics can no longer expect to receive cast-off wearing apparel. "Boss" Hill feels his occupation vitally threatened. In short, the action of particular University group has completely revolutionized the status of the discarded vesture industry.

The germ of this economic upheaval rests in the love that a student bore for a particular suit of clothes. So deep-seated was the affection for the smudged gray, striped garment that he proudly estimated it had seen no less than nine years' service. Then, as a caressing afterthought he would beam, "and it's good for another five years at least." Whether the suit had just returned from one of its most infrequent trips to the tailor or it had been drenched in rainstorm, the owner would invariably hang it up with the care befitting only royal robes.

Bothers Neighbors
Unfortunately this gentleman had neighbors. And these neighbors swear that they could have stood the suit if it had not been for the nauseating pride its owner manifested in its age and durability. Ominous rumours of assault and battery upon the revered object began to trickle through the dormitory. But our friend only clung the harder to his prize.

Then one afternoon his elaborations and glorifications of the suit's virtues had its own reward. One of the assembled students, one on the verge of bursting with the suppressed rage of years, suddenly blurted forth, "Listen, I'll buy that damned suit from you on the spot."

Owner Rejects
A look of horror swept the face of the owner. Part with his closest and oldest friend, the consolation and cheer of his old age? Never! "It's not for sale," he replied frigidly.

However, the crowd urged the bidder to renew his efforts. He advanced and tantalizingly cried,

Debaters To Return From Northern Trip

The University debating team, composed of D. R. Seawell and E. A. Rankin, is due back this week-end from a tour of the northern colleges. They left last Saturday for Washington where they debated Georgetown University, taking the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved: That the U. S. should adopt the British radio system of control." At Pittsburgh the debating team argued on the war debt cancellation before the Pittsburgh Advertising Club. The last debate of the tour was at New York University where the team debated on the subject concerning the emergence of women from the home.

Loan Fund for Women

Announcement was made yesterday by Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school that the Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women has a loan fund available for which women graduate students are eligible to apply. Any such student interested in procuring the loan during the remainder of the year or for next year may inquire at the dean's office in 202 South building, concerning the details.

"I'll give you a quarter for the suit as it stands."

"A quarter, a whole quarter?" faltered the proud possessor.

Owner Reflects
"Well, I didn't think you thought that much of it," he said, fingering the threadbare lapel nervously. "You see, I feel a deep attachment—but if you're sure you'll take good care of it—and you'll give a quarter—" Here he stopped, choked with emotion.

When he regained his breath, and wistfully brushed away a tear, he ran his palm over the beloved garment, hung his head, and whispered, "It's yours."

Owner Collects
Almost paralyzed with joy and astonishment, the buyer handed over the money, and the suit was stripped from the body it had learned to love, honor, and obey.

When it lay in a heap on the dormitory floor, the ex-owner remarked regretfully, "Maybe I shouldn't have done it. I guess there'll never be another like it." "You bet there won't," answered the new guardian of the robes.

So saying, he picked up the clothes and tossed them into the nearby waste-basket. Then, with a grand flourish and a muttered "hocus-pocus," he applied a match to the contents of the basket. Turning to the approving spectators, he solemnly quoted from Dido's pyre speech in The Aeneid.

Owner Objects
Amid the general laughter and joy of the crowd, and the devastating crackle of the flames devouring the suit, there was heard a piercing cry from the ex-owner.

Struggling for breath, purple in the face, looking somewhat like a jumping-jack in his underwear, he flung at the orator: "You're nothing but a treacherous Vandal, that's what you are."

Behind the dormitory lies a large flat rock. Scratched on the surface is the inscription, "Here Lies Only the Remains. Your Spirit, O, Suit, Carries On. Greater Love Hath No Man."

Baptist Churches To Convene For Meeting

A conference for rural and industrial Baptist churches has been planned for churches of this section beginning next Tuesday night and ending Friday night. This conference is being arranged by T. E. Griffin of Washington, D. C., who has chosen this field for his ministerial work.

The conference is proposed as medium for strengthening churches in this section. On the program each night Griffin has arranged for students from Baptist schools of the state to present special programs.

Infirmary List

Thirteen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: Ralph B. Cheek, P. W. Markley, Mary Waldo, L. A. Dalton, Jisaku Fukusato, L. L. White, G. C. Kyker, C. C. Hartman, Jr., Jimmy Craig, J. S. Smith, T. S. Eddleman, H. A. Ginsberg, and Albert McMillan.

The managerial force of the football team announced yesterday that the equipment office in Kenan field house would be open this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

World News Bulletins

School Bill Deferred

With opponents of the McLean eight-months school term bill declaring that the measure will be defeated and with the backers of the bill admitting no weakening of support, the state Senate voted yesterday to defer any vote or debate until the House adopts an appropriations measure.

Rally 'Round the Kaig

Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat, yesterday predicted the signing of the beer bill by Monday night, thus assuring the country of beer by April 4, but the House rejected the Senate amendments to the measure and sent it to conference. Doughton of North Carolina was one of the representatives appointed to the House group by Speaker Rainey.

Increased Power for Roosevelt

President Roosevelt will get an opportunity Monday to sign a bill giving him the broadest powers ever conferred on an executive by Congress—power to cut Federal expenditures by half a billion. The power is given in the economy bill which passed the House Thursday by a vote of 373 to 19.

Farm Bill Delayed

The Senate agriculture committee decided yesterday that the Roosevelt farm measure was a revenue bill, and that as such it must originate in the House, while farm leaders were declaring that delay on the passage of the bill would be fatal. This opinion was expressed by seven farm organizations which joined in a statement demanding immediate enactment of Roosevelt's bill.

More Banks Reopen

Thirty-two banks in all parts of the state were yesterday added to the list of those which have satisfied the State Banking Commissioner of their soundness and which have been allowed to resume operations after the banking holiday. Of the 379 banks in the state, 192 have reopened for business.

HERTY DISCOVERS METHOD TO MAKE NEWSPRINT PAPER

Process of Former Chemistry Professor at University Will Make Paper From Pine.

Dr. Charles H. Herty, former professor of chemistry in the University and national leader in chemical research, has discovered a process for making newsprint paper from pine trees, it was learned here yesterday.

For several years Dr. Herty has been striving to develop a process by which the vast pine forests of the south might be utilized as a source of supply for newspaper publishers. By his discovery he has succeeded in making newsprint from pine only seven years old, whereas spruce, the present source of supply, must be forty years old.

Product Weighs Little

One of the greatest merits of the new product is strength combined with light weight. In comparison with spruce paper, publishers will receive better than six per cent more sheets per ton of pulp and mailing costs will be diminished at the same rate by the use of Dr. Herty's discovery.

If realized, the production of newsprint from pines is expected to be the source of vast new wealth for the south.

DAUGHTER OF ENGLISH PROFESSOR MARRIES

Early last Saturday morning, at her home on the Gimghoul Road, Miss Rosalie Thrall of the library department was married to Mr. Colin Carmichael, instructor in the University engineering school.

Following the wedding breakfast, they set out upon their honeymoon. They are back in Chapel Hill now and are living with Mr. and Mrs. Thrall.

Rev. Ronald Tamblin performed the ceremony. Besides the parents of the bride, there were present Miss Christine Carmichael of Canada, the groom's sister; Miss Velma Matthews, Miss Alma Holland, Miss Georgia Faison, and Miss Elizabeth Hailey.

House Votes On Bowie Bill Tomorrow

BILL WOULD CUT UNIVERSITY FUNDS FIFTEEN PER CENT

Resolution Would Reduce Funds Granted to Greater University to $644,800.

TILLET MAKES SURVEY

By Don Shoemaker
With only the items of highways, prisons, and public schools left unchanged in the first reading of the Bowie-Cherry substitute for the appropriations bill, the House will meet as a committee of the whole tomorrow afternoon for a second reading of the bill. Effecting drastic "economies," the Bowie-Cherry bill was introduced Thursday by Tam Bowie and R. Gregg Cherry as a substitute for the appropriations bill.

Appropriation Figures

Under the new bill, the State-wide appropriation bill of $83,000,000 is slashed to a new figure of approximately $73,000,000. Under this proposal, the grant for the Greater University is set at $644,800. The committee bill carried this figure at $832,000. Other educational institutions would be cut to: E. C. T. C., $77,900; Negro A. and T., $21,000; Appalachian, $40,000, etc. The actual difference between the Bowie-Cherry bill and the committee bill for all educational institutions is $239,000, while the difference between the first-mentioned bill and the

Governors Have Paid Homage To University Work

State's Executives Have Urged That Cause of University Never Be Sacrificed.

The following are excerpts from statements by past governors of the state, concerning the value of higher education to the state:

Governor Daniel Russell, Biennial Message 1901:

"A strong and efficient University is essential to the State's educational system, and the University must be generously supported if this State is to go forward."

Governor Charles B. Aycock: Biennial Message 1903:

"It (the University) has done a great work. It touches the life of the State at every point." Message of 1905: "The efficiency of instruction must not be sacrificed, nor can the State afford to turn students away from its doors."

Governor Glenn: Biennial Message 1907:

"Its (the University's) work for the higher education of our young men, and in sending forth each year men of strong bodies, trained minds, and clean morals, will prove a great factor in making the future wealth and prosperity of the State. I recommend an increase in the annual appropriation. Message of 1909: (Continued on page two)

Debaters To Discuss Japanese Situation

The debating squad will meet tomorrow in Graham Memorial at 9:00 o'clock. Professor W. A. Olsen will preside at the meeting.

The subject of the discussion will be "Japan and the Far East" in preparation for the debate with Georgia Tech on the subject, "Resolved: That Japan's interest in Manchuria and the Far East is the same as that of the United States in this hemisphere."

Two debates with Georgia Tech and Boston University are scheduled here when the high school teams from various parts of the state come to debate March 31.

SUMMER SCHOOL TO OPERATE TWO TERMS THIS YEAR

Dean Walker Says Faculty Is Practically Volunteering Services to Continue Work.

The University summer school will operate two terms this year, as has been the custom since 1923, notwithstanding rumors to the contrary, Director Nathan T. Walker announced today.

Dean Walker attributed the misleading rumors to the fact that no appropriation from state funds for the summer school had been set up by the Advisory Budget Commission. Because of this fact, he explained, plans have been greatly delayed.

He said that the faculty of the University, feeling that it would be a great mistake to abandon the summer school even temporarily in this time of dire emergency, have practically volunteered their services in order to keep the summer terms going on the high plane they have attained.

Complete details as to courses to be offered and instructional staff will be announced in a bulletin now being prepared, he said.

PLAY TO BE READ BY MRS. HOLMES

Few plays produced on Broadway elicit such praise as Rose Franken's Another Language, which Mrs. Urban T. Holmes will read in the Playmakers theatre tonight at 8:30 o'clock, as the March number of the Playmakers series of monthly readings. Mrs. Holmes is considered an accomplished and experienced actress, and it is expected that the play will be thoroughly enjoyed in her interpretation.

For several weeks last summer Another Language was the only legitimate play running in New York, a distinction which almost no other dramatic work can boast.

After the play established its great popularity in this country, it was given a London production, with Edna Best and Herbert Marshall in the leading roles.

A State Of Campus Emergency

—AN EDITORIAL—

Similar to the national difficulties of 1917 and March 1933 when a national emergency was declared by federal authorities, THE DAILY TAR HEEL declares today for the University of North Carolina a state of campus emergency. The battle that must be waged during the next few days is against a common enemy of the State and University, the Bowie-Cherry bill.

The student body will convene tomorrow morning in Memorial Hall for the second time in two weeks. In the first meeting the student council and the University administration called on the undergraduate body to suspend plans for the regular Spring holiday. The question of the hour was a way out of the banking difficulty, which struck the first blow of the month against the individual members of the student body. Today, with a situation of virtual warfare before us, a state of campus emergency exists, and undergraduates must mobilize to combat a common foe.

In this battle the administration is helpless unless the wholehearted cooperation of the student body is assured. The fight belongs more to the undergraduates than to the administration, for the dreaded Bowie-Cherry bill will bring repercussions through two generations, though most vitally affecting the present generation of college students. But the fight against "economy" is not one adopted solely for the interests of the Chapel Hill Branch of the University of North Carolina. It is waged in behalf of all State institutions and governmental departments.

However, under the present appropriation, the unofficial allotment to the University must fall in the approximation of $330,000, according to the figures of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. This figure plunges the University into a state of almost economic extinction.

The key note, however, must be faith and organization. A state of campus emergency undoubtedly exists. If the spirit manifested by the student body in the recent holiday moratorium is displayed in the present crisis, the battle lines will engulf the forces of perverse "economy"—D.C.S.

Standing For The Whole State

—AN EDITORIAL—

Although every appropriations measure introduced into the present session of the General Assembly has been mercilessly meagre in its grant to the University of North Carolina, those who have defended this institution have not spoken for the University alone. The University is not selfish. It would not starve any other institution in the state to satisfy what its enemies claim to be its own inordinate appetite. Rather, all the University's spokesmen take their stand with President Graham to fight for public schools, public health, public welfare, and efficient departments, "the very agencies of civilization," in North Carolina.

Our position is taken for the whole state. All who represent us stand for the whole state. For example, it was a University graduate, a former football star, who made an impassioned plea Friday in the General Assembly for fairer treatment of Negro institutions in the allotment of funds. As much as the University of North Carolina wishes to maintain its standards of service to the state and the nation, its spokesmen are also taking a stand for the protection of all worthy departments of the state's activity.

Not only can the University not hold up its head against the vicious attacks that have been leveled against it, but no other state institution can maintain a respectable existence without adequate funds. The parents of North Carolina have sweated, slaved, and sacrificed to keep their children in school during this period of ravaging depression. It is not to be believed that they will now, in these days of hysterical action, countenance any doubtful "economy move" to deprive their children of the educational facilities that they have purchased for them at the price of economic chains and slavery.—E.C.D.

IMMEDIATE ACTION NEEDED

If the onslaughts against the University in frantic and doubtful "economy" measures now before the General Assembly in Raleigh are to be repelled, immediate action from every loyal Carolina student is needed. Below are suggested ten-word telegrams to be sent as soon as possible to parents and friends and to state Senators. If the University is to maintain its existence, the Bowie-Cherry bill must be stopped in the Senate Tuesday. Immediate action is needed.

Telegram to parents and friends: Defeat Bowie bill. Save University by telegrams to Legislators immediately.

Telegram to Senators: Counting on you to oppose false economy of Bowie bill.

On the back page of this paper is a petition which every student should sign and mail to his state Senator at once. Immediate action is needed.

Dr. Alden Alley Will Speak Here Tomorrow

Dr. Alden G. Alley, professor of history at Dana College in Newark, N. J., and prominent teacher and student of international affairs, will lecture on "International Relations" tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Dr. Alley has traveled extensively in Europe for the past several years studying the important problems confronting Europe today. He has had close associations with statesmen and international organizations in various parts of the world and comes to the University campus well prepared to discuss his topic. His visit here is sponsored by the local Y. M. C. A.

COMMITTEES TO CONVENE TODAY WITH OFFICIALS

President's Call Important Meetings to Assist in Opposition To Appropriation Cuts.

Urgent meetings of the executive committees of all four University classes have been called for tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

The executive committee of the senior class will meet in room 210, the junior committee in 211, sophomore in 212, and the freshman in 213. The officers of the classes will attend these meetings.

At a meeting of the class presidents Lindy Cate, Red Boyles, J. D. Winslow, and Frank Rogers, Saturday, it was decided to call this meeting in order to assist the student council in preparation for the student body meeting Monday morning and generally to rally the class forces in opposition to the Bowie-Cherry bill.

The chairmen of the executive committees, Dan Kelly, John O'Neal, Charles Bond, and Butler French, are requested to assist the presidents in forming plans for the work of the committees.

TRY-OUTS ARE SET FOR PLAYMAKERS

Further try-outs for the forthcoming Junior Playmaker production, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, will be conducted at 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon in the Playmakers theatre. Any ambitious young actors and actresses who were not present at the first try-outs are welcome to join the troupe tomorrow.

An elaborate production of the Arabian Nights story will be presented by the Junior Playmakers during the latter part of April. Rehearsals will be begun after the next try-outs.

The Playmaker theatre was the scene of juvenile gaiety yesterday morning when several dozens of Chapel Hill youngsters gathered to hear Harry Davis read his version of Ali Baba. Selection of the cast was not completed.

STUDENT BODY TO MEET TOMORROW FOR CONVOCATION

Mass Meeting Called to Mobilize Students in Fight Against Appropriation Slashes.

GRAHAM WILL GIVE TALK

By E. C. Daniel

Students of all three divisions of the University of North Carolina are mobilizing to help defend the University against the ruinous attacks of the so-called "economy forces" of the General Assembly who would unmercifully slash the University's appropriation for the coming biennium.

In Chapel Hill, Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall, the entire student body will assemble, at the request of the student council, in their second mass meeting within two weeks. President Frank Graham will explain the appropriations measures now pending in the General Assembly and their probable effect on the University. Student body-President Weeks will present the plan drawn up by campus leaders for student participation in the University's fight for existence.

Program Announced

In yesterday's DAILY TAR HEEL, the program for immediate action was announced. Students were urged to write, wire if possible, people in the state at once urging them to exert their influence on the state senators to defeat the Bowie-Cherry bill, passed on first reading by the House of Representatives Friday night, which would reduce

Transactions Of Legislature Said To Be Merciless

Legislators Let Verbal Brick-Bats Fly as Bowie-Cherry Bill Fight Continues.

Verbal brick bats flew back and forth in the state legislature when the Cherry-Bowie bill was under consideration. The story of the procedure in yesterday's Greensboro Daily News is exceedingly bitter in tone, declaring, "It was as ruthless a job as any resident Methuselah ever observed and some notable horse traders have been in the general assembly of North Carolina."

Here are some of the significant statements made by representatives:

Harris Newman from New Hanover: "Fair play possibly would be the best course for this House to pursue."

D. Emmerson Scarborough from Richmond: "The man (Tam Bowie) who led the fight for $165,000,000 highway system shouldn't be here cutting off the chance of North Carolina's youth for a higher education."

R. O. Everett from Durham: Quoted indirectly as saying that the forces seeking to destroy the University were not actuated by motives of economy, but rather to destroy the University because it has dared to stand for liberal thought and progress against powerful reactionary

One Last

Fighting Chance

Having come to the aid of the University so effectively in the postponement of their usual spring holidays, the students now have the privilege of doing an even greater favor for the institution by soliciting their parents' support in pleading the cause of education to the members of the Legislature. If the members of the student body in their letters home this week will urge upon their parents the effect that the Bowie-Cherry bill is likely to have on the future of North Carolina's education, and point out to them the influence they can bring to bear by personal letters and wires to Legislators in bringing about a sane and lenient consideration on this measure, the students will possibly be able to help avert an untimely death to the cause of higher education in this state.

To many students this may sound like a foolish move on their part. But when they stop and consider the effect that even one or two votes might have in the final roll call on the bill in the Senate, they will realize that anything that they can possibly do to help in these times will be well worth trying. It is a critical moment for North Carolina's education, and nothing should be left undone in attempting to avoid what appears to be a certain catastrophe for the Greater University as well as the entire educational system of this state.

The champions of education lost their first fight on the floor of the House of Representatives. Yet their rivals still have a long road to travel before they can claim victory. If the friends of education in the state will but come to the aid of these Legislators who have been fighting for the educational cause, and use their power in bringing other members of the Legislature into the folds of the education group, the proponents of the Bowie-Cherry bill will certainly taste defeat before the smoke of battle has cleared away. And, what is more important, the Greater University will be saved from certain disaster.

Of Defeat, Love, Hate, and Fear

The fate of the Greater University and the vast system of public and secondary school education that has made North Carolina famous in the southland, having already felt what Mr. Tom Bost describes as the "Bowie knife," will be thoroughly scalped, skinned, and hung up to dry tomorrow afternoon in the Senate, unless the breaking ranks of the sympathetic rally to the flag. In their efforts to save North Carolina from a sales tax, Messrs. Bowie and Cherry feel that Gabriel has sounded the golden horn of individualism. The old order, led by these two gentlemen, yields not to the new. The efforts of the younger and apparently more conscientious solons have been repulsed and beaten back to the third line trenches.

But there are some people in North Carolina who seem to share the nervousness of Mr. Bowie and his esteemed colleague whenever such a politically sacrilegious term as "Sales Tax" is breathed abroad. An open forum letter in yesterday's edition of the Raleigh News and Observer expresses these sentiments: "The Governor in his address to the Legislature made reference to Bainsfeather's famous war cartoon, 'The Better 'Ole,' implying thereby if the legislators knew of a better way out of the tax difficulty to go to it.

"Nothing can be done about the present hole. It is already dug. The present problem is to keep it from getting bigger. The most sensible thing to do would be to invite everybody into the whole with us—Governor, legislators, officeholders, highwaymen, pedagogues, and even the fond parents of the dear little children, everybody—and then lie quiet for a spell waiting for the sunrise or the deluge. . . . Honorable Sheriff, when you come to get your money don't bother about going through our pockets. Just throw dirt on us where we lie—in the hole."

This is characteristic of the defeatism of a too large portion of the citizenry. It is apparently the sentiment of a large group of those who represent the people in Raleigh. It personifies the whipped dog attitude that pervades and stagnates the social mind of many North Carolinians, once impervious to degradation.

The administration of the University does not point to any particular solution for revenue. It merely presents its needs and rests its case. But speaking independently from the standpoint of editorial policy, it is apparent to us that a sales tax is inevitable. "I loathe sales taxes," said Governor Ehringhaus in a special message to the General Assembly several days ago that must go down in history as a fearless declaration in the midst of a yapping pack. The Governor loathes the sales tax, but his love for the state in his charge transgresses hate.

In the Assembly both hate and love give way to fear. They yield to the fear of that group which has sold its birthright for a defeated complex.—D.C.S.

Abolishing Hell Week

In a few days "Hell Week" will be in full swing at Carolina, as the various chapters attempt to unify their freshmen, or try to make their neophytes more receptive to their formal initiation. The new more mature attitude of college men will slowly bring about the discarding of an institution whose validity has been disproved many times. Carolina, which often prides itself on its sophistication, would do well to rid itself of Hell Week or at least substitute some new system which would be more constructive to both the pledges and the members. Other college papers have annually decried the present theory practically unanimously, a fact which should carry much weight with the older men of the fraternities, on whom rests the continuance of the present tradition.

At Wisconsin the Daily Cardinal has been waging a commendable campaign against the tradition, both because of a sincere feeling against it and because of injuries which two freshmen received during the process of Hell Week. The Daily Cardinal comments: ". . . The effect of 'Hell Week' is great, even of isolated cases where little harm is done. Continuance of Hell Week is suicidal from every point of view." The Michigan Daily is less drastic in its comment, although fully as convinced as to the worth of the custom. This middle-western paper says: "What is needed now is a movement to abolish entirely this outworn affair in favor of a system that will mean more to the neophytes and will not subject them to the barbarities they are put through at present." In agreement the Daily Nebraskan remarks: "Where remnants of these dangerous practices exist they should be squelched by the most vigorous means."

The Green and White suggests a sensible substitution for Hell Week activities, in commenting: "If we must have them then let the fraternities accomplish some useful improvements in their property during the . . . period of humiliation." Our neighbor in Raleigh, the State Technician, definitely states that "The college and the fraternity would be on a better plain if it were known that this outworn pastime is no more." In New York state the Syracuse Daily Orange sums up the situation on the Syracuse campus remarking: "Insofar as it goes, Hell Week most certainly does not justify itself. Its redeeming qualities, if any, are meager and rare, despite aged rationalization." Perhaps one of the most pertinent remarks and one that drives home the insignificance of Hell Week as a constructive measure is the comment of the M. I. T. Techs "Hell Week, like conversation on the depression, is becoming unpopular."—G. R.

A Noble Experiment

A scientifically minded Winnepeg student, while attending a lecture, was desirous of noting the effect of fire upon brilliantine and promptly applied a lighted match to his neighbor's hair with a flaming result. In an interview the victim of the experiment remarked in crisp tones, "Vell, I should worry. I saved two bits, the price of a singe." The miscreant announced ardently, "It was in the interests of science. I would do it again if I had to."—McGill Daily.

(NSFA)—An enterprising Carnegie Tech engineering student, who spends his idle hours tinkering with a short wave set, received a calculus problem which was too difficult. Exasperated, he finally appealed for help over the air waves. The solution promptly came back, dictated by a student at the University of Texas.—Michigan Daily.

STUDENT BODY TO MEET TOMORROW FOR CONVOCATION

the appropriations of the Greater University 64.4 per cent as compared with the peak figures of 1928-29.

It is the belief of students now in charge of the student-body University defense campaign that "the parents and influential friends of students whom they can enlist will be to defeat the Bowie-Cherry bill before it passes the senate." But, immediate action is necessary. This bill will probably reach the senate Tuesday. "It must not pass." That is the tenor of the student-body campaign.

Elsewhere in this paper are suggested ten-word telegrams for students to send to parents and friends and senators. President Haywood Weeks urges students to send these telegrams at once, or, what is more desirable, go to Raleigh Monday to call on legislators with whom students or their parents might have some influence. On the back page of this edition is printed a petition which all students are requested to sign and mail at once to their legislators in Raleigh.

Meeting shortly after noon yesterday, the student council and the presidents of the four classes discussed future measures through which the students could combat the intolerable Bowie-Cherry bill. A decision was quickly made to call special meetings of the Interfraternity Council, with presidents of all the fraternities, and of the Dormitory Council to enlist all possible students in a campaign of petitions, letters, and telegrams to parents, influential friends, and legislators in an effort to ward off the impending "economy" landslide that would wipe the University off the educational map of the nation. The Interfraternity and Dormitory Councils met last night.

The resolution of the student council reads as follows: "The student council, convened in special session, being aware of the danger from proposed reductions in appropriations now threatening the University, resolves to call a mass meeting of the student body at chapel period Monday, March 20, 1933. President Frank Graham has accepted the invitation of the council to speak on this occasion." Special meetings of the law, medical, and pharmacy schools, of the individual undergraduate classes, of the woman's association, and of the graduate school may be called later to supplement the efforts of the mass assembly.

Similar campaigns to enlist student aid in the appropriations battle are underway at State College in Raleigh and the Woman's College in Greensboro. Hurrying to Greensboro and then back to Raleigh, student-president Weeks met with a favorable reception to his program from Mark Wilson, student body president at State, and Margaret Plonk, at the Woman's College.

Important Luncheon Tomorrow

An important luncheon meeting of the Administrative and Student Advisory Boards of the Student Welfare Division will take place tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. All members of both groups are urged to attend.

Branson Praised by Bailey

Few, if any, men have rendered as great service to North Carolina as the late E. C. Branson, Senator J. W. Bailey said Friday in commending an editorial tribute to Branson in the Greensboro Daily News.

GOVERNORS HAVE PAID HOMAGE TO UNIVERSITY WORK

"Money spent in educating our boys and girls yields the greatest of all dividends to the States."

Governor Kitchen, Biennial Message 1909:

"I therefore recommend that you ascertain the legitimate urgent needs of our institutions, charitable and educational, and that you properly provide for them, taking care that no backward step is taken and that they be not crippled or unjustly handicapped in the performance of their duties to the public. (and in a Proclamation) We should economize in almost every other way, but in God's name let there be no stint in education or religion."

Governor Craig: Inaugural 1917:

"Our institutions of higher learning must be sustained in their full vigor and efficiency. If we should allow them to begin to degenerate, our whole education system would begin to lose its vitality and power."

Governor Morrison: Inaugural 1921:

"We must make the State's University, the Agricultural and Engineering College, the N. C. C. W., the Teachers Training Schools; every one of its institutions for higher learning; adequate to discharge the glorious opportunities which our progress places before them. We must not look upon this as a liability and financial difficulty. It is our State's greatest asset."

Governor McLean: Biennial Message 1925:

"Whatever curtailment there must be in the general activities of the State on account of lack of revenue, education and particularly the public schools, must not be neglected."

Governor Gardner: "Our institutions of higher learning, the University, the State Colleges, and the Teachers Training Schools, are the crowning glory of our State educational system."

Governor Ehringhaus: In pre-convention speech:

"I would not favor the cause of education carrying the burden of budget-balancing. Teachers' salaries are now at bottom level."

forces.

Basil M. Boyd from Mecklenburg: Quoted indirectly as citing his own education at Wake Forest as a demonstration of the feasibility of reducing the cost of state higher education.

Representative Thompson: "I value the health of North Carolina's people of more importance than the views of the merchants associations or any other association on the sales tax."

J. S. Massenburg from Polk: "I can tell you why the Negroes are left out. They aren't represented here. Their vote doesn't count."

Deacon Barden from Craven: "I would be derelict in my duty if I sat still in this House and saw things carried on that I cannot justify in my own conscience. They make changes as they see fit, without rhyme or reason. God only knows I hope they can justify them in the final analysis—I certainly cannot."

Speaker Harris from Person: Quoted indirectly as describing the proceedings as being about the rawest business he had ever observed in the legislature.

Revamped Regulars Win Extra Inning Game From Yannigans

Leonard Delivers Bingle in Tenth to Score Berry and Regulars Win 8-6.

CROUCH GOES FULL ROUTE

Pitches Ten Innings for Yannigans; Tatum Clouts Homer; Dixon Leads Hitters.

Coach Bunn Hearn shifted his baseball squad around yesterday afternoon in an effort to uncover any new combinations. The regulars, showing some new faces, scored two runs in the tenth frame on Dutch Leonard's hit which drove in Berry, to break the 6-6 tie and win the game.

Fred Crouch worked the entire ten innings for the yannigans, being the first Tar Heel pitcher to go the full route this season. The stumpy right hander gave up eleven hits in the ten innings, walked nary a one and fanned five.

Joe Griffith worked for the regulars and with the exception of one bad inning, the fifth, when he gave up one bingle, walked three men and allowed five runs to slip by him. Griffith was off form yesterday, having trouble with his control from the start. He yielded to Andrews late in the game.

Tatum Hits Homer

Jim Tatum clouted the only home run of the day, smacking a powerful drive into deep left-center in the fourth inning for the regulars. Virgil Weathers connected for a triple in the third for the regulars. Temple and Matheson for the regulars, and Dixon, for the yannigans, all garnered doubles to end the extra base clouting.

Big Jim Dixon also bagged a pair of singles to grab hitting honors for the day with three bingles in four efforts.

Another Week's Work

Coach Hearn has another week of work before the opening game of the season and in that time he should iron out the few rough spots in the play that were noticeable yesterday. Several mental miscues were committed by members of both teams which proved costly in each case.

The first team yesterday showed an infield with Temple on first; Weathers, second; Leonard, shortstop; and Matheson, third. Vick, Peacock, and Croom were the outfielders. Tatum and McCaskill did the receiving.

The second team had Dixon on first; Harrell, second; Phipps, shortstop; and McKinnon, third. Farrell and Parker divided the catching.

BILL WOULD CUT UNIVERSITY FUNDS FIFTEEN PER CENT

1932-33 appropriation is $1,170,150.

Under the budget recommendation, which with the appropriation bill was discarded, the substitute bill makes the drastic cut of 15 per cent.

Tillett's Survey

The original figure submitted to the appropriations committee by President Graham several months ago was $691,000. This contemplated a salary cut of 10 per cent. Charles W. Tillett, Jr., of Charlotte, at the behest of Governor Ehringhaus made a survey of the University appropriation and returned a figure of $596,000, which contemplated an additional salary cut of five per cent. This figure, however, was set at an absolute minimum to merely hold the University together. In his investigations he revealed that Henry Burke, Assistant Director of the Budget, had figured

ANNUAL PRACTICE OPENS TOMORROW

Seventy Prospects Will Report For Winter Football Practice at Kenan.

Carolina's second and last part of the annual winter football practice is scheduled to begin tomorrow afternoon on Kenan Field. Coach Chuck Collins issued a call for seventy prospects to report, the list being published in last Friday's DAILY TAR HEEL.

Practice will take place for the next three weeks, probably finishing with the usual Monogram-Rookie battle. As yet, the type of work the squad will do is unknown. Each man out will likely receive individual attention and several practice games will probably be played.

Among those receiving the call were two new prospects for the varsity. Platt Landis, conference heavyweight boxing champion, who has not been out since his freshman year when he starred at fullback, has been called. Babe Daniels, big center, who was a sensation in winter football last year, but was not out last fall due to an injury will also report.

Winter practice usually takes place in only one session, beginning about the middle of January and lasting until the afternoon of the Southern Conference Indoor Games which is run off on the first Saturday in March. This year the practice was broken up into two sessions as a result of the consistently bad weather which kept interfering with the early part of practice.

incorrectly in registration and per capita cost of student education. Thus, reasoned Mr. Tillett in an address to the appropriations committee, if per capita cost were taken into account in arriving at the suggested appropriation for the University, the suggested figure of the Budget Bureau should have been about a third more. Thus were the figures and date on education here in Chapel Hill plunged into increasing turmoil as the budget and appropriations committee bills were refused by the House, later to give way to the Bowie-Cherry bill.

The per capita cost of education at the University of North Carolina is one of the lowest in the nation, and the lowest of universities belonging to the American Association of Universities.

Terrific Slash

Allowing for the present economic condition, however, the administration has waged constant war to keep the institutional cuts in North Carolina from straying below the forty-five per cent mark. The cut already is 64.4 per cent.

The situation was more recently clouded by the allotment bill for the present quarter, which makes an immediate cut of from fifty to ninety per cent in operating expenses (and salaries) through the next three months.

It was understood by representatives of this publication, through mere speculative sources, that the chances for the bucking of the new "economy" bill are infinitely better in the Senate than in the House. Though the motives of the backers of the new bill are thought to be a mere shying from the necessity of a sales tax, yet other motives are suspected. Meanwhile every effort is being expended to influence the votes of legislators through appeals from parents, students, and influential citizens.

INTRAMURAL RACE IN BASEBALL AND TENNIS TO BEGIN

Spring Program Will Open Tomorrow With Many Events Scheduled for Week.

Beta Theta Pi, which snared the campus net leadership by a win over Everett in the finals last year, plays its first match Wednesday against Kappa Alpha while Everett meets Mangum earlier the same afternoon. The schedule for tomorrow follows:

Baseball
3:45—(1) Manly vs. Swain Hall; (2) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

Nation's Leaders Decry Proposals To Cut University Appropriations

Plight of University Evokes Expressions of Sympathy From Prominent Men in Country; Legislature Censured Severely For Actions Towards Funds for Higher Education.

The plight of the University of North Carolina, along with her sister institutions, the public schools, departments, and agencies of health and welfare, which are threatened with irreparable damage and almost annihilation in some of the proposals for appropriation cuts that have been made to the General Assembly, has evoked expressions from numerous leaders throughout the country, who without any desire to tell North Carolina what it should do about its own institutions, wish to emphasize the esteem and reputation in which the University is held among people everywhere.

Extracts From Letters
Extracts from some of these expressions, which have been received by President Graham and others, follow:

F. P. Keppell, president of the Carnegie Corporation: "The people of the State have the responsibility for maintaining the University at Chapel Hill, but that University is almost as much a national institution as is the Library of Congress."

Walter Lippman, author and editor: "The University is one of the important centers of American intellectual life, and would be not merely a loss to North Carolina, but to the whole nation if its work were seriously interrupted."

Owen D. Young: "The friends of education everywhere will especially hope that no tragedy may come to the great University of North Carolina."

Charles A. Beard, historian: "A disaster to this University would be a deep injury to the cause of civilization in the United States."

A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University: "The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is known all over the country for the good work that it has been doing. It is one of the universities that ought not to be allowed to come to grief... The State and the country will be much poorer if Chapel Hill suffers a severe reverse."

Angel's Petition

James R. Angell, president of Yale University: "The University of North Carolina had won for itself an enviable position as one of the truly great universities of the United States... I cannot believe that it (i. e. the financial situation) is so serious as to justify the ruin of what is by all odds its (the State's) most significant achievement."

Newton D. Baker: "I am deeply concerned at the shrinking support which the State has given and is proposing to give to the University and I venture to write this expression to you in the hope that it and like words from friends of the University scattered throughout the country will be a challenge to the statesmanship of your Legislature to preserve the priceless progress the University has made."

Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly: "I am a Massachusetts man, and I should hesitate to speak, but I, too, have a stake in North Carolina. I sent my son to the University of North Carolina because my friends at Harvard College assured me that the South has not another like it, and, in simple truth, it hasn't. A hundred years have gone into the making of your University, but the last two decades have brought it to a peculiar ripeness."

MATRIMONY CLUB OFFERS PLOT FOR SHOW TOMORROW

"Grand Slam," Starring Paul Lukas and Loretta Young, Plays Here Tuesday.

"Strictly Personal," a Paramount film featuring Edward Ellis, Louis Calhern, Dorothy Jordan, Eddie Quillan, and Marjorie Rambeau, will be the first feature of next week at the Carolina, showing tomorrow.

The film has its action set in a matrimonial club where Romances and Juliets meet, instead of merely corresponding by mail. The club is conducted along highly ethical lines by an escaped convict, Edward Ellis, and his wife, along with their ward, Dorothy Jordan. The character of the harmless matrimonial club changes radically, however, when a racketeer, Louis Calhern recognizes Ellis and, under threat of exposure, forces himself in as a partner.

Calhern devotes his attentions to an apparently wealthy widow. When she confesses she is actually penniless, he kills her. The pictures reaches a climax in his attempt to force Dorothy Jordan to flee with him and place the blame for the murder on Ellis.

"Grand Slam," featuring Paul Lukas and Loretta Young, is the attraction for Tuesday. The film is a sparkling comedy about the great American sport of bridge, dealing with a hilarious bridge tournament.

Other shows for the week are "Fast Workers," with John Gilbert and Mae Clark, on Wednesday; "Broadway Bad," featuring Joan Blondell and Ginger Rogers, Thursday; Constance Bennett in "Our Bette" on Friday; and the famous comedy team, George Sidney and Charles Murray, in "Cohens and Kellys in Trouble" on Saturday.

University Battles Vital Reductions

CONTINUAL FIGHT HAS BEEN WAGED AGAINST SLASHES

Departments Will Receive Only Approximately Fifty Per Cent of Allotment This Quarter.

The movement on the part of the University to convince "economy-minded" members of the General Assembly that the University of North Carolina cannot stand gorging cuts in appropriations, as recently proposed, is a part of the battle against reductions that the University has been waging for the past two years. Accompanying this article is a graph, charting the fall of appropriations allotted to the University by the State Legislature from the fiscal year 1928-29 to the present. In order that this graph may be completely understood, it is necessary to know more of the history of the fight, particularly since 1931.

In 1931, the Advisory Budget Commission set its recommendation for the University at $573,000. This the appropriations committee raised to $875,000, then voted off $75,000. The House voted the University $724,000. On April 16 of that year the State Senate raised this figure to $800,000, but on April 24 a compromise figure of $759,000 was sent to the House. This figure the House reduced to $721,000, and it was this amount which finally passed the Senate.

More Cuts

In December of the same year the budget bureau, finding that the state revenues were by no means balancing expenditures, made drastic cuts in allotments with respect to state agencies and institutions. The actual amount received by the University that year was $525,000, approximately seventy-eight per cent of the voted appropriation. At the beginning of this fiscal year the allotment for the University at Chapel Hill was made by the budget bureau was $504,000, a thirty per cent cut from the actual appropriation. Thursday night it was announced that all state departments would receive an average cut of approximately fifty per cent of this allotment for the final quarter of this year.

Graph Showing Appropriations Made Over Several Years

Present Case

To bring the history of the appropriations up to date, in 1933 President Graham asked for $691,000 for the University. The budget bureau made a recommendation of $391,000, a cut of almost fifty per cent over the figure requested by Dr. Graham. The joint appropriations committee made, after a great deal of deliberation and discussion, a final recommendation of $426,000, which was reported into the House as a part of the biennial appropriations bill. Then the Bowie-Cherry substitute bill, cutting the committee's eighty-three million dollar recommendation for the next biennium to seventy-two million was passed, the Greater University's appropriation was cut to $644,800. This sum, for the Greater University, is smaller than the amount recommended by President Graham for the University at Chapel Hill alone.

Should appropriations for the University at Chapel Hill be based on the same proportion as appropriations recommended by both the budget bureau and the joint appropriations committee, the University would receive approximately three hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

It is interesting to note that though there are nearly a thousand more students at the University in Chapel Hill than at N. C. C. W., yet the appropriation voted N. C. C. W. in 1931 was approximately forty-five thousand dollars more than this University will receive this year, should the Bowie-Cherry bill go through.

A PETITION

TO THE LEGISLATURE OF NORTH CAROLINA:

In the long-range light of history, what will be the judgment of future generations on the present action of the legislature?

Will it be said that a far-sighted, intelligent, and courageous body of men acted in time of crisis for the welfare of their state by saving the cause of education, or will it be said that a near-sighted, blundering, and fearful body of men, blinded by a passing emergency, wantonly destroyed the most precious possession of their state?

Will that long-range judgment of history praise a Legislature that, in spite of the unbelievable exigencies of a terrible depression, preserved the one single means the State had left with which to rebuild herself, or will that long-range judgment of history condemn a Legislature that plunged the State into an educational abyss of protracted darkness because of a passing crisis?

Will history record it that the Legislature of the State of North Carolina fought its way outward and upward with the aid of well-educated sons, or will history record it that the Legislature of the State of North Carolina sank downward and backward and carried the State with it?

We cannot go forward by going backward.

Education alone is the only safe insurance against social and economic disintegration of the future.

Education alone can unravel the sorry knot the thread of human life has been tied into in these past few years.

Trained intelligence can prevent recurring depressions and still retain our present complicated social system. Choose, then, between education and the primitive society of yesterday! Human society, never static, must either go forward or backward.

The cause of education offers hope for the future.

The present appropriations bill offers regression.

The youth here represented in the University of North Carolina want to make progress, they want to do their best to make this world a fairer and a happier place, and they want a fair start with an adequate education.

They appeal to you to give them a fair chance, a fair start.

They appeal to your patriotism as the chosen representatives of our people not to crush every shining ideal of Youth, every gleaming hope of the future.

They appeal to your memory of your own youthful ideals.

They appeal to your sense of duty for the future.

They beg you to look into the future when you reconsider the death sentence for the University.

Let not the last stronghold against social disintegration be destroyed from within! Rather, let us work our way out of this mess together. Let the Legislature and the University join forces in a common cause. Let us realize that the good of each is for the good of the State, for the People. And let us realize that the weakening of one means the weakening of the other, of the State, and of the People.

Youth must not be betrayed now. The world needs new blood, new hearts, clear minds, trained brains. To betray youth is to betray yourself and your constituents. We need you now; you need us in the future. For the mutual benefit of all concerned, give us a fair chance, a fair start.

The long-range light of history will not measure the action of the Legislature in dollars and cents. History will measure its action in human values and by the yardstick of social progress or regression. That is the issue, and the future welfare of your State hangs in the balance.

Purdue Union Gives Free Dance Saturday

(Big Ten News Service)

Lafayette, Indiana, March 18. —In the midst of the financial crisis and while many organizations were calling off dances and similar functions, the Memorial Union at Purdue University came to the rescue of the stranded social lights by throwing the regular Saturday night dance free of charge, last week. Because many persons not connected with the University come to the dances when admission is charged, the free admittance clause was accompanied by the requirement that a registration card be presented for admittance.

President Graham Urges Concentrated Opposition To Bowie-Cherry Bill

"We Are Standing for the Whole State," Dr. Graham Tells Student Body.

WEEKS ASKS STUDENT AID
President of Student Body Implores Students to Enlist Parents' Support.

"We are standing for the whole state. We gather here not to attack anybody, not to impeach any man's motives," President Frank Graham told the student body of the University, assembled in Memorial Hall yesterday morning, at the request of the student council, to hear plans proposed for its participation in a state-wide campaign to defeat the Bowie-Cherry substitute appropriations bill which had its second reading in the House of Representatives last night.

Having outlined the manifold program that was carried out Saturday and Sunday by the student council and the class presidents to marshal the forces of University students and their families and friends, President Haywood Weeks of the council, acting as chairman of the meeting, implored students to send telegrams home at once. "If you haven't got thirty cents, send them collect," he said. "Ask your parents, friends, and relatives to wire their representatives in Raleigh before 3:00 o'clock this afternoon, when the Bowie-Cherry bill will come up for its second reading. There is a possibility that the bill may be stopped today. If not, we will continue our fight in the Senate."

DAVIDSON GROUP TO VISIT CAMPUS

Special "Y" Deputation Team Will Arrive Saturday for Week-end Activities.

A special deputation group of ten or twelve cabinet members from the Davidson College Y. M. C. A. will visit the local "Y" organization this week-end. The team will arrive Saturday evening and will stay through Sunday.

Sunday morning the Davidson group will take charge of the Student Bible class at the Presbyterian church at 10:00 o'clock. At 11:00 o'clock Rev. Ronald Tamblin will preach a special short sermon addressed to the cabinet membership of both Davidson and Carolina.

Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the parlor of the Presbyterian church there will be a discussion meeting concerned with reports of the various departments and phases of the work of the Carolina Y. M. C. A. At 7:00 o'clock that night in the Presbyterian church Sunday school room the Davidson team will have charge of the regular student forum and conduct a program. This meeting will take place of the regular cabinet meeting for next week.

All members of both cabinets are invited to meet the members of the Davidson team and take part in the program arranged for them.

Nine High Schools In Spanish Contest

Nine state high schools have entered the annual interscholastic Spanish contest which takes place throughout the state March 23, according to E. R. Rankin of the extension division who is conducting the competition.

The test will be of a practical nature, enabling the student to show what facility he has acquired in handling Spanish verbs, grammar, and reading.

The schools entered are Durham, Fayetteville, Gastonia, Lumberton, Raleigh, Staley, Rocky Mount, Winston-Salem, and Charlotte. Gastonia high school was the winner of the contest last year.

OFFICIALS START FIGHT BY ATTACK THROUGH COUNTIES

Representatives From Each County to Direct Students From Each Section.

Pressing the attack on every front, the officers in charge of the student campaign to repulse the advances of the "economy" forces in the North Carolina General Assembly called upon students from the individual counties of the state to mobilize for action early Sunday night. In the student government office, lists of students according to counties were prepared Sunday afternoon. One representative of each county was appointed chairman of his group and given the duty of seeing that each man in the group wired home at once for aid in influencing the legislature.

The central objective was the Bowie-Cherry bill which came before the House of Representatives for its second reading yesterday afternoon. On its first reading, Friday, the bill, sponsored by the "economy" bloc of the House as a substitute for the appropriations committee bill, was passed by a margin of ten votes, with eighteen members not voting. It was the hope of the education forces of the state to halt this measure, which would devastate the public and higher education systems, yesterday afternoon.

Alumni at Work
Friends and alumni of the University worked frantically all over the state Sunday and Monday to arouse sentiment against the drastic "economies" in the Bowie-Cherry bill. Meanwhile, campus leaders at the Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Greensboro branches of the University were using every available means to enlist the students and their people at home in the fight.

DI SENATE TO DISCUSS TWO BILLS AT MEETING

The Di Senate will discuss the following bills at the weekly meeting tonight in New West building:

Resolved: That the Di Senate go on record as favoring that the State of North Carolina manufacture fertilizer and sell it to the farmers at cost.

Resolved: That all public utilities be owned and controlled by the Federal Government.

WIRE HOME IMMEDIATELY

Response to the appeal for student aid in petitioning the General Assembly for a living-wage appropriation for the University has been satisfactory. However, leaders of the movement say, the fight is not yet won. The flood of letters and telegrams flowing into the assembly chambers in Raleigh must be kept at full tide until favorable action is taken by the legislature.

Those students who have not yet wired or written home asking their parents and friends to wire, in turn, to their representatives in Raleigh should do so at once. The success of this movement depends upon full and complete cooperation from every student. The fight Monday was concentrated against the passage of the Bowie-Cherry bill on its second reading. Whether this bill is defeated or passed, the battle is far from ended. There is still time for every student to make a contribution to the campaign.

Delay no longer. Wire or write home immediately.

Collier Cobb, Author And Scientist, Celebrates Seventy-First Birthday

Head of University Geology Department Is Seventy-One Years Old Today; Has Encountered Numerous Interesting Experiences During Long Career as Geologist.

Today Dr. Collier Cobb, former head of the geology department of the University, educator, author, distinguished scientist, and one of the "grand old men" of the campus, celebrates his seventy-first birthday.

No one who has ever had a class under Collier Cobb can forget that experience. It would be impossible not to remember the unique introduction with which his classes begin. The first lecture consists of calling the roll, which Dr. Cobb supplements from his inexhaustible store of recollections. Students not steeped in the Cobb tradition were amazed to hear reminiscences of their various families related with the charm that forms so definite a part of the legend of Collier Cobb.

World-Wide Recognition

His fame is not confined by territorial boundaries, as he has made a special study of the shore lines of Europe, Asia, Africa, and South America. That his reputation is international in character might well be illustrated by a story told of Dr. Cobb's advice to a friend who went to Paris. He told his friend that, should he get into trouble with the French police, he was merely to inform the authorities that he was an acquaintance of Collier Cobb. In typical American fashion, the friend ran afoul of the Parisian gendarme. Handled rather roughly, he protested that he was an American citizen, which announcement produced little effect. Remembering the humorous bit of advice given him, the American added that he was a personal friend of Collier Cobb.

"Oh," replied the gendarme, "you know Collier Cobb aussi? Je vous demande pardon, monsieur."

Dr. Cobb's renown is further attested by the numerous learned associations and societies of which he is a member. Among these societies are: the Geographical Society of America, Association of American Geographers, American Institute of Mining and Metallic Engineers, Mining and Metallurgical Society, American Association of University Professors, the Eliza Mitchell Scientific Society, the North Carolina Academy of Science (president 1906-07), and Sigma Xi.

Sought as Spouse for Eskimo

Another of Collier Cobb's claims to distinction lies in the fact that he is one of few Americans who have been invited to become the husband of the wife of an Eskimo tribal chieftain. It seems that the latter wanted his

Meeting Of Union Forum Called To Discuss Question Of Holiday

With the view of getting full student opinion on the question of spring holidays which were postponed two weeks ago, a special meeting of the Union Forum has been called for tonight by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body. The gathering will take place in room 214 Graham Memorial at 8:00 o'clock.

In announcing the meeting, President Weeks made a special request that all dormitory presidents call meetings of residents of their respective dormitories for the purpose of ascertaining that each floor is represented at the Union Forum. These meetings, he suggests, could be called at 7:00 o'clock tonight and allow time for consideration of the matter.

He has also requested that the head of every fraternity instruct the organization's representative to be present at the meeting after having discussed the question of vacation with members of the society.

Three plans for spring vacation have been advanced so far. The first is that holidays this year be given up with the idea of saving students' money and completing school a week earlier.

A second plan offered would grant an extended week-end beginning Saturday, April 15, and lasting through April 17 or 18.

The third idea proposed is a nine-day vacation beginning Saturday, April 15, the day before Easter, and extending through Sunday, April 23. Objections to this plan are based on the disruption of athletic plans of the University scheduled for the week or the necessity of the athletic association's spending several hundred dollars to keep athletic teams in Chapel Hill.

President Weeks last night expressed the importance of full student representation at the meeting tonight so that the student council can make recommendation to President Graham on this matter.

Forum Patrons Meet In Gerrard Today

Patrons of the Open Forum lecture series presented here this winter will meet this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall to consider the presentation of the series planned by the League of Industrial Democracy for next season.

The six lecture discussions planned for next year will be on the most pertinent national questions. Unemployment, ownership of public utilities, and European and Asiatic trends are among the topics arranged by the League committee.

According to the local committee, requests for the series have been made by numbers of the winter quarter patrons.

PHILOSOPHY HEAD RECEIVES TWENTY AWARD REQUESTS

Applications for Fellowships Included from Oxford, India, Harvard, Pennsylvania.

Professor Henry Horace Williams of the philosophy department announced yesterday that twenty potential applications for the two Kenan fellowships in philosophy for 1933 have been received. Professor Williams declared that interest in the fellowships has been growing steadily as manifested by the diversity of places from which applications were received, including Oxford, India, Harvard, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

The two fellowships were established in 1921 by Mrs. Graham Kenan and are supported by the income from an endowment of twenty-five thousand dollars. They were inaugurated in memory of her husband who was an alumnus and trustee of the University.

Rewarded for Work

As Professor Williams explained, the fellowship appointments are made on the basis of work submitted. There are no requirements except one: the fellow is expected to do a piece of work that deserves publication. Mrs. Katherine Gilbert, a recent holder and professor of philosophy at Duke University, made a study of Maurice Blondel and her book is regarded as the outstanding production in English on the subject. Dr. Liddell, professor of philosophy at Florida and holder of the fellowship, is to publish this summer a study of Nicholas von Cusa.

It is the hope of the philosophy department that a school of thought may result from the foundation similar to such schools in New England and other northern colleges and universities. At the present there is no such school in the south.

FIRST GRAIL OF QUARTER SET FOR NEXT SATURDAY

The first dance of the spring quarter sponsored by the Order of the Grail has been set for Saturday night, March 25, it was announced yesterday.

The affair will take place between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 o'clock in the Tin Can with Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra furnishing the music.

Four Items Remain for Discussion on Second Reading of Substitute Measure.

UNIVERSITY NOT DEBATED

House Will Meet at 11:00 O'clock Today to Take up Remainder of Proposal.

By Don Shoemaker

Though four major items remained for discussion on the second reading of the Bowie-Cherry economy bill, among them the schools and universities, formidable opposition developed in the substitute proposal brought forward Thursday to take the place of the appropriations committee bill voted down at a preceding session.

The highways, schools, agriculture, and public debts come before the House this morning at 11:00 o'clock.

Eloquently defending what he believes will save North Carolina from an "odious sales tax" Gregg Cherry of Gaston harangued the House for two hours and a half last night in a desperate attempt to get his economy measures through in toto. He was bucked twice, once on the matter of charitable and correctional institutions and again on the question of Civil War pensions. It was the first indication that the Bowie-Cherry forces had lost their potency.

Though the opposing forces were without their leader, Representative Newman, the prophesied bloc was sufficiently organized to manifest a surprising show of strength. On the question of pensions, which the gentleman from Gaston would cut ten per cent, the House, under the oratorical admonition of Revised Constitution of Organization to Be Considered by Entire Membership.

There will be a meeting of all members of the Young Men's Christian Association in Gerrard hall Monday night, March 27, at 7:00 o'clock for the purpose of considering a revised constitution which is to be presented and of nominating officers of the association for next year. Nominations for the four association officers will be closed at this meeting. Elections will take place about the middle of April.

This meeting is called not only for cabinet members and officers but also for all members of the local "Y." The regular weekly cabinet meeting usually held in this hall at this time has been changed to 7:00 o'clock Sunday night in the Presbyterian church Sunday school room. The Davidson deputation team will conduct the program for the cabinet meeting.

Caldwell to Speak

Dr. W. E. Caldwell, of the University history department, will be the speaker at the weekly Bull's Head meeting at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. He will review The Greek Way by Edith Hamilton and will touch on other works of a classical nature.

At Least Don't Tear Down

All the true spokesmen for the University in the present campaign for a fair appropriation have reiterated their doctrine of standing not for the University alone, but for the state as a whole, for every agency of public welfare and service in North Carolina. Yet, there are specific reasons why the University should be given an appropriation that will at least keep it from falling deeper into the valley of the shadow.

1. It is unreasonable to expect that any institution with a large plant to maintain and certain fixed charges to meet can, without severe damage, absorb cuts amounting to 64.4 per cent of its peak appropriation, given at a time when its student body was smaller than the present.

2. It took more than a generation for the University to acquire its present capable personnel. Good teachers and good research men can get twice the salaries they are even now getting at institutions of equal rank with the University. Further reductions in the salaries here threaten to drive those who have made the University what it is out of the state; they cannot be brought back.

3. Without a doubt, the University is nationally recognized, by great men in every field, as the foremost institution in North Carolina. To impair its efficiency would be to destroy the greatest claim to national leadership that North Carolina now has.

4. Efforts to effect such drastic "economy" moves as are now in progress in the state legislature have all the earmarks of hysterical and hasty action. They show a bewildering lack of confidence and faith in present leadership and in the promise of the future. Almost certainly, inflation of some sort will bring a rising price level within the next two years and that will leave the University still in the depths of depression, if its appropriation for the next biennium is too greatly cut. It will be the orphan child of North Carolina in the next generation.

The University stands ready to assume its just share of the burden of economic re-adjustment in North Carolina. But, its spokesmen do not believe that soundness of state life in the future should have—or can have—its surest foundation on the debris of institutions indiscriminately razed by a legislative wrecking-crew. At least, if we cannot build up, let us not tear down all that is left of the state's greatness and glory.—E.C.D.

At What Price Economy?

Unhappy is the state that intrusts the administration of its affairs to such irrational men as many of those who are now in session in Raleigh. Urged on by a blind and impetuous zeal for tax reductions, the economy moguls have made sharpe incisions into the vital organs of higher education in North Carolina, which threaten to bleed the patient to death. They have shown an utter disregard for the happiness and well-being of future generations by attempting to stifle the forces which, more than any others, would have prepared them to be intelligent, healthy-minded and fearless citizens.

It is inconceivable that the citizenry of the state have intended any such severe chastisement for their most illustrious child. Surely they would not willingly see an institution which has so long been a source of so much pride on their part, die from lack of nourishment, or, at least develop an ailment which would take many generations and much care to bring to health again. Such a verdict is not the will of the citizens of North Carolina. They called for a sensible check up on expenditures which were not absolutely necessary; the economy bloc in the legislature, headed by irresponsible leaders, has carried economy to the point where it becomes foolish and absurd, on the grounds that the people want economy.

Like the physicians of old, these modern economic surgeons know nothing about scientific methods. Their repertoire of remedies consists solely of drawing blood. Such antiquated practices can not be allowed to continue. Those of us who have relatives in the legislature should use all our influence to make them see the injustice they are wreaking of education in general and the University in particular.—W.A.S.

All in This Game Of Politics

Politics is a strange game to the initiated, but to the uninitiated it is beyond comprehension. Political strategy and the spirit of "you black my boots and I'll black yours" seems to be the ruling force in the political arena even in the issues where the future of a generation lies at stake.

Two years ago in the hectic 141 day session of the North Carolina General Assembly, Tam Bowie, arch-enemy of the cause of education and liberalism in the present session, was one of the most ardent advocates of a state-supported educational system. Although the Gentleman from Ashe was not at that time a member of the Assembly, he spent many days in Raleigh during its battle and was active in support of the McLean law to relieve the ad valorem tax burden on the land, and he gained quite a reputation as a successful lobbyist.

But now the curtain is raised on a new act and the actor is wearing a new masque. Political observers marvel that Mr. Bowie, now a member of the Assembly, has turned about and is doggedly fighting the 1933 McLean plan to effect an average of 35 cents reduction in the ad valorem burden through a state-supported school term.

Not only has Mr. Bowie become an ardent anti-educationalist but he has been energetically doing a little political dickering with powerful textile interests of the Gastonia district through their representative in the Assembly, Gregg Cherry. Cherry has long been a consistent and dyed-in-the-wool opponent of a sales tax in any form, but his reconciliation with his erstwhile enemy has brought some lifted eyebrows. Political aspirations, it would seem, can often time make strange bed-fellows.—V.C.R.

Educated, Organized, Yet Unemployed

The unemployed college graduates of a nation have apparently ceased to bewail their fate and instead are now seeking, through organization, to mobilize their numbers and begin a definite campaign for jobs. The result of the movement has been the recent formation of an Association of Unemployed College Alumni. Headed by the internationally famous John Dewey, the Association numbers among its sponsors Morris Cohen, Reinhold Niebuhr, Norman Thomas (the last two have visited the University as speakers on several occasions), and scores of other liberal thinkers.

Its program includes a wide range of activity. Its avowed objects are to influence favorable social legislation, to advocate planned industry and employment insurance, and to force the government to provide its members with work, rather than with charity.

The Association has as its headquarters a suite of rooms in New York City, donated to the cause by the League for Industrial Democracy. While not directly connected with the League, it is significant that the budding student movement should have its name linked with it. In a sense, the motives for the organization of the Association of Unemployed College Alumni are comparable to those which actuated the formation of labor unions. But whereas labor has found organization expedient to increase its bargaining power, professional talent, it seems, now finds it necessary even to get a job.

But too much cannot be expected of the Association's initial endeavors. Its growth will be slow and many years must pass before it can reach the full fruition of its potentialities. If we have not forgotten in coming years of prosperity the spectre of unemployment, the development of this organization should provide a real assurance to college graduates that their years of training have not been spent without the prospect of reward.—A.T.D.

Life and Letters

The Sad Case of Mary Smith

Mary Smith is a person of more than fragmentary intelligence who grew up in a home somewhat more comfortable than the average. She went to college as a matter of course and was graduated at the tender age of twenty. She expected, being a rather independent person, to make her own livelihood after graduation, but she had given no particular thought to the manner whereby she would earn her daily bread. Graduating before the first terrific hurricane of the depression had spent itself, she found herself jobless after three months of job-hunting. So she applied herself diligently to the stenographic arts. She happened to know a professor who knew another professor who had a position of authority at an eastern university. By virtue of a slight pull Mary got a secretarial job in the department in which she had done her major work, packed her clothes, and departed for the old North State. The salary was to be $125 a month which sounded quite adequate.

When Mary arrived in that famous little southeastern college town where is situated the country's oldest state university and looked about for a suitable place to live she was puzzled by the seeming absence of apartments within the reach of working girls. And those she did find, only partially and shabbily furnished, rented for no less than a third of her monthly salary. And as all good economists know, only one-fifth of one's income should go towards paying for the roof over one's head. When she realized that in addition to the high rental she had to pay her own gas, electric, ice, and maid-service bills, she became aware that $125 a month in Chapel Hill will not buy as much as $125 in a city of 50,000 inhabitants or more. Mary was the kind of a girl who had to have a livable place in which to live, so she decided she could get along without any new clothes for a while.

That was the beginning of Mary's sacrifices. Word came from home that the bank there had failed, that her brother was jobless, and that the baby needed new shoes. Mary took the hint and wired $25 home. Being a rather generous person, she has on the first of every month since then sent home a check for either $25 or $30, leaving to be spent as she saw fit around $100 a month until the 10 per cent salary cut inflicted upon state employees by the 1931 legislature went into effect. After that she had only eighty-some-odd dollars a month at her disposal, and the necessities of life required an expenditure of approximately $60 a month. She continued to write cheerful letters home, saying everything was just grand and that life was still well worth living. Further salary cuts, amounting in all to 28 per cent, reduced her salary to $90 a month. She was still sending money home. In fact, she was now the only member of her family who was working. Rents had been reduced a little, it was true, but not in like proportion to salary reductions. By cooking her own breakfasts and suppers Mary managed to reduce her living expenses.

Mary came to Chapel Hill three years ago, full of hope and ambition. She took inventory recently. She had enough money in the bank to last until she gets another pay check. She has no life insurance, no savings account, no investment of any kind. Her clothes are still largely made-overs, most of her dresses dating back to undergraduate days. She is now wearing glasses. She let her teeth go too long and is having bridge-work done. Having foregone her annual physical examination, she is wondering what that tired feeling she has all the time signifies.

She is now faced with another salary cut. But she has made up her mind. She is going home. "If I can get a ten-dollar-a-week job there I'll have more money to spend than I have here," she said. "If I can't get a job I can at least starve gracefully."

Her case is unusual only in that she is quitting.

P. S.—This isn't personal. It's a composite case study.

Secession

Our State Department reports that there is little substantiation for the rumor that the counties of Mecklenburg and Gaston will secede and form a separate state. There is some talk, however, of selling them to South Carolina. Stand by for a proclamation over this hiccup later in the evening.

Naughty

A radio editor writes of the difficulties of a prominent national figure during the presidential inauguration who was making an address over a coast-to-coast chain from the rostrum of the Senate chamber in Washington. Before the speaker was aware that his microphone on the stand had been connected, he fumbled for some of his notes and muttered in none too gentle tones, "Where in the world (sic) did I put those blamed (sic) things, confound it." His words were relayed, of course, to twenty million people.

All of which reminds us of two similar occasions when the calamity of a speaker found its way to other ears unwittingly. At the Wake Forest game, several years ago, the announcer who follows the plays up and down the field and calls them in to the public address system in Kenan stadium remarked to his assistant, sotto voice, "See that tackle, what in the &!& is his number." He spoke just loud enough to make everybody blush.

And then there is the story of the radio story telling man, who had just finished a particularly sickening adventure of Peter Rabbit for his juvenile listeners. Thinking that the microphone had been disconnected, he remarked "There, I guess that'll fix the little &?&*."

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To Editor of

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

In Saturday's TAR HEEL the column, Autopsy, by Mr. Berryman was not in harmony with proposed methods of meeting the present crisis. In such a situation we must all bear a part of the unpleasant results even though they often inconvenience us. For Mr. Berryman's information, the postponement of the Spring holidays necessitated such an arrangement by the University Laundry Department. It was a matter of business to require each student to show his Spring registration slip before getting his laundry; however, in many cases bundles were given out without the slip. "The huge ugly sign—Refunds Will Not Be Made Until Close of Bank Holiday—" was not very unusual for the time. Since refunds are always made by check, they would have been of no value during the bank holiday.

We think that Mr. Berryman could spend his time more profitably by omitting personal attitudes toward insignificant things and considering something more pertinent.

Three Positions Still Unfilled As Practice Draws To Close

Catcher, First-Baseman, and Shortstop Not Yet Chosen
From Applicants.

With the last full week of practice before the opening game with Washington and Lee next Tuesday ahead of them, the Carolina baseball team still has three uncertain positions. Merry battles for the catcher's berth, first base, and shortstop are being waged daily.

Four men are leading the race for the backstop job at present. Norman McCaskill, a letterman shifted from second, Jim Tatum and Red Matheson, two reserves from last year, and Profest Strayhorn, last year's frosh receiver, are the four leading candidates. Joe Parker and Farrell are two other dependable receivers who may see action.

Johnny Phipps and Dutch Leonard are waging the hottest battle over the shortstop job and at the present, Phipps should be given a slight edge. Leonard has shown an improvement in his hitting, however, and should this continue, he may oust the taller and heavier Phipps. Over at first another close battle is going on between Jim Dixon and Tommy Temple. Dixon is a letterman from last year, though he played then in the outfield. Temple is out for his first year but he is an upper classman. Temple has a powerful batting eye but lacks Dixon's experience around the initial sack. Dixon should get the call with Temple being held in reserve. The latter should get plenty of chance to play due to his excellent batting so far this season.

Captain Willie Powell and Vergil Weathers, two veterans will cover third and second respectively and are looking especially good. In the outfield, Coach Hearn can pick his gardeners from an experienced bunch. Croom, Brandt, Peacock, and Hornaday are all letter outfielders, and then there is Gene Zaiser and Vick, two promising sophomores.

AROUND the FIELD

By
CLAIBORN M. CARR

ACCORDING TO MEMBERS of the Duke's spring sport teams, Carolina hasn't a chance to win any of the spring contests. For some unknown reason about four Devil varsity tennis men came over here recently spreading a lot of stuff about how badly they were going to trounce our racketeers. These haughty Devils even went down on the courts and broke the news to Coach Kenfield himself. "Our number one man will beat Hines, and the rest of the Carolina team will fold up," was about the way the talk went.

WILMER HINES WILL TAKE care of any man they can dig up at Duke. Last year Hines met Welch, their tennis idol, in the state tourney semi-finals and allowed him about three games during the whole match. Of course Barney may have improved, but look at the room there was for improvement. After Wilmer come Lenoir Wright, Harvey Harris, Harley Shuford, Dave Morgan, Walter Levitan, Ricky Willis, John Dillard and Ike Minor. These bab-

GOLFERS PLAY TO SET LINE-UP IN COMING CONTEST

Captain O'Brien and Smith Lead
Play in Qualifying Rounds
For Richmond Battle.

For the past few days the varsity golfers have been playing qualifying rounds over the Hope Valley course to determine who will represent Carolina in the season's opening skirmish against Richmond University, Thursday. Saturday in one of the qualifying rounds it was Captain Billy O'Brien who set the pace. O'Brien scored a 72 on the difficult Hope Valley course.

Each candidate must play three rounds before Wednesday, and the men with the four lowest aggregate scores will fill the positions on the team for the first match. Several men have completed one or two of their rounds, and their scores are: Alan Smith, 75-74-149; Billy O'Brien, 79-72-151; Carl Cramer, 77-78-155; Erwin Laxton, 79-79-158; Fred Laxton, 82-83-165; Henry Bridges, 77; Will Sadler, 77; and Wilson Coffin, 76.

National Intercollegiate Boxing Association Meets at Penn State For Rule Revision.

Coach Bob Fetzer has returned to the University after attending the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing championships at Penn State last Friday and Saturday.

During the same period that the boxing matches were being run off, the National Intercollegiate Boxing Association held a meeting. Coach Bob also attended the boxing meeting, held by the leading men among collegiate boxing circles in the United States, and brings back a report of the meeting.

The main question brought before the gathering was that of rules and regulations. A subcommittee was appointed to study these and formulate new definite rules which will be put on the same basis as the national collegiate football rules; that is, rules which all the colleges in the United States will go by in holding matches between two different colleges.

The subcommittee is scheduled to bring their report to a second meeting of the boxing association which will take place also at Penn State during the time of the annual Penn Relays.

WINTER PRACTICE RESUMED TODAY ON KENAN FIELD

Coach Sapp Puts Squad Through Work-out in Absence of
"Chuck" Collins.

Yesterday afternoon on Kenan field Carolina's football squad held its first practice of the second part of winter football. Forty-five reported, regardless of the bad weather.

Due to the absence of Coach Collins, Coach Sapp took charge of the initial workout. The practice consisted mostly of limbering-up drills and passing, in order to get the players in proper shape before hard work is undertaken.

The coaches plan to keep the football squad out three more weeks before quitting until next fall. During this time the members of the squad will be given individual attention in an effort to iron out the various faults of the candidates for the 1933 eleven.

The majority of the squad which reported yesterday were freshmen and without doubt they will be the making of next year's eleven. Babe Daniels, giant center, who is scheduled to go far among Southern Conference players, was out and ready to go. Daniels did not play last fall due to an injury.

GROWING

ILLUSION:

The magician exhibits a flower pot with hinged sides on a table in the center of the stage. He opens out the sides to show that this container is empty. Closing it up, he places a screen between it and the audience. After a short period of magic incantations he removes the screen. The astounded audience sees a beautiful girl, covered to the shoulders in lovely flowers, rising from the "empty" container. Where did she come from?

EXPLANATION:

The girl was hiding behind the drape of the table. There is a trap door in the bottom of the flower pot, with a hole large enough to allow her to crawl through. The flowers, called "magicians' feather flowers," are a regular part of a magician's outfit. The flower girl wears a rubber tunic and a bathing cap to keep the flowers compressed into small space. She slides the tunic down and the flowers expand when she emerges.

A trick frequently worked in cigarette advertising is the illusion that mildness in a cigarette comes from mysterious processes of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobaccos require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobaccos.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

That is why Camels are so mild. That is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet"... their cool flavor... their non-irritating mildness.

Give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction of the more expensive tobaccos.

CONTEST WON BY WILSON STUDENT

Woodrow Harrison Takes First Place in State Latin Contest Held February 24.

First place in the annual state-wide Latin contest for North Carolina high schools which took place February 24 was won for the Wilson high school by Woodrow Harrison, according to an announcement by E. R. Rankin, contest secretary, yesterday. The competition was sponsored by the University extension division and the Latin department.

Papers submitted by 368 students representing thirty-five high schools were judged by a committee from the Latin department consisting of Professors George Howe, G. A. Harter, Ship G. Sanders, and Van Courtlandt Elliott.

Honorable mention went to Mary Fort Carroll of Wilson, Wilsie Bussell of Durham, Mary Cathren Walters of Durham, Caroline Riggs of Wilson, and Billy Hudson of Chapel Hill. Taking first, second, and fifth places, the Wilson institution had the highest average of any school entered in the contest.

Other schools submitting at least one paper with the grade of 90 or better included Charlotte, Fayetteville, Gastonia, Louisburg, and Winston-Salem.

Bowie-Cherry Ranks Are Losing Strength

Hamilton of Carteret, rallied 'round the grey and voted down, 75 to 23, the proposal that the veterans be cut ten per cent on seven hundred thousand dollars. This was the test vote on the substitute bill strength, and although the sections of the bill in general carried, it showed that there remain only twenty-three "stand patters" in the rapidly retreating substitute bill ranks.

The friends of state institutions were enthusiastic in their prophecies that the re-opening of the case for the schools would strike a different tenor in the House this morning. The efforts of students and the constituents interested in the education cause outcropped in the general sentiment expressed by many members of the House.

Merchants Oppose Bill

The "odious sales tax" was the subject of a tirade from the backers of the economy bill, who apparently see in it the doom of North Carolina. It was significant, however, that the Merchants Association of Raleigh declared in a full page advertisement in a Raleigh afternoon newspaper yesterday that "We DO oppose the evils of a Sales Tax, but, if our choice lies ONLY between this measure and the injustice of further reduction of appropriations for state institutions, we unqualifiedly endorse the former as the lesser of two evils." It was signed by all of the principal merchants of Raleigh, and is the first indication that the bug bear of sales tax is rapidly becoming a harmless kitten.

If the Bowie-Cherry bill is defeated on the final items of its second reading this morning, it is likely that the original appropriations figure of $832,000 for the Greater University will be reconsidered. The present bill advocates a dole of $644,800 to the three institutions, and it was evident yesterday in the lobbies that the discussion of this item in the bill will be subject to drastic revision or discard in this morning's session.

President Graham Urges Opposition To Bowie-Cherry Bill

Graham followed Weeks. Reviewing the occasions of the past when the student masses had mobilized to defend and support the University, President Graham reminded the assembly of the part played by students in re-opening the University after the Civil War; in securing adequate classroom and dormitory facilities for a greatly enlarged student body after the World War in 1920-21; in coming to the aid of the University last year when $200,000 was lopped from its budget, when almost every student started, with gifts of $5,000, a loan fund that grew to $100,000, keeping over 500 boys in school; and in giving up their holiday two weeks ago in order that the banking crisis might not force the closing of the University.

"This morning, we gather not to attack anybody, not to impeach any man's motives," President Graham continued. "There are good men and true on the other side. They are standing for North Carolina as they see it. We, too, are standing for North Carolina—for its public schools, its public health, its public welfare, for its institutions, for government itself." Emphasizing this point, the President urged students to send word home "to save, to save, money, institutions; save the schools, save the state." Liking the University to a light-house, he said, that it "cannot be destroyed, cannot be struck down."

Explaining that present measures in the legislature would reduce the University's appropriation to a point 64.4 per cent below the 1928-29 level, President Graham reached the climax of his address with the statement, "If they don't give us a dollar the University will be here next year." He was answered with prolonged applause.

Paying tribute to the sacrifice of faculty and students in maintaining the standards of the University in the face of drastic appropriations cuts, President Graham declared that the great men of the nation were shocked at the treatment which this institution has suffered. "The people of the state are not going to have their children cheated by giving them something cheap and counterfeit," was his declaration of confidence in the parents of North Carolina. "People all over North Carolina are busy today, covering the counties, fighting to save the state." Concluding his address, President Graham told the story of how the letters of one woman, Cornelia Phillips Spencer, had saved the University after the Civil War; comparing this campaign to that one, he expressed the belief that the students then assembled in Memorial Hall had the potential power to save the state.

One welcome announcement made by President Graham was that the spring holiday, postponed because of the banking crisis, would take place around Easter.

ies can wield that racquet and any team, especially Duke, in the east to aspire to conquering them, is mighty optimistic. We know we haven't got Bryan Grant, number two ranking intercollegiate player, and our captain back, but still, why should we holla?

DUKE WILL HAVE TROUBLE with our golf team also. Last year the Tar Heels beat the Devil diggers in two dual meets, and for the conference title, but lost to them in the state tournament. Still the season's score was three to one. We have the same men back and then some. The present squad has been working hard preparing for its first stiff match against Washington and Lee next Tuesday. This contest ought to be a honey with Billy Howell, national star and Walker Cup player, pitted against Carolina's number one man, Alan Smith, always a great money player. Besides Smith, Coach Kenfield has Carl Cramer, sophomore flash, who turned in a thirty-one for nine holes at Hope Valley last week. He came in with a thirty-eight for a total of sixty-nine. Not bad. Captain Billy O'Brien, Erwin Laxton and Brother Fred, and Will Sadler are all trying hard to qualify in the three round competition staged on the squad to determine the four low men to meet Washington and Lee.

CAROLINA HAS A YOUNG baseball squad but it is taking shape rapidly and should give a good account of itself against the stiff opposition scheduled. Duke is having a lean year on pitchers as we are, although they have Bobby Coombs and Lefty Flohr as a nucleus. The Devil jinx on the diamond should be overcome this year. Willie Powell, Vergil Weathers, Jim Dixon, Johnny Peacock, Jim Griffith, Bill Croom, and Lamy McCaskill are the chief reasons Coach Coombs may have a headache.

SERGEANT KELLER HAS AN unerring knack of telling when a base runner missed the bag. Yeah man. Sarge never misses them either. Jim Tatum clouted a homer the other afternoon and started around the bases. He touched first and second but strode right over third. Several players on the bench noticed the error but there was some argument as to whether or not he actually missed the bag. Johnny Peacock turned and yelled to Sergeant Keller who was in the stands, "Did he touch 'em all Sarge?" The Sergeant shook his head and held up three fingers. He never misses that kind.

The Raleigh chorus has been organized by the state federation in connection with the program of the national organization to popularize choral music and choral festivals throughout the country. Professor Dyer reports that in this connection more than one hundred choral festivals have been scheduled for performance before June.

Union Forum Votes For Nine-Day Spring Vacation

Only One Dissenting Ballot Is Cast as Group Chooses
Plan for Holidays.

GATHERING CALLED TO GET STUDENT OPINION

Vacation Beginning April 15
And Lasting Through April 23 Is Plan Favored.

With only one dissenting ballot cast, the Union Forum, at a meeting called in Graham Memorial by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, last night voted overwhelmingly in favor of a nine-day spring vacation beginning Saturday, April 15, and extending through Sunday, April 23.

The meeting was called for the purpose of getting full student opinion on the question of spring holidays which were postponed two weeks ago. The delegates had been instructed to ascertain the general opinion of the students they represented and to vote accordingly. President Weeks declared after the meeting that it was one of the most representative bodies that he had ever presided over.

Explains Plans

President Weeks opened the meeting with an explanation of the three proposed plans for holidays and of how a vacation at the present time would affect the spring sports program. He said that a vacation would mean that the University athletic association would have to pay the expense of keeping the baseball, tennis, golf and track squads here during that period.

The nine-day holiday as proposed would interfere with fifteen athletic events while the extended week-end from the Friday before Easter through the following Wednesday, suggested

ARTICLE PRAISES PLAYMAKER WORK

Director of Dramatics Writes of Koch and Green in Duke University "Archive."

Professor F. H. Koch and his work with the Carolina Playmakers receive unusually favorable recognition in the March issue of the Duke University publication, The Archive.

In this article entitled "Drama in the South," A. T. West, Duke director of dramatics, made the following statement:

Outstanding Achievement

"The work of Professor Koch and his Carolina Playmakers is by far the most outstanding achievement in the story of the modern theatre of the United States. The Playmakers have built here on their own campus a tradition of the drama to be found nowhere else in the world unless it be in the work of the Irish Players from the Abbey theatre.

"Adhering for the most part to native scene, character and incident they have written several volumes of published one-act plays and innumerable others which they have performed with success throughout the section, and on occasions in New York.

"Their chief contribution lies in the interest developed in original writing and the attention focused upon the people and the lives of the common folk so

Plans For Mangum Contest Under Way

Plans are being made to award the Mangum medal for oratory this year as usual to the senior who delivers at commencement the oration adjudged best. Seniors interested in competing should see Professor G. F. McKie of the English department for details of the contest.

The award was established in 1878 in memory of William Parson Mangum by his daughters, and has since been continued by Mrs. Stephen B. Weeks, Mangum's granddaughter, and by his great-grandson, Julian Turner.

First winner of the award was Judge Robert Winston. Among later winners have been the late President E. K. Graham, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme Court, Judge J. J. Parker, and the Hon. Thomas C. Bowie, present sponsor of the Bowie-Cherry appropriations bill.

HOBBS ANNOUNCES NEW REGULATIONS

Rules for Re-Admission Require
Student to Pass Two Courses
Preceding Quarter.

A complete announcement of the change in re-admission requirements in the University for next year was issued yesterday by Dean A. W. Hobbs of the school of liberal arts. The new rules will affect all University students.

Beginning with the fall quarter of 1933 the requirements for re-admission of a student above a freshman rank will be that the student successfully pass two whole courses, or the equivalent, during the preceding quarter. If any work must be taken in summer school, or through correspondence, the number of courses needed is increased by one. Thus if a student should pass only one course this spring, to be eligible to return next fall he would have to pass two courses in summer school or by correspondence. This two-course rule will be the only rule relative to student re-admission applicable to students above the freshman year.

Freshman Rules

Another phrase of the rule states that freshmen will be required to pass at least one subject during their first quarter, even though it is only a half-course. They will not be eligible for a second quarter here if no courses are passed in the first. After the second quarter, freshmen must pass at least two courses in two successive quarters and five in three to be eligible to continue. The same regulations regarding the make-up of deficiencies in summer school or by correspondence apply to freshmen as to others.

Eligibility for athletes, except for freshmen, will be as follows: the student must pass seven full courses during the preceding year, and two courses during the preceding quarter. Thus, if a student is a member of a certain sports team during the winter quarter, he would have to pass seven courses counting that quarter before he would be eligible to compete on that team the following year.

CONTINUANCE OF BATTLE AGAINST SLASHES URGED

Campaign Shows Good Effect, But University Still Has
Hard Fight Ahead.

Confident that student action is being felt by the state legislature in the Bowie-Cherry coalition's attempt to reduce educational and institutional appropriations drastically, student leaders at the University yesterday asked that all students and organizations "stand by" in readiness should further unfavorable action toward the University and sister institutions be attempted.

According to opinions expressed yesterday, the student movement started last Saturday by the student council, executives of the classes, and the interfraternity and dormitory councils, has "had a good effect on the legislature."

Hard Fight Ahead

Yet, it was pointed out yesterday, the University still has a hard fight on the legislative floor to gain anywhere near the appropriations impartial observers think it should have for adequate operation.

Student leaders also expressed pride yesterday in the quick mobilization of the student body when it appeared that the Bowie-Cherry substitute proposal to reduce the biennial appropriations for the University to $330,000, a 64 per cent cut from the peak figure in 1929, and other state educational and charitable institutions correspondingly, would be forced through the house in toto.

For the past three days students have been sending petitions, letters, and telegrams to parents, friends, and legislators to enlist their support in the defense of the University.

Bowie-Cherry Bloc Suffers Third Set-Back In Two Days At Raleigh

JUNIORS TO PICK DANCE LEADERS

Leaders and Marshals to Be Chosen
In Gerrard Hall.

Eight commencement marshals and six dance leaders will be picked at a meeting of the junior class in Gerrard hall tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

This meeting was called by the executive committee of the group last Thursday night.

According to present plans, the class intends to sponsor a dance this year regardless of what action is taken by the senior class which, for the past two years, has been collaborating with the juniors to sponsor a gala joint affair. The senior class is having difficulties in financing its part, as collection of fees has been slow during the past two quarters. The affair is set for the week-end of May 12 and 13.

Dr. Reeve Will Give Lecture

Dr. W. D. Reeve of Columbia University will lecture to Dr. E. W. Knight's class at 9:30 this morning in room 203 Peabody. Students and others interested are invited.

Dr. Reeve is professor of mathematics and a well known author and lecturer. He is to speak before the North Carolina Educational Association meeting in Raleigh this week.

COMMITTEE NOT ABLE TO OBTAIN McNAIR SPEAKER

Dr. H. H. Williams Announces That Annual Series Will Not Be Delivered This Year.

The McNair lectures, established by the will of John Calvin McNair of the class of 1849, will not be delivered this spring, according to an announcement issued by Dr. H. H. Williams, chairman of the lecture committee, yesterday. A later statement by R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, gave as the reason "the inability of the committee to successfully negotiate with an eminent speaker for the series."

Under the will the objects of the lectures "shall be to show the mutual bearing of science and religion upon each other and to prove the existence of attributes (as far as may be) of God from nature." The honorarium for the lecture from the interest of the McNair fund is $500, the remainder of the interest providing for the suitable publication of the speeches.

Series Begun in 1908

The lectures were begun in 1908 when Professor Francis H. Smith of the University of Virginia addressed the members of the University on "God Manifest in the Material Universe." Since then the lectures have been given regularly with the exception of five years. They were omitted in 1918 and 1919 on account of the world war, and in 1920 and 1929. Last year the lectures were delivered by Dr. R. A. Millikan of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics, California Institute of Technology, whose subject for the series of three speeches was "The Changing World," which included discourses on "Time," "Matter," and "Ideas."

ALLEY SPEAKS ON WORLD PROBLEMS

Speaker Says Germany Is Danger Spot in Europe; Prophesies Japan's Collapse.

"When a fire gets started in a house down the street I'm interested because I know once the flames get started they can easily spread." That is the reason why America should be interested in world affairs, Dr. Alden Alley of Dana College said in a speech on international relations delivered in Gerrard hall last Monday night. Dr. Alley pointed to the recent World War as a manifestation of the fact that America is not isolated.

Beginning his talk by pointing out the present danger spots in Europe, the speaker remarked on the discrimination shown by other powers against Italy in the field of commerce; on the resentment of Hungary for having lost a vast amount of territory in the World War; and on the critical condition of Germany.

Germany Most Dangerous

Declaring that Germany constituted the most important danger spot in Europe, Dr. Alley gave two reasons for the country's great resentment: (1) the great poverty the Germans have suffered since the war, and (2) the war guilt thesis they were forced to sign under pressure of a food blockade, and the enforced disarmament growing out of this.

Adding Bulgaria and Austria to the list of danger spots in Europe, the speaker cited the possibility of these defeated countries' forming a coalition, in which case the other powers would oppose them. Such conditions would be a return to the

Henderson Speaks

Dr. Archibald Henderson returned Sunday from a northern speaking tour. Last Wednesday he addressed by special invitation the Nassau club, the faculty organization at Princeton University, on "John Galsworthy," and the same night delivered an address before the Present Day club woman's club of Princeton. Dr. Henderson delivered the Phi Beta Kappa address at Goucher College in Baltimore last Friday.

Former University Physician
Had Suffered From Ill Health
For Several Years.

NO ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR FUNERAL AS YET

Dr. Abernethy Survived by Wife, Two Sons, Four Brothers, and Two Sisters.

Dr. Eric Alonzo Abernethy, former head of the University infirmary, died last night at his home on Columbia street from a self-inflicted pistol wound which proved instantly fatal.

A little before 7:00 o'clock last night, Dr. Abernethy sent Mrs. Abernethy from his room, asking her to bring him a cup of coffee and in her absence, shot himself through the mouth with a pistol. He left no message of any kind in explanation of his action.

Suffering from ill health for several years, the result of a bullet wound he received in the war, Dr. Abernethy had undergone several major operations and last fall spent several weeks in a New York hospital and at the Walter Reed hospital at Washington where he again underwent operations and treatment. He has been in a particularly bad state of health during the past week.

Life Devoted to University

Dr. Abernethy's life was almost entirely devoted to service to the University. Graduated in 1899, he attended medical schools at the University of Virginia and Columbia University. After practicing medicine in Washington for a year, Dr. Abernethy returned to Chapel Hill and set up a private practice in 1904.

MUSEUM MAY BE INSTALLED HERE

Group Works on Plan Putting Natural History Exhibits
In One Building.

Plans for establishing a museum of natural history on the University campus were considered at a special meeting of University faculty members and students interested in the project in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon.

The project started by the group will include placing such objects dealing with natural history already on the campus into one building and the building up of other collections. Subsequently other collections would be solicited and placed on display at the University.

A number of these collections, such as stuffed animals and arrow heads, are contained in different buildings in the University, but no successful effort has ever been made to combine them.

Committee Appointed

A committee was appointed yesterday by Haywood Weeks, temporary chairman of the group, to attempt to make arrangements with University authorities to get a place to collect present exhibits and put them on display.

This committee is composed of Dr. W. C. Coker, Dr. J. B. Bullitt, Dr. W. F. Prouty, Francis Anderson, Mayne Albright, W. I. Gervis, and Weeks.

A Glimmer of Hope

Fortune is assuming an evil face for the proponents of the notorious Bowie-Cherry bill for appropriations for higher education in North Carolina, as it goes forward for a second reading in the House. It is evident that the powerful offensive which has pushed the bill thus far is fast crumbling, while its opponents are slowly but surely gaining momentum. In at least two trials during the Monday night session the extreme economic bloc was bucked in its attempts to carry economy to the point of destruction, which seems to indicate that, at last, the legislature has awakened to the hopelessness and irrationality of its former action, and has come to realize that the way to economic rehabilitation lies not in the destruction of our basic social institutions, and that human values can not be measured in terms of dollars and cents.

The fight is by no means over, however, nor is it yet time to sing the victory song. The Bowie-Cherry faction has not yet tumbled; the tide has just begun to turn, and the time for action is just arriving. It would be foolish to suppose that the Bowie wing will give way so easily. Much pressure must yet be brought to bear on those members of the House who are still on the fence. The fate of the University depends on the side on which they are pushed off.

In the meantime, the friends of education have not been, and are not now, asleep. All during the afternoon and night sessions, Western Union boys paraded the House floors, bearing the wishes of the people back home, as a result of the campaign put on by the students over the week-end, until the desks were literally deluged in yellow. These efforts will doubtless be recorded in the final vote, which is shortly forthcoming, but it must be remembered that there is still much to be done, and perhaps many long fights ahead before the friends of the University can recline in ease with the knowledge that the efficiency of this institution will remain intact for the next two years, and that the victory for social justice has been achieved.—W.A.S.

Making Tradition

In the midst of good times when prosperity's dazzling glare blinds the eye the Carolina student listens to stories of our traditions and of the University's heroic struggle against all manner of adversity. These tales are accepted with a languid interest as coming from times and conditions so remote as to be to us almost in the age of fable. Now we stand confronted with a situation that summons forth again the fighting determination with which we battled our way up in days gone by. Now the students of this old University have the opportunity not to hear tradition but to make it.

Panicked by the seriousness of conditions prevailing in nation and state, a short sighted legislature is indulging in economies so false and so drastic that this institution is faced on the backward path. Deaf to the pleas of educators and friends everywhere, the representatives of North Carolina's citizenry are tearing down in a day what years were required to erect. A University which stands leader in the south is falling from its position of eminence. The dreams of men and women which through their love and sacrifices we have realized are now doomed to failure.

The outlook is not a happy one, with almost every effort exerted in vain the University lies helpless and exhausted prey to the ravages of her foes. The only path remaining her is to accept with sportsmanship and grace the injury from the hands of men who if misguided are sincere and honest in the conviction that they are doing their duty.

There is one answer to our plight, the same that ran through the minds of the indomitable spirits that led us before out of the darkness. Carolina must live, must go on and up. Upon us devolves the solemn duty of perpetuating the dogged courage that has carried this school from every reverse to a new and more exalted plane. We cannot betray the life work of the men and women to whom we owe the prestige we now enjoy.

It is the privilege of this generation of Carolina students to step once more into the breach and carry on the struggle for a better University. We have leaders, the precedent, and the will to carry Carolina out of the stormy present into a new and shining future to which we will some day proudly point as the creation of our own struggle, our own sacrifice, our own courage.—J.F.A.

Lacking in Cooperative Spirit

The present state of obtaining credit in Chapel Hill but serves to throw additional light upon another phase of the national economic system now prevailing. Local merchants have displayed a commendable willingness to cooperate with the buying public by extending credit when no source of credit was apparent. However, managers of local units of so-called "chain" corporations have been forced to withhold credit established in out-of-town banks because the system under which such corporations conduct business leaves them no alternative. Managers of units representing such corporations as chain stores here in Chapel Hill can not be justly blamed for their failure to extend credit because their hands are virtually tied in the matter since the policies of the company are dictated not by but to them.

It would appear that a consolidated business firm such as any of the "chain" stores here, operating as it does upon a national scale, should be much more able to cooperate with its buying public at a time when an adequate medium of exchange is lacking over a wide-spread area, than an isolated, independent business establishment with a limited source of capital. The injustice of the situation becomes apparent when one considers two business houses, existing side by side, the one demanding cash in return for a commodity indispensable to human life, and the other accepting credit in exchange for commodities which might be considered to be of secondary importance.

Such a corporation, dealing in food commodities, should display a more generous attitude at a time when all forces are uniting in a fight to preserve the common welfare of the nation. Such an attitude is questionable in a world leaning more and more toward socialism.—R.H.B.

With Contemporaries

Helping Others to Enjoy Basketball Games

"See that tall boy with the curly hair and the knee-guard? He's the very picture of my cousin, Oscar!" Sounds familiar, doesn't it? It is one of the reasons why sport-lovers go mad.

Every athletic contest has its quota of spectators who enliven the event with inane remarks like this one. There always are the fault-finding individuals who can't understand why all the boys must use the same towel when individual ones would be so much more sanitary. "And Mabel," one of them adds, "did you see that boy drink out of the bottle and spit on the floor?"

Some helpful souls insist on coaching from the side-lines. "Shoot!" they shout, if the player with the ball so much as faces his own goal. If the player scores when he shoots, they cheer; if he misses, they howl, "Why didn't you pass, you jughead?"

Remedies, ranging from schools for their instruction to "death by blow from blunt instrument," have been suggested, but the "bleacher pests" go on pestering. But perhaps some day one of them will trump his partner's ace.—Indiana Daily Student.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

LUCRECE: Thornton Wilder from "Le Viol de Lucrece" by Andre Obey. Houghton Mifflin 1933.

One of the most memorable theatre events this year was Katherine Cornell's production of Lucrece, which opened in New York City at the Belasco Theatre last December.

The story has quite a history. Prior to the recent version it was known to the reading public mainly through Shakespeare's The Rape of Lucrece. His sources extend indirectly back to Ovid and Livy. Audrey Obey, using the Shakespearean poem as background, wrote a simplified version in dramatic form. It was produced in Paris in 1931 by the Theatre du Vieux-Colombier.

Thornton Wilder made a translation of Obey's French. However neither author has rendered it in terms of pure drama. The play in writing and presentation still retains many of the characteristics of a long narrative poem—a poem which has been made visual through the combined genius of Guthrie Clintic's directing, Robert Edmond Jones' settings and Katherine Cornell's acting. The narrative rather than the dramatic qualities are recognized and utilized by the convention of having two Narrators tell much of the story, sometimes against a background of pantomime.

The plot runs briefly as follows: Lucrece has been proven the only faithful wife among a group of women whose husbands are away fighting a siege under the leadership of the Tarquins then in control at Rome. Lucrece was found spinning with her serving women when the men came unexpectedly to settle a wager. Sextus Tarquinius, son of the king, being more impressed by her beauty than her virtue, pays a visit the following evening. Though he comes alone Lucrece graciously consents to put him up for the night. After she has retired, he goes to her room, and under threat, violates her. In the morning he is gone. She sends for her husband and comes to him dressed in black. She tells him what has happened, then kills herself. The nobles and populace have been seething under the many injustices of Tarquin rule. This crime precipitates an open rebellion, the Tarquins are driven out, and Rome is thereby given "A New Deal."

Union Forum Votes For Nine-day Vacation

Petitions Presented

The plans were discussed and several petitions for the nine-day plan were presented to the president. The objections to the extended week-end plan were that it would cause an early closing of the spring quarter, interfering with commencement plans, and that some students would hardly have time to get home and return.

The vote for the nine-day vacation was taken by roll call with only one negative ballot cast. The Forum's decision will form the basis of the recommendation which the student council will make to President Graham on the matter.

The body also tabled a motion opposing the entrance of any member of the colored race to the University. Larry Hammond and President Weeks complimented the student body for its action in the fight against the Bowie-Cherry bill.

Saw Service in War

He entered active service overseas in 1917 as a first lieutenant, being a member of the Medical Reserve. He was with the 78th division, was wounded in Belgium and later he received injuries in the drives at St. Mihiel and at Argonne Forest.

It was the wound which he received in Belgium which impaired his health so that it has been necessary for him to have many operations, which did not greatly alleviate his suffering.

His ill health caused his resignation as head of the infirmary in January of this year. He and his son, Dr. W. B. Abernethy, set up a private practice in Chapel Hill. During the past week, Dr. Abernethy has been in unusually bad health.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Abernethy; two sons, Dr. William B. of Chapel Hill, and John, a resident of Florida; four brothers, Dr. Claude of Raleigh, Ben of New Bern, and two others from Washington. No arrangements had been made for the funeral last night.

Through the kindness of L. L. Garner of the math department, the management of Graham Memorial has been loaned a mounted deer head. This deer was killed by Garner on a hunt near Beaufort. Mayne Albright has announced that the head will be hung over the mantelpiece in the game room.

Thirteen Eligible For Initiation Into Monogram Club Tomorrow

Ten Players and Three Managers
To Be Given Opportunity to Join Athletic Group

NEOPHYTES GIVEN OPTION

Tomorrow night thirteen new monogram winners will be given an opportunity to join the reorganized Monogram club at the first formal initiation since the club's reorganization. This number includes ten players and three managers.

Earle Beale, Snooks Aitken, Morrie Long, Jason Glace, Cliff Glover, Norment Quarles, Sam Giddins, Frank McIntosh, Tom Parsons and Paul Davis are the new letter winners eligible for membership in the organization. The three managers eligible are Cate, Kerr, and Barnard.

Men Given Option

According to the rules of the new constitution adopted recently, all letter winners are allowed an option of accepting the invitation to join the club. Once they decide to affix their names to the list of members, however, they are bound by oath to uphold the constitution and code of the Carolina Monogram club.

President John Phipps announced last night that the initiation for those men desiring admittance to the club is scheduled tomorrow night and he urged both the initiates, and as many older members as can possibly be there, to meet at Emerson field at 7:30 o'clock that night.

ALLEY SPEAKS ON WORLD PROBLEMS

status of Europe before the World War, when the continent was divided into two armed camps, waiting only for some such spark as the assassination of the Austrian Archduke to set off the explosive.

Mastery Over War Possible
Believing it possible for the human race to obtain mastery over war, Dr. Alley declared that history not only shows that it can be done, but it shows how it can be done. History, he believes, indicates that war is mastered by a community's establishing the institutions of law, and also by training its citizens to cooperate intelligently.

Slams Hearst
William Randolph Hearst was censured twice during Dr. Alley's talk. Declaring that the United States should cooperate with the peace agencies, he said, "Every intelligently patriotic American—I am trying to rule Mr. Hearst out—should cooperate." Again, when he said, "Every time he opens his mouth he makes enemies for his country," the speaker, although he did not mention the jingoist by name, was obviously referring to Hearst. Nations, Alley said, need to practice "intelligent selfishness."

Prophesies Hitler's Fall
Adolph Hitler, subsidized by reactionary industrialists who hope he will weaken the socialist forces in Germany, will not last very long as chancellor, Dr. Alley thinks. Declaring that Hitler is incompetent and lacks intelligence, even though he is endowed with courage, idealism, and self-sacrifice, the speaker prophesied that Hitler's prestige would steadily sink and that he will be "shot out of power" when he weakens sufficiently.

In the face of the Manchurian situation, where, he declared, Japan has bit off more than she can chew, Nippon is doomed for financial collapse, Dr. Alley thought. He pointed to the fact that the Japanese currency has already depreciated in value from a par of fifty cents to twenty cents. She now finds it hard

SOCIETY GIRLS WILL SPONSOR COTTON BALL

A group of North Carolina society girls, in cooperation with several organizations interested in the further popularization of cotton will sponsor, in conjunction with National Cotton Week a "North Carolina Cotton Ball" in Raleigh which will be given the night of Friday, May 19.

Ladies attending the ball will be requested to wear all cotton ensembles. The ball will climax a cotton festival which will be underway all afternoon and evening. A cotton parade and a cotton fashion show will precede the ball.

to borrow money anywhere, and when she does, the interest rates are high. The speaker suggested that possibly the other nations of the world are going to impose a financial boycott against Japan by not allowing her to float loans anywhere.

Alley said that he favored an economic boycott against Japan. "That's the kind of cooperation," he said, "that nations will perform when they get their Ph.D.'s—just now they're in the kindergarten stage." He said that such development must come slowly.

COMPETITION FOR STATE BASEBALL TITLE UNDER WAY

Rocky Mount and Wilmington
Begin Eastern High School
Race Friday Afternoon.

Baseball teams from Rocky Mount and Wilmington in the eastern division of the North Carolina interscholastic class "A" competition will meet Friday at Wilmington in the season's opening game. Greensboro and High Point will begin the hostilities in the western section in an encounter at High Point, April 7.

Schedules for the western division are slightly different than for the eastern, which will be run off entirely on the percentage basis. Charlotte, last year's state title-holders, will meet Gastonia in a best two-out-of-three series, the winner of which will play the victor in the percentage competition between Greensboro, High Point, and Winston-Salem. The two winners will engage in a similar best two out of three series which will determine the western championship.

The general baseball contest of North Carolina open to all except the larger high schools mentioned began activities last Friday. The week's results will be announced later. Roanoke Rapids, 1932 state champions, will meet Ayden April 4 in its opening game.

PRACTICE HALTED BY BAD WEATHER

Players Will Work Daily to Keep in Condition for Season Opener Against W. & L.

Cold and threatening weather again caused Coach Bunn Hearn to go easy with his varsity baseball squad yesterday.

Coach Hearn had a meeting of the entire squad in the locker room of Emerson stadium before the practice session began in which he discussed training rules and a few general remarks concerning the work of individual players on the team.

Open With W. & L.

With the opening game of the season against Washington and Lee only a week off, Coach Hearn stated that some sort of work would be given the squad every afternoon so that the players will not lose the conditioning already acquired.

Practice yesterday afternoon consisted of a round of hitting and a lengthy drill in sliding. The pitchers limbered up for a while, though too much work was not allowed due to the chances of developing sore arms in the cold weather.

Meeting Moved Up

The regular Monday night Y. M. C. A. cabinet meeting has been changed to 7:00 o'clock Sunday night in the Presbyterian church Sunday school room. A special deputation group of ten or twelve cabinet members from the Davidson College Y. M. C. A. will have charge of the program.

COLD HOLDS UP BASEBALL WORK

Coach Cerney Disappointed With Work of Yearling Players;
Looking for Gardeners.

Cold weather caused the postponement of freshman baseball practice yesterday afternoon. Coach Cerney also called practice off Monday, the pitchers and catchers being the only to do any work.

Coach Cerney was rather disappointed in the play of the yearlings in the first practice game of the season last Saturday afternoon. The infielders looked good but the outfield presents another story. Tom Irwin, shortstop, and Harry Montgomery, second baseman, are both smooth and finished fielders. There is also a good crop of heavy hitting first basemen out.

First Intramural Games in Tennis

The weather man dealt the spring intramural program another setback yesterday when wind and wet grounds combined to postpone the opening of the season for the second day in a row. Plans had been made to get under way in both baseball and tennis campaigns Monday afternoon, but no contests have been staged as yet.

A total of ten baseball games and nine tennis matches have been delayed during these two days of inactivity. All of the delayed contests will be worked into the schedule later in the season, however, according to an announcement yesterday by intramural authorities.

The Chesterfield FORMULA—what is it?

The formulas and processes which make Chesterfield a milder and better-tasting cigarette are secret—to prevent others from copying them

If every person knew the method and processes of tanning leather, it would be of interest; but what people want to know is: Is it a good shoe? Is it comfortable? Will it wear longer? Is the price right?

So it is with Chesterfield Cigarettes. If smokers, men and women, knew all of the formulas and processes of manufacture, it would be of interest to them; but what smokers really want is the result.

Everything that goes into Chesterfield Cigarettes is as good as money can buy.

Every process has in it all that science knows about cigarette manufacture.

The formulas are secret to prevent others from copying them. The mildness and the better taste you may prove for yourself. May we ask you to try Chesterfield?

Wherever you buy Chesterfields, you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door

They Satisfy— people know it

ENTERTAINMENT FOR HIGH SCHOOL WEEK ORGANIZED

Fraternity Group Gathers at Request of Weeks to Discuss Plans and Program.

Representatives of most of the fraternities on the campus attended a meeting called by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, in Graham Memorial during last week for the purpose of discussing plans for the entertainment of visiting athletic teams to the University. The discussion was especially directed toward plans for entertaining the high school teams which will be here during high school week.

This entertainment of visiting teams is very well organized at many schools, it was pointed out, and efforts are being made here to improve the variety of entertainment offered to visiting athletes. Thursday's meeting was the result of a plan to enlist the cooperation in the fraternities in this effort.

Plans have been practically completed for the part which Graham Memorial will play during high school week, which is scheduled to begin here April 13 and continue through April 14. The participants are to register at the "Y" upon arrival, but the headquarters for the group will be Graham Memorial. Through the courtesy of the management, the visitors will be presented with complimentary tickets, entitling them to all game room privileges. For Friday morning, April 14, a consolation tournament in ping-pong and bowling for those who were defeated in debating or athletics Thursday is scheduled.

After the finals in the debates Friday night, the high school students will be entertained at an informal reception in the main lounge of the Memorial. Plans are under way to provide some student talent and light refreshments in the way of an enjoyable evening. Members of the student body here are also invited to the reception.

DATE OF CONCERT SET UP ONE WEEK

The first out of town concert of this quarter by the University glee club, originally scheduled for March 25 at the Church of the Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, has been set for May 2, according to an announcement yesterday by Professor Harold S. Dyer, director of the group.

The program in May will feature three members of the group as soloists. Harry Lee Knox, glee club accompanist, will play a group of piano solos by Rachmaninoff and Debussy. Earl Wolslagel, violinist, will play compositions of Tartini and Albert Spalding. Charles Templeton, tenor, will be featured in a group of European folk songs by the entire group.

The glee club presents one concert away from the campus each spring. It will offer a campus concert in Hill Music hall early in April.

Laundry Refunds

Laundry refunds for the winter quarter will continue to be distributed today from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. Today is the last day that refunds will be made at the "Y."

Few in Infirmary

Nine students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: John Chapman, Hilliard B. Wilson, E. M. Spruill, Ben Atkins, Edwin Lanier, W. C. Pitt, Ralph B. Cheek, W. H. DeVane, and Jisaku Fukusato.

COLD HOLDS UP BASEBALL WORK

throwing arms, not at all up to the standard of Vick, Zaiser, and Broyhill, last year's combination. A good staff of pitchers will probably be on hand for the opening game. Ray Glasgow, Dave Spiers, and Ernest McKeithan are all good hurlers while John Mills, although wild, will have plenty of stuff on the ball when he gains some control. Jack Lowe, Bill Hobgood, and Olin Yeager are all fair receivers but not outstanding.

Coach Cerney is planning to start some lecture classes for his ball players in which he will instruct them in all the fine points of the various positions. The lectures will probably be given at night.

A game was planned for yesterday afternoon between the yearlings and Chapel Hill high school but had to be called off. The practice contest will probably be played this afternoon or tomorrow, providing the weather permits.

Purdue Activities Slowed Up By Banking Holiday

(Big Ten News Service)
Lafayette, Indiana, March 21.—Restricted bank withdrawals in Indiana have seriously altered the social calendar at Purdue University. Several campus organizations which were on the verge of large functions found tickets sales so restricted as to make it impossible to hold the affairs until the banking situation has cleared up. Among the organizations so affected were the Memorial Union, Sigma Delta Chi, and the Men's Pan Hellenic Council.

Bills Payable Today

All students whose names begin with K-O are scheduled to make payment of their bills for the spring quarter at the business office today. Failure to pay or to make arrangements for payment will result in a $5.00 fee for delay.

WIRE HOME IMMEDIATELY

Response to the appeal for student aid in petitioning the General Assembly for a living-wage appropriation for the University has been satisfactory. However, leaders of the movement say, the fight is not yet won. The flood of letters and telegrams flowing into the assembly chambers in Raleigh must be kept at full tide until favorable action is taken by the legislature.

Those students who have not yet wired or written home asking their parents and friends to wire, in turn, to their representatives in Raleigh should do so at once. The success of this movement depends upon full and complete cooperation from every student. The fight Monday was concentrated against the passage of the Bowie-Cherry bill on its second reading. Whether this bill is defeated or passed, the battle is far from ended. There is still time for every student to make a contribution to the campaign.

Delay no longer. Wire or write home immediately.

Carolina Campus Is Distinguished By Listing A Tarzan As Student

G. H. Dickinson's Atavistic Actions as Tree Surgeon Have Enabled Him to Remain in University; Says His Calling Is Not as Dangerous as It Might Seem.

Add one more method which students are resorting to in order to remain in school—tree pruning. Carolina has its own Tarzan, its own Lion Man, who can feel just as home among the tree tops as the more prosaic of us can feel while walking over the shifting landscape of the campus. G. H. Dickinson is the student whose atavistic proclivities have enabled him to administer to the suffering trees here so that he might sustain himself as a student at the University.

Born in Robeson county, Dickinson attended the schools there with little thought that he would ever embark on such a hazardous profession. When he graduated from high school, the overpowering desire to travel came over him, and unable to withstand the "call of the wild," he heeded the invitation from the stratosphere and went out to Kent, Ohio, where, in 1928, he enrolled himself as a member of the crew of the Davey Tree Expert company.

Has Wide Experience

A strenuous training program qualified Dickinson for his consequent lofty position in the world, and then he started on his travels, bearing aid and succor to trees all over the eastern, middle western, and southern parts of the country. Whenever some tree which was highly prized for sentimental or historical reasons began to go the way of all other trees and accordingly began to number its decades, Dickinson and his crew were dispatched post-haste to the spot to carry on their expert pruning and surgical work. Near Philadelphia are a number of trees under which, Dickinson, stated, George Washington or some one else of historical importance apparently spent all his time. In grave danger of extinction, these trees were preserved by his expert saw-work. Another place where Dickinson applied some of his delicate work was in Wisconsin on some Indian marker trees, trees which the Indians had bent in odd positions more than a century ago in order to mark out the trail.

Uses Little Protection

According to Dickinson his calling is not as dangerous as it appears to a man in the street, who looks with fright on the temerity of the climbers. A rope thrown over a stout limb and tightly secured is all the safety equipment he uses. The most unpleasant, and consequently, the least safe, weather to work in, Dickinson said, was summer, when the hot sun beats down through the leaves, making even the coldest windiest winter day seem like paradise.

Only seldom has he fallen. Once near Stroudsburg, N. Y., where he was working on a valuable tree on a large estate, he fell thirty-five feet to the ground. While falling he hesitated for a moment before grasping a branch for fear of injuring the tree, and thereby he lost his chance to save himself. He was only slightly injured. Recently working near the tennis courts, here, a branch broke and he hurtled to the ground, bruising himself but slightly.

Debaters Discuss Trip To Northern Colleges

Red Rankin and Don Seawell, University debaters who returned recently from a tour of northern colleges, addressed the debate council Monday night concerning the trip. The team engaged in four debates, meeting Georgetown, Pittsburgh, New York University, and Columbia. Rankin and Seawell gained decisions in all debates except one, losing to the Columbia team.

According to the debaters, the outstanding events of the trip were the debate over the radio at Washington and the debate before the Pittsburgh Advertising club.

Dr. C. B. Robson of the history department addressed the council in a discussion of the resolution that "Japan has an interest in the Far East parallel to the United States in the western hemisphere as expressed in the Monroe Doctrine." Robson's subject is the question to be used in the debate with Georgia Tech in the near future.

SENATE MEASURE TO ABOLISH FREE TUITION PASSED

Interesting Figures Given to Show Many Students With Cars Get Scholarships.

As a result of the passage of a measure to abolish free tuition an investigation is being conducted to determine the number of free tuition students who have cars in school. The survey is being conducted by the presidents of the various dormitories and fraternities through the efforts of the student council. This will determine the validity of statements concerning the bill to abolish free tuition in the state-supported schools of higher education.

The bill, which was approved by the Senate Tuesday night, would abolish all free tuition in the state schools. In discussing the bill Senator John Sprunt Hill stated that the passage of such a bill would force many students to drop out of school. Senator R. M. Hanes then said that many students were receiving free tuition who were fully able to pay their way through school. He continued that he knew of cases where students were benefitting by the policy in order to keep cars in school.

Interesting Figures

Interesting figures relating to the number of students in the state-supported schools who receive free tuition were brought out by one of the introducers of the bill.

He said that there were 4,156 students who now receive free tuition. These were divided among the institutions as follows: University of North Caro-

MUSIC CONTEST ATTRACTS MANY STATE STUDENTS

Musicians From Twelve Towns Already Entered for Contest
Here Tomorrow.

Students from twelve towns throughout the state have already entered the annual contest for student musicians and young artists to be conducted here tomorrow, beginning at 10:30 o'clock in Hill music hall. Mrs. Eric Norden of Wilmington, state chairman of the Federation of Music Clubs' contest, announced yesterday. Entries from a number of other towns are expected before the contest begins, Mrs. Norden said.

Prominent musicians from North Carolina are to act as judges for the competition, which will be held in voice, piano, organ, and violin.

Winners to Represent State

Winners in the various classifications of this contest will be automatically elected to represent North Carolina in the South Atlantic Federation district contest, to be held the first week in May between competitors representing Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina. Winners of the South Atlantic contest will travel to Minneapolis about the middle of May to compete in the national final contest.

Those who win in the competition at Minneapolis will be awarded $1,000 in cash and a performance sponsored by the Schubert Memorial Foundation with any major symphony orchestra in America.

MANY HAVE FILED APPLICATIONS FOR GRADUATE PLACES

Dean W. W. Pierson Announces Receipt of Over One Thousand Applications.

Six hundred and twenty-one applications were received by Dean W. E. Pierson of the graduate school for University fellowships for 1933. This number included fourteen applications for the Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy. Awards will be made April 1.

It is estimated by Dean Pierson that the entire number of applications for fellowships, scholarships, positions of assistants, and research appointments in the institute for research in social science well exceeds a thousand. The applications for the latter appointments have not as yet been checked.

Nearly every state in the country was represented in the batch of applications, and also several foreign countries, including England, France, Syria, and Canada.

Twenty-six University fellowships are available, and are open only to men.

TELEGRAM SENT TO LEGISLATURE BY PHI SOCIETY

Assembly Also Favors by Overwhelming Majority Nine Day Vacation Beginning April 15.

By an unanimous vote the Phi assembly Tuesday night passed a bill to send a telegram to the state legislature commending the action of the House in its fight for education in North Carolina. The telegram was dispatched Tuesday night to Mr. Reginald Harris, speaker of the House of Representatives, and read as follows: "The Philanthropic Assembly of the University of North Carolina unanimously went on record tonight as commending the action of the House in its fight for education in North Carolina. It is our sincere hope that the Senate will continue this far-sighted attitude toward education."

A special bill, Resolved: That the Phi favor a nine-day spring vacation beginning April 15, and extending through April 23, was passed by an overwhelming majority. This bill was discussed so that the opinion of the Phi could be given to the Union Forum which convened Tuesday night to discuss the question of a spring vacation.

Don Seawell, newly elected speaker, delivered his inaugural address, in which he urged a drive for better attendance and better parliamentary procedure.

All students desiring to join the Phi assembly should attend the initiation ceremonies next Tuesday.

Dormitory Smokers Resumed

A meeting of the Carolina Engineer's business staff will take place tonight at 7:00 in the senior electrical engineering room. Candidates for staff positions will present their applications.

MRS. BEARD WILL ADDRESS WOMEN GRADUATES SOON

Noted Authoress Will Help Women Organize at Special Dinner Monday Evening.

Mrs. Mary R. Beard, recognized as a leader of women's activities, will address the graduate women of the University at a special dinner meeting of the group at 6:30 o'clock Monday night in Graham Memorial.

The subject of Mrs. Beard's talk will be "A Changing Intellectual Climate for Women." Mrs. Beard is co-author with her husband, Dr. Charles A. Beard, of the Rise of American Civilization and author of A Short History of the American Labor Movement and On Understanding Women.

Graduates to Organize

The purpose of the meeting is to consider an organization for graduate women of the University as a division of the Woman's Association and as a compact group to further their own interests. This movement was started several weeks ago upon the suggestion of Mrs. Beard and at the meeting Monday the group will consider organization.

This idea is not new, for it has existed on the campus for some time. In fact, the present Woman's Association was first formed by graduate women and later extended to undergraduates in order to perpetuate the association's identity. Later the undergraduates became the controlling spirit of the group, leaving a lack of organization and interest among graduate co-eds.

Feeling that there is a lack of integration of graduate women in University life, the students have made plans to organize. At the meeting Monday a committee chosen for the purpose of studying phases and plans of organization will make a report.

Juniors Again To Exercise Power To Name Commencement Marshals

Class Will Elect Marshals for First Time in Five Years; Power Was Wrested From German Club as Result of Wide-Spread Protest by Student Body Last Year.

In electing marshals tonight, for this year's commencement program, the junior class is once more exercising a privilege of long-standing. This will be, however, the first time in five years that the class has actually availed itself of this prerogative. The present re-assumption of this power is the culmination of a long struggle between representatives of junior classes and the German club for the right to select the marshals.

Some five years ago the junior class, through an oversight, neglected to elect marshals for the finals, an act which had been traditionally within the power of the group. It was not realized that this had not been done until a week before commencement of that year, whereupon the German club took over the filling of offices and appointed men to the coveted positions.

Duties of Marshals

Marshals at the dances are, so to speak, walking bureaus of information. They arrange the dance figures, explain to the alumni their places in the figures, and participate in one of their own, together with the Ball committee of the German

NEGRO SPONSORS TO ASK AID FROM STATE ASSEMBLY

Continuation Will Be Asked for Case Before Judge Barnhill in Durham Superior Court.

Negro supporters of Thomas Hocutt, Durham negro desiring entrance into the University pharmacy school, have decided to drop their case now pending before the superior court, and resort to aid from the General Assembly now in session in Raleigh.

A continuation will be asked tomorrow afternoon when Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., University registrar, is scheduled to appear before Judge M. V. Barnhill in the Durham superior court where Wilson must show why a preemptory writ should not be issued compelling the Carolina officials to admit the Negro.

Those backing the movement to raise the ban against negroes at the University are drafting for presentation a bill which would authorize the state to pay the tuition of negroes in out-of-state institutions for courses which cannot be obtained in the North Carolina schools for the negro race.

Since the suit was started only last week, the University administration have not yet made any official statement.

DANCE LEADERS WILL BE BE ELECTED TONIGHT

The junior class will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall for the purpose of electing eight commencement marshals and six dance leaders for the junior-senior dances which this class gives annually in collaboration with the senior class.

This meeting was called by the executive committee of the class which met last week and decided to go ahead with plans for the annual dances. According to present plans the set of dances will be given on the week-end of May 12 and 13.

APPOINTMENT TO GOVERNMENT JOB NOT YET DECIDED

Democratic Leaders in State Supporting Mrs. L. A. Cotten for Place in Administration.

The appointment to the position of commissioner of civil service, for which Mrs. L. A. Cotten, assistant secretary of the Friends of the Library association, has been prominently mentioned, is yet to be made by President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Cotten has the support of virtually every democratic leader in North Carolina, and many letters indorsing her candidacy have been sent to congressmen. These letters will be approved by them and presented to Postmaster-General Farley, who will in turn confer with President Roosevelt about the final decision. Senator Bailey of this state also intends to personally see the president in order to further Mrs. Cotten's chances.

Among the many women who are seeking this appointment are Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice-chairman of the national Democratic convention, Mrs. Emily Blair, well known Democratic woman leader, and a number of other important women.

Since the first appointment of a woman by the late President Wilson, women have continued to fill this position.

Senate Backs Holidays and Denies Editorial Partiality

With but one dissenting vote, the bill, Resolved: That the University allow its students a spring holiday to extend preferably from Saturday, April 15, to Monday, April 24, was passed by the Di Senate Tuesday night.

Another bill introduced at the meeting was defeated by a majority vote. It stipulated that the editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL be condemned for partiality in the policy of the paper.

Barden-Cherry Substitute Proposal Withdrawn after Heated Floor Discussions.

CONFUSION MARKS SESSION

Pete Murphy Offers Amendment To Increase University Appropriations to $832,240.

North Carolina's hard-pressed House of Representatives, unable to resolve itself into any semblance of working order, abandoned all legislative efforts and the expected second reading vote last night to lend an attentive ear to the histrionics of Messrs. Pete Murphy and Tam Bowie. The oratorical battle ground was the cause of the University of North Carolina, with the venerable gentleman from Rowan at his best and the protagonist of "economy" shivering the rafters in ardent avowal for his proposed slashes.

The House was plunged into disorder early in the evening when Barden and Turner, administration manipulators, joined forces with Gregg Cherry to present an amendment to the amendment to the Bowie-Cherry substitute to the original appropriations bill. The legislative mess ensuing set the entire house to some serious head scratching, since no one was able to interpret the new bill nor trace the maze of legislation leading to its introduction. Like a good fellow, Representative Barden then withdrew the bill. He yielded his position on the floor a minute later to Representative Walter Murphy from

A Scholarship or A Fraternity Pin?

If the Clement bill passes the House of Representatives as it did the Senate, Tuesday, actions will be taken which will no longer permit students to attend state-supported educational institutions and receive free tuition. This will mean that approximately 4,000 students in the state will have to make arrangement for the payment of this fee next year if they expect to continue their college education. Ministers' sons, students preparing for the ministry, teachers, those preparing to teach, and students with bodily infirmities will be affected by this change. Under the present arrangement all of these classes of students receive free tuition, but the chances are strong that this is the last year they will be granted this privilege.

This action naturally follows the demand in the state to cut educational expenses to the bone. And it is only to be expected that those students being given free tuition would be the first to receive the cut. But here the movement should not stop. There are numerous other classes of students on this and other campuses being educated on scholarships of some sort who at the same time are expending money unnecessarily.

Most notable among these groups are those students who have made application for and have received scholarships in order that they might continue their education. Yet hardly before they had made final arrangements for their scholarship fund, they had joined some social fraternity on the campus—whose initiation fee alone far exceeded the scholarship fund itself for one quarter. (Scholarships given for meritorious work are, of course, not herein referred to.)

It is true that investigations have been made into this situation in an attempt to check up on the financial stability of those students to whom the scholarships were granted. But apparently this investigation did not include a survey of the numerous fraternity men on the campus holding scholarships.
